F. R. SMITH, who manages the Bijou theatre of Fond du Lac, and W. L. ANS- WORTH, of the Orpheum theatre, the same city, were in Milwaukee last week signing up for "Sex" and "The Lone Wolf's Daughter."

"THE FIGUREHEAD," WITH EUGENE O'BRIEN

Artistic Merit of Dwan Film Praised
N. Y. Offices of Mayflower Receive Adaptation of MacGrath Novel

Mayflower Photoplay Corporation's
New York offices have received Allan
Dwan's adaptation of Harold MacGrath's
"A Splendid Hazard." Those who witnessed a screening of the production at the Brunton studios in Los Angeles believe that the artistic merit of its photography and the perfection of the cast should make it one of the big pictures of the year.

Those who saw the preliminary showing described it as a "motion picture grand opera."

Much of the action of the picture is centered in Corsica and in getting naturalistic effects, Mr. Dwan was assisted materially by Mrs. MacGrath, who has traveled over the locations described in her husband's novel.

A special musical score has been arranged by Louis F. Gottschalk.

School Is Dismissed for Birthday Party at Star

ELGIN, ILL.—Diphtheria, smallpox and measles used to be the only excuses for dismissing school. That was years and years ago, when Pa and Ma were kids.

But in 1920 it is different.

Franklin school was dismissed one afternoon recently when the 400 pupils and teachers were guests at a birthday party given at the Star theatre by Emerson Crocker, son of Ralph W. Crocker, manager of the house.

Refreshments were not served.
No, Manager Crocker had the government tax to pay on the 400 admissions. Mabel Normand in "Pinto" was the feature screened.

R. A. Walsh Buys
"The Deep Purple"
For Mayflower Film

The motion picture rights to "The Deep Purple," famous stage success by Paul Armstrong and Wilson Mizner, have been purchased by R. A. Walsh and will be used by him as his first production for Mayflower Photoplay Corporation under the recent affiliation.

Work on the production has been virtually completed and it is booked for early publication through Realart.

A number of motion picture producners were in the market for "The Deep Purple," it is said, and strong bidding sent the purchase price soaring. Although no figure was named in the deal, it was reported that a sizeable fortune was paid for the drama.

"The Deep Purple" was one of the most successful plays of the late Paul Armstrong. It was originally produced by Liebler & Co. at the Princess Theatre in Chicago on Oct. 3, 1910. After a three months' run there it moved to the Lyric Theatre in New York City, where it opened on January 9, 1911, and played for more than a year.

The play had a long career in road companies about the country and is still being played by stock companies. In the original cast of players were Emmett Corrigan, James A. Finney, Ada Dwyer, Catherine Calvert, wife of the playwright, Paul Armstrong, and Richard Bennett.

 Proposed Tax to Meet
Liquor License Deficit

HITS THEATRES HARDEST

SHERIDAN, WYO.—M. B. Camlin, mayor, has introduced in city council an ordinance for making up the deficit in the city's funds caused by the loss of the liquor licenses.

The proposed tax, as sponsored by the mayor, will fall hardest on motion picture theatres should it be passed by the council.

A tax of $300 would be levied upon playhouses should the ordinance become a law.

Sarah Mason Added to Metro Scenario Staff

Sarah Mason has joined the Metro scenario staff to write continuity for Loew-Metro productions. Miss Mason has been in motion picture work for two years.

During this time she prepared 'scripts for a number of photodramas as well as writing several original stories.

Miss Mason's entrance into motion pictures came when Douglas Fairbanks saw her in a theatre in Tucson, Ariz., and offered her a position with his company.

After six months with Fairbanks, Miss Mason went to the Inc studios and wrote continuity under C. Gardner Sullivan.

New Lamphouse is Unique
Nicholas Power Company Incorporates Many Features Which Make for Safety and Economy

The Nicholas Power Company, in offering the new Type E lamphouse, especially stresses the newly incorporated features that are represented as making for unprecedented facility and economy of operation.

First view of the new mechanism impresses upon the observer the unusually commodious dimensions. Operators realize the superiority of the big lamp house in operation. When emergency calls for immediate entry into a hot lamp house this feature is instantly appreciated.

Perhaps the most striking changes that have been made in construction have to do with the transferring of carbon control from the top to the bottom holder and the installation of an interior blind or douser.

Great stability is the obvious advantage of the new control arrangement, the screen evidence of carbon manipulation being greatly diminished because the crater does not change position every time it is necessary to alter carbon juxtaposition.

The condenser carriage is also of new design. Securely mounted in holders of heavy material, with a key arrangement by means of which their inter-relationship, as well as their position with reference to the light, may be quickly and easily changed while the machine is in operation.

A new ventilation plan has been incorporated which is said to affect more complete change of air than has been accomplished heretofore, still protecting the condenser surface draughts which spell breakage.

In connection with this purpose, also, the interior blind is designed to decrease the condenser loss due to heat by protecting it except when exposure is required for actual projection purposes.

The five features which are given special prominence are listed as follows:

1. A top carbon receptacle accommodating sizes varying from 5/8 to 1 1/8 inches diameter. A lower holder that will take sizes from 5-16 to 3/4 inch measurement. The "V" shaped receptacle is said to insure a reliable grip without danger of breakage.

2. To obviate the trouble which is often encountered with lamp house lugs, a special mechanism which combines the carbon holder and a clamp with corrugated surfaces to hold the wires has been introduced.

3. Arc control centered in the lower carbon instead of the upper structure, as formerly, is calculated to reduce arc trouble and improve screen results.

4. A worm gearing introduced to effect the raising and lowering of the carbon carriage tends to reduce the vibration and fluctuation of the old method.

5. Construction of carbon carriage mechanism by use of square steel rods instead of the stereotyped round variety, a spring tension cover being introduced, bespeaks stability of the whole.

The Nicholas Power Company, identified with progressive and constructive thought from the earliest days of the industry, has frequently been brought into the lime-light because of its readiness to add new features without waiting to announce a new model.

The importance of the present announcement is apparent to theatre men who value properly screen efficiency. It is to promote screen efficiency that the innovation has been introduced.

THOMAS H. INCE presents,

DOROTHY DALTON
"The Dark Mirror"

A Paramount Artcraft Picture

IN the dark mirror of dreams she saw—what? Her other self? Or what she might have been?
She saw herself dragged through the crime and shame of the underworld, herself the centre of unimagined strife and excitement—

IT'S the most novel and dramatic picture in which Dorothy Dalton has ever appeared.
Action, suspense and mystery make every minute of it thrilling and exciting.

By Louis Joseph Vance. Scenario by Magnus Ingleton
Directed by Charles Giblyn. A Thomas H. Ince Production
Wanda Hawley's Ship Has Arrived

Credit is also due to the whole-hearted support of the principal exhibitors of America, who realize the necessity of "new star" material of the proper sort—if the screen is to win new friends and steadily augment the ranks of its admirers.
IMAGINE a girl winning a man—then losing him through chicanery—then meeting him again but seeking to pass him by because he had passed her love by. Then imagine her gaining the knowledge that the man had NOT ceased to love her; that she had been fooled into thinking his ardor had cooled BY HIS OWN PARENTS! And so he had wed another, chosen by his family. This is just the start of the story. Be sure to play

Great Crowds at Both Broadway and Brooklyn Strand howl with laughter over

Marshall Neilan's
"Don't Ever Marry"

What the critics say:

"A comedy of situation. Lack of space prevents us from giving the detailed comment that it deserves, but it will be safe to recommend it to all sorts of friends. There are chuckles planted and smiles are very thick. A competent cast."—NEW YORK TRIBUNE.

"An amusing comedy screened by Marshall Neilan."—NEW YORK WORLD.

"A hilarious comedy."—NEW YORK SUN AND HERALD.

"An exceptionally bright farce, brisk as they make 'em, and adorned by two pretty girls, Marjorie Daw and Betty Bouton. Matt Moore plays with energy. Wesley Barry, the bell hop, is the Chaplin of the future."—NEW YORK NEWS.

"The cause of a vast amount of laughter at the Strand Theatre. A good company."—NEW YORK EVENING POST.

"Enough screen talent in the cast to adequately care for all the comedy."—NEW YORK EVENING SUN.

"A creditable offering. There is scarcely a moment when the action isn't proceeding at top speed. A cast of conspicuous ability and you can classify it as a fast moving, mirth-provoking comedy. The complications are fast and furious—exceedingly fascinating."—MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

"Whoop this up. There is a true comedy situation and a wealth of incidents grouped around it. Rich in material of the laughter producing kind. The director is to be congratulated. 'Don't Ever Marry' is well worth being called a First National attraction."—MOVING PICTURE WORLD.

"Clever comedy replete with numerous farcical situations, skilfully handled. Matt Moore invests the hero role with lively humor and dynamic energy. Marjorie Daw is charming. Make the most of the all-star cast."—EXHIBITOR'S TRADE REVIEW.

"A hilarious affair—funny, bright and entertaining. An excellent cast."—NEW YORK MORNING TELEGRAPH.

"Marshall Neilan puts 'Don't Ever Marry' over as a big hit. You can promise the best in the feature comedy line. It contains a very unusual quota of real laughs. Just as attractive from its end as 'The River's End' from the dramatic angle."—WIDS.

April 10, 1920

Dear Mr. Woody:

I booked Miss Wanda Hawley in "Miss Hobbs" because of my knowledge of Miss Hawley's ability through my observance of her in recent DeMille productions. I am heartily in favor of Realart's policy of declining to ask exhibitors to sign a Hawley series contract at the beginning. I also, on account of knowing the producer, the star, the story and the director, feel quite confident that a preview of "Miss Hobbs" is not necessary, because Miss Hawley's entire future and success with Realart hinges on her first production, and realizing this fact I feel quite certain that "Miss Hobbs" will reach my fullest expectation, not forgetting, in the meantime, the good treatment accorded me by Realart executives.

Very truly yours,

TOM MOORE,
President.

Sakewawin!

In Indian that means: "I belong to you."
That's what Marge O'Doone, the little mountain pixie of the Arctic, called David Raine.
A pretty name for himself he had told the girl, but he didn't know what it meant.

But one day he found out
And from then on it was the fight of his life—for Marge—the little nymph of the North, whose picture had been the lure that beckoned him onward through the freezing cold and the heart-breaking hardships of the vast frozen Northland.

And what a fight he made of it!
From that point onward, come the breathless moments, the surprise and suspense in:

"THE COURAGE OF MARGE O'DOONE"

Another of those big, brawny, breathing story dramas by

made into a splendid SPECIAL PRODUCTION by VITAGRAPH.

It is the brain-child of a born story teller touched by the magic wand of the motion picture and made into a pulsing, living, human thing.
It speaks in that language of the universe—romance and adventure. It breathes mystery and thrills, surprises and suspense and it strides along against a background of awesome beauty—the gods' proving ground for the mettle of men—the Arctic.

It's a story that will stick to the ribs—if you know what that means.

100% Protection—100% Protection

100% Ownership in a Purely Independent

Associated System

Some of the biggest exhibitors in the country have devoted nearly a year to the development of our franchise plan. They have given their wisdom and experience, guided by good business principles, to its completion.

We have proceeded with deliberation and caution, because we wanted to be right—to be sure that we might offer the exhibitor who seeks both good pictures and protection of his interests, a fair and equitable plan, whereby he might write an insurance policy on the safety of his investment.

Our plan is the direct result of the causes that have forced the observing exhibitors of the country to bestir themselves into action against interests that seek to destroy the stability of our prosperity.

It offers direct ownership in an organization owned solely by leading exhibitors who are one hundred per cent independent. We are invited to share both benefits and profits by acquiring your own franchise.

Every feature and every principle of the Associated franchise arrangement has undergone critical consideration and reconsideration. It is now a finished product, ready for the inspection of the men who have within their power to make the Associated System a success.

"THE ILLITERATE DIGEST" by Will Rogers

April Twenty-third 1920.

Mr. Marion H. Kohn, Pres.
Marion H. Kohn Productions, Inc
Los Angeles, Calif.

My dear Mr. Kohn:

We wish to compliment you on "THE ILLITERATE DIGEST" by Will Rogers, the Goldwyn star. This week's issue, which is now playing in this theater, is most laughable and entertaining and has been the subject of most favorable comment from our patrons.

Not alone do we wish to express our satisfaction at the clever witty sayings contained in "THE ILLITERATE DIGEST", but also at the high class manner in which the film is gotten up in the way of laboratory work. The toning, tinting, artistic titles and back grounds are the finest specimens of this class we have ever seen.

Taking everything into consideration, briefly we want to take this means of informing you that the Rogers sayings are well blended, snappy, entertaining and are going over very big at every performance here this week.

Wishing you continued success,

Very truly yours,

Unfounded Alarm

The expressed apprehension on the part of theatrical producers that the influence of motion picture producers may tend to lower the standards of the American theatre is pitifully funny. The wall of the stage folk seems to have been incidental to the announcements of a tie-up between stage and picture productions.

A glance back over the past few years of stage history in America reveals very little in the way of standards to be jealous of. The stage producers of prominence at the moment — almost without exception — have complacently followed the call of the mob, writing their plays about bare-legged choristers, bedroom scenes and drama of such obviousness that it is hardly drama at all.

The alarm is quite unfounded: It would be a truly remarkable alien influence that would not help the American stage at least a little. As to lowering the general standards — that could only be done by magic. The stage producers themselves have exhausted all ordinary means through a commercialism utterly without conscience and a deaf ear toward all the recognized ideals of the drama.

The influence of the makers of pictures, providing it is not violently opposed, cannot help but contribute to a great advancement, and this it can easily do if it only succeeds in dissipating the current determination to lower the standards of play-making to conform to the tastes of Broadway.

Something Started

The Chicago meeting of independent exhibitors closed with considerable speculation as to just what results would be accomplished. It has long been the practice to regard exhibitors’ meeting as productive of a maximum of talk and a minimum of action, meanwhile forgetting the fact that decisive action can only be accomplished through real organization and this the exhibitors have never had.

The Chicago meeting has made one thing very clear: The exhibitors of America are more thoroughly exercised over this matter of producer competition than over any other problem they have ever faced. The exhibitors who attended this meeting, and the hundreds who were not present but who approved the proceedings, are deadly in earnest. They have set in action a movement that is certain to get results eventually if not immediately. Failure to recognize this is merely shutting one’s eyes to the realities of the situation.

Final details covering just how the exhibitors are going to get results in this matter remain to be worked out, but a movement has been started that will gain momentum as it goes on and eventually will accomplish the great good of deciding definitely and finally the dividing lines for the various branches of this industry.

Bad Practice

Just now in Illinois theatrical interests are endeavoring to have legalized the use of children on the stage under proper auspices and with every regard for their welfare.

The law which prohibits child performers is an unreasonable one and a more reasonable interpretation of it may be expected. But it is well to bear in mind that the law did not occur automatically and that more than likely certain abuses originally urged its enactment.

Such abuses may be found occasionally in motion pictures and it is very logical to conclude that if they are not eliminated the industry at large may face such a fight as is waging in Illinois. A case in point is a recent comedy, “Twilight Baby.” The producer of this picture seemed to be unmindful of the fact that there are some things that can’t be done even for sweet comedy’s sake. In this picture an infant is used in an utterly unreasonable and irrational manner. Stuff of this sort is exceptionally bad practice and should be stopped. And this even aside from the fact that it inevitably tends toward legislative regulation.

Determine to Bar Politics From Cleveland Conventions

Leaders of All Factions in Exhibitors’ Organization Plead for Harmony at Effort to Launch New National Association

With representatives of practically all national, state, sectional and local exhibitors’ organizations pledged to attend, the gathering of motion picture theatre owners in Cleveland early in June promises to be the most significant in the history of the industry.

Leaders of the various factions are today bending every effort to erase ill feeling and overcome sectional jealousies in the hope that from the series of meetings will rise a representative national exhibitors’ organization with an active membership of at least 4,000 theatre owners.

“Bar Politics,” Is the Universal Cry

“Bar politics,” the insistent cry of the exhibitors assembled in Chicago, April 26th and 27th, in response to the call from Willard C. Patterson of Atlanta, has been taken up by all of the groups headed for Cleveland.

Any effort on the part of any one man or group of men to dominate the gathering will be bitterly fought. Steam-roller tactics can only result in widening the split in the exhibitors’ ranks.

Leaders realize this fact and are striving to anticipate and guard against anything which will destroy harmony.

Two Organizations to Issue Call

At the present time, it appears that exhibitors will go to Cleveland in answer to two calls—one from Sydney S. Cohen, president of the New York state league, who has interested thirty-two states in forming a new national organization; the other from Frank J. Rembusch as chairman of the Independent Exhibitors of America, the national organization just formed in Chicago for the avowed purpose of combating producer monopoly of the theatres.

The fact that Mr. Rembusch will issue one of the calls is expected to attract members of the Motion Picture Exhibitors of America, Inc., to the meeting, as he is executive secretary of the organization. The M. P. E. A. annual convention has been called in Chicago for June 28th.

May Open As Separate Conventions

It is possible that the two organizations will assemble separately, and later join in joint sessions. At the present time, no step has been taken to officially call members of the M. P. E. A. to Cleveland simultaneously, but it is possible that the board of directors, if not the entire membership, will officially attend.

If the M. P. E. A. does issue a call of this kind, three separate meetings may be held at Cleveland simultaneously prior to all convening together.

All of these points and a score of others are up for decision within the next week or ten days.

Independent League May Continue

There is a strong possibility that the Independent Exhibitors of America will continue as a separate organization for the one purpose of combating producer invasion of the exhibiting field, but, at the same time, have its entire membership also participate in the proposed new national exhibitors’ league.

Willard C. Patterson, who brought about the organization, drew a sharp line between “independent” exhibitors and house managers of theatres owned or controlled by producing companies.

All exhibitors, he pointed out, were interested in the general questions confronting them, such as censorship, taxes, and other matters affecting all alike. The “independent” exhibitor is the only one who is interested in the fight against producer control, however, he declared.

Owes His Duty to His Employer

“You can’t expect the manager of a producer-owned theatre to assist in our fight against producer monopoly,” he stated at the opening of his convention. “Any man owes his loyalty to his employer. I wouldn’t have much respect for him if he didn’t play fair with the man he works for.”

At the time Mr. Patterson was explaining why he had appealed to Kohlmar to Star in Universal Comedies

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

Los Angeles, May 4—Carl Laemmle has signed Lee Kohlmar to star in one and two-part comedies for Universal Manufacturing Company. James Liddy also has contracted to play in Universal productions.

Kohlmar supported David Warfield in “The Music Master” and played the comedy role in the stage production, “Penny and Parfme.” Liddy, who will play opposite Anne Cornwall in “The Girl in the Rain,” recently held the juvenile role with Kolb and Dill.

Goldman Resigns As Hodkinson Manager

Sidney Goldman has tendered his resignation as Chicago manager for the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, effective May 15. He will leave on that date for a two weeks’ vacation, announcing his future plans upon his return.

It is consistently rumored that Mr. Goldman will be named Chicago manager for the Associated Producers, Inc. He declined to comment on the report.

“Spiritual Faces” Sought for Films

Los Angeles, May 4—The Bible Films Corporation and the San Gabriel Film Corporation, producing scriptural dramas, have announced plans to send scouts through the country looking for women with spiritual faces to play atmosphere. The head of the Bible Films Corporation is A. L. Hamilton, president of the Pasadena city government.

DeMille is Invited To Join “Big Four”

Noted Lasky Director Will Go East for a Conference Before Answering

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

Los Angeles, May 4—The news that Cecil B. DeMille has had a flattering offer from the “Big Four” to join their ranks and make the combination a “Giant Five,” is causing quite a bit of excitement in cinemaland. Mr. DeMille admits that the “Big Four” have made him such an offer, but is diplomatically uncommunicative as to what he will do about it.

“I can say nothing at present, but when I return from New York I may have a statement to make concerning the matter,” he said.

Mr. DeMille is a stockholder in the Lasky Corporation, and is such an integral part of the establishment that his leaving is opined by many to be an impossibility. But there are others who claim to know the figures offered by Mary, Doug and Charlie, and they maintain that the number of zeros attached to the figures on the proffered contract are too tempting for even C. B. to resist. He leaves shortly for New York to confer with Lasky.

EXHIBITORS HERALD

the individual exhibitor in his call for a meeting instead of issuing invitations to existing exhibitors’ organizations.

Practically all organizations include all members who are said, "The appeal is directed to only those exhibitors who own their own theater."

Indications are that the South and West will send larger than usual delegations to the gathering at Cleveland. The South is thoroughly aware of the need of a national organization and scores of independent exhibitors, who attended the recent Chicago convention, declared that they would return for the series of conferences in Cleveland.

In the past the South has not been very active in the national associations. The larger exhibitors and some of the smaller ones have been associated with organizations but the smaller have contented themselves with supporting their local organizations.

The Southern local and state organizations are among the strongest exhibitor associations in the United States, and the South contains many strong men, who would be invaluable to the proposed new organization.

Western Exhibitors Coming

Out in the West, there have grown up exceptionally well organized and well managed exhibitors' leagues which have scored a series of signal victories in their fight on local questions.

Assurances have come that practically all conceptions will send delegates to one or both of the Cleveland gatherings. On account of distance, it has been highly desirable to reach conventions. This year, it is determined to have thorough representation.

The Southwest will also actively participate in the meetings, according to advance assurances.

Seek Producers' Announcement

Frank J. Rembusch, Lou Blumenthal, C. E. Whitehurst, and John Manheimer, acting on instructions at the convention of the Independent Exhibitors of America, will gather in New York city within a few days for the purpose of arranging for a series of conferences with representatives of producing companies the latter part of the month or early in June.

At these conferences they will be joined by Walt Patterson, Ga.; H. W. Cress, Piqua, Ohio; Carl Kettler, West Palm Beach, Fla.; L. T. Lester, Columbus, S. C.; Dan Chamberlin, Minn.; H. R. Slusser, St. Louis; Maurice Checkovsky, Chicago; E. T. Peters, Paris, Tex.; H. C. Farley, Montgomery, Ala.; M. Breitinger, Indianapolis, Ind., and M. Van Pragh, Kansas City, Kan.

They will insist upon each producer stating whether or not he intends to build theatres, in case they have theatres, to make a complete statement of what they have, and what they intend to do in the future on the question of theatre building.

Will Report at Cleveland

The report of this committee will be the all-important matter for consideration at the meeting of the Independent Exhibitors of America.

No definite course of procedure has been outlined, but it was strongly indicated that the members of the organization would decline to purchase film from companies which they consider unindustrial.

Many questions remain to be decided as to what companies are invading the field. It was apparent that the phrases "independent exhibitor" and "independently produced" are open to many different interpretations.

Temporary Officers Chosen

The temporary officers of the two conventions at Cleveland have already been selected. Sydney S. Cohen of New York will preside at the convention he has called, with Sam Bullock of Cleveland as secretary. Frank J. Rembusch will preside at the convention of the Independent Exhibitors of America with Sig Samuels as Atlantic secretary.

No date has been definitely announced, the only word being "probably the second week of June." It has been generally understood that the conventions would open June 7.

Lay Cornerstone Of

Mastbaum's Theatre

Distinguished Gathering Is In Attendance At Ceremony

In Philadelphia

Government, state and city officials attended the laying of the cornerstone of the new Stanley theatre at Fifteenth and Market streets, Philadelphia, on May 8. An elaborate program had been arranged by Jules M. Mastbaum, president of Stanley Company of America, for the dedication exercises.

Preceded to the dedication program, Haskell's invention of the "shadows" of the concert. Following these addresses were delivered by William R. Sproul, governor of Pennsylvania, J. Frank Robinson, mayor of Philadelphia, and Judge Horace Stern.

The actual laying of the cornerstone was executed by Mrs. Faney Mastbaum, mother of Jules E. Mastbaum. Theatrical and motion picture producers, directors and stars were present at the ceremonies.

The new Stanley theatre was designed by Haskell-Hoffman Company. It is a handsome fire-proof structure in the Italian renaissance style of architecture. It will measure 142 by 176 feet and will seat 4,000 persons, being the largest place of amusement of its type in the city. The work upon the structure is well on the way. The first performance is scheduled to be given in the new Stanley on Labor day, September 6.

A leading feature will be an unobstructed view of the stage from every part of the house, as the building is constructed with a floor space of 65 feet. Extensive use of brick and terracotta. The walls will be finished inside in foreign marble.

Other features are the specially built grand organ, which will be installed at a cost $7,500. Inclines instead of stairs will be used to the balcony, and a spacious promenade on the mezzanine floor.

Kosmik Films Will Build Coast Studio

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, May 4—Kosmik Films, Inc., of which George Kleine is president, is to build a studio here, where its film features will be produced.

The company is producing "The Hope Diamond Mystery," as a serial at Universal City, with Grace Darmond, George Cheesboro, Harry Carter, Carmen Phillips, William Marion, Doris Karloff, William Buckley, Ethel Shannan and Captain C. Clayton in the cast.

The serial is under the personal supervision of L. C. Wheeler, treasurer of the company. Stuart Paton is the director; William Thornley, chief cameraman, and Sam De Val, technical director.

Tom Moore, of Washington, D. C., has directed attention to the fact that last week's issue of Exhibitor's Herald conveyed an intimation that Harry Parton was interested in the Mr. Moore in the Washington franchise of the First National Exhibitors Circuit, Inc.

Mr. Moore states that at no time has he had any association with the Washington franchise and that no part of it has been sold or has ever been offered for sale.
Minneapolis Exhibitors Planning Double Shot at Producer Invaders

City Ordinance Limiting Number of Theatres and State Bill Requiring Advance Deposit from Exchanges Are Being Sponsored

That the exhibitors of Minneapolis, Minn., are planning a doubled barreled shot to ward off any invasion of the exhibitorial field by the producers was the declaration of William A. Steffes, manager of the Northern theatre of Minneapolis, at the recent convention of the Independent Exhibitors of America held at the Congress Hotel, Chicago.

Seek Municipal and State Legislation

Mr. Steffes stated that the exhibitors, working as one man, are backing the following legislation:

An ordinance in the city of Minneapolis limiting the number of theatres to those already in operation.

A bill, to be introduced at the next term of the legislature in Minnesota, providing that all "advance deposits" be kept in Minnesota banks and producers required to post $1 for every $1 exhibitors deposit to guarantee contracts.

The city ordinance, he declared, will be passed within the next few weeks, the needed number of votes already being pledged. The legislature, however, does not convene until fall.

Mr. Steffes made the announcement of the plans of the Minneapolis exhibitors during a heated discussion at the convention relative to what steps could be taken to prevent a producer monopoly of theather.

Advocates Local Action

While heartily endorsing the national movement he contended that the most effective steps could be taken through city and state organizations.

Exhibitors who are well organized locally can have almost anything they want, he continued. He pointed out the power of the screen, and said that a city council or a state legislature will listen to a group of theatre owners far more readily than they will listen to the hired agents of producers.

"When our city ordinance is passed in Minneapolis, the city will be closed to more theatres," he declared. "It provides for one additional theatre for every gain of 5,000 in the population."

"You ask what is to prevent the producers from buying theatres already being operated? Nothing. But this ordinance will license the theatres, and it is going to be a mighty hard thing for a producer to have a license transferred."

Explains the Deposit Bill

Continuing, he stated that as soon as the ordinance is in operation in Minneapolis, they will turn their attention to St. Paul to get a similar ordinance passed.

"And an ordinance of this kind can be passed in every city in the United States if the exhibitors will work for it," he declared.

The advance deposit bill, which is to be introduced into the Minnesota legislature next fall, is aimed to put an end to advance deposits in the state. Its feature, he said, is to require the distributors to put up an amount equal to that required from the exhibitor to guarantee performance of a contract.

"Instead of asking a $2,000 deposit, they will be content with $400 or $500," he concluded. "In fact, I'll gamble that they'll quit asking any advance deposits."

United Picture Theatres to Fight Bankruptcy Action, Says Goldsmith

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, May 4.—That the effort to place the United Picture Theatres of America, Inc., in bankruptcy will be bitterly fought and that the company is financially sound, is the substance of a statement issued by Milton H. Goldsmith, treasurer of the corporation.

Following closely on the petition in bankruptcy for the distributing organization, similar action was brought against United Pictures Productions Corporation, the producing unit. The creditors and claims are: Royal Ribbon and Carbon Co., $5,890; Linnmnitz Press, $1,278, and Bernard Kowsinsky, $496.

Harry Zalkin has been appointed receiver in both actions. Creditors meeting recently in the offices of Percy L. Waters of Triangle, appointed a committee to discuss the company's affairs with Mr. Zalkin.
Pathe To Publish “Simple Souls”
Starring Blanche Sweet May 23

Producers Sponsor The Statement That Picture Is The Best In Which The Star Has Ever Played
With Her Work More Charming

“Simple Souls,” Blanche Sweet’s next production which Pathe Exchange, Inc., will distribute, will be published on May 23.

Pathe assures exhibitors in making the announcement that the production undoubtedly is the best motion picture play in which the star ever has appeared. Her work, it is said, also is more charming than in her previous vehicles.

The production, it is said, comes as a chime to the success of the star in “A Woman of Pleasure,” “Fighting Cressy” and “The Deadlier Sex.”

Advance Publication Sought

The date of publication on “Simple Souls” was advanced, it is pointed out, because of the many appeals from exhibitors for another Sweet production of the calibre of “The Deadlier Sex,” which started out with a greater number of advance bookings than any other Pathe subject of the season.

In every case, it is said, “The Deadlier Sex” met with such widespread approval that exhibitors who played it wrote in asking for the early issuance of another production featuring the star.

Although the first announcement of the new picture was made but a short time ago, bookings have started to roll into the Pathe branches, it is declared.

The steady increase in the popularity of the star, it is said, has been measured in the increase in contracts on each production. Today she is playing in as great a number of motion picture houses as any other woman star, according to the Pathe announcement.

In “Simple Souls,” Robert Thorneby again has distinguished himself. The sets are wonderful examples of art, it is said, the gowns are master creations, and an air of elegance has been worked into the production which will entitle it to a high place in the list of really fine productions.

Exteriors Are Beautiful

In addition to the sumptuous interiors, there are scenes in the outdoors and some unusually beautiful ocean scenes in which a gay yachting party figures. One of the striking scenes is a dance held on board the yacht at night.

Miss Sweet, in the role of Molly Shine, a shop girl who later becomes a Duchess of Wymingham, is given new opportunities for the display of her ability, it is said. Molly and the duke are simple souls who love books, ideals and dreams. Their innocent mutual love for these things brings about a scandal in which gossip alone is guilty and they are innocent.

The duke and Molly marry, much to the distress of the kin of the duke, and a trying time for the shop girl among the aristocracy of England follows. The great simplicity of the duke and the girl prevails and brings them happiness, but the story in its development is full of drama and of contrasts. It is a baring of human souls on the screen.

The cast has been selected with the greatest care and Charles Meredith is ideal in the role of the duke. Herbert Grunwood does some excellent character work as Molly’s father, who learned that alcohol made a good shock absorber for his wife’s eternal whine. Mayne Kelso is Molly’s mother, who never heard that silence is golden.

Herbert Standing, another excellent character actor, is seen in the role of Peter Craine, a gentleman, and Kate Lester is a real siren as Lady Octavia, who thinks Molly is going to be the skeleton in the family closet. Other minor roles are handled capably by Frederick Huntley, Aaron Edwards and Oliver Brobst.

To Issue Carpenter Film Decoration Day

NEW YORK—Robertson-Cole will publish the production featuring the French fighter Blanche Sweet, on Decoration Day. No title has been given this society drama, which will be replete with action, including a prize fight.

Reelcraft Expands In Distributing Activities

New Production Units Also Will Be Formed To Make Short Subjects

Reelcraft Pictures Corporation’s distributing organization now covers the entire United States through Reelcraft exchanges and allied independent exchanges, it is announced.

Foreign distribution for various units of the Reelcraft program for South America, Europe, Asia, Africa, Australia and Canada has been obtained through Apollo Trading Company and Export and Import Film Company, both of New York, and Exhibitors Film Exchange, Ltd., of Toronto, Canada.

Demand for more and better short subjects by the exhibitors and the distributors has compelled Reelcraft to plan many more additional producing units, it is declared, in addition to the companies now working at the Reelcraft studios in Chicago and Hollywood, where such stars as Texas Guinan, Billy West, Alice Howell and Billy Franey are delivering productions at the rate of one a week, or one every two weeks.

The new units to be formed will produce serial attractions, a series of scenes, educational and short subject novelties. Reelcraft firmly believes that the short subject feature means as much to the motion picture industry as short stories do to the world of fiction. Several stars of prominence in the short subject field have been under consideration and announcement of further productions will be made shortly.

Durning Manager For Special Pictures Corp.

E. L. Silcocks, who was formerly identified with the Los Angeles Vignaphe, Kleine and Select exchanges and who is now traveling representative for the Special Pictures Corporation, has started the physical distribution for the Comedtart productions in the New Orleans territory by appointing Al Durning as branch manager. The Pearce Film Corporation of that city will also distribute the Comedtart productions.

THREE SCENES FROM “SIMPLE SOULS” WITH BLANCHE SWEET

Ground to be Broken June 1st for Chicago Film Exchange Building

Frederick H. Elliott, Executive Secretary of N. A. M. P. I., Brings Word From New York Contracts. Are Signed and Bonds Are Posted

Declaring that all leases have been signed and that bonds have been posted by the contracting parties, Frederick H. Elliott, executive secretary of the N. A. M. P. I., arrived in Chicago May 4, with the announcement that construction of the proposed new Chicago Film Exchange building at Kinzie and North Clark streets, will begin on June 1.

Mr. Elliott was accompanied by J. E. Brulatour, chairman of the committee on fire prevention regulations of the N. A. M. P. I., and Albert de Roode, a member of the committee. He expected to be joined by Thomas H. Butler, manager of the film exchange building department of the N. A. M. P. I.

Confident City Will Grant Extension

“When we show city authorities that the contracts have been signed and bonds posted for the new building, I am confident that they will grant an extension of time before strictly enforcing the ordinance sending Chicago’s film exchanges out of the loop,” he said.

In the meantime, all exchanges in Chicago are operating under difficulty and keeping theatres supplied with film.

In the Consumer’s Building, an effort was made to prevent the film companies remaining from bringing film into the building. The courts were immediately appealed to, and an injunction against interference was granted.

Are Still Operating

As a result, the Universal, Pathé and Sibley film exchanges continued to operate in the Consumer’s building. Pathe, as before, is handling the Hodkinson and American films. Sibley handles physical distribution for several companies in Chicago.

The Greater Stars Productions moved Friday, April 30, to the sixth floor, 837 South Dearborn street, without interrupting its service to exhibitors. It required work most of the night but the change was made successfully.

Robertson-Cole Distributing Corporation, which occupied the eighteenth floor of the Consumer’s Building, also moved Friday night. Offices were opened on the fourteenth floor of the Consumer’s Building. The shipping and poster departments were moved to 24-26 North Wells street.

Films Out of Mallers

No films have been handled in the Mallers building since last Friday night. As reannounced, the Fox offices were removed to the Famous Players-Lasky building in South Wabash avenue, and the films transferred to the Film Exchange building.

D. M. Vandawalker, manager of the Hallmark Exchange, and Jack S. Grauman, manager of Metro exchange, faced a serious crisis Friday afternoon when they were notified no film would be permitted in the building after midnight.

Together they solved the question by securing storeroom for their vaults in the Burton Holmes building in Evanston. Mr. Vandawalker arranged for truck service to take care of his deliveries. Mr. Grauman made an additional arrangement whereby his current film will be handled by the Goldwyn exchange.

Both the Hallmark and Metro offices are still in the Mallers building.

Negotiate for Building

Four plans for the erection of a film exchange building which would house practically all of the exchanges in the city are being considered.

Robertson-Cole and the Fox Film Corporation are prepared to lease or build their own building in South Wabash avenue, in case the negotiations are not brought to successful conclusion within a few weeks.

Several other exchanges are considering propositions for individual buildings.

N. A. M. P. I. Attends N. F. P. A. Conference

J. E. Brulatour, Albert de Roode and Frederick H. Elliott represented the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry at the twenty-fourth annual meeting of the National Fire Protection Association held in Chicago May 4, 5 and 6.

Mr. Elliott, executive secretary, presented the report of the N. A. M. P. I. to the meeting. It dealt with three phases of activity of the National Association—its educational campaign, its rigid inspection of exchanges, and its construction of film exchange buildings in leading cities.

While in Chicago, Mr. Elliott was the guest of Watterson R. Rothacker, president of the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company.

French Fans Aroused At Ban on U. S. Films

PARIS—The government decree prohibiting the importation of American motion pictures into France has aroused considerable discussion among the fans. The French people are frank in admitting that they like American pictures and stars the best. They consider the edict “a restriction against laughter and enjoyment.”

Ince Separates Team Of MacLean and May And Features Former

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, May 4.—Thomas H. Ince has separated the team of Douglas MacLean and Doris May, with the former already in production on the first of a series of pictures which Ince will distribute through Paramount Artcraft. The initial MacLean picture is an adaptation of the Saturday Evening Post story, “The Yanconna Yillies,” by Herschell S. Hall.

Future plans for Doris May will be announced later. In outlining the plans for MacLean’s starring career, Ince stated that no set form of story material would be employed. “Mr. MacLean is first of all versatile,” he said. “His ability to portray farce, broad comedy and light drama has been demonstrated clearly in the pictures already made. I expect to star him in pictures that will emphasize his diversity and bring to exhibitors and their patrons something new, different and unexpected with each release.”

HERALD'S Report of First National Distribution of Mayflower Verified

Prager Announces That Agreement Has Been Signed With Associated First National for All Future Pictures Made by Firm

Benjamin A. Prager, president of the Mayflower Photoplay Corporation, has confirmed the report carried last week by the Exhibitors Herald that all future Mayflower productions will be distributed through First National Exhibitors Circuit.

Mr. Prager announces that such a contract has been signed with Associated First National Exhibitors. In consummating these negotiations, Associated First National Exhibitors was represented by Harry Schwabie, secretary-treasurer, while President Prager and General Manager John W. McKay acted for Mayflower.

Predict Splendid Attraction

Under the terms of the contract, Associated First National will take over the distribution of the Allan Dwan features: all future R. A. Walsh productions and the picture now being completed in Los Angeles by Sidney A. Franklin. Of the Dwan series the first subject, "A Splendid Hazard," from the Harold McGrath novel, has been completed and is ready for publication. When viewed by First National officials enthusiasm was expressed regarding this picture and it was predicted that it would be a splendid box office attraction.

The other Dwan pictures are "In the Heart of a Fool," based upon William Allen White's book of that name, and "The Scoffer," from a magazine story by Val Cleveland, a former New York newspaper man. Both of these pictures soon will be available. Dwan started another production on May 1.

With the exception of "The Deep Purple," which is being handled by Realart, all of Walsh's product will go through First National in the future.

It is expected that Franklin will be finished shortly with "Athalie," his current production, which is an adaptation of the Robert W. Chambers novel, and another picture, possibly "The Secret," will be the second Mayflower production to go through the First National channel. Incidentally, it will also be the third picture directed by Franklin to be handled by First National. The other two were Mary Pickford's "The Hoodlum" and "The Miracle Man," a picture of the first heart to be produced by First National. It is said to have been one of Little Mary's best box office attractions.

Announcement Expected

Announcements regarding distribution affiliations of Mayflower have been expected for more than a month. At one time it was reported that Associated Exhibitors would handle all Mayflower films, and of late there have been persistent rumors of a continued relationship with Realart. It is believed now that the latter report grew out of the idea that an arrangement was made with Realart for the handling of Miller's "Law of the Yukon" and Walsh's "The Deep Purple."

"In connection with the First National for the distribution of our pictures," said President Prager, "I believe the Mayflower company has put into effect an arrangement which will enable it to reach the photoplay public through the very best medium in the film industry. First National has demonstrated by results the practicability of its system. There can be no doubt that the magnitude of the facilities for distributing, advertising and exploiting, will give to all Mayflower productions the maximum of exhibition, as well as the satisfaction to exhibitors and picture patrons."

Two Strong Organizations

It is recognized by the trade that the alignment of Mayflower with Associated First National Exhibitors brings together two potent factors in the fields of production and distribution. Mayflower, despite its youth, has achieved phenomenal growth. Its initial contribution, "The Miracle Man," proved a startling revelation of the financial and artistic forces behind this organization. Following "The Miracle Man" came "Soldiers of Fortune," "The Mystery of the Yellow Room" and "The Luck of the Irish," and it is expected that at least half a dozen new productions will be added to the Mayflower total before the end of the year.

In closing the deal for First National, Mr. Schwabie said: "We feel that in taking on the productions which Mayflower is presenting that we are adding to our output photoplays having great possibilities from a box office standpoint and which also contain the very highest quality of entertainment value."

First National Begins Awarding Of Sub-Franchises to Exhibitors

Six Thousand Theatres Expected to be Taken Into Organization Under New Plan by Early Fall—Will Continue Work Through Summer Months

Conclusion of the joint conventions of Associated First National Pictures, Inc., and First National Exhibitors Circuit at the Hotel Congress, Chicago, last Friday marked the formal launching of the sub-franchising plan wherein approximately 6,500 independently owned and independently operated theatres will share in the mutualization of the protective and guaranteed production source benefits upon which the plan is based.

200 at Convention Make Application

Sub-franchise applications from about 200 of the independent exhibitors who had responded to the call by Willard C. Patterson, of Atlanta, for a national mass meeting were filed with the various First National exchange managers and members before the Circuit's sessions were finally adjourned on Friday evening.

Radical and extensive changes in the present system of film distribution are expected by exhibitor members of First National as the result of the sub-franchising plan. Speeches by Circuit officials treated at length on the obvious and certain reforms that would necessarily follow in the wake of the efforts seeking to unite approximately 6,500 theatres in one co-operative organization which seeks direct contact with independent producers as its source of film supply.

Members of the Executive Committee for Associated First National Pictures pointed out to the independent exhibitors who sought information during the convention that the sub-franchising plan is not a new and different system than any which has ever before been in vogue.

Extension of Present Plan

Instead, according to members of the committee, the sub-franchise is an extension to other independent exhibitors of the co-operative, protective and economic phases of the organization structure on which First National Exhibitors Circuit was started three years ago and on which it has steadily continued to bridge and narrow the gap between independent exhibitors and independent producers.

"For three years," explained the committee men, "First National members have provided their respective independent screens with quality entertainment by co-operative buying from independent stars and producers. They took a tremendous financial risk in getting away from old methods and driving straight at the producer monopoly with its arbitrary booking methods and attendant impositions on exhibitors. They succeeded because they pooled their purchasing interests and their theatre facilities to gain the strength and resources and exhibition facilities necessary to upset program booking. Now they are extending the same plan which won against the program, so that independent exhibitors in every territory may guarantee to themselves a definite and sufficient source of releases to meet any organized theatre competition from other than independent producers and with an arrangement whereby they pay a fixed percentage of the total cost of every release. In other words, the rental values are established at the studio rather than in the exchanges."

Stock Prevents Overcharge

"Through the stock equity which each subfranchised exhibitor will have in the exchange for his territory, he is guaranteed against film costs in excess of the fair valuation by the dividends which the stockholding will bring from the disbursement of any profits earned by the exchange over and above its nominal operating expense. This is mutualizing the group out of almost a year of intensive study by exhibitors of each whom realized that his entire future as a theatre operator would be determined in every detail by the caution, the fairness, and absolute justice of the terms which he is able to dictate to and control the way as directors are now subscribing as franchise owners in direct partnership with 6,500 other theatre owners."

Territorial awards of sub-franchises started this week upon the return of the First National exchange managers to their respective offices. In F. P. Patterson's district officials that at least three months will be needed to complete the allotment. By Fall it was said First National attempts will be pledged by sub-franchises to at least 6,000 theatres.

The Executive Committee for Associated First National Pictures, composed of N. H. Gordon of Boston, Moe Mark of New York and H. O. Schwab of Philadelphia, will devote practically all of its time during the summer to the consideration and granting of applications for sub-franchises. Schedules of exchange ratings of every theatre in each territory were given to the exchange managers at the concluding session of the First National sales conference.

In fixing the individual theatre percentages, the statistical division of the Exhibitors Defense Committee for First National culminated in many instances the matter of population as a determining factor and considered the more conclusive conditions of industrial advantages, prevailing average film costs for individual houses, booking on a flat rental basis in the past, competition, and the strategical location of the theatres.

Fairer Sex Takes to Denims at Universal

ST. LOUIS, May 4—No sign hearing the words, "Stop, Look and Listen," was needed the day Barney Rosenthal's stenographers and film inspectors promenaded in front of Universal's branch office here during one noon hour in khaki denim bloomers.

St. Louis was no more amused and delighted than the girls themselves. They went to a nearby lot and played leap-frog and "catch." accompanied by the plaudits of a large gathering—mostly masculine. Universal's lead was followed by other exchanges and then by students of Washington University, the Y. M. C. A. and other institutions. It was not many days before the overall movement took over the entire city by storm.
Heard in the Congress Lobby

Fred C. Quimby, general manager of the Associated Exhibitors, received the congratulations of scores of leaders of the industry on the successful launching of his company. His hand was shaken so often that his arm became numb.

Charles G. Kempster, who once featured the Barnum shows as the greatest living "one legged bicyclist" but who is now busily engaged in the insurance business, renewed acquaintances with many of his old time friends.

Ivan Abramson selected the exhibitors' convention as a fitting place to announce his plans for great expansion of activity in the independent producing field. He stated the men associated with him would back independent exhibitors to the limit.

On behalf of Carl Laemmle, Harry M. Burman and Harry Levy offered the Independent Exhibitors of America $1,000 to assist them in their campaign. Although the offer was declined, others expressed their appreciation of the proffered gift.

Joe Brandt, director general of the National Film Corporation and eastern representative of the Marion H. Kohn Productions, who has been advocating organization among independent producers, and independent exchanges, was more than pleased to see the independent exhibitors get together.

Andrew J. Callaghan, head of the film corporation of that name, starring Bessie Love, is enthusiastic over the movement to combine independent producing units in both their studio and business branches in order to cut down the tremendous overhead cost, He made a number of converts during the convention.

Nathan Gordon of Boston had to answer many inquiries concerning whether or not he had brought his namesake gin with him.

D. F. Howells, the foreign diplomat of the First National, said the Chicago weather reminded him of "Dear Ole Lunnin." It was that rainy and foggy.

A reception at the press was given by the Talmadge sisters in the Joseph Schenck suite royal. It proved one of the most popular social functions of the convention.

When Fred Dahmsen of San Francisco heard nearly ninety thousand had been paid for "Twin Beds," he remarked "Holy Gee, how these hotel rates are going up!"

"Oh, Lawd, how I'd like to make just two passes in that game," exclaimed the porter in the Pullman car that brought the First National chiefs to Chicago.

Dave Beshisho, Los Angeles exchange manager, was the satirical sensation of the convention with his new camel's hair coat, latex model hat, immaculate grey suede gloves, and a debonair walking stick.

A. H. Blank is reported to be planning to build another theatre in Omaha as the result of certain financial results obtained from mingling with the galloping donkeys.

Sol Lesser, the newest member from Los Angeles, staged a star party at the Marigold gardens with D. F. Howells and Bruce Johnson as guests of honor.

Colonel Fred Levy of Louisville radiated Southern hospitality in more ways than one.

C. L. Yearsley, First National's publicity director, proved he could talk as well as write when he addressed the assembled exchange managers on Tuesday.

John C. Rangel, vice president of Arthur S. Kane productions, heard a great many rose-yued predictions as to the future of Charles Ray as a First National star. First National officials were especially pleased that "Forty-Five Minutes from Broadway" is to be Ray's first production.

Colvin W. Brown, who recently resigned from the Clark-Cornelius Corporation to become associated with David D. Howells, was among the convention visitors.

These convention delegates were among those who made pilgrimages to Dexterway Parkways to see where and how Watterton R. Rothmacher makes First National prints.

Lt. "Jill" Anderson was much in evidence throughout the convention. His sombrero created a mild sensation along Peacock Alley.

Eugene Zukor to Wed Miss Emma Roth in Chicago on May 6

The wedding of Eugene J. Zukor, son of Adolph Zukor, president of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, and Miss Dorothy Roth, daughter of John Roth of Kansas City, Mo., will take place on the evening of May 6, at the Blackstone Hotel, Chicago. The ceremony will be performed by Rev. G. B. Levi of Chicago, and about 100 relatives and close friends of the young couple will be present.

The bride will have two matrons of honor, Mrs. Arthur M. Loew of New York, a sister of the bridegroom, and Mrs. Leon Katzenberg of Kansas City. The bridesmaids will be the Misses Irene Roth, a sister of the bride; Beulah Kohn, Frances Kaufman and Lucille Metz. The best man will be Melville A. Shauer of New York, and the ushers will be Arthur M. Loew of New York, Leon Katzenberg of Kansas City, Ralph W. Kohn, Norman E. Kohn and Archie Weissberg of Chicago. The bride will be given in marriage by her father. Following the ceremony there will be a supper and dancing in the main ballroom of the hotel.

Mr. Zukor is assistant treasurer of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation and is one of the youngest executives in the film industry. Miss Roth has been a teacher in the Kansas City public schools.

WHO "PUT UP" FOR PATTERSON?
Southern Theatre Manager Who Sponsored Recent Convention of Theatre Owners At Chicago Lays All of His Cards on Table

The recent convention of independent theatre owners in Chicago was one of the largest exhibitor gatherings in the history of the industry.
Willard C. Patterson, who called the theatre owners together, inserted advertisements in trade papers; sent letters to practically every exhibitor in the country, and spent hundreds of dollars for telegrams.

There was considerable speculation as to who "put up." At the opening of the convention, Mr. Patterson placed his cards upon the table.

WHC put up the money I spent in calling this meeting; advertising in the trade papers: sending out thousands of letters and hundreds of telegrams?

Willard C. Patterson, in response to whose call five hundred exhibitors assembled in Chicago a week ago to plan their defense against the producer inavision of the exhibitorial field, asked the question himself during his opening speech.

Not Surprised at Question
"I have been asked this question a dozen times, and I dare say every man at this convention who hasn't asked me has been wondering about it in his own

"I am not surprised. You can't buy thousands of postage stamps; you can't send hundreds of telegrams; you can't travel on railroad trains; you can't advertise in trade papers; in fact, you can't turn around without spending money.

And this convention, gentlemen, represents an advance expenditure of $3,000.

"The man who footed the bill is one of the finest men in the South—my employer, Mr. Sig Samuels of Atlanta, Ga.

"We don't own an interest in any producing company. We don't own a franchise of any company. We go out on the open market and buy our pictures.

"I'll tell you how this meeting happened to come about. Mr. J. D. Williams of the First National Exhibitors Circuit had an article in the trade paper in which he stated it was time for the producers and exhibitors to get on one side of the line or the other.

Receives 127 Letters

"It interested me and I wrote my opinion on the question and it was printed.
I got 127 letters from exhibitors from all parts of the United States, all suggestting that we get together and plan this fight. No one wanted to take the initiative. I finally decided I would.

"I went to Sig Samuels and told him my plans. He said to go ahead, and he would back me to the limit.

"I have the receipted check for every penny expended. My books are open to everyone.
His announcement was the signal for prolonged applause. The convention attempted to make him chairman but he declined. He was placed on the committee of sixteen to interview all producers on their intentions. Mr. Samuels was enthusiastically named secretary of the organization.
Three Los Angeles First-Run Houses Play Hodkinson Pictures Same Week

W. W. Hodkinson Corporation publications fairly monopolized first-run houses in Los Angeles last week, it is announced. With J. Parker Read, Jr.'s Louise Glamm production, "Sex," at Gore Brothers & Lesser's Kinema, "Desert Gold," Benjamin B. Hampton's Zane Grey picture at the Garrick and "His Temporary Wife," at the Victory, the Hodkinson organization set a new mark for a week's picture distribution in Los Angeles, it is claimed.

Backed by a campaign of powerful advertising, "Sex" smashed all opening day figures, it is said, a fact verified by the Gore-Lesser management's action in arranging with F. A. Wagner, Hodkinson Los Angeles manager, for the following week's showing of the Louise Glamm production at the firm's other first-run house, the Alhambra.

Seven Bookshops Co-operate

Claud E. Halbell of the Garrick theatre won a fair share of the exploitation laurels during Hodkinson week with a "Desert Gold" campaign as effective and attractive as the production itself, it is declared. No less than seven of the biggest Los Angeles bookshops gave over their show windows to a display of Zane Grey novels all during the run at the Garrick. Three of the bookshops gave Mr. Halbell carte blanche in their window display arrangement.

Appreciating Zane Grey's audience-pulling power as well as his popularity with book lovers, Mr. Halbell gave special prominence in his big newspaper advertising spread on "Desert Gold" as well as in his big appropriate lobby exhibit. The Garrick's front-of-the-house display had a life size portrait of the author surrounded by enlarged stills of powerful scenes in the picture with signs denoting where the Zane Grey novel was on sale.

Capitalizes Leap Year

At the Victory, where "His Temporary Wife" held the boards during Hodkinson week, Chris Glinn, owner of the house, stressed the leap year angle of the production co-starring Ruby De Remer, Edmund Bruce and Mary Rol-land in all his advertising, the features of his lobby display being hand painted cards with some catchy paragraphs on the advantages or evils resulting from girls taking the initiative at "popping the question." Glinn also staged a five minute prelude caricaturing the sub-ject that provoked capacity crowds to laughter and applause at every perfor-

St. Louis Cashier Defends Cash Drawer Like Film Heroine

Displaying the cool-headedness and courage of a serial heroine, Mrs. Adele Price, cashier of the Liberty theatre, St. Louis, Mo., successfully defeated the threat of a would-be bandit who entered the box office from the rear and, brand-ishing a gun, demanded the evening's receipts.

Mrs. Price had just checked up on the night's business and placed the money in a sack when the door opened and a "very red-faced man about 40 years old wearing a green cap" pointed a revolver at her and demanded that the sack be turned over to him.

"I haven't any money," Mrs. Price argued. "I'm just getting by here. I'm running the place myself and I don't want to lose any more money."

The man looked at her for a moment and seemed to alter his intentions. "You look like a good fellow," he said, "and I never hold up a good fellow. Keep your money and good luck to you. And I also ask you not to touch that buzzer until I have time to get on a street car." When attaches of the theatre answered Mrs. Price's summons the man had lost himself in the crowd on the street.

Good Plots Needed In Short Subjects

Marion Kohn Declares Story Is The Thing in Feature and Comedy Pictures

Marion H. Kohn, president of Marion H. Kohn Productions, which is making the Polly Moran comedies, the weekly "Illiterate Digest" by Will Rogers, the "Smiling Bill" Jones comedies and the Grace Cunard westerns, has indicated that in the future more attention will be paid to the plot in these short sub-

"Just as with the big productions," says Kohn, "at first all that was needed to carry them over was a pretty face or spectacular stunts. The day for this has passed and now with the big productions the story is the thing. People demand a story in a comedy now as well as in a big production."

"It is my intention to pick only clever stories for all my short subjects. I have added several more scenario writers to my staff because I want every Kohn short subject to be thoroughly up-to-the-minute in plot as well as picture. Grace Cunard westerns will have lively, fast moving action and there will be a logical reason for every move. Polly Moran and "Smiling Bill" Jones romp through reels of laughs but they will have plots to bolster up their clever work."

Polly Moran has completed the first of her new "Sheriff Nell" series and "Smiling Bill" Jones has completed his fourth comedy single-reeoler, "A Fishy Affair," in which the Kohn bathing girls are featured with him.

Associated Producers Will Open Exchange System Early In August
F. B. Warren In Interview States That “Big Six” Will Have Steady Supply of High Class Features Beginning September 1

That the newly formed Associated Producers, Inc., will open its exchanges in the key cities of the United States early in August and will probably publish its first picture September 1st was the gist of a statement issued through an F. B. Warren, general manager, who is already busily engaged in organizing the company’s distributing machinery.

Mr. Warren stated that the “Big Six” has five pictures ready for distribution, and has so thoroughly organized that it will be able to offer its clientele a steady supply of high class features from the start.

List of Managers Already Chosen

Although declining to make public the list at this time, he continued that men have been chosen to act as managers of the “Big Six” exchanges in practically all of the cities, and most of the details of organization had been decided upon.

Announcements of other distributing companies of forthcoming pictures produced by the six directors in the Associated Producers does not mean that all of the directors are still at work on productions for these companies, he said.

Many of these pictures have already been completed,” he said.

Product Is Discussed

When asked if the directors in the “Bix Six” have planned to produce four pictures annually, Mr. Warren replied:

“Probably five each.”

“That will make a picture every week or two?” he was asked.

“There will be more than that,” he said.

Official announcement of the forming of the company was accompanied by a statement that “one and possibly several other important producers will affiliate with the Associated Producers in the near future.”

Telegraphic reports from the West Coast indicated that the “one” referred to is J. Parker Read, Jr., who acted as business manager for the “Big Six” during recent negotiations with distributing companies.

No Statement As to Stars

When asked if Thomas H. Ince would bring his entire list of stars into the “Big Six,” Mr. Warren stated that there were existing contracts with the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation in regard to several players, and he was unable to make any statement on the matter.

National Exchanges Formed by Bennett
Walter L. Johnson Appointed President of New Distributing Firm

Hunter Bennett is associated with Johnson & Hopkins Company, 395 Fifth avenue, New York, in the organization of National Exchanges, Inc. The firm, it is announced, will publish only a limited number of high class productions yearly and will exploit big pictures in a big way.

Mr. Bennett, well known to the industry as general sales manager for large distributing corporations, has been elected vice-president and general manager.

Until recently he was a special representative for Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. He was sales manager of Mutual Film Corporation and also assistant general manager of World Film Corporation.

“I know that I am in a position to secure a branch office organization,” he said, “which will prove second to none in selling efficiency. We intend making our branch managers and franchise holders partners in our business. Our capital is fully paid and there is no stock for sale.”

Allan Dwan at Work
On Last Production
For Mayflower Corp.

Dwan has been in conference with his technical staff since his return, outlining the sets for the picture. He has begun casting. Mary Thurman will again play important role for Dwan.

The new production will be the sixth and last which Dwan is to make under his present contract with Mayflower.

Allan Dwan, the Mayflower director-producer, has returned from his two weeks in the mountains of California, spent in the search of locations for his next story, and commenced production on May 1.

I. and A. Gold Put on Denims to Get Parade

Cameramen are just as much opposed to the high cost of living as anyone else, reasoned I. Gold and A. Gold, who turn the crank on news happenings in New York City and vicinity for Fox News. Therefore, the “Gold Dust Twins,” when assigned to cover the giant over-all parade in New York, sallied forth with the Fox studios attired in a rich shade of blue denims.

They made their way to Columbus Circle, the starting point of the demonstration against profiteers, in a Fox News automobile, and when they alighted they became the center of an interested group of onlookers, who mistook them for the parade.

The cameramen figured that if they dressed the part of a parader they would get more atmosphere into their pictures. They did get atmosphere—which goes to prove that the artistic temperament has its place among “photographers” as it has among the common people.

Signal Amusement Company Holds Franchise In Associated Exhibitors

Atlanta Territory Includes All of Georgia and Most Of the Territory In the States of Tennessee, Alabama and Florida

Associated Exhibitors, Inc, franchise in the Atlanta territory has been acquired by Signal Amusement Company, with independent theatre holdings in Chattanooga, Knoxville and Meriville.

The territory acquired by the exhibitor company includes the eastern half of Tennessee, Alabama and Florida. In Chattanooga the firm owns the Royal, Alexar, Fine Arts, Bijou, Lyric, Superba, Bonita, American, Royal and Post theatres, and their interests in Knoxville include the Strand, Majestic, Queen, Rex and Bijou theatres. The Palace and Princess theatres in Meriville, Tenn., also are owned by Signal.

Building Tivoli Theatre

Signal has under construction several theatres in various cities and plans under way for many more. Chief of these new houses is the $500,000 Tivoli theatre now being built in Chattanooga. It will have 2,500 seats. The auditorium towers four stories above the front.

The architects for the Tivoli are Rapp Bros., of Chicago, who also designed the Riviera and Keith's Palace, Cincinnati. The Chattanooga house will be built on very similar lines to the Palace, Cincinnati. When completed the Tivoli will be one of the finest in the South, it is said.

Beside the Tivoli in Chattanooga, construction also is under way in Knoxville, the Riviera theatre. This house will cost $1,000,000. Leases also have been signed and contracts let for the construction of the Rivoli, a building that will cost a half million. The Signal Company's $500,000 theatre in South Pittsburgh, Tenn., will open within a month, and another new house is announced for Harriman, Tenn.

Represents First National

Signal Amusement Company represents First National exhibitors in their territory. They also are affiliated with National Theatre Companies of Knoxville, which combination controls eighteen other theatres.

F. H. Dowler, Jr., vice president and general manager of Signal, said at the time of signing his Associated Exhibitors franchise that his main reason for joining hands with the association was the advantage that the affiliation held for the future construction of an organized body of independent exhibitors in the Atlanta territory. He emphasized his belief that the cooperation of independent exhibitors would be obtained through the Film Franchise Plan, which offers every exhibitor in the territory a chance to come in on an equitable basis with the Signal Company.

Some Blowed Out

"The South," Mr. Dowler said, "always has been the battleground in the war of the producer against the theatre interests. It is perhaps more exposed than any other part of the country. Threats, intimidations, unfair practice—unfair both morally and legally—have frightened several of the smaller theatre owners to divest themselves of all theatre holdings. They were bluffed or hoodwinked into believing that by remaining out of the supposed octopus trust they would either meet with disaster through competitive theatres or through inability to obtain pictures. It is my emphatic belief that the Associated Exhibitors franchise means the financial and moral salvation of the exhibitors in this territory.

The officers of Signal Company are Judge W. E. Wilkerson, president, F. H. Dowler, Jr., vice president and general manager and F. H. Dowler, Sr., secretary and treasurer.

Other States Sold On Chaplin Reissues

Sol Lesser Gets Right for California, Arizona And Nevada

Victor Kremer, president of Victor Kremen, Film Features, Inc., reports the consummation of sales for California, Arizona, Nevada, Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas, Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois on the five Chaplin comedies controlled by the company.

Sol Lesser, holder of the First National Theatres chain, which covers Arizona and Nevada, has purchased the five Chaplin comedies for these three states and will start immediately a whirlwind campaign, also half the Chaplin exchanges in San Francisco and Los Angeles. Mr. Lesser has ordered twenty prints of these subjects for immediate first-run bookings.

The Champion at present is playing a two-weeks' engagement at Grauman's theatre, Los Angeles. Metro Pictures Corporation of Dallas, Texas, has obtained the pictures for Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas. The Standard Film Corporation of St. Louis, has acquired the Chaplin productions for Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois. Kremer expects to close soon for Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana and Alaska.

With the consummation of the above sales, the only territories now available to the state right buyer for "A Burlesque on Christmas," are Minnesota, Colorado, Utah, Wyoming, New Mexico and Wisconsin, and for "The Champion," "Jitney Elopement," "Work," and "By the Sea," Iowa, Nebraska, Colorado, Utah, Wyoming, New Mexico and Eastern Canada.

United Artists Select O'Brien Vice-President Banzhaf Is Named Secretary And Treasurer at Meeting Of Directors

Hiram Abrams announces that at a recent meeting of the board of directors of United Artists Corporation Dennis F. O'Brien was elected vice-president, and Albert H. T. Banzhaf was elected secretary and treasurer.

Mr. O'Brien, in addition to taking the vice-presidency, also becomes general counsel, thus occupying the post formerly held by William G. McAdoo.

Mr. O'Brien, a number of years has been the counsel for Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks and is one of the leading attorneys in the theatrical and motion picture field.

The election of a president of the Corporation was deferred until a later meeting.

The resignations of Oscar A. Price, president, and George B. Clifton, secretary and treasurer, were accepted, effective immediately.

Friedman Will Call Meeting In New York

J. L. Friedman, president of the Celebrated Players Film Corporation of Chicago and executive head of the Federated Film Exchanges of America, Inc., is planning franchise for California, New York and the other states of the organization in New York the latter part of the present month to take up several matters of importance. The date has not been decided.

Hallmark Takes Over Triangle Exchange System and Pictures

Four New Productions Completed and Ready for Distribution—Eight Others Will Follow at Short Intervals Is Announcement

The Triangle exchange system and pictures, which were controlled by United Picture Theatres of America, Inc., up to a few weeks ago, were taken over May 1st by the Hallmark Pictures Corporation under the terms of an agreement entered into by Frank G. Hall, president of Hallmark, and Percy L. Waters, president of Triangle.

Eighteen Exchanges Figure in Deal

Eighteen film exchanges are included in the deal, Boston, Buffalo, Chicago, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Denver, Los Angeles, Minneapolis, New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, San Francisco, Seattle, Salt Lake City, Washington, New Haven and Milwaukee. Hallmark managers have been placed in all of these exchanges.

The pictures taken over include all of the famous Triangle re-issues, which were the subject of an elaborate exploitation campaign conducted by United Picture Theatres recently.

This move by Frank Hall is the opening gun of a campaign to greatly increase Hallmark activities as independent producers and distributors. Preparations for expansion have been going on quietly for several months and with the announcement of the closing of the Hall-Waters deal comes the news of four pictures completed and ready for immediate publication with eight more to follow at short intervals; two of which are already in preparation.

The finished specials are: "The Discarded Woman" and "For Love or Money," both Burton King productions; and "Should a Wife Work?" and "What Children Will Do," staged by Horace Plimpton. "The Common Sin," another Burton King production, is in preparation, as is also a new Plimpton production the title of which has not been decided upon.

George Montgomery in Charge

The former Triangle distributing organization, now Hallmark, will be kept intact and the personnel of each office will remain the same with George N. Montgomery, general sales manager for Hallmark, in charge. Mr. Montgomery recently completed an extended trip through all of the branches which took in all of the branches.

The productions controlled by Hallmark through the purchase include nine recently released films, four Fairbanks pictures, seven Talmadge pictures in addition to sixteen Keystone comedies and other productions.

Launch Testimonial Drive for Selznick

And Republic Forces

As a welcome testimonial to Sam E. Morris and Charles R. Rogers, Britton N. Busch and Lewis J. Selznick, in order to reward all the branch managers for the business results they are obtaining, have inaugurated a special drive for volume business during the months of May and June, to be known as "Sam. E. Morris and Charles R. Rogers months."

The purpose of the special drive, according to an announcement, has been started merely as an added impetus to the spirit and enthusiasm that was manifested by the Selznick and Republic branch managers at the recent Selznick convention in New York. The spirit is said to have imbued Mr. Selznick with such enthusiasm that he decided to offer all his salesmen some token of his appreciation for their efforts in more firmly implanting Selznick and Republic productions in the hearts of exhibitors.

Accordingly a special drive was suggested and inaugurated, and Mr. Busch stated that ten prizes ranging from $500 down to $150 are offered to the branches showing the highest percentage of increase in rentals over March and April, highest percentage of increased collections and advance payments over March and April, and highest percentage in reaching or exceeding quota assigned for new contract business to be written during the period of the drive.

Hodkinson To Increase Its Staff Of Salesmen

W. D. Hodkinson Corporation announces that its selling staff will be enlarged 30 per cent immediately.

"The progress of our organization and the constant improvement in the quality of our pictures," said Mr. Hodkinson, "naturally have resulted in an increased volume of business, with which the present selling force is scarcely able to cope. We are, therefore, looking for the best material which can be found in the selling field of the industry. I want to take this occasion to point out the unusual opportunity offered to young men gifted with energy and vision. These qualities are as essential as experience, and much harder to find."

"I hope that every man in the selling field who is looking for a career rather than a mere job will send me his name. I want the best brains in the selling field, as well as every other department of our organization. The motion picture industry today offers a maximum of reward to a young man with ambition and the ability to think and look ahead."
Miss Love, whose popularity extends back to Triangle-Fine Arts days, is about to appear under the banner of the Andrew J. Callaghan Productions. Her first play will be "The Midlanders."

C. A. Willat Appointed Manager of National Film's West Coast Studio

C. A. Willat, pioneer in motion pictures, has been appointed general manager of the West Coast studios of National Film Corporation of America, according to Harry M. Rubey, president. "Doc" Willat, as he is known, is a brother of Irvin Willat, who directed "Behind the Door."

"Doc" Willat has been actively connected with the industry since 1904. He is credited with many innovations in production and was responsible largely for the organization of New York Motion Picture Corporation.

Built Willat Studio

National's new chief's greatest contribution to the film business was the Willat studio and laboratories at Fort Lee, N. J., for which $500,000 was spent, it is said, for buildings and equipment.

Under "Doc" Willat's management National will resume the production of features, with several well-known stars, with whom Mr. Willat is now negotiating.

Victor A. Nulty will continue as production manager for National.

The Son of Tarzan," which will be under way as soon as the necessary sets have been completed, will be more than a serial, according to Harry J. Revier, who was chosen to direct it. He has arrived on the West Coast and is superintending all phases of production. Roy Somervile, photodramatist, who was chosen to adapt the last of Edgar Rice Burrough's books of the "Tarzan" series for the screen, has completed three episodes of the film. Actual production is scheduled to start in the middle of May.

Will Not Be Serial

"The Son of Tarzan" will not be a serial under the general acceptance of the term, states Mr. Revier. An entirely new idea of presenting a picture-play of this kind has been evolved.

"Simply because it will be released in episode form it will not necessarily have to be a serial," declares Mr. Revier. "On the contrary, each release will be a feature and can be exploited as such."

Many Records Broken

By "The River's End"

Throughout America

Marshall Neilan's initial independent production through First National, "The River's End," continues to break records in all parts of the country, according to the New York offices of the Neilan organization. The success of the production, adapted from James Oliver Curwood's novel, in the big cities, is now being duplicated in smaller communities, it is said.

Among the reports being received on how this film is being exploited are a number of contests held by exhibitors, which have greatly assisted in hanging up new box-office records. At Proctor's Theatre, Plainfield, N. J., a contest running daily in the Plainfield News during the entire presentation of the picture attracted widespread attention. The contest involved the compiling of lists of words which can be made up of the letters appearing in the phrase "The River's End at Proctor's Theatre." Ten prizes of $100 in cash passes covering periods of time from two months to one year were announced as the awards, for those offering the largest number of words.

The Proctor's Theatre, Yonkers, N. Y., a week in advance of the showing of "The River's End," conducted a contest in the Yonkers Herald inviting readers to send in the name of the greatest picture released this year. Two hundred persons stated that "The River's End" held this honor despite the fact that the film had not been shown in Yonkers, their opinions having been formed as a result of the success of the picture in New York and from the notices it has received in all the city and suburban papers. Season passes were awarded the winners.

Celebrate Anniversary

Of "Topics of the Day"

During the last week, Pathe Exchange, Inc., and Timely Films, Inc., celebrated the first anniversary of "Topics of the Day," which Pathe distributes. The close of the first year finds the film in use in at least one theatre in every city, town and village in which a motion picture theatre is located. It is the most widely distributed film of its kind in the world, it is claimed.

Aside from its function as a distributor of the best laughs of the week, all selected by the editors of The Literary Digest, it has aided, it is declared, in many public movements in the course of the year and has become a decided influence on the public opinion of the nation.
Fox Film Corporation will publish four regular Fox entertainments and one of the Tom Mix star series productions this month. These five publications, Fox announces, represent as brilliant an array of literary and artistic talent as ever has been issued by this firm on a regular schedule.

Fox Mix will be seen in "The Terror," the sequel of the star's productions to be directed by Jacques Jaccard. It is heralded as a remarkable web of wits, horsemanship and daring of the American cowboy woven through a story which places the devil dog in a new series of backgrounds. The director also is Paul H. Slogan, the Fox press department is heralding "The Dead Line" as an outstanding Walsh production ever issued by the firm.

Paul H. Slogan has given "The Dead Line" a theme of intense human interest and a singularly interesting locale. The supporting cast includes Irene Boyle, Baby Anita Lopez, Joseph Hanaway, Al Hart, Henry Pemberton, James Milady, Gus Weinberg, G. A. Stryer, James Birdsong, Johnny Hopkins and Virginia Valli.

Dell Henderson, who directed Walsh in "The Shark" and whose artistic skill and technique were developed by his experience on the staff of the famous Griffith, held the megaphone through the production of "The Dead Line."

Another Bell Story

In "Love's Harvest" the winsome Shirley Mason shines forth in her second screen role from the versatile pen of Pearl Doles Bell. The story of the novel on which the production is based is an adaptation of Mrs. Bell's novel, "His Harvest," and is said to be quite as becoming to the tiny star as was "Her Elephant Man," in which she made her debut under the William Fox banner and which also was from a book by Mrs. Bell.

Under the direction of Howard M. Mitchell, Shirley Mason has given her best efforts to "Love's Harvest." She has created her most lovable character in the role of Jane Day, and the business which she injected into the scenes makes her at once as a leader among the feminine stars, who are steadily increasing their following. In the cast supporting Miss Mason are Raymond Mckee and Lilie Leslie.

Another eminent author contributing to Fox entertainments for May is Charles Alden Seltzer, whose "Forbidden Trail" is the fourth of the publications for the month. Buck Jones, who first appeared as a screen star under the Fox trade-mark in Harold Titus' film, "The Man From Missouri," will be seen in this Seltzer story. It is a Western theme and gives the sensational cowboy actor his second opportunity to show his skill as a horseman. The principals supporting the star are Winifred Westover, Stanton Heck, William E. Beall, George Kunkel, Harry Dunkinson and Fred Herzog.

Clift Supplies Story

An author who, while not quite so well known to short story and novel readers, is far better as a writer of original screen plays, is Denison Clift of the Fox west coast staff, author of "The Indian Hunt," May 1st, which Madame Travers is the star. Clift wrote the scenario and then directed the production, in which the star is supported by George McDaniel, Edwin Booth Tilton, Melbourne McDowell and Ben Deely.

In addition to these features a total of five Fox Sunshine Comedies will go to first-run houses during May. The titles of these are: "A Waiter's Wasted Words," "Dangerous Eyes," "The Diver's Last Kiss," "Should Dummies Wed?" and "Mongrels."

Including the Mutl and Jeff cartoons there will be a total of fifteen productions from Fox Film Corporation in May.

Mayer to Produce

"The Trail's End"

As Special Feature

The popularity of James Oliver Curwood's story and the growing demand for special pictures have induced Louis B. Mayer to produce Curwood's famous novel, "Isobel," as a special attraction. It is announced.

Work on the production has been started at the Mayer studio, with Edwin Carewe directing House Peters and a cast including Jane Novak. The working title of the picture is "The Trail's End."

The cast, it is said, was selected with great care after the entire available field of thorough search among those engaged are Tom Wilson, Edward J. Piel, Bob Walker, Pearlie May Norton and Edward Carlson. The last two of the picture are to be made at the Mayer studio and the exteriors will be shot in the north woods.

Harry Poppe Leaves Fischer Features, Inc.

To Write Scenarios

Harry H. Poppe has resigned as advertising and publicity manager for A. H. Fischer Features, Inc., and has embarked in business for himself as a writer of original stories for the screen. He has established his headquarters at 5 East 44th Street, New York City.

Aside from several years service as a member of the editorial staff of The Billboard, Mr. Poppe has been connected with stage and film producing companies since his entrance into business, and therefore takes up his new line of work with a thorough understanding of all its requirements.

In the field of the spoken play he was associated with several seasons with the producing firm of Baker & Castle, for whom he acted as company manager and advance agent for "The Goose Girl" and "Graustark."

His picture experience covers a period of five years, during which time he directed advertising and publicity campaigns for David Horsley, Yorke-Metro, Octagon Films, Inc., the producers of the Houdini serial, and A. H. Fischer Features, Inc. now operating at the former Thanthouse studios in New Rochelle.

His training and long experience in the advertising and publicity fields have taught him the value of the exploitation angle and he announces that he will combine this feature with entertainment quality in every story he writes.

Judge Lindsey Has Role In "The Boy"

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, May 4—Judge Ben Lindsey of Denver, Col., foremost jurist of the United States, is playing an important role in Louis Sargent's picture, "The Boy," directed by William Desmond Taylor at the Lasky studios. While Judge Lindsey likes the work immensely, he has been suffering from the intense lights used in the close-ups.
In August last year, Elaine Hammerstein began working on her first starring vehicle for Selznick Pictures Corporation. Since then she has won many friends among the fans, both because of her histrionic talents and her screen personality.

Recently Miss Hammerstein renewed her contract with Selznick enterprises and extended it for a period of seven years. A perusal of the terms signed by the star and Myron Selznick reveal an agreement of unusual character, it is declared.

One of the Favorites

This contract, it is pointed out, "is the evidence of a mutual faith in a future that will be a continuation of the past."

When Mr. Selznick first added Miss Hammerstein's name to the list of Selznick stars, his action represented a judgment gained in a painstaking study of her previous work, it is said, and the intention that, given the advantage of unlimited facilities in production, she soon would become one of the favorites in her profession.

Seven years is a long time as film contract time is reckoned. It is just as rare for a star to agree to enlist under a producer's banner for more than two years as it is for a producer to want to engage a star for longer than that period. Miss Hammerstein's contract punctuates precedent because it is the outcome of the popularity that she has achieved in so short a time.

Her First Production

The new star's initial picture for Selznick was Booth Tarkington's "The Country Cousin." One reviewer said of this production: "Elaine Hammerstein's first Selznick picture places her in the ranks of the foremost stars of the screen. Let us hope that her future pictures will realize the high standard set by her initial appearance as a star."

This same reviewer was one of the first to capitate to the charm of her second Selznick picture, "Greatest Than Fame." That he was not alone in his opinion was exemplified by the avalanche of mail that "Greatest Than Fame" brought to its star. Within two weeks after the picture's publication Miss Hammerstein was receiving hundreds of letters from film fans.

The chain of success continued unbroken, it is pointed out, with the issuance of the two succeeding Hammerstein pictures, "The Woman Game" and "The Shadow of Rosalie Byrnes." The reception accorded these productions proved beyond all question that Miss Hammerstein had "arrived" as a screen star in all that is meant by that term of the profession.

With the completion of "Whispers," a picture that is being edited and titled, Myron Selznick entered into negotiations with his star for the purpose of drawing up the contract that has since been signed. Unlike most contracts, it was discussed, drawn up and signed all in the course of a day. Mr. Selznick wanted Miss Hammerstein to remain with his producing company and Miss Hammerstein wanted to remain with Selznick. These were the simple, if unique, facts in the case and, with this mutual purpose as a starting point, it is not surprising, it is declared, that Miss Hammerstein dismissed the many offers that had been made her by other picture concerns.

Screen Crafts Now Working On Its First Picture "Great Physician"

Screen Crafts, Inc., has been organized for production purposes, with H. M. Lawson, owner for a chain of theatres in Arizona and northern California, as president and general manager.

A seven-part picture, "The Great Physician," now is being produced under the direction of Chadwick Ayres. Rhea Mitchell and Robert McKin are playing the leads, with Snowden Baxendale, Arnold Gregg, Lillian Loud, Mabel Loves, Robert Anderson, Max Davidson, Olga Gray and Maxine Adair in support.

Carrie B. Hutcheson wrote the story being adapted. It is said to be metaphysical in nature and presents the teachings of Mark Baker Edwards, founder of the Christian Science church. Three productions of this general character will be made this year.

DeWitte Hager is production manager of the concern and Ralph DeLacy is technical director.

Big Theatres Install Automaticket Register

Among the sales mentioned in a current report from the Automatic Ticket Selling and Cash Register Co., 1780 Broadway, New York, are the installations of Automaticket Registers in the new Grauman theatre in Los Angeles and the transformed Criterion Theatre in New York.

Other theatres mentioned in the list are the Garden, Paterson, N. J., and the Harris in Pittsburgh, Pa.

Reports Successful Trip In the Interest of Read

Sig Schlager, representative of J. Parker Read, Jr., has returned to Culver City, Calif., after making a successful sales and exploitation trip through the East in the interest of Louise Glauq productions. Schlager visited practically every key city, holding conferences with the exhibitors, newspaper editors and the managers of the Hodkinson exchanges, through which organization Mr. Read is at present distributing the Louise Glauq productions.

His tie-up with the editors in the novel exploitation of "Sex" has put the production over as one of the truly big films of the year, it is declared. Exhibitors everywhere are reporting record business on the picture.

Cohn's "Laughographs" Published Semi-Weekly

A new novelty reel will be published semi-monthly by Jack Cohn under the title "Laughographs." With "Screen Snapshots," Cohn will offer a short subject to exhibitors every week.

"Laughographs" is composed of a succession of animated jokes, and is said to be new in its conception. In the first issue, which is ready for publication, is a negro preacher explaining to his congregation the meaning of the word "miracle," and is said to offer exceptional comedy. It is slated for state rights publication.

Better Showmanship and Increased Attendance Noticeable Everywhere

People Find Motion Pictures Offer Cheapest and Best Form of Dramatic Entertainment—Quality of Film Is Improving

More advanced showmanship and greater attendance at the motion picture theatres are the outstanding facts noticeable to a representative of the industry in a tour of the country. According to Al Lichtman, general manager of distribution for Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, who has returned to New York after visiting every city of importance in the United States.

"The most notable impression which I received is the tremendous volume of business that is being done by the motion picture theatres," says Mr. Lichtman. "All the theatres are selling a greater number of people than ever before in spite of the fact that the better theatre have increased the admission prices to a point where they are more in keeping with the quality of entertainment they offer. This is due in a large measure to the improvement in the quality of motion picture entertainment being presented and to the fact that the people have more money to spend than they had in other years.

Quality of Pictures Improves

"It undoubtedly is true that the quality of motion pictures is improving and the theatres in which they are presented are more comfortable, more beautiful and more pleasing in every way than they were even two or three years ago. The physical improvement of motion picture theatres is very noticeable in all parts of the country. And the people find the motion pictures offer them the best and the cheapest form of dramatic entertainment.

"Motion picture theatres all over the country are presenting a decided tendency to longer runs of pictures. The tendency in all parts of the country is to give the drawing production a chance to get all the patronage that it can draw regardless of the length of the run.

"There is a noticeable improvement in showmanship everywhere. This is being brought about to a certain extent by the increased runs the productions are getting.

The field of exploitation men sent out by this organization to carry the message of applied showmanship to the small theatres has won the unstinted praise of exhibitors everywhere. The story will soon be heard are pleased with the work of these live-wire showmen. These exploitation men are doing a wonderful job of showing the exhibitors in the little places who have not had the opportunity to do big stunts how to get the business. One exhibitor in a small town told me that he never knew there was so much money in the show business until our exploitation men showed him how to get it.

"Sid Grauman at Los Angeles probably is the greatest showman in the world. His theatre and his methods of presentation are the talk of the whole United States. I have found that he has made a wonderful impression by his showmanship on every exhibitor.

"I would recommend to everyone that pay exhibitors who are trying to improve the conditions in his own theatre pay a visit to Los Angeles and study the methods of Sid Grauman.

"This idea is suggested because of the extreme courtesy and friendliness that Mr. Grauman shows every visiting exhibitor. He has no secrets and he is glad to give his time and his service to the showman who really is in earnest.

"Through changes of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation I have found a splendid spirit of loyalty and sacrifice of purpose to carry out all the policies of this organization to the letter. The spirit of service to the exhibitor dominates every exchange and the theatre runs to extend from the highest man in the field to the latest addition in the humblest capacity in the smallest exchange."

Zena Keefe Completes Exteriors In Bahamas

George Archeaibaud, director, has completed the exterior scenes in the Bahamas for "Marooned Hearts," starring Zena Keefe, supported by Conway Tearle. Other players in the cast are Eric Mayne, George Backus, Joseph Flanagan and lavalla Selbert.

In addition to securing many novel outdoor scenes in Miami, Florida, and Nassau, Director Archeaibaud is said to have filmed the taking of a 150-foot yacht at an estimated cost of $35,000. Interior scenes for the production were taken at the Seabreeze Studios. The story is by Lewis Allen Browne.

Spoor-Thompson Moves

Spoor-Thompson Laboraories, Inc., has discontinued its New York sales office, which was located at 110 West 40th Street. Temporary headquarters for the East are in the new Laboratory Building at 6th and Pearce Streets, Long Island City, in which an office is in use, and where space is secured, which will be opened under the name of the S-T-M Film Laboratories, Inc., which will be the name of the New York operating company.

Harry Leonhardt Fights High Cost Of Making Films

Harry Leonhardt of Los Angeles, one of the well-known film men attending the recent convention in Chicago, brought with him the announcement that he had opened a drive on the H. C. P.—the high cost of producing.

Mr. Leonhardt is promoting a co-operative idea which he declares will materially decrease production costs. Eight of the fifteen producing companies needed to make the plan a success have already entered an agreement.

"We intend to do away with the waste of duplication," he declared, "and reduce our costs by buying in bulk.

"Practically every producer has a number of employees who are kept busy only an hour or two a day. By working under one roof, the producers could reduce their number of employees, one man serving several.

"I regard the buying in bulk as equally important, however. In renting props, buying lumber, and many other ways, the price reductions possible are surprising.

"Deep Purple" Booked By First Run Houses

A number of first run exhibitors gathered this week in the projection room of Realart Pictures Corporation to view "The Deep Purple," an R. A. Walsh production, presented by Mayflower Photoplay Corporation, and declared the picture to be the best of the director's career.

Edward Bowes, managing director, and Thomas F. Walker, director of film, of the Capitol Theatre, were present, and at the close of the showing announced that they would run the feature in the big Broadway Theatre during the week of May 2. Representatives of the Park Theatre, Boston, also were present and, after viewing the picture, concluded a contract to present the Mayflower special during the same week.

The Rose Theatre in Chicago also has taken a contract to show the picture for two weeks.
“Suds” Will Be Issued On June 27
And “The Mollycoddle” On June 13

Mary Pickford’s Vehicle Is Adaptation of the Play “‘Op O’ Me Thumb” and Fairbanks’ Picture Is Based On Heredity

United Artists Corporation announces that Mary Pickford’s second “Big Four” production, “Suds,” will be issued on June 27, while Douglas Fairbanks’ third picture for the company will go to the exhibitors on June 13.

“Suds” is based on Maude Adams, famous play, “‘Op O’ Me Thumb,” which had a long run at the Empire Theatre in New York, as well as on the road. Frederick Fenn and Richard Pryce wrote the story.

The theme of the Fairbanks production deals with two great factors of life today, heredity and environment.

Required Four Months

For several years Miss Pickford had had the character of Amanda Afflick in mind, it is said, and has been waiting the opportunity to present it in the proper manner and with the proper settings.

Since the completion of “Pollyanna” in the latter part of 1919, Miss Pickford has been at work with her staff of assistants on “Suds.” Over four months were spent in the adaptation of the story for the screen by several of the best scenario writers in the photoplay profession, and this versatile little star went over the entire story again and again, word for word, until in its typewritten form it was a photo-play gem.

Not until she was satisfied that the story was flawless would Miss Pickford begin rehearsals and production. In the meantime her technical staff had been at work on interior and exterior settings. Photographs of several streets of London slums were taken by Miss Pickford’s English representatives and these were sent to the studio and exact reproductions were constructed in the huge lot adjoining her dressing room.

Comb City for Characters

The photoplay colony, as well as the city of Los Angeles, was combed for people to appear in the crowded street scenes and when everything was to her entire satisfaction Miss Pickford gave orders for the filming to start.

In “The Mollycoddle,” Fairbanks, as Richard Marshall the Fifth, is an offspring of many generations of fearless fighters. His ancestors fought all the way through the Revolution; all across the plains and all down the coast of the western country. They were not dainty or even civilized in their undertakings, and it mattered little just how they gained a point, just so long as it was gained quickly.

Fairbanks as Mollycoddle

In the title role Fairbanks is transplanted to England at an early age. He arrives at his youth through the so-called hot-house cultivation, with the result that his early manhood found him gentle in manner, quiet of voice, fastidious in dress and addicted to such affectations as a monocle, perfume and cigarette holders. He was considered just a plain “mollycoddle.” This gives the star a different role to those he has played in the past.

Wallace Beery as the villain has considerable to do in developing the ancestry of “The Mollycoddle” over his environment, and Ruth Renick, as the pretty girl who starts the turning point of it all, is responsible for many of the thrilling situations.

Kaufman Announcement

On N. Y. Plans Expected

Albert Kaufman, who is allied with Marshall Neilan in production activities, has returned to the west coast from New York, where he contemplates purchasing a theatre for premier showings of his pictures. An announcement of his plans is expected shortly.

Production has started on his first Allen Holubar production starring Dorothy Phillips. Agnes Ayres will start work soon on her first Kaufman picture. In Kaufman’s announcement of his New York plans there will be included, it is said, the names of a new star and director, whom he has contracts with.

Geraldine Farrar In “The Riddle: Woman”

Stage Play Which Featured Bertha Kalich Had Long And Successful Run

“The Riddle: Woman,” the stage success in which Bertha Kalich starred, will be Geraldine Farrar’s initial production for Associated Exhibitors, Inc. Edward Jose will direct.

“The Riddle Woman” was purchased from the Shubert theatrical interests because of its box-office record as a play, it is said, and because of its singular fitness as a vehicle for Geraldine Farrar. The play was written by C. M. Jacoby, and adapted by Charlotte Welland Dorothy Donnelly. It ran for more than nine months on Broadway, seven months in Chicago and five months in Boston.

It is a play that will appeal particularly to women and is a modern story with a society setting. The subject matter and title are ripe with exploitation possibilities. This fact, coupled with the further fact that the picture will be produced as well as it is possible for human endeavor to produce a picture with everything necessary at command, promises that “The Riddle: Woman” in picture form will be one of the big pictures of the season.

Fox Gets Hendryx Tales

For Adaptation By Mix

Two western novels by James B. Hendryx, “The Texan” and “Prairie Flowers,” have been purchased by Fox Film Corporation as vehicles for Tom Mix. Production will start soon on the first named. While both are western stories and can be made in the same locality, the leading roles are in contrast.

Vitagraph Titles Fifteen Episodes Of Its New Serial, "Hidden Dangers"

Albert E. Smith, president of Vitagraph, who is on the West Coast supervising the production of the latest serial of which he is co-author, "Hidden Dangers," has wired to John M. Quinn, general manager, the episode titles of this serial, in which Joe Ryan and Jean Paige are starred. They are:

Complete Before Publication

At the present rate of production it is believed that the entire serial will be finished and the prints in the various Vitagraph exchanges before the publication date is set.

A big pre-release booking is announced, exhibitors having been impressed with the first episode, it is said, in which occurs the exposition of a most unusual serial plot. It is in this episode that Joe Ryan is seen bulldozing the steer which fell on him and sent him to the hospital for several weeks.

The bulldozing incident, however, is not the capital thrill of the opening episode, it is said. The capital thrill for the final fadeout has to do with electricity, and in fact many of the subsequent thrills do also. The employment of current to the power of 4,000,000 volts punctuates many of the scenes. Acts of wizardry in which stone and steel are melted instantly at the touch of a finger, and human forms pass through solid walls, occur.

HALBERT W. BROWN IS VETERAN CHARACTER MAN

Halbert W. Brown, who portrays the role of the "Doctor" in Lee Francis Loyeager's thought drama, "Democracy—the Vision Restored," produced by the Democracy Photoplay Company, will be remembered as the dramatic actor who impersonated Ambassador Gerard in "My Four Years in Germany," which was also directed by William Nigh.

Mr. Brown was born "down east" in the little town of Jacksonville, in the state of Vermont. In his early youth he went on the stage and was featured as a prominent actor in melodrama, on the "Stair and Havlin" circuit. He later made a name for himself as an interpreter of heavy and character roles. He was three years with Margaret Anglin, playing such parts as old Benjamin Wright in "Helena Richie," Admiral Grice in "Green Stockings," Ritchy in "Mrs. Dane's Defense," and the judge in "Lydia Gilmore."

PRESS SHEET PRaised AS BEST

Exhibitor in New York State Declares That Fox Advertising Aids Often Are Determining Factor in the Successful ScreeninG of a Production

Many different expressions of sentiment have been made regarding the material furnished by the Fox Film Corporation in its press sheets. Some exhibitors are very commendatory in their remarks about such advertising aids, while others are just as strong in their opposition.

Victor Allen Warren who owns and manages two theatres in New York state property is that the efforts of the producers are very credible. Mr. Warren says that the press sheets furnished by the Fox Film Corporation are surpassed by none in the industry.

Own Two Theatres

Mr. Warren owns two theatres in Massena, a city of 10,000 population, with 190,000 additional to draw from in the surrounding territory. He is now playing 100 per cent Fox productions and has had marked success in their showing. Besides handling his two theatres, the Strand and the Opera House, Mr. Warren is a real estate operator and higher with a wide reputation throughout Lawrence county, and it is from the business man's viewpoint that he finds the Fox Film Corporation publicizing the matter the most valuable for his purpose.

In a letter to William Fox, president of Fox Films, he says:

"As the owner of the Strand theatre and the Opera House here in Massena, and as Mr. Warren engaged in several different lines of business in this section of the country, please permit me to congratulate you upon the excellence of the press sheets you are furnishing the theatres showing your pictures."

No Time Wasted

"I consider the Fox campaign aids or press sheets, as you call them, the best sent out by any producer in the market. No matter what angle the exhibitor finds it necessary to advertise from he can readily find just what he wants in your press sheets. This without the loss of valuable time in wading through a mass of reading copy. Invariably we can arrange our newspaper aids, slide-dodgers, window cards, etc., in one-third less time, and your catch-lines are invaluable, suggesting the points to play up in catering to different clientele.

"In this business, unfortunately, there are many times when we are obliged to kick, but it is a distinct relief to turn from this to compliment and to extend all good wishes to an organization whose efficient advertising aids are so often the determining factor in the successful exhibition of pictures."

EILEEN PERCY, who has been placed under contact by William Fox to appear in a series of productions opposite Tom Mix, William Russell and Buck Jones.

Majestic Theatre at

Port Huron Is Added To Battlefield Chain

PORT HURON, MICH.—The Majestic theatre here has been purchased by W. S. Butterfield, Battle Creek, president and general manager of Bijou Enterprise Company. Mr. Butterfield recently opened the Regent at Flint and is constructing a $300,000 house at Lansing. He is about to purchase from John G. O'Neill Realty Company for the 1,600-seat theatre, four stores, eight office rooms and an adjoining plot of ground. The Majestic theatre is in the heart of the business district and has a street frontage of 150 feet.

In addition to the $300,000 and $40,000 which will be expended this summer in remodeling the playhouse, the management will play a combination program of pictures and vaudeville.

Wolff New Manager

Of New York Offices

Character Pictures Corporation has appointed W. Wolff as head of the New York offices. He has served in almost every branch of the industry for the last ten years. During the war, he was connected with the War Department and is now handling the southern division of Liberty theatres and also with the training camp activities of the war. Mr. Wolff lately severed his connections as manager of the Fox Circuit theatres in New Jersey. Character Pictures' new studios in Florida have been completed and work has commenced on "The Isle of Destiny."

Reports of Increased Patronage Put Four Pathe Specials on May Schedule

Four special productions will be published by Pathe Exchange, Inc., in May as a result of reports from branch managers indicating that attendance records over the country will reach new levels.

Frank Keenan will be seen in "Dollar for Dollar." This very popular Pathe special will present "The Miracle of Money," and "Sherry" will come from Edgar Lewis, whose previous Pathe production "Men's Shoes" is said to be meeting with popular favor in every territory. Another Pathe special will be issued, details of which are being withheld at present.

Story of Finance

"Dollar for Dollar" will be published on May 2. It is a Keenan drama of high finance, society and politics. The central theme is "As we give, so do we receive," and the action moves from the fine mansions of kings of politics and finance to the broad rugged mountain country. The highlights and shadows of the strong plot are developed in excellent style by Kathleen Kirkham, Harry Van Meter, Kate Van Duren, Jay Belasco, and Gertrude Clair.

The exterior scenes were taken at Bear Valley, a suburb of Southern California and they are exceptionally beautiful.

"Sherry," the latest Edgar Lewis production, will be released as a Pathe extra special on May 30. It is the story of a man's degeneration, of his battle for his own soul, and it is unfolded on the screen with all the strength that has characterized the work of Edgar Lewis in his several recent successes. A strong cast headed by Jack O' Malley effectively carries the theme.

The picture arouses sympathy at the very beginning when "Sherry," young and handsome, but a wreck through the spending of a great fortune left him, is introduced. From the romantic figure of a spender with limitless wealth he is a scorned and pitied wreck. Pride remains, however, and the scorn of a woman arouses it.

In "The Miracle of Money" Hobart Henley has produced a picture which reminds one of his best efforts in the creation of Pauline Frederick, Will Rogers, and Frank McIntyre features. The story is from "Marrying Off Emmy," by Beatrice Poynter and it is a quaint tale rich in philosophy. The types are strong and deep and in casting the picture this feature of the story was remarkably well handled.

Store and Hotel Tie-Up

With "Sex" Followed by Record Show at Kinema

Tie-ups with stores and hotels in Los Angeles were followed by record business when "Sex," J. Parker Read Jr.'s big production starring Louise Glaum, opened at the Kinema theatre.

Prior to the opening date oil paintings of the star were displayed in department store windows and in hotel lobbies. Miss Glaum's gorgeous gowns were shown in the spacious windows of the Ville de Paris, one of the larger stores.

An elaborative prologue, arranged by Mr. Read and Jack Callicott, manager of the house, received great applause. Los Angeles critics praised highly the production and the work of the star. Gores' Alhambra has booked the picture for a continued run.
NEWS PUBLICITY

Of the five hundred exhibitors that attended the recent convention in Chicago it is safe to venture that not more than a dozen had made preparations for keeping their home newspapers informed of the business transacted and the ends accomplished.

Every exhibitor who did not do so missed a very important opportunity.

The ultimate purpose of that convention, as all exhibitorial conventions, was to improve theatre conditions and consequently screen entertainment.

This improvement is of vital interest to theatregoers—to the public. Any thing that pertains to such improvement has legitimate new value and is entitled to space in the news columns of every newspaper.

Those who kept the home newspaper informed undoubtedly were rewarded by publicity of the best sort—genuine news.

Every week does not witness a convention of that magnitude.

Every exhibitor does not attend such conventions.

But every week does witness a number of important events in the film world and every exhibitor can insure mention of them in his newspaper by reporting them.

Showmen can devote their time to no more important and profitable business.

Interest Is Keen

Public interest in motion picture events is more keen, perhaps, than in any other class news. All walks of life are well represented in the body of picture enthusiasts, and no form of amusement holds its devotees more securely.

The announcement of a new star is legitimate news. The genuine enthusiast knows all the important players by name, face and history. When a new one is announced the public wants to know all about him or her at once.

The first duty of a newspaper is to keep the public informed upon matters of general interest.

Opportunities Are Plentiful

There is genuine news value, also, in announcements such as the formation of the Associated Producers, Inc., the purchase of the Hoyt stage formulas for Charles Ray in his new productions from his own studios and the publication of a new and unique form of short subject, Comix, by the Special Pictures Corp.

These are things which the public will hear of in due time through the agency of the screen itself. When a theatregoer sees the pictures upon the screen he will be surprised and interested. Surprise is an important element in the determining of news value.

Obviously, that same person will be interested when he reads of the event in his newspaper. It is use-

NEWS

When the D. W. Griffith party was lost at sea, the biggest newspaper in the country gave the event their scareheads.

When you, an exhibitor, attend a convention, sign a big contract, remodel your theatre or give a benefit performance, you have a legitimate claim to a certain amount of news space.

Somebody had to report the Griffith matter to the press.

Every exhibitor should make himself a reporter on theatrical matters for his local newspapers.

ful information and should be mentioned in every newspaper that is represented as covering the news field.

Theatre News Important

The instances cited concern matters of national interest. They are as important in one city as another. They can be printed as cold statements or, in case you are going to exhibit the attractions, with a personal application which is valuable.

No less important because they are strictly of local interest are the events that transpire within your theatre.

The installation of new projectors, a new organ, screen or ventilating system, is entitled to space and usually gets it. The signing of new contracts for unusual attractions, any change in policy, the addition of new musical talent and any and all presentation or exploitation stunts of unique character are events of real news value that seldom get into the news columns.

Should Effect Reform

It is here that reform is needed. Business moves rapidly in newspaper offices. It is not always possible to cover every lead that is known to exist. In the process of selection quantity and quality come into consideration. Press agents of the speaking stage have brought in their material for so many years that it has not occurred to many newspaper men to include the theatre in their list of possible news sources.

This condition must be changed. And the exhibitor must be the man who changes it.

Middle Course Best

It is a considerable task, this re-educating of the news profession,
A Chicago exhibitor was recently overheard to remark, "Lithos? Yes. I stick up one or two, usually on the comedies, so the kids can see what's on." There are not many exhibitors who would care to make such a statement. It is certain that the man who makes it is overlooking one of the "bets" that make up the bulk of exhibitorial conversation.

The gentleman who manages the Tudor theatre, Atlanta, Ga., does not share the Chicago exhibitor's opinion. He believes that lithographs were not intended primarily for the information of the children below the reading age. He does not believe that they would be manufactured if they had no other purpose.

The Tudor lobby, a photograph of which is reproduced herewith, shows that the management has confidence in the efficacy of the poster. He realizes that the lobby may be dressed up with paper intelligently used as effectually as by expensive and intricate made sets.

In the accompanying illustration it will be seen that the bulk of the space is devoted to the comedy, a Larry Semon Vitagraph production. The feature is given the center position, but no other mention.

Comedy is an important program element. It would be interesting to know the number of additional patrons a good comedy well advertised brings to a given theatre. It is certain that the theatre that advertises the comedy element as it has been advertised at the Tudor finds the investment in lithographs paying off.
"Overalls Parade" Down Broadway
Gains Capitol Theatre Publicity

People who had never heard of New York's Cheese Club became keenly aware of its existence and its general nature when the members paraded Broadway in overalls as a more or less seriously intended protest against high prices. And a number of people who were not familiar with the Capitol theatre had it called to their attention at the same time.

At least one newspaper story branded the overalls movement as a publicity enterprise. Whether or not there was a foundation of truth in the claim, it is true that no event of recent occurrence has been made to serve publicity purposes to better effect.

Upon this page are reproduced two photographs showing the parade that marched down Broadway. On the right, a Hearst cameraman is shown photographing a section of the parade in which the Capitol theatre staff was represented, and a sign bearing the theatre name was held aloft.

The gentleman in the silk hat and overalls in the front rank is Ben Atwell, exploitation genius at the theatre and the man who took advantage of an opportunity.

The other photograph shows a close-up of the Capitol theatre squad as it marched in the parade.

Mr. Atwell has done notable work before this in behalf of the big New York theatre, as readers of this department have cause to know. He is an energetic man, a thoughtful man, and a man of courage. These qualities are requisites to effective exploitation. The man who does not possess them naturally is better off in another capacity, for it is by seeing opportunities and acting upon them promptly and decisively that exploitation is made successful.

The newspaper story in question stated that a New York newspaper man had conceived the overalls idea, that he had sold it to an overalls manufacturer for $10,000 and that that manufacturer had retired from business in something like two weeks, selling his business at a profit of $1,000 per cent.

It doesn't look like the truth. It is a good story, though, which probably accounts for its appearance in print.

The fact remains, however, that the exploitation man in the theatre business who might have originated the idea would have had just cause to boast. And it is not beyond probability that he might have received something like the above mentioned consideration for his enterprise.

If it was a publicity idea, it was a big one.

Big publicity ideas are infrequent, but very much worth striving for.

It is easy to become so absorbed in matters of the immediate moment as to overlook opportunities of less immediate application but infinite promise. Exploitation men, and exhibitors who are their own exploitation men, should see to it that they do not become thus isolated by reason of preoccupation. Big things happen these days. The very unrest of which so much is printed makes especially easy the "putting over" of stunts that would be impractical in more settled times.

To increase this unrest is certainly not the proper business of any man. But when, as in this instance, it can be capitalized and at the same time alleviated—it is a duty as well as an opportunity that the exploitation man faces.

William Hearfield, International News camera-man, photographing the Capitol theatre squad in New York's overall parade. Ben Atwell, Capitol exploitation expert, is the gentleman with the silk hat.

Chorus girls from the Capitol theatre staff, clad in the popular denim, marched New York streets in the interests of publicity for that institution.
Phil Gersdorf Uses all Angles
In Exploiting "Excuse My Dust"

One of the most far-reaching exploitation campaigns that have come to attention recently is that conducted by Phil Gersdorf, director of publicity for the six theatres controlled by Southern Enterprises, Inc., in Jacksonville, Fla., in behalf of "Excuse My Dust," Wallace Reid's latest Paramount Artcraft production.

The picture, an automobile story, was exhibited at the Arcade, and the advertising and publicity forces centered upon that theatre for the occasion.

Banners were used extensively. These were printed especially for the occasion and consisted of canvas strips of suitable dimensions bearing in big red letters the title of the picture and nothing more.

No attempt was made to identify the banners with the theatre or the picture, but Mr. Gersdorf states that the thought connection was definite and effective.

The South Atlantic Motors Company showed exceptional readiness to cooperate in the campaign, as the reproductions presented herewith bear witness. The advertisement of the automobile agency, the force of which is directed altogether toward the theatre, was paid for by this concern. The reader, which states that this company has obtained the agency for the Roamer car and goes on to tell about that car's declared popularity with motion picture people, was also the result of the company's industry.

This willingness to cooperate is explained by Mr. Gersdorf in the opening paragraph of his letter, which follows:

"I am enclosing a copy of last Sunday's Times Union, as well as a little special automobile ad and reader on 'Excuse My Dust.' The latter, of course, was paid for entirely by the automobile dealer of the Roamer, but as his instructions came from the factory, evidently Paramount Artcraft has been busy creating a most effective tie-up to benefit exhibitors. I thought perhaps this might interest you, as it certainly helped the box office receipts here for this picture, and is an interesting example of how the publicity department of some

SOUTH ATLANTIC MOTORS COMPANY GETS ROAMER CAR

The South Atlantic Motor Company, 626 Riverfront avenue, distributors for the Stanley steam car have recently acquired the agency for the Roamer, known as America's Electric Car. This is the car that is so popular with the movie starrs, two speed and eight stock models being used in producing Excuse My Dust, often picture showing all this week at the Arcade theater.

The Roamer is a beautiful car, well built for speed, comfort and durability. It has distinctive lines and promises to be one of the most popular sellers in this territory.

A news story which appeared in a Jacksonville newspaper during the "Excuse My Dust" engagement at the Arcade.

of the big film corporations can easily and effectively aid the exhibitor who plays their products.

"The banner, which I am also enclosing, was gotten up very hurriedly here, and could be improved upon were the printing facilities available. The idea of keeping the theatre name off the banner kept it from appearing as an advertisement, and thus no trouble was experienced in tying them on the rear ends of automobiles. We only had several hundred, but could have used at least a thousand, and many people inquired for them the following day, wanting them for their cars.

"However, we had several hundred autos carrying our advertisements for 'Excuse My Dust' and, although the theatre name was not mentioned, I am sure the thought connection was there just the same."

Readers will share Mr. Gersdorf's certainty that the thought connection was effective despite the omission of the theatre name. With the newspapers carrying the sort of advertisements that Mr. Gersdorf prepares, plus the advertisement used by the South Atlantic Motor Co., from which the theatre benefited.

The power of such thorough exploitation cannot be measured in words. Box office records tell the story far better, and exhibitors who have used such methods know what those records show.

In the present instance, the connection between picture and automobile was an intimate one. Though the name, Roamer, does not appear at any time in the picture, it is apparent that that make of car was employed. By the very nature of the picture, some car had to be used. Surely there can be no objection to exhibitor capitalization of the incident.

Where Roamer cars are not controlled by a local agency, however, and this is important, practically the same cooperation could be effected with any other company. The benefits to the automobile company are obvious.

Memorial Day

Governor Coolidge of Massachusetts and Myron T. Herrick, former American ambassador to France, have suggested that all American theatre men arrange for exhibition on Memorial Day of pictures showing the graves of American soldiers who gave their lives in the war.

The idea is splendid.

There is no doubt that every genuine American exhibitor will go into the work seriously and prepare a program that is suitable for the occasion in every respect.

Too much stress cannot be put upon the importance of identifying the theatre with work of this nature.

Too much effort cannot be expended upon elaboration of the skeleton idea presented. There is no limit to the possibilities presented.

An Alhambra Sidewalk-to-Screen Dressing

GEORGE FISHER, manager of the Alhambra theatre, Milwaukee, Wis., and Edward J. Weisfeldt, exploitation director, have perfected a system of theatre dressing which serves as a valuable example for all exhibitors interested in the proper presentation of pictures. The above photographs show the lobby side-panels, entrance to the theatre proper and the stage setting as they were prepared for the presentation of "The Inferior Sex," Mildred Harris Chaplin's First National attraction. The figures are in all cases cutouts available to all exhibitors. The method of their display is distinctive and typical of the Alhambra. A fashion show was staged in connection with the presentation.
“Full Pages Free of Charge” Is Policy at Strand in Omaha

Were it not for the paper shortage, full-page theatre advertisements would be the order of things rather than the exception today. As it is, they are no common as to occasion no furor. But full pages free of charge is another matter. And a practical exhibitor who is also a business man has made this extraordinary condition a rule at this theatre.

H. B. Watts, manager of A. H. Blank’s Strand theatre, Omaha, Neb., is the gentleman who has found a way to obtain the advantages of full-page advertisements without the inconvenience of paying for them. He tells about it interestingly in his letter, as follows:—

“Am mailing you today under separate cover a bunch of ads which have been recently used by this theatre. Would like to have your honest opinion of them. If they are punk, let me know.

I am not sending them to you with the idea they are masterpieces nor because I’m proud of my brain-children, at all. You will find among them a full-page ad on ‘Double Speed.’ This ad cost me—nothing—which price I consider most reasonable. ‘Twas auto week and, after

A striking seven-column advertisement used during the showing of “In Old Kentucky” at the Strand, Omaha.

I have opened my heart and allowed them to pay for it all. And there you have it in Mr. Watt’s own words, and better than we could tell it. The advertisement in question is reproduced, along with two of similar proportions recently used, as illustration and for the reference of the many exhibitor readers who will be anxious to take advantage of the suggestion contained in Mr. Watt’s letter.

In answer to the letter we may say that we do not consider the advertisements “punk” or anything like it. They are well constructed and in the original were very convincing arguments for attendance at the Strand. Mr. Watts may not be proud of his brain-children, but he ought to be. He ought to be particularly proud of the process of reasoning which brought about the condition of affairs existing.

Exhibitors are familiar with the manner in which full-page advertisements are sometimes obtained at part cost by reason of exchange co-operation. The co-operative advertising page is even more commonly known.

But the obtaining of full pages from disinterested parties is decidedly new stuff. And it is adaptable to any exhibitor’s problems anywhere.

The idea permits of unlimited elaboration and development. Enterprising exhibitors will make sure that it is given due attention.

The automobile industry advertises extensively. The linking of interests is particularly well advised.

Citizens’ Testimonials Aid “Copperhead” Ad

The cry of the industry today is co-operation. The day of “cut-throat” tactics and unfair methods is past. The best news that can be chronicled concerns events that indicate clearly that co-operation is not a myth or theory but an actual element in every-day business. An interesting example of this type of work is seen in the support which prom-
Minneapolis Advertiser Makes Capital Of Newspaper Contest

If Norma Talmadge is not regarded as the most popular screen star by citizens of Minneapolis, Minn., for many seasons to come it will not be the fault of the New Garrick theatre advertising manager.

A page from the Minneapolis Journal while the popularity contest was in progress.

The Minneapolis Journal had just concluded a popularity contest in which votes were received from all sections of the country. Norma Talmadge received the greatest number and was acclaimed the screen's most popular star.

"The Woman Gives," the star's most recent First National production, was booked for a showing at the New Garrick and the advertising man took advantage of the newspaper contest by inserting three lines immediately following the star's name in the three-column upright which was used to advertise the production.

The advertisement is reproduced here-with, as is also one of the newspaper pages used during the contest.

The connection is intimate. There is not a doubt that the attendance figures at the New Garrick during the engagement showed distinctly the influence of the enterprise.

In itself the incident is interesting. As pointing a policy it is important. The advertiser's material is everything. No event that can be connected in any manner with the theatre or with the attraction being exhibited should be considered unadaptable.

If the picture is a railroad drama and a railroad strike is in progress innumerable methods can be contrived to so associate the two events in the public mind as to bring additional business. Several thousand exhibitors failed to take advantage of just that opportunity recently.

With sugar prices soaring beyond all calculations it is to be hoped that some exhibitor will have presence of mind enough to advertise a feminine star as "Sweeter Than Sugar and Not Half So Expensive."

The same exhibitor, if he exists, will doubtless advertise on another day—"Don't Pay the High Rents, Live in a Tent and Entertain Your Friends at the Strand."

A few days later he will run a line reading—"The Country May Still Be at War But You'll Always Find Peace and Contentment at the Strand."

With a little attention to topics of the day he can keep himself supplied with pertinent and purposeful paragraphs that will point up his advertisements and at the same time convince his readers that he is something more than a name—that he has a personality and is a man of affairs.

This impression is no less important than a reputation for the best advertisement under the best circumstances at all times.

There is all too little of this material in American advertising today. The exhibitor is particularly well situated to take advantage of current events.

Lighting

A costly and complicated lighting system is less desirable than no lighting system at all, unless judgment is used in its operation.

One of Chicago's leading theatres, a magnificently structured where pictures are presented lavishly, destroys good effects created by throwing all the white lights in the house on abruptly at the end of each performance.

Judgment is important. It can be cultivated easily by the exhibitor who takes the time to sit through a performance in his own theatre.

Frisco Theatres Join To Beat Ad Opposition

Advertising opposition is no less keen, no less serious, and no less important than actual box office competition. Your newspaper location is no less a matter of concern than your street location. Yet your voice in the matter carries considerably less weight. Luckily, there are more ways than one of governing the situation.

The advertisements Eugene A. Roth and Jack A. Partington employ for the California, Imperial and Portola theatres, San Francisco, Cal., have been mentioned in this department before for their excellent qualities. All good, they have been regarded as strictly competing advertisements because of their position in the newspapers.

But a step has been taken that at once dispels this impression—an impression that has not always worked to the best interests of the theatres in the eyes of San Francisco readers, and eliminates dangerous opposition by crowding it off the page.

Under the new system the advertisements for the three theatres appear as a spread under or above the line, "The Three Leading Photoplay Theatres."

The logic back of the arrangement is sound and the execution effective, as the accompanying illustration bears witness.

Eugene H. Roth and Jack A. Partington dominate San Francisco pages by pooling the advertising for the California, Imperial and Portola.

"Washington Post" Capitalizes
News Value of Picture Events

The Washington Post, Washington, D. C., is one of the lamentably few American newspapers that have grasped the opportunity for capitalizing motion picture news as it should be capitalized not sufficient excuse for the backward newspaper.

The population of America, as of the world, is made up of human beings who are interested in motion pictures. It may be safely said that there is not a normal free per-on of reading age in this country who does not know the names of most of the motion picture stars and the types of motion pictures for which they stand. They know them by sight. Their names mean something. Events involving them are as interesting as news as any events that can be printed.

People want to read about motion picture activities.

They will buy the paper that prints news of motion picture events and motion picture people.

Circulation is the most important newspaper possession. The newspaper that does not have it is an early failure. It is the life blood of the publication.

The more strange, then, that more editors have not taken the same sensible stand—the stand that serves their own interests best.

This may be due in a measure to a by the newspaper that pretends to cover the news field. It is a paper that may be held up as an example to the less enlightened with good results.

Exhibitors generally realize the importance of newspaper publicity of the right sort. They have been made to realize in some cases by ill-advised publications that undesirable publicity is one of the most destructive forces that can be launched against the theatrical institution.

All that should be history today.

A more enlightened condition exists. Ignorance of existing circumstances is not enough excuse for the backward newspaper.

The Washington Post, Washington, D. C., conducts one of the best motion picture sections in the country.

The title and illustration method is changed every week, the page being at all times attractive.

The idea is ridiculous on the face of it and a discredit to the newspaper that harbors it for a moment.

Public realization is keenest on this score, perhaps, than on any other industry. Everybody knows that pictures are made in California and New York City for the most part, that this star is with that company, that this star's pictures can be seen at this theatre and that star's at the other. It is vitally interested in these things, and these things are of news value.

The Washington Post has the right idea.

Here it is realized that a page of motion picture news is going to be read by more people than a page of any other matter that could be written. Few of the biggest events of ordinary occurrence, and only a few extraordinary ones, will stand a page of text. Certainly no other class of subject has one-tenth the claim upon space.

We have reproduced for presentation herewith three of the motion picture pages carried in the Washington Post. They are eloquent testimonials to the importance of this type of subject matter.

Washington, D. C., is a modern city. It is a city of intelligence. People from all parts of the world make up its population, and the educational average is high.

In Washington they read the pages. The section is a big circulation getter and it is conducted by people who know how and what to write.

In no other direction, perhaps, could the expenditure involved be placed to better advantage. Exhibitors might do much worse than to obtain copies of the paper to show to their editors.

Gives Place of Honor
To Lithograph Display

Times change. A year or so ago the suggestion that anything under the sun be placed in front of the theatre box office would have been laughed at. The importance of advertising is more keenly appreciated today.

The Victory theatre, Waco, Tex., has a small lobby. A. Levy, the manager, believes in advertising. He believes in advertising as few other exhibitors in America believe in it—to the extent of placing a mounted lithographic display directly in front of his ticket window.

The accompanying illustration shows the display in that place. Its faith in "A Daughter of Two Worlds," Talmadge's most recent first National attraction, was great enough to win it this position.

The wisdom of his act is open to question.

The belief in advertising that it represents is not. It is the sort of belief that makes good advertising men—and good advertising men are a crying need in the exhibitorial department of the industry.
Space Competition Is Keen In Detroit

Howard O. Pierce, advertising manager of the John H. Kunsky theatres, the Adams and the Madison, and Louis K. Sidney, manager of William Fox's Washington, match wits for the domination of Detroit, Mich., advertising pages. The result is better advertising for Detroit newspapers.

Anna Walden, the Idaho winger of the Universal beauty contest, expects to leave California for New York very soon. She shows some for the past she does. We would like to give her the once-over and see if she lives up to the glowing description of H. H. Van Loan. Van says she’s a regular “shookum.”

Unheralded and unannounced, Sergeant Peter C. E. Simonc has just returned to his home in Albany, N. Y., after miraculously escaping death in France and spending twenty long months in a hospital. The leg is not yet finished with hospitals, however, for a serious operation must yet be performed upon him. After a ten-weeks’ convalescence, Mr. Simonc will enter a New York hospital for a stay of six months. By next February young Simonc expects to be well enough to resume picture activities.

Jack Weaver, who for the past year has been taking care of posters, heralds, plates, etc., for “Bill” Yearley, has resigned and is now located at the Eagars Engraving Company. S. C. Einfeld is Jack’s successor.

Charles A. Miller, who has been attending to business interests in Boston, will return to New York prepared to start preliminary work upon his next production, scheduled for an early date.

Following the announcement that Robert Gordon will become the star of his own producing company early in the fall, comes the news that meantime he will play again with Adelle Joyce in his second Vitaphone production with the popular star. The premiere is the second also in which Miss Joyce will be directed by George L. Sargent. Mr. Gordon is spending a busy time, looking over scenarios and reading numerous books hunting for the kind of story he deems his first starring vehicle. However, as his contract with Mr. Blackton holds option on his services until late in July, he will have plenty of time to find the story and appear in another pictures with permission of Mr. Blackton.

The initiation of Harry MacRae Webster to the Motion Picture Directors’ Association was one of the events of the first Tuesday in May meeting. Mr. Webster is about to start direction of “Determination.”

Negotiations for the services of Everett A. Butterfield, well known actor of the legitimate stage, were under way for picture playing, but have been postponed since a Washington stock company signed Mr. Butterfield to appear at their theatre during the summer. At the termination of his engagement Mr. Butterfield will again consider the screen, which is not entirely new to him, having played two prominent roles in screen plays before his enlistment in the army three years ago.

Mary Shostell has been engaged by Whitman Bennett for an important role in Lionel Barrymore’s first special production under Mr. Bennett’s management.

Mr. Barrymore is doing a screen version of the stage play, “The Marrying Kind,” in which Edmund Breese starred. Miss Shostell recently completed an important role opposite Thomas Meighan in “Civilian Clothes.” She was one of the famous Charles Frohman Company and one of its most popular leading women. Her biggest successes on the stage were “The Prisoner of Zenda,” and “The Lion and the Mouse,” Kenneth Webb is directing “The Master Mind.”

There’s something absolutely new on Broadway at last. A chorus of pretty girls that bears its knees and dances its hardest to the tune of a song that might well be a motto for an adult Sunday school. “Will Change Your Wife” songs the Criterion Theatre’s ballet chorus and as toes twinkle and knees rise and drop, arguments follow for sticking to witty. It is a rare job for a Broadway ballet.

Eddie Bouns has resigned from Warner Brothers and is now sales manager for C. L. Chester. Eddie is now en route to Los Angeles for a conference with Mr. Chester.

“Jenny Be Good” Next Realart Minter Drama

Following its policy of presenting Mary Miles Minter in roles that will emphasize her dramatic talents, Realart Pictures Corporation announces that the star’s next appearance will be in the title role of “Jenny Be Good.” Wilbur Finley Fauley’s novel of New York City social life.

The picture will be available some time in May. It was directed by William Desmond Taylor, who directed Miss Minter in “Nurse Marjorie” and who is engaged in making his own production. Miss Minter is supported by a Realart cast which includes Jay Belasco as leading man and the star’s sister, Margaret Shelby, in an important role.

Others in the cast are Jack Stanton, Sylvia Ashton, Edwin Brown, Lilian Rambeau, Catherine Wallace, Warner Cregar, Maggie Fisher and Grace Pike.

Numa Now Plans Unique Exploitation in Issuing Its “Return of Tarzan”

Numa Pictures Corporation is planning an unique exploitation campaign which will be launched simultaneously with the publication of its “Return of Tarzan.” The company that will issue the production has not been announced. This drive will start shortly, it is declared.

Film men who have witnessed private showings of this latest “Tarzan” subject praise it highly and are of the opinion, it is said, that Numa has produced the biggest and most artistic Edgar Rice Burroughs’ tale heretofore offered to the screen. Gene Pollar plays the title role.

Allen Holubar has started work on his first independent production since he left Universal. With Dorothy Phillips starring, he has begun the filming of a feature which he says, will surpass "The Right to Happiness" and "Ambition" in dramatic value. The title of the new story has not yet been announced. It was written by Allen Holubar and Olga Scholl in collaboration. Space at the Hollywood studios has been leased and the actual work of filming is well under way. Ten weeks will be devoted to the registering of the scenes, then will follow the editorial work of editing. Mr. Holubar has not yet decided upon the releasing organization.

H. H. VAN LOAN AU Sells Manuscripts

Writer Disposes of "The Nobleman" As O'Brien Vehicle and Contracts to Write Stories for Mix, Norma Talmadge, Bessie Barriscale and Others

H. H. VAN LOAN, well-known scenarist, arrived in New York recently from the Coast with a portfolio filled with manuscripts. It is announced now that his supply of stories has been disposed of to several producers and he has contracted to write others for prominent stars.

Completed stories were sold to Hope Hampton, Selznick and others. "The Nobleman," a crook play, will be used by Selznick as a starring vehicle for Eugene O'Brien, and while in New York Van Loan will complete a story for Owen Moore.

To Write for Mix
In addition, Van Loan is in New York to discuss with the producers the stories which he has in mind, and which have been contracted for by Norma Talmadge, Tom Mix and Bessie Barriscale.

Although a young man, Van Loan has reached a high plane in his profession and lays his success to his experience and his consistency in continuing to put forth stories until motion picture producers recognized their value.

Born in Hudson, New York, his first job was on the "Hudson River Republican" owned by his brother. From Hudson he went to Aberdeen, S. D., on the "Dakota American," which he left when the "Delta News" was organized, and then returned East again on a desk for the Buffalo "News." The "New York Times" was the next scene of Van Loan's endeavors, but it was only a short time before he was promoted to the city night desk of the Associated Press, and later became the assistant United States cable correspondent for Reuter's Agency.

Circles the Globe
His next affiliation was with the International News, for which he covered Washington and then proceeded to London. This was followed in turn by a trip around the globe which lasted almost two years, and during which Van Loan covered feature stories for this syndicate. It was while on this trip that he spent a month at Cairo, where he obtained material for "The Virgin of Stamboul." On his return to the United States in September, 1913, he joined the editorial staff of the New York Evening World and after a year entered the scenario department of one of the leading motion picture producers. It was only a short time before Van Loan branched out into free lance writing.

Travel Benefited Him
"I feel that my newspaper experience," says Van Loan, "is primarily responsible for whatever luck I have had as a scenario writer, since it trained me to observe life as I saw it and to see the dramatic possibilities in what others may have thought slight events. The news angle and the human interest aspect of the daily doings of ordinary people can form the basis for the most startling plays if seen through the proper imaginative eye."

The various positions which I have held around the country, as well as my foreign assignments, gave me a unique background for the stories which I have since written. It was in Cairo that I got the idea for "The Virgin of Stamboul," and it was during a nine weeks' trip to Hawaii, when I covered the death of Queen Liliuokalani, that first made me determine to write a Hawaiian story that would portray life as it really is on the Islands.

"It is the impressions which I gathered on that trip that formed the background for the story which I have just sold to Hope Hampton Productions, Inc."

Those of his stories which have not yet reached the public screen are "Fightin' Joe." Harry Carey's next Universal picture: "Danger," a Louis B. Mayer special, and "The Great Redeemer," which Maurice Tourneur has completed for Famous Players-Lasky.

Howells Cine Equipment Moves to Larger Offices
Howells Cine Equipment, which has occupied offices with David P. Howells, Inc., has moved to larger quarters in the Godfrey building, 729 Seventh avenue, New York. The company was organized but six months ago by David P. Howells and placed under the management of Joe C. Hornstein. It was formed largely to handle equipment, supplies and accessories in connection with the Howells International Film organization and it has grown and expanded, it is said, far beyond expectations.

Have Laid Away the Slapsticks

Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle and Bebe Daniels, who made their marks in comedies throwing pies, are now scaling the heights of "legitimate" photodramas under the Paramount Artcraft banner.
R. ROSS RILEY, proprietor of the Wigwam theatre, Oberlin, Kan., recently reported to Exhibitors Herald that the picture "What the Picture Did for Me" as being photographed out of focus a feature production in which effort had been made to attain the artistic by means of the diffused close-up. He based his objection upon complaints of patrons.

Upon being informed that the diffusion was intentional Mr. Riley replied, in part, as follows:

"I am a professional photographer, have made portraits for several years, know that a picture that is diffused is considered artistic by the profession, but find that a greater number of people prefer a good sharp picture. The mass of theatregoers demand this type of picture.

"A picture that is out of focus is a bad thing for the eyes, as they try to focus on the blurred image, resulting in just what exhibitors are trying to eliminate—eye strain.

"In closing I would ask—which would you rather see, a sharp, rounded close-up of a pretty girl or a blurred, fuzzy mass of hair, eyes and other features that reminds you of the days before John Barleycorn cashed in? Follow exhibitors, what do you think?"

Mr. Riley states that the theatre side of the question clearly and briefly. Producers should give his statement careful thought.

"TERROR ISLAND" (Paramount Artcraft) has the mechanics of a standard length serial within the confines of the feature footage. Houdini and Lila Lee are the principals in a cast numbering well into three figures. There is action galore, a degree of logic, excellent production technique and an unbroken series of genuine thrills. Those who marketed the Houdini serial successfully should find the production an attractive offering.

"RIO GRANDE" (Pathe) was produced by Edwin Carewe upon the actual locations and impresses as genuine. It is a careful picturization of Augustus Thomas' well known stage play and presents the story with the advantages of the cinema's better facilities. Rosemary Thelby and Allan Sears give excellent performances in the leading roles. The picture promises much for the box office.

"THE YELLOW TYPHOON" (First National) contains an excellent double characterization by the star, Anita Stewart, some fine locations and sets, finely photographed, a complex plot and considerable action. It differs materially from recent productions of the star and lists a cast of players whose names have a definite meaning to the public.

"A MAN THERE WAS" (Radio-Soul) brings a familiar Ibsen character to the screen in the characterization by Victor Seastrom, star and director of the production. A typical Ibsen play, it departs from American story style and has a certain additional interest because of that difference. It is staged in attractive surroundings and brilliantly photographed.

"THE TOLL GATE" (Paramount Artcraft) surpasses in general merit and marketability anything that William S. Hart has produced in the past year. It is the type of story that served the star in the making and will be welcomed by that great portion of the public that placed the stamp of approval upon his early offerings. It will bear up under the most thorough advertising that can be given it.

"THE ORPHAN" (Fox) starring William Farnum is a typical western melodrama with a pleasing love story and a strong comedy vein running through it. A splendid cast including Louise Lovely, George Nicholls, G. Raymond Nye and a dozen other well known Fox players lend Mr. Farnum excellent support. The beautiful stretches of prairie country and several long shots are outstanding features of the picture.

"THE DEVIL'S CLAIM" (Robertson-Cole) is a mystery play interesting in its improbability. Sessue Hayakawa is surrounded by Oriental atmosphere, the type of picture which always presents him to the best advantage. Though the plot is improbable it has been given a plausible turn and includes many dramatic incidents.

"LOCKED LIPS" (Universal) should be exploited by capitalizing the name of Tsuru Aoki, the wife of Sessue Hayakawa. The picture is an adaptation of a story of the same nature as "Madame Butterfly" with the introduction of different characters and a change in locale. More adept handling of the subtitles would have given a more clearly defined picture.

"OLD LADY 31" (Loew-Metro) should win wide favor. It is a distinct novelty and decidedly meritorious. Emma Dunn achieves a real triumph in the leading role and the support is in every instance excellent. There is a bare chance that in some theatres it will fall short of expectations because of too fine composition, but proper presentation should overcome such a situation.

"VANISHING TRAILS" (Canyon Pictures Corp.) is an out-and-out thrill serial with all of the qualities that make them money attractions. Franklyn Farnum and Mary Anderson have the leading roles and a capable cast assists. Mystery, suspense and action, the serial requisites, are present in proper proportion and the fifteen weeks of its exhibition should be fifteen weeks of good business.
William S. Hart in

THE TOLL GATE

Five-part drama; Paramount Artcraft.
Directed by Lambert Hillyer.
Published in April.

OPINION: The Hart of the old days, the bandit Hart in whose nature the evil stands out as more than a memory, is the crux of "The Toll Gate," a better picture than Hart has made for many months. It should surpass in popularity any of his last half dozen productions.

Perhaps the most practical service that a review of the picture can serve is to refer the reader to the report of the Boston theatre in the "What the Picture Did" for May department of this issue of Exhibitor's Herald. Here is a practical showman's statement of its box office value based upon actual exhibition.

It may be well to add, however, that there is more of the Hart "red-blooded stuff" in this publication than has been the latter-day custom. Hart made his reputation with material of that sort. The public imagined that it wanted a change and a change was made. It is a matter of record that it was not a change for the best.

There is a strong story at the base of "The Toll Gate." It is not luke-warm Westernism. It is not sickly sentimentalism. It is drama of a rather sensational nature, the type of drama that made the star.

Humanity has not changed. There is still a demand for pictures of this nature and it is just possible that the demand is keener today than ever before.

Presentation and exploitation possibilities are plentiful. Exhibitors playing the picture can take advantage of them with confidence that the picture will back up their promises.

SYNOPSIS: Black Deering, bandit leader, leads his band upon what is declared to be their last raid, only to be captured when Jordan, one of the members, betrays them to the authorities. After his escape, he attempts to reach the Mexican border. But hunger forces him to enter a western town and here he meets Jordan, whose opposition results in a burning of the town and Deering's escape and pursuit by a posse. He takes shelter in the home of Mary Brown, a widow who lives in a lonely cabin with her little son. She willingly poses as his wife, but the sheriff is not convinced and asks permission to house his men in the cabin for the night. This brings about a situation which forces Deering, in honor, to reveal his identity. Then comes news of a threatened attack by Jordan's men upon other members of the posse. Deering asks a chance to die fighting and is given it. In the fight he kills Jordan, Mary Brown's missing husband, and the sheriff grants him his freedom.

Rosemary Theby and Allan Sears in

RIO GRANDE

Seven-part drama; Pathé.
Directed by Edwin Carewe.
Published in May.

OPINION: The stage success of Augustus Thomas' drama should be eclipsed by the screen version. Edwin Carewe, working upon the actual location represented with the facilities denied the stage producer, has obtained results impossible within confines of the three walled stage.

There is backbone in Mr. Thomas' play, as its record bears witness. It has strength of plot and is told throughout in terms of action.

The Rio Grande provides long shots and settings that have seldom been equaled. Against this background a cast at times numbering hundreds is seen to the best possible advantage.

Rosemary Theby should come rapidly to the front as a result of her work as the leading player. She performs a trying role brilliantly.

Allan Sears, a striking personality, as the male lead, is effective at all times. To Edwin Carewe great credit is due. He handles the big scenes, involving hundreds of players, and the more intimate passages with equal mastery. He manages continuity and pace expertly and never loses attention for a moment. His own mistake lies in an anti-climax of some length and it is a mistake that can be recited with little trouble by judicious elimination of unimportant scenes.

Mexico and matters pertaining to the international boundary are of live interest today. The papers are making much of Carranza's request that he be allowed to take his army through American territory and the sending of American ships to Mexican waters.

The timeliness of the picture should be capitalized in advertising, though its dramatic merit is sufficient to warrant its exhibition.

SYNOPSIS: Felipe Lopez, Mexican, leaves his American wife and dies in Mexico, taking Mary, their daughter. Years later he becomes a revolutionary leader and Mary is known as Marie linear, his first aid. Danny O'Meall, who has been raised by Mary's mother, is the first Gringo who Marie believes unprejudiced and she falls in love with him. When she is led to believe that he has betrayed the Mexicans she leads an attack upon the town in which he lives, but he rescues her father and she learns the truth about her parentage as her father dies of wounds. Following the readjustment she marries Danny.

Victor Seastrom in

A MAN THERE WAS

Five-part drama; Radiosoul Films, Inc.
Directed by Victor Seastrom.
Published on state right basis.

OPINION: Colorfully produced, capably directed and well acted, the film version of Henrik Ibsen's poem, "Teren Viken," has qualities that overcome in great measure the lack of the personal touch and romantic atmosphere which is expected in current American screen drama. Readers of Ibsen's works will pronounce it first class entertainment, and the general public will find it satisfactory, interesting pastime.

Victor Seastrom is capable as the stalwart red-blooded sailor and, later, the gray bearded, sorrow stricken old pilot. The picture may well be called a Victor Seastrom production, as the star.
who is also the director, is the ever present and always central figure upon the screen, the balance of the cast being comprised chiefly of "types," fisherfolk who inhabit the island where most of the action takes place.

From a production standpoint no fault is to be found. The scenes are rich in color and naturally picturesque. Ocean and night effects are artistically handled and effective.

"Love your enemies, bless them that hate you, and do good unto those who despitefully use you" is the theme of the piece, and the story unfolds itself in the presentation of the star as a young sailor who returns home from sea to find himself a father. He gives up the life of the sea and determines to spend the remainder of his life upon land.

Shortly afterward war is declared and the island is blockaded, cutting off the food supply. Facing starvation for himself and family, he runs the blockade to the mainland. Returning, he is taken prisoner and the boat is sunk.

Five years later he is released from prison and returns to the island, where he finds, that his wife and child died on the day of his capture. He becomes a pilot and, some time later, goes to the rescue of a ship in distress. He finds that the captain of the ship is the man responsible for his capture and the death of his family. Hungry for revenge, and in a position to exact it, he is won over by the pleas of a young mother and child and saves the ship.

William Farnum in

THE ORPHAN

Five-part drama; Fox. Directed by J. Gordon Edwards. Published in April.

OPINION: There is a delightful blending of comedy and Western melodrama in "The Orphan," Clarence E. Mulford's story adapted to the screen by Roy Somerville. In it Farnum plays the wandering outlaw, who at heart is far from a bad fellow, and the Fox star imparts a convincing touch to the various situations that make them ring true. It is a role well adapted to Farnum's personality.

At no time does the feature depart from the philosophy of the story. It is logical; it is a typical Western tale and the vast stretches of prairie, rough riding cow-boys, Indians and a hundred other characters are all found in the west. There is a love story woven into the latter part of the play which makes it all the more appealing. Louise Lovely, who has the role of Helen Shields, the sheriff's sister, fits into the picture very nicely and the supporting cast, which includes Henry Hebert, Ed Crain, G. Raymond Nye, Harry DeVere, Al Fremont, Alice White, Carrie Ward and George Nichols, are thoroughly satisfactory.

With a combination such as this offers popular Fox star, splendid western story and handsome leading lady, it ought not be hard for the average theaterman to work up interest in the picture.

SYNOPSIS: The Orphan, an outlaw who had terrorized the citizens of Ford's station, in the heart of the cow country, for some time, was thoroughly detested by all and several lynching parties had been organized to get him. When news of a new sheriff's coming, the Sheriff he decided to square accounts with him. The Orphan surprises and captures the Sheriff and in a fight with Indians is the only one to come won condition that they fight Indians together. The Indians are routed and the Sheriff wounded. He listens to his horse and takes away the smoothing of later. A stage coach, in which the Sheriff's sister is returning home, is attacked by Apaches, and the Orphan comes to the rescue. He is instrumental also in saving the life of Bill Howland, who has been unjustly accused by Tex Willard, a ringleader of a villainous gang, and the tables are turned on Willard. The Orphan is made foreman of the Sheriff's ranch and finds happiness with Helen, the Sheriff's sister.

Anita Stewart in

THE YELLOW TYPHOON

Five-part drama; First National. Directed by Edward Jose. Published in May.

OPINION: Assigned a dual characterizing involving roles as foreign as the poles, Anita Stewart again demonstrates her claim to the title of star in Harold MacGrath's story of romance and adventure. It is her acting, chiefly, that the picture depends upon for entertainment value.

MacGrath, perhaps more than any other writer, indulges in frequent change of locale. In the present instance New York, Paris, the Orient and Manila are among the places visited. It is not strange, therefore, that some suspension is lost in the necessarily frequent shifting of location.

Edward Jose, a skilled technician, labors effectively to maintain uniformity. The MacGrath coincidences, prominent factors in any of his works, are made to seem logical. In the prompt establishment of a government atmosphere the director has scored a triumph.

The story is a free moving affair setting forth the events in the lives of two sisters, a good girl and her unscrupulous twin sister. Numerous adventures befall each, the ending coming about naturally and to the satisfaction of all. Though it lacks the exploitation possibilities of "In Old Kentucky" and ranks second to "The Fighting Shepherdess" in dramatic qualities, it is a carefully made melodrama. It should give general satisfaction.

SYNOPSIS: Berta Nordstrom, sister of Hilda Nordstrom, marries against her mother's wishes and is herself taken by a villainous ship. In the Orient, known as "The Yellow Typhoon." Her sister, Hilda, after her marriage, is found killed. Returning, she is rescued now a sailor, and he finds her sister and her bigamous husband involved in a plot to steal the plans which he is to carry to Washington. She is mistaken for Berta and Hilda's friend, who is entrusted with the papers. In Washington another attempt is made to obtain the plans, at which time Hilda effects the arrest of the conspirators. In attempting to escape Berta is shot and dies in her sister's arms. The marriage of Hilda and Lieut. Mathison follows.

Synopsis:

TERROR ISLAND

Five-part drama; Paramount Artcraft. Directed by James Cruze. Published in April.

OPINION: The pendulum of public favor is in the melodramatic sector of its arc. The big pictures of the past few months have been, almost without exception, emphatically melodramatic. It follows that "Terror Island," the ultimate in improbable, should please the general audience.

Director James Cruze dispenses with formalities and has the heroines in hand. The main characters are introduced, quickly, abruptly, and their motives made clear. Then the ruffians are put in hot pursuit of the hero and heroine and the chase continues with quickening pace until the picture finishes, abruptly as it opened.

Houdini's well known ability to wriggle out of the most desperate situations not overplayed. Sufficient additional interesting factors are introduced to give the star's peculiar talents the maximum value.

Lila Lee is an admirable choice as the feminine lead. And Rosemary Theby's feminine "heavy" is convincing in every particular.

The composition makes no pretense to be other than it is—a thriller. Better thrillers are not often placed upon the market.

SYNOPSIS: Harry Harper, a young philanthropist and inventor, agrees to aid Beverly West in her search for her father, who has been captured and held in bondage by South Sea Island natives. She has a pearl which must be returned by a certain day to save her father. Her life is at risk. A map fixes the location of a valuable sunken treasure. Beverly's uncle, his son and his wife, plot the prize and employ ruffians to obtain the plans. To chronicle the events that transpire before, during and following the journey to the island. The subsequent finding of the treasure would be impossible in this space. Suffice to say that the action is spirited and at all times interesting, and the finish is as desired.
Sessue Hayakawa

And Calleen Moore in a scene from "The Devil's Claim" (Robertson-Cole).

Sessue Hayakawa in

THE DEVIL'S CLAIM

Five-part drama; Robertson-Cole. Directed by Charles Swickard. Published in in SYNOPSIS: Sessue Hayakawa appears to better advantage in plays that surround him with Oriental atmosphere and it is for this reason that his present vehicle does not involve the imaginative instincts in the unconvincing manner as did "The Brand of Lopez." He handles a difficult role creditably and his efforts in assuming three different characters in the subject will be appreciated.

The type of story adapted in this production requires skillful work on the part of the director to relieve the finished picture of any possible trend toward the ludicrous. What is accomplished in this case is interesting and will supply pleasant entertainment for an evening.

"The Devil's Claim" has a very visionary plot, slightly complicated. It is a mystery story based to a great extent upon superstition and therefore is decidedly unrealistic. These facts have been given such consideration as to make the whole work out logically regardless of the impossibility of it.

Stories of this type generally are very popular among the reading public and if this is any criterion the pictorial work also should have its appeal. There is a certain suspense apparent in these mystery tales which never fails to attract readers and the same will be applicable to the picturization of such stories.

While there is a certain tendency on the part of the public to lean more strongly toward the realistic, yet there is no objection universally to an occasion picture of a fantastic nature, especially when that production has been carefully produced in point of obtaining logical sequences.

Calleen Moore has done excellent work in the production and lends a certain charm that would not prevail otherwise. Others in the cast who capably assist the star are Rhea Mitchell, William Buckley, Sidney Payne and Joe Wray. The settings are good.

The names of four of the players can be capitalized by exhibitors playing the picture in the following cities and towns: Rhea Mitchell is a Portland, Ore., girl; Calleen Moore was born in Portland, Mich; William Buckley was educated at Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill., and Sidney Payne is a San Francisco man, educated at the University of California.

In all adventures play very prominently the name of the star and also the fact that it is a picture of Hindu mysticism. Give the box office the appearance of a fortune telling booth with incense burners placed at both sides of the office.

FINISHES: Akbar Khan is a successful author living in the bohemian atmosphere of a large city. Indora had loved him and after a long search makes up for a story he deserts her and she returns to her home broken-hearted. Virginia Crosby, a society girl, promises Indora to take care of her. Through his contact with Virginia, Khan gets copy for a serial story, "The Devil's Claim." He is not sufficiently inspired to write the last installment of his story and then he sends it to Indora to him and in her presence he finishes the story and his romance with Indora becomes real.

Five-part comedy-drama; Loew-Metro. Directed by John Ince. Published in in OPINION: "Old Lady 31" is a distinct novelty. It is also a fine picture, a better picture than is commonly found in the monthly calendar of publications. The industry and all interested therein should watch its career closely, for it is entertainment of a most unusual and desirable type. If it succeeds as a box office attraction it should be followed by others of similar nature.

There is nothing melodramatic in the production. Neither is there a single spectacular incident. Yet there is a wealth of interest in the characters of both the daintier and the sternier sort, and the arrangement of comedy and drama is such as to give maximum satisfaction with elements.

The story, which should be well known to many because of the stage play's popularity, concerns the experiences of an elderly couple whose weekly penances are auctioned off to satisfy their creditors. The husband is taken into an old ladies' home, making the thirtieth member of the colony. It is here that the bulk of the action transpires and highly interesting action it is.

Emma Dunn and Henry Harmon have the leading roles and do excellent work. A cast of unfamiliar players give highly satisfactory performances. The results of the story as a whole leaves no room for criticism.

The picture is made of finer stuff than is commonly used for such purposes. Yet the advertising possibilities which are considered essential by the modern exhibitor are promising. Practically any class of audience that could receive the offering warmly. It is certainly worth the exhibitor's time to experiment with it.

SYNOPSIS: Aggie and Captain Abe Rose, penniless in their old age, have one hundred dollars left after their goods are auctioned off to satisfy their creditors. Abe takes Aggie to the Old Ladies' Home, intending to go on to the circus. farm, but the old ladies in the home insist that he stay with his wife. As the only man in the home his life is not always one of pleasure. Their solicitude for his well being extends too far for comfort and he loses an opportunity to escape. That night Angie waits up for him until morning, a storm raging. They are forced to stay and gone to sleep in the parlor for fear of waking her. The happy ending is brought about when mining stock supposed worth fifteen thousand dollars and their future welfare is assured.

Franklyn Farnum and Mary Anderson in VANISHING TRAILS

Fifteen-episode serial; Canyon Pictures Corp. Directed by Leon de la Mothe. Published in in OPINION: Despite its many inconsistencies and improbabilities, "Vanishing Trails" is a good serial. It is replete with the type of hair-raising stunts and heart-stopping thrills that will have the kids bouncing from their seats with loud cheers. Deep, dark mystery and wild-eyed suspense reign supreme. The story is rather confused, although by the time the final episode is reached it really doesn't matter, since the allibis and general clean-up and inestimable lovers' embrace sends them out pleased, and satiated even more than pleased.

There's a lot of rough riding, shooting, hurling of bodies down deep cliffs, abduction of the heroine, and the inevitable rescue by the hero in that state, of time and a great many more miraculous happenings of things that always do happen in serials—just the sort of stuff that the kids "eat up."

Franklyn Farnum as the hero, is the serial type of hero—not morose, but genial. He's physically fit for his part and is called upon to do lots of dare-devil stunts and to suffer untold tortures in order to create sympathy, and he gets away with it all in regular hero fashion. Mary Anderson as the heroine is supported by Mr. Farnum, and she does throughout the offering in plucky Western style.

Things begin stirring thick and fast in the first episode, "Death of Mystery," and there are some good looking sets and night scenes and interesting data and actions of his characters, such as "The Shadow" and "Bad Eye" are introduced in habitual melodramatic order.

Included in the balance of the cast are Duke Lee, Buster Pegg, Bud Osborne, Pedro Leon, and others, all meeting with the requirements of their respective roles.

The plot revolves about the mystery of murder of Stilwell, a powerful factor in the world of finance. In a banquet in his home, he announces to his guests that he expects that night to receive some financial information later in the evening promising to name the heir to his fortune. Franklyn Farnum, as "Joe," a worker in Stilwell's home shortly before the murder, and shortly after all papers disclosing the heir's identity are gone from the house. Follows then the disappearance of Stilwell's evil-looking butler. Complications develop in the search for this butler, Steve Durant, head of a criminal gang, seeks to gain possession of Stilwell's millions, and is thwarted in his attempts to do away with "Silent Joe" representative of the underworld, Lou. Lou and Joe ultimately come into their equal shares of the fortune and enjoy happiness together.
Chester Productions Own Plant On West Coast Is Nearing Completion

C. L. Chester Productions, Inc., has completed its new plant on the West Coast with the exception of the laboratory and offices. The entire output of this company will be distributed through Educational Films Corporation of America.

Mr. Chester is in personal charge of all the activities on the coast, having offices for the present at 6378 Hollywood Boulevard, Los Angeles. Here also are located Katherine Hilliker, whose work on the titles for Chester Outings is so well known and who will do the title work for all the Chester offerings; and Arthur W. Loomer, director of art work.

Use Horsley Laboratories

Until the new Chester laboratory is completed, the cutting and projection rooms are located in the William Horsley laboratories at 6600 Sunset Boulevard. Here Joseph LaRose, who is assembling and editing the comedy and travel productions under the direct supervision of Mr. Chester, is located.

The Chester studios, where the comedies are being produced, are located near Lincoln Park, not far from Selig zoo. William S. Campbell is in charge of activities, with Harry Burns as his assistant. Mr. Campbell has been connected with motion pictures for fifteen years. He served a long period in writing and editing with Selig and then went to the Sennett organization where he was a staff writer for three years and three years a director. He was with Fox in the early days of Sunshine Comedies and then was with Universal, originating the Joe Martin comedies.

Zoo Adjoins Studio

Adjoining the studios is the Chester zoo. Animals figure as prominently in the second of the Chester comedies, now nearing completion, as they did in "Four Times Foiled," the initial production. The Chester zoo offers a variety of animal stars including the lion family of six, headed by Leo and Queenie; Meat-sie, a leopard, and her two cubs; a puma, an ant eater, a pair of raccoons and an African vulture. There also are twelve breeds of the monkey family, including Alexander, who took the hero’s role in "Four Times Foiled."

Before leaving Los Angeles the Chester comedies will be ready for the exhibitor. There also the Chester outlings and screenics will be edited and titled, the film being dispatched to Los Angeles by the Chester cameramen.

Comedyart Company Leaves For Abroad

Louis W. Thompson, president of the Special Pictures Corporation, arrived in Los Angeles after a four weeks trip to Chicago, Pittsburgh, Cleveland and New York. Mr. Thompson has started camera expeditions from New York to different parts of the world to secure for the Special Pictures Corporation the best scenic subjects, that will be colored by the Artcolor process and distributed each week with the regular Comedyart productions.

Meighan at Work as Star

Thomas Meighan is working at the Lasky Studio on the Coast in the title role of William De Mille’s special production for Paramount Arctarct, "Conrad in Quest of His Youth." Kathryn Williams and Margaret Loomis will portray the two leading feminine roles, while others in support will be Mabel Van Buren and Maym Kelso.

Twenty-Eight Sets Standing in Fox Studio With Room for Twelve More

An idea of the size of the new Fox studio in West 55th street, New York, is contained in an announcement that twenty-eight sets are standing on the floor at the present time with sufficient space left to accommodate twelve more.

Although several companies are using the various scenes, the floor space is so large, it is said, that there is no friction or interference in activity.*

Pictures Not Announced

The sets now standing are for productions directed by Harry Millarde, Dell Henderson, Richard Stanton, George A. Beranger and Charles J. Brahin. The pictures being made have not been announced, nor have the names of the players in the titular roles been given. The pictures will be published in early fall.

The designs of these sets range from the poorest attic interior to the most elaborate stage boxes copied from the original in the Metropolitan Opera House. There are drawing-rooms, cabarets, ball-rooms, boudoirs, barrooms of the rough Northwestern type, East side dives, and schoolroom sets; there are police courts, and heavily barred prison cells; and there are roof-garden settings and grand staircase backgrounds.

Guide Lights Placed

Many electricians have been added to the studio staff, it is said, and have nearly completed the last of the overhead bank light installations. Some are engaged in installing over the doorways leading to the various departments on the second floor the electric indicator signs showing the names of the departments and their heads, for the guidance of visitors to the building.

Work on the new laboratories is reported as progressing favorably, and it is thought that Fox productions soon will be completed under the same roof where they are staged and photographed. Equipment for the special novelty subtitles has been received at the building and will be installed in conjunction with the laboratories on the ground floor of the building.

Several special features are being planned for summer production, it is said.

Title Ruth Roland's Seventh Pathe Serial

Ruth Roland's seventh Pathe serial, now in production at the Astra studios, has been titled "Ruth of the Rockies." The production is a picturization of "Broadway Bab," written by Johnston McCulley and published in All Story Magazine. The company now is working on exterior scenes for the seventh episode.

In addition to starring in the picture, Miss Roland is taking an active part in the producing of it, and consults with George Marshall regarding all details of direction. The supporting cast is headed by Herbert Heyes and the heavy role is played by Tom Lingham. Other players are Jack Rollens, Fred Burns, William Gillis, Gilbert Holmes and Norma Nichols.

Selznick Completing Four Pictures
And Beginning Production On Eight

Players Now Working Are Elaine Hammerstein In
“The Point of View,” Olive Thomas, Zena Keefe and Ralph Ince

Twelve pictures are in course of production by Selznick Pictures Corporation, according to Myron Selznick, president, four of which are nearing completion. Selznick claims that this probably is the largest number of productions ever under way at the same time under one banner.

Prominent in the list of productions which got under way recently is a screen version of Roy Horniman’s widely read novel, “Jenny.” Olive Thomas is starring in it under the direction of Larry Trimble.

Elaine Hammerstein’s next Selznick picture is announced as “The Point of View,” a screen adaptation of the play of the same name by Edith Ellis, author of “Mary Jane’s Pa.” “The Seven Sisters,” and other Broadway successes. Included in the cast is Arthur Houseman, portrayed of heavy roles. F. Alan Crossland is directing.

Interior Scenes Taken

At the Bahamas, George Archainbaud, director, is taking scenes for “Marooned Hearts,” a Selznick special production in which Zena Keefe and Conway Tearle are playing the leading roles. Interior and exterior scenes already have been taken at the Selznick Fort Lee studio and at Miami, Fla.

Final scenes have been taken for Owen Moore’s forthcoming production, “Stop That Man,” written by George V. Hobart, the famous playwright. Frank G. Griffin directed.

Ralph Ince is producing “The Man of Iron” at the Selznick Fort Lee studio. This will be a Ralph Ince special production, with the well known director appearing in the leading male role. John Lynch is responsible for “The Man of Iron.”

Largest Special Picture

What is claimed to be one of the biggest special productions ever made by Selznick Pictures will be “The Wilderness Fear,” a screen version of the Michael J. Phillips story which created a sensation when it ran serially in McClure’s Magazine. This picture is being directed by Burton George, scenes for which are being taken at Raniff, Canada, in and around the Canadian Rockies, on Lake Louise and in International Park.

Rounding out the dozen productions under way or being started by Selznick Pictures are five feature films. It is stated. Two of these productions have been completed and three more are to be started.

Tourneur Film Ready

Maurice Tourneur’s newest screen offering, adapted from Robert Louis Stevenson’s short story, “The Pavilion on the Links,” will be presented in the very near future by Famous Players-Lasky. The production is now receiving its final editing, and those who have seen it are said to have predicted that it will take its place among Mr. Tourneur’s most successful screen productions.

Interior Scenes in “Athalie” Taken
In Millionaires’ Club in New York

The stately white marble Millionaires’ Club, at Sixtieth street and Fifth avenue, New York, is practically thrown open to the public in the screen reproduction of Robert W. Chambers’ novel, “Athalie,” now nearing completion under the direction of Sidney A. Franklin, for Mayflower Pictures.

Few visitors to New York fail to see this exclusive home of the men who make the wheels go round in railroad, banking, mining, and manufacturing activities. Situated at the main entrance to Central Park, the structure, owing to its simple but impressive lines, immediately attracts attention. It nestsles unobtrusively in a group of buildings that tower imposingly around it.

The home of Mrs. Astor, who for more than a generation ruled with unshaken sway over New York’s ultra-Knick-erocker society is a few doors north on Fifth avenue. The palatial residences of the Vanderbits, the Whitneys, the Huntington’s and the Goulds are all short distance away. A great fountain splashes its myriad streams in the center of the broad plaza across the way, flanked by the celebrated bronze, equestrian statue of “Sherman and Victory.”

It was a rare achievement to secure permission to photograph the interior views of this exclusive club of the giants of finance for reproduction in the adaptation of “Athalie.”

The spiritualistic theme on which Chambers based his thrilling novel is portrayed in its truest form in the adaptation of “Athalie.”

Conan Doyle’s activity in the promulgation of spiritualistic propaganda in the British Isles has given it a worldwide interest. Therefore the theme worked upon in the screen adaptation of “Athalie” comes at a time that can be described literally as the psychological moment.

In the Mayflower presentation, Sylvia Breamer enacts the title role. This young actress has made a rigorous preparation to properly portray the part of the heroine who is supposed to be actuated by supernatural powers. Conrad Nagle, whose screen work in “The Lion and the Mouse” brought him well earned commendation, is the leading man.

“Fixed by George” Is Lyons-Moran Feature

“Fixed by George,” one of Edgar Franklin’s recent novels, has been bought by Universal, for Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran. It will be produced as a five-reel comedy.

Franklin has come to be recognized as one of the leading writers of farce plots. Two of his stories recently put into films with remarkable success were “Everything but the Truth,” Universal, starring Lyons and Moran, and “Don’t Every Marry,” a Marshall Nellan production.

“Fixed by George” will be the third five-reel Lyons and Moran comedy. The first was “Everything but the Truth” and the second a screen version of Fred Jackson’s musical comedy, “La La Lucille.”
Exhibitor Today Is Business Man In Contrast to "Skipper" of Yesterday

Financial Reports Are Striking Examples of the Passing of the Old Order and the Encroachment of the New

A decided change has occurred in the exhibitorial phase of the motion picture industry, according to Reelart Pictures Corporation. The "fly-by-night" exhibitor, or the "skipper," as he was known in the early days of the industry, is no more. In his place, points out Reelart, has come the new type of exhibitor, a practical, efficient business man, using straight business methods.

The passing of the old order and the encroachment of the new has had no more striking illustration, it is said, than the financial balance sheets of two branch offices just published by Reelart.

These reports show that for three consecutive weeks the Detroit office of the company, managed by Ralph B. Quive, has turned in trial balance sheets without a debit, or in other words, without a cent being owed the company by a single exhibitor in that territory.

No Association in West

The Los Angeles office, managed by Oren B. Woody, has turned in a similar report. The record in this case is the more remarkable, it is indicated, because there is no association of film exchange men in existence in Los Angeles, as there is in Detroit.

This accurate and definite information is advanced by Dario L. Faralla, comptroller of Reelart, as striking evidence of the new order of things, which everywhere has been felt in the motion picture business throughout the country.

According to Mr. Faralla, a similar financial report probably never before has been made in the history of the business, and a few years ago would have been regarded as impossible. He declares that such a condition having been attained demonstrates the rapid progress made in sound, business methods, not only by producers, but by exhibitors.

"The absence of a debit in the balance sheets," said Mr. Faralla, "means that for the week for which the report was rendered, exhibitors had paid their bills promptly.

Check With Order

"Some exhibitors pay their bills weekly, some every fifteen days. To hang up such a record as those turned in by our Detroit and Los Angeles offices, for the entire number of rentals during a week, the exhibitor must have sent a check as soon as he had booked the picture."

"What has become of the old 'fly-by-night' showman, and his pictures that were packed to the limit with thrills? Well, I suppose he is down in the new oil fields selling stock. I don't know surely but that would be a likely place to find his type. Certainly he is not in the motion picture business any more." The exhibitor of today, individually and as a class, is accepted as the best and soundest business man of which this country boasts.

"It is almost impossible to calculate the prospects which this new established order opens up. It is a sound and healthy condition that is going to breed better relations between exhibitors and producers, but particularly in the United front which they present to the public.

Better Business Methods

"It may be of interest to exhibitors to know just why this condition means to the producer and is a reflexive condition to himself. Of all the producing companies in the field ten or even six years ago, how many are in existence today? "This situation has been the subject of criticism on the part of financiers. In how many other lines has such a condition existed? The big standard products in the American household of twenty, even fifty, years ago, are still the standard products today.

"Now the motion picture industry has stabilized itself. Accurate and careful business methods are being employed on every hand. The business has attracted the highest type of business men, both in its exhibiting and its producing branches, and the rewards both financially and as a self-sufficient art, are going to hold them."

Reelcraft Issues May 17

First of Franey Comedies

R. C. Cropper, president of Reelcraft Pictures Corporation, has set May 17 as the publication date for the first of the Billy Franey series of one-reel comedies. Franey has appeared in both Keystone and Universal comedies. The titles for the first three issues are "The Paperhanger," "The Dog Catcher," and "The Water Plug!" Exchanges distributing the Franey one-reel comedies will be advertised in the national campaign just started for the Billy Franey subjects.

Five-Reel Comedy to Be Made by Arbuckle

From Irvin Cobb Tale

Irvin Cobb's story, "The Life of the Party," will serve as a vehicle for Roscoe Arbuckle's first five-reeler comedy to be made by arrangement of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation and Joseph M. Schenck. Joseph Henaberry will direct and Frank Cappeau will play the heavy role.

No announcement has been made as yet giving the names of the other players who will support the comedian.

Although Arbuckle recently completed "The Round-Up," it will not be known as one of his starring vehicles, "Instead, it was made and will be published as a George Melford special production,

"The Life of the Party" therefore is the first of the Arbuckle features.

First National
The Idol Dancer, a D. W. Griffith production—This is a picture out of the ordinary on account of Southern Island scenery. Acting is excellent. Good story with just the right amount of comedy. Photography extra good. Easily advertised on account of exceptionally good paper and extras. This picture ran two days to good business. Patrons well pleased.—H. G. Stettners, Jay’s Odeon theatre, Chandler, Okla.—General patronage.

A Virtuous Vamp, with Constance Talmadge.—A from any angle. Contains story, star, cast, continuity, good direction and everything that goes to make a good picture. Did not draw as it deserved.—K. A. Batts, Grand theatre, Prescott, Ariz.—General patronage.

A Daughter of Two Worlds, with Norma Talmadge.—Society and underworld atmosphere. A title that means something with a star who ranks among the ten best bets in the film field. Ran it two days to a good crowd. Many patrons complimented the picture in passing out.—Chas. H. Ryan, Garfield theatre, 2844 Madison St., Chicago, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Daddy Long Legs, with Mary Pickford. My second run on this picture, and did very good in spite of bad conditions. Every exhibitor should run this picture.—R. A. Botts, Grand theatre, Carrington, N. D.—Small town patronage.

The Hoodlum, with Mary Pickford. A good picture, but naturally did not draw like Daddy Long Legs. The story is interesting. It pleased very well.—Chancellor Bros., Dreamland theatre, Arcanum, O.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Turning Point, with Katherine MacDonald. Just a fair picture. If Miss MacDonald could deliver a few more like The Thunderbolt she would soon be on top.—Jack Cairns, Brooklyn theatre, Detroit, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Virtuous Vamp, with Constance Talmadge. This is a big one and gave us a full house. Will take anywhere. Let it as soon as you can.—W. J. Perry, Grand theatre, Alvin, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

Back to God’s Country, with Nell Shipman. Good picture, but no better than other Northern pictures have shown.—Majorie theatre, Reedsburg, Wis.—Town patronage.

The Turning Point, with Katherine MacDonald. A swell picture with a good star. Katherine is sure there with the goods.—G. N. La Monnier, Majestic theatre, Liberal, Kans.—Transient patronage.

A Twilight Baby, with a special cast. Too long. The first half is great, then it begins to drag. Two reels is long enough for a comedy.—Jack Cairns, Brooklyn theatre, Detroit, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

Daddy Long Legs, with Mary Pickford. Very good picture. Did fair business on two nights, with a local talent on one night and benefit dance the other night in opposition. Should make good for most everyone.—William M. Roob, Grand theatre, Port Washington, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Heart o’ the Hills, with Mary Pickford. In our judgment the best this star has ever made. Each character acts with merit and by following the play carefully it proves one of the best productions on the screen. Fine direction.—Will C. Perry, Grand theatre, Alvin, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Day’s Pleasure, with Charlie Chaplin.—Better than Sunny Side, which wouldn’t have to be much. Chaplin is not delivering the goods.—Meyers & Ford, Star theatre, La Grande, Ore.—Small town patronage.

Heart o’ the Hills, with Mary Pickford. Excellent. Many considered it her best. Mary always brings out the children and adults also.—E. J. Degenhart, Princess theatre, Mendota, Ill.—Small town patronage.

The Turning Point, with Katherine MacDonald.—Somehow she failed to register as well as in her other two pictures. She is a beauty to look at, but there was no story for her to interpret. Faultlessly produced.—Mrs. J. A. Dostal, Ideal theatre, Omaha, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

In Wrong, with Jack Pickford.—This is a dandy picture, and one that will please. Did only fair business on it, but picture is good.—A. H. Swift, Grand theatre, St. Marys, O.—Transient patronage.

A Virtuous Vamp, with Constance Talmadge.—Extra good picture, but for some reason poorest business this year. If you haven’t used it get it.—G. F. Rediske, Star theatre, Rytage, Mont.—Small town patronage.

Auction of Souls, with Aurora Mardigan.—Laid off one for a long time. Got more favorable compliments from any picture I’ve run to date.—William M. Roob, Grand theatre, Port Washington, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Midnight Romance, with Anita Stewart.—Very slow. Could have been put in three reels. Had a good house and few kicks.—R. R. Hess, Marion theatre, Edna, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

In Old Kentucky, with Anita Stewart.—A return booking. Did not do good, as broke all records for a four-day run early in season and expected all had seen it that wanted to.—Fred Cosman, Electric theatre, St. Joseph, Mo.

The Turning Point, with Katherine MacDonald.—The poorest of this star’s productions to date. Too long drawn out.—P. R. Matson, Flandreau, S. D.

The Hoodlum, with Mary Pickford.—Was liked as well as Daddy Long Legs and drew better, but even at that this star does not draw well enough.—A. N. Miles, Eminence theatre, Eminence, Ky.—Small town patronage.

Back to God’s Country, with Nell Shipman.—As good as we have used. Lots of comments. Never a kick. Seen every good and splendid acting.—C. H. Thomas, Community theatre, Galva, Ia.—Small town patronage.

Day’s Pleasure, with Charlie Chaplin.—I waited as long as I could but had to play it. Not as good as a Sennett comedy.—Albert Metzger, Fairy theatre, Knox, Ind.—Small town patronage.

Mary Regan, with Anita Stewart.—Very good picture. Has lots of action and will please any audience.—T. J. Reminger, Lyric theatre, Crete, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

MARIANNE POWERS
Who will have the leading feminine role in Lee Francis Lyburger’s play, “Democracy, the Vision Restored.”
"Daddy Long Legs," with Mary Pickford.—The only place in the world that this picture will not make good is in an asylum for the blind. It is certainly a masterpiece.—Bill Leonard, Mystic theatre, Cedar Vale, Kans.

Back to God's Country, with Nell Shipman.—Very good production, but did not draw as it should.—Brookham & Weeks, Electric theatre, Arenzville, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Hoodlum, with Mary Pickford.—Good production. Fair business. Not as good as Daddy Long Legs.—Brookham & Weeks, Electric theatre, Arenzville, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Back to God's Country, with Nell Shipman.—The best of its kind and one that will satisfy any kind of audience.—Elks Theatre Co., Elks theatre, Prescott, Ariz.—General patronage.

A Twilight Baby, with a special cast.—Fair slapstick comedy.—S. A. Haymou, Lyda theatre, Grand Island, Neb.—Transit patronage.

Heart o' the Hills, with Mary Pickford.—Without a doubt her best picture. Patrons pleased. Full house.—Fred Paulick, Paulick theatre, Muscoda, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Fox

Should a Husband Forgive? with a special cast.—A good picture. Miss Barry screens it well, not like her usual performance.—A. T. Follers, Isis theatre, Dana, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Cyclone, with Tom Mix.—Good Western that pleased.—A. La Force, Happy Hours theatre, Two Harbors, Minn.

Mother of His Children, with Gladys Brockwell.—Did not seem to please as well as her former production. Brockwell not liked in her new role of vamp. Picture is well made with good acting and is clean.—Days two to fair business.—L. C. Farquhar, Opera House, Guide Rock, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

Pitfalls of a Big City, with Gladys Brockwell.—Good night picture. Please our patrons.—T. Metcall Opera House, Greenfield, Ill.

Checkers, with a special cast.—It rained us out on this one, but I am going to see it because I think it is the best I have ever played. Play it and raise your admission.—J. F. Alred, Lyric theatre, Pryor, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

Evangeline, with Miriam Cooper.—This is a good, clean picture, but did not draw for me. I advanced admission and they came out kicking.—W. E. Anderson, Rex theatre, Dilfer, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Should a Husband Forgive? with a special cast.—A very good special feature. Race course is much better than the race in Checkers or Mickey. Big business two days.—A. H. Schurr, Grand theatre, St. Marys, Ohio.—Small town patronage.

The Last of the Duanes, with William Farnum.—A Zane Grey story that pleased 100 per cent, and many came back the second night to see it again. A god plot and story, with a great star.—Guy W. Johnson, Mystic theatre, Marthi, N. Dak.—Transit patronage.

The Last Straw, with Buck Jones.—Good picture. Good business.—I. T. Sollers, Isis theatre, Dana, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

Never Say Quit, with George Walsh.—Very good picture, and did a very good business on it.—Whitman & Graffort, Princess theatre, Buchanan, Mich.—General patronage.

Pitfalls of a Big City, with Gladys Brockwell.—Splendid picture. Please the crowd.—Haven't had a poor Fox yet.—C. H. Thomas, Community theatre, Galva, Iowa.—Small town patronage.

Evangeline, with Miriam Cooper.—A very beautiful picture. Went in with schools and business was very good business. This picture will stand behind any amount of advertising.—A. H. Schurr, Grand theatre, St. Marys, Ohio.—Small town patronage.

Wings of the Morning, with William Farnum.—Exciting business on account of rain. Everybody seemed well pleased. Farnum kept himself cleaned up and his beard off in this one.—W. B. Henderson, Ripton, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

Desert Love, with Tom Mix.—Poor picture. Not up to Mix's standard.—L. H. Seal, Lyric theatre, Superior, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Wings of the Morning, with William Farnum.—Excellent picture. People like Farnum in any kind of a picture he plays in. Book him and raise your admission.—H. L. Peckles, Rex theatre, Palmyra, III.—Neighborhood patronage.

Evangeline, with Miriam Cooper.—Picture good, and up to my personal expectations, but disappointing to my patrons. Business very light.—Mart Cole, Liberty theatre, Rosenburg, Tex.—General patronage.

Evangeline, with Miriam Cooper.—Beautiful picture. Photography great. But did not draw well. Should be worked through the schools.—C. L. White, Aleta theatre, Portland, Ore.—Neighborhood patronage.

Wings of the Morning, with William Farnum.—An excellent picture, but did not draw as well as Last of the Duanes.—Albert Norton, Kozy theatre, Eureka, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Vagabond Luck, with Elinor Fair and Albert Ray.—Went big, but business dropped off on second day. Advertise big horse race, as that went big.—Wm. Thacher, Royal theatre, Salina, Kan.

Wolves of the Night, with William Farnum.—Very good. Can raise your price on this one, though not as much fighting as in others this star made.—Stephan Drizlik, Derby theatre, Derby, Conn.—Mixed patronage.

The Cyclone, with Tom Mixture.—I cannot see any reason for introducing the bathing girls into this plot. It reminds me of "the motion picture patent's idea of California after a night at the movies," as illustrated in a late weekly. Good melodrama.—T. C. Shipley, Essesness theatre, Rushville, Neb.—Small town patronage.

Goldwyn

Jubilo, with Will Rogers.—This is a good one. Far better than anything he has done before. If they will keep him in this kind of stories he will make good.—J. F. Alred, Lyric theatre, Pryor, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.
Almost a Husband, with Will Rogers.
Star unknown here, but his first picture made any ad position on those who saw it. Business fair.—Whitman & Grafford, Princess theatre, Buchanan, Mich.

Jinx, with Mabel Normand.—Disappointing. Cannot be advertised only as a kid picture.—Mart Cole, Cole’s theatre, Rosenberg, Tex.—General patronage.

Through the Wrong Door, with Madge Kennedy.—The best Kennedy picture of the Boost it big. Everybody will like it.—C. T. Metcalfe, Opera House, Greenfield, Ill.—Small town patronage.

The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come, with Jack Pickford.—Like a lot by all. Drew much more business than expected.—John Hafner, Princess theatre, Donora, Pa.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Blooming Angel, with Madge Kennedy.—A clever comedy-drama that pleased the majority of my patrons.—Otto Bell, Bell theatre, Sparta, Wis.—Excellent patronage.

When Doctors Disagree, with Mabel Normand.—Very poor. In fact this is the worst we have ever seen Mabel Normand in. Nothing to the plot and poor direction.—Elliott Wis.—Odd community.

The Kingdom of Youth, with Madge Kennedy.—Production was excellent. Stars popular. Lighting and photography good. A story that will please the people.—Joseph F. Allman, Globe theatre, Monticello, III.—Neighborhood patronage.

One of the Finest, with Tom Moore.—The people please them all. This comedy is fine, and this story puts it over good. Good patronage.—Will C. Perry, Grand theatre, Avrth, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come, with Jack Pickford.—Did the largest week’s business in this house for the season. Appeals to all classes. A 100 per cent picture.—Frank Cook, Strand theatre, Milwaukee, Wis.—Trans.

The Eternal Magdalene, with Maxine Elliott.—Poor. Can’t express it. It is 4½ reels.—Palace theatre, Mound City, Ill.

Laughing Bill Hyde, with Will Rogers.—This is one of Rex Beach’s good plays and was well received. Good patronage.—Will C. Perry, Grand theatre, Alvin, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

Laughing Bill Hyde, with Will Rogers.—This fellow is going to the top. His work is wonderful in this picture.—L. A. Hasse, Majestic theatre, Mauston, Wis.—Small town patronage.

Hodkinson

The Westerners, with Roy Stewart.—The best western picture of its kind ever produced. Good business for the one night. Roy Stewart should be a starred often. He has the goods. This picture worthy of any house.—J. A. Dostal, Strand theatre, Omaha, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Desert Gold, with E. K. Lincoln.—A very good picture that did good business for two days.—Otto Bell, Bell theatre, Sparta, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

A White Man’s Chance, with J. W. Kerrigan.—Just a program picture. That’s all.—Fred McCoy, Liberty theatre, Ft. Scott, Kan.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Heart of Rachael, with Bessie Barriscale.—Believe this picture was well liked. The scene in the last reel of the doctor setting the child’s broken arm is especially good.—Landis & Crane, Monticello, la.—Small town patronage.

Metro

Fair and Warmer, with May Allison. One of the best I ever ran for comedy drama. Don’t judge it by Please Get Married.—A. A. Spradling, Opera House, Merna, Neb.—Small town patronage.

The Willow Tree, with Viola Dana.—beautiful picture. Not as good as Please Get Married. Star is well liked here.—Walker Bros., LeRoy theatre, Lampasas, Tex.—General patronage.

Blackie’s Redemption, with Bert Lytell.—A dandy crook story that pleased. Played same with tab show. Big business.—A. H. Schurtz, Grand theatre, St. Marys, Ohio.—Transient patronage.

Please Get Married, with Viola Dana.—Absolutely no good, and my patrons complained. Was entitled to something better.—Guy W. Johnson, Mystic theatre, Marmath, N. D.

The Right of Way, with Bert Lytell.—A wonderful production. Better than the story. Will stand all the advertising you can give it.—Walker Bros., Le Roy theatre, Lampasas, Tex.—General patronage.

The Red Lantern, with Nazimova.—Was afraid of this. Ran it only one day sure did fall for it and failed to give a kick on it.—W. H. Mart, Strand theatre, Grinnell, la.—College town patronage.

Stronger Than Death, with Nazimova. Not the kind of a picture for this star, and photography poor. Am sorry Metro put this one out.—R. A. Botts, Grand theatre, Carrington, N. D.—Small town patronage.

Houdini in a Paramount Artcraft Thriller

"The Heart of a Child," with Nazimova.—Best picture star has ever made. This comment was made by all patrons. Biggest box office attraction ever played.—E. C. Bostick, Merrill theatre, Milwau.

kee, Wis.

A Favor to a Friend, with Emmy Wehlen.—Very good, but not as well liked as other Wehlen productions.—Hardin Ent. Co., Odeon theatre, Hardin, Mo.—General patronage.

Revelation, with Nazimova.—Shown during the blizzard of Easter. It is a thing of art that has a strong appeal to the cultured people of the community.—Joseph F. Allman, Globe theatre, Monticello, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Walk-Offs, with May Allison.—Good production, but not up to the standard set by Fair and Warmer. Miss Allison has certainly captured the community.—T. C. Shipley, Essaness theatre, Rushville, Neb.—Small town patronage.

Easy to Make Money, with Bert Lytell.—Good program picture.—L. M. Kuhns, Gibson theatre, Gibson, N. M.—Mining camp patronage.

The Microbe, with Viola Dana.—Up to the Dana standard, and that is enough. She is the cleverest little star in the business.—R. Ross Riley, Wigwam theatre, Oberlin, Kan.—Small town patronage.

Lombardi, Ltd., with Bert Lytell.—Played this as a special and raised prices to 25c and 35c. Did not draw. Picture fairly good, but does not please small town patronage.—H. H. Owen, Bungalow theatre, Oakland, Ore.—Neighborhood patronage.

A scene from "Terror Island." The handcuff expert was directed by James Cruze.
I ever ran.—C. N. LeMonner. Majestic theatre, Liberal, Kan.—Transient patronage.

The Winning of Beatrice, with May Allison.—Sure a dandy comedy-drama. Boost it. You can't go wrong on it.—R. A. Botts. Grand theatre, Carrington, N. D.—Small town patronage.

The Amateur Adventuress, with Emmy Wehlsen.—One of the best comedies we have had for a long time.—L. M. Kuhns, Gibson theatre, Gibson, N. M.—Mining camp patronage.

Peggy Does Her Darndest, with May Allison.—This one is sure fine. Wish for more like it.—W. E. Anderson, Rex theatre, Diller, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Paramount Artcraft

The Woman in the Suitcase, with Enid Bennett.—Very good. Patrons enjoyed it.—Elks theatre, Prescott, Ariz.—General patronage.

The Make Believe Wife, with Billie Burke.—Good picture. Billie Burke is always good.—Simmons & Collins, Idle hour theatre, Wellsville, Kan.—Neighborhood patronage.

Male and Female, a Cecil B. De Mille production.—Picture failed to please. Don't raise your admission. In fact it's our drawing card for a small town.—Preston Bros., Crescent theatre, Audubon, la.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Miracle of Love, with Lucy Cotton.—Weakest picture I have played for a long time.—Otto Bell, Hill theatre, Sparta, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Miracle Man, with a special cast.—Some picture. Pleased everybody at 25c and 50c. You can't boost it too much.—H. H. Crow, Bungalow, through Oak- land, Ore.—Neighborhood patronage.

String Beans, with Charles Ray.—This is one of Ray's very best pictures. Don't let this one get by you. It is a dandy.—J. F. Allred, Lyric theatre, Pryor, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

"Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," with John Barrymore.—This feature drew patrons in my house that were never in it before. Ran fifteen days to capacity. Don't make the mistake of booking a short playing date.—W. Dineen, Rose theatre, Chicago, Ill.

The Misleading Widow, with Billie Burke.—A good, clean picture. Please our people.—Preston Bros., Crescent theatre, Audubon, la.—Neighborhood patronage.

Treasure Island, with Shirley Mason.—This is a picture anyone will appreciate and adds greatly to the prestige of your house. Drawing capacity. Wonderful photography.—W. Dineen, Alcazar theatre, Chicago, Ill.—Transient patronage.

Bill Henry, with Charles Ray.—Very good, but not as good as most of Ray's pictures.—L. M. Kuhns, Gibson theatre, Gibson, N. M.—Mining camp patronage.

The False Road, with Enid Bennett.—Very good. Acting of entire cast and fine direction an outstanding feature of the production.—Elks Theatre Co., Elks theatre, Prescott, Ariz.—General patronage.

Widow by Proxy, with Marguerite Clark.—Pleasing little picture. Clark at her very best.—Majestic theatre, Grand Island, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Mirandy Smiles, with Vieve Martin. A good picture. My patrons all liked it. In fact her pictures are all O.K.—G. J. Eberwind, Auditorium theatre, Marblehead, Ohio.—Small town patronage.

33\text{1/2} Hours Leave, with Douglas MacLean and Doris May.—A good picture. Played to good crowds at increased admission.—Preston Bros., Crescent theatre, Audubon, la.—Neighborhood patronage.

Why Smith Left Home, with Bryant Washburn.—A dandy comedy.—L. M. Kuhns, Gibson theatre, Gibson, N. M.—Mining camp patronage.

John Petticoats, with William S. Hart.—We liked this picture. It was better than we expected, because others said this was a poor picture. We were pleased with it.—J. W. Smith, Empress theatre, Beresford, S. D.—Neighborhood patronage.

Captain Kid, Jr., with Mary Pickford.—The last she made for Paramount and it is the poorest one. Had better not made it.—G. J. Eberwind, Auditorium theatre, Marblehead, Ohio.—Small town patronage.

Too Much Johnson, with Bryant Washburn.—A fair picture. Not as good as other Washburn pictures.—Elks theatre Co., Elks theatre, Prescott, Ariz.—General patronage.

A Girl Named Mary, with Marguerite Clark.—Same old stuff. If they don't give Clark better stories she will drop down in Pickford's class.—Jack Nash, Strand theatre, Trinidad, Colo.

The Toll Gate, with William S. Hart.—A wonderful drawing card, even after the censor board threw some of it in the ash can. S. R. O. all day. Patrons remarked it was the best Hart ever made.—W. Dineen, Boston theatre, Chicago, Ill.—Transient patronage.

The Rescuing Angel, with Shirley Mason. Please a large audience. Very weak in our opinion.—Peters & Johnston, Liberty theatre, Milligan, Neb.—Small town patronage.

Red Hot Dollars, with Charles Ray.—Excellent. Star well liked and patrons seen to like subject better than Crooked Straight.—Elks theatre, Prescott, Ariz.—General patronage.

Daughter of the Wolf, with Lila Lee. Picture liked by majority. Failed to draw.—W. L. Uglov, Crystal theatre, Burlington, Wis.—General patronage.

Men, Women and Money, with Ethel Clayton.—This star draws here. The play was well liked.—Preston Bros., Crescent theatre, Audubon, la.—Neighborhood patronage.

Pathé

The Bishop's Emeralds, with Virginia Pavson.—My patrons out talking about it. Pearson does well, and picture ends with a good climax. Book it.—R. A. Botts, Grand theatre, Carrington, N. D.—Small town patronage.

Other Men's Shoes, with Craufurd Kent.—Here is a good story and a well-produced picture that lacks box office pulling power. If you can get your patrons in by hook or crook, you can rest assured they will be more than pleased with this picture.—Chas. H. Ryan, Garfield theatre, Chicago, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Gay Old Dog, with John Cumber- land.—Nothing to it. Far from being a special. A weak program picture.—Meyers & Ford, Arcade theatre, La Grande, Ore.—Small town patronage.

OTHER MEN'S SHOES, an Edgar Lewis production.—A very good special. Get it and boost it. Also boost the price. It's a real picture. Many favorable comments from my patrons. They said, "Give us more like it." One of the pictures that send them away talking.—Albert Metzger, Fairy theatre, Knox, Ind.
Winning Grandma, with Marie Osborne.—Marie Osborne is as popular with us as May McAvoy. Always a drawing card, Simons & Collins, Idle Hour theatre, Wellsville, Kan.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Master Man, with Frank Keenan.—Pleased over 100 per cent. It's better than lots of the so-called specials.—Family theatre, Portland, N. D.—Neighborhood patronage.

Other Men's Shoes, an Edgar Lewis production.—An extra fine production. Did big business and pleased 95 per cent. Proof as well as we expected.—H. P. Thompson, Liberty theatre, Pardeeville, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Little Diplomat, with Baby Marie Osborne.—First time I had Baby Marie. We've all known someone had a word of praise for this one. Also, the thirteenth episode of Elmo the Mighty. Is getting better.—A. W. Primley, Primley Cozy theatre, Lydora, Pa.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Gay Old Dog, with John Cumber land.—Not up to expectations. We don't class this with our boys. A good program picture. That's all.—Family theatre, Portland, N. D.—Neighborhood patronage.

Oh Boy, with June Caprice and Creigh ton Hale.—This is a peppy, lively picture. Get back of it and boost it. You can't wrong on this.—Majestic theatre, Neodesha, Wis.—Small town patronage.

The Virtuous Model, with Dolores Casinelli.—Good picture, but did not draw as well as we expected.—Crane & Landis, Crane theatre, Monticello, Ia.—Small town patronage.

Realar

The Stolen Kiss, with Constance Bin

ney.—This one is a good, clean little picture. First time this star ever played here, but most of my patrons liked her. J. T. Allred, L. Ladora theatre, Pryor, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

Erstwhile Susan, with Constance Bin

ney.—A most delightful picture. Clean, wholesome and full of heart interest. Some people say it's too slow and bound to be forgotten. It is very popular.—Barrus & Bassett, Gem theatre, Clinton, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Sinners, with Alice Brady.—Alice Brady is a good card for us, and this picture was liked by our people, but Alice should wake up. She is slowing down. Working too hard.—C. T. Met call, Opera House, Greenfield, Ill.—Small town patronage.

The Beauty Market, with Katherine Ma

Donald.—Very fair business on two day run. Katherine's good looks make up for a lot.—Meyers Ford, Arcade theatre, LaGrande, Ore.—Small town patronage.

Erstwhile Susan, with Constance Bin

ney.—A big coming star. Very good picture which highly pleased. Very poor business on account of weather.—Mrs. J. A. Dostal, Ideal theatre, Omaha, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Judy of Rogue's Harbor, with Mary Mil es Minter.—Good picture and big crowd. Everybody satisfied.—John Haf ner, Princess theatre, Donora, Pa.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Fear Market, with Alice Brady.—

Somehow they won't entice over here any more. It was a pretty good picture, all right, but it has been my experience that the boys out here in the "overall belt" don't think the same thoughts as do the slickers in the "soup and fish" regalia. Consequently they are out of sympathy with the story as well as the actors, and the net result is they come out with their thumbs turned down.—R. L. Hensler, Bijou theatre, Carroll ton, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Sinners, with Alice Brady.—Here is one I do not care for. Very poor picture. The worst I ever saw Brady in. Nothing to it.—J. F. Allred, Lyric theatre, Pryor, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

Sinners, with Alice Brady.—Brady looks old and worn in this. It is not a good small town picture in our opinion. Our people did not care much for it.—R. L. Hensler, Bijou theatre, Carrollton, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Soldiers of Fortune, with a special cast.—A wonderfully directed picture. Women did not care for this, but the kids and men came from all over.—Mrs. J. A. Dostal, Ideal theatre, Omaha, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Robertson-Cole

The Tong Man, with Susse Hayakawa.—The best Jap picture. Turned them away for two days. Keep Hayakawa in this type of plays and it will mean money for the box office.—M. R. Ritch, Myrtle theatre, Lewiston, Mont.—General patronage.

In Search of Arcady, with Billie Rhodo

se.—A trifle slow in places, and does not come up to some of her other productions, but pleases generally.—T. C. Shipleys, Essaness theatre, Rushville, Neb.—Small town patronage.

The Heart of Juania, with Beatriz Miche lena.—Splendid western and good business. If your patrons like westerns, play it. Good support and excellent outdoor photography. Many good comments from patrons.—T. E. Walton, National theatre, New Bedford, Mass.

Joscelyn's Wife, with Bessie Barris

The Bottom of the World, with Sir Ern est Schackelton.—First feature of its kind ever shown here. Played this fea ture with a ZaSu Pitts comedy-drama, and packed them in for two days. The patrons were more than satisfied.—D. C. Scott, Margaret theatre, Macomda, Mont.—Downtown patronage.

Better Times, with ZaSu Pitts.—Good picture.—C. Oldham, Oldham theatre, Manchester, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

Her Purchase Price, with Bessie Barr

iscale.—First class in every respect. My patrons say one of Bessie's best produc tions. Book it, you won't go wrong.—J. H. Wall, Auditorium theatre, High dale, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Beloved Cheater, with Lew Cody.—Excellant production. Played this fea ture up big and knocked them cold for three days. Expect Cody to be my best male bet shortly.—Henry Turner, Em press theatre, Missoula, Mont.—General patronage.

The Tong Man, with Susse Hayakawa.—A new type of picture for this star which should be a welcome change for his followers. Marc Robbins is enti titled to much credit for his handling of the role of the Oriental villain.—D. Frazer, Sterling theatre, Fairmont, Neb.

Dangerous Waters, with William Des mond.—Fair program picture. Desmond is coming to the front. Our patrons are beginning to like his work.—J. H. Wall, Auditorium theatre, Highland, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Beloved Cheater, with Lew Cody.—This picture failed to please. Do not advance prices on this unless you have something with action on same program. Only fair business.—A. H. Schurr, Grand theatre, St. Marys, Ohio.—Transient patronage.

Select

nerstein.—This was issued March 20 and we played it March 18. It was a very fine play, and, notwithstanding this was a new star with us, it went over big.—Will C. Perry, Grand theatre, Al vin, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

His Wife's Money, with Eugene O'Brien.—This is O'Brien's very best picture to date. It is a pleasure to run pictures like this. Many favorable com ments on this one. Business fair.—John Inexpensive but effective street work is carried on for features exhibited by Altman & Trifon at the Cozy theatre, Goose Creek, Tex.

United Artists

Pollyanna, with Mary Pickford.—An excellent picture. Pleased all present. Crowd light on account of big revival and the worst show-lighting preacher in existence. I guess J. L. Lumpkin, Cupid theatre, Miles, Tex.—Small town patronage.

His Majesty, the American, with Douglas Fairbanks.—Excellent picture. Poor house on account of the weather. Plot a trifle far. L. M. Kuhns, Gibson theatre, Gibson, N. M.—Mining camp patronage.

Broken Blossoms, a D. W. Griffith production.—Great picture, but did not draw well. H. B. O'Brien, Great theatre, Starkie, Fla.—Small town patronage.

His Majesty, the American, with Douglas Fairbanks.—Don't see where anyone gets the idea that this is a slow picture. We consider it the fastest and best picture Fairbanks ever made. Did S. R. O. business.—R. Ross Riley, Wig-wam theatre, Oberlin, Kan.—Small town patronage.

Pollyanna, with Mary Pickford.—The book carried this over big, and a very good picture. Bill C. Terry has the best production, although Pollyanna gave us the largest patronage.—Will C. Perry, Grand theatre, Alvin, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

Pollyanna, with Mary Pickford.—Don't be afraid of this. It will pack your house and they will all like it. Played to good house.—J. Kemphus, Lyric theatre, Crete, Neb.

When the Clouds Roll By, with Douglas Fairbanks—Fairbanks did his best, with the exception of a few parts that were overdone. Not as good as His Majesty, the American. Business good.—Marie Cole, Cole's theatre, Rosenberg, Tex.—General patronage.

Pollyanna, with Mary Pickford.—Beautiful story well done. It is clean.—L. F. Charles, Grand theatre, Chelsea, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Broken Blossoms, with a special cast.—Not a picture for small towns. I ran a two-reel slapstick comedy with this and figured I could get by, but I was mistaken. Just broke even. Fair business. Not the business I expected after heavy advertising.—G. F. Rediske, Star theatre, Yegate, Mont.—Small town patronage.

When the Clouds Roll By, with Douglas Fairbanks.—First time I ever raised prices on Fairbanks, but they didn't kick and I got them. R. R. Hess, Marion theatre, Edna, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

United Picture Theatres

The Coward, with Frank Keenan and Charles Ray.—This feature is one of the best pictures ever run in our theatre. Also was the making of Charles Ray as a big star. Book this and advertise it big.—Mrs. R. J. Slack, Majestic theatre, Zamorame, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Good Bad Man, with Douglas Fairbanks.—Doug. is always good and draws fine.—F. Coffman, Lyric theatre, Caro, Okla.—Town patronage.

A Man in the Open, with Dustin Far- num.—This was a good one. Drew a large crowd, and they were well satisfied. Give us more like this one.—Majestic theatre, Liberal, Kan.—Transient patronage.

The Light of the Western Stars, with Dustin Farnum.—Picture drew well and pleased everybody. Much better than a good western.—H. H. Owen, Bungalow theatre, Oakland, Ore.—Neighborhood patronage.

Martha's Vindication, with Norma Talmadge.—No good. It is out of fashion. Did good business but did not please my people.—C. H. Langager, Akron theatre, Langford, S. D.—Neighborhood patronage.

Wool Lowry, with William S. Hart.—We found this picture of Hart's very best. Pleased a big crowd of Hart fans and made a lot of new ones for him.—Mrs. R. J. Slack, Majestic theatre, Mazomanie, Wis.

His Picture in the Papers, with Doug- las Fairbanks.—Good business. It's a reissue, but surely got the business. Made good on it.—C. F. Booske, Star theatre, Yegate, Mont.—Small town patronage.

The Wild Goose Chase, with Hazel Dale.—A picture of the production, but the opening of the picture in the Arctic regions, and pleased immensely. I find the Triangle features I am using are better than most of the other one-acters yet exchanged, with exception of C. H. Langager, Akron theatre, Langford, S. D.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Flare of the Yukon, with Dorothy Dalton.—Fine. Sure some great picture which makes patrons talk.—B. A. Bell, Bennington theatre, Bennington, Kan.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Habit of Happiness, with Doug- las Fairbanks.—Did fair business on it, but it is not the kind of picture that I want. It is old-fashioned. Not like the new pictures we are getting now.—C. H. Langager, Akron theatre, Langford, S. D.—Neighborhood patronage.

Love's Prisoner, with Olive Thomas.—A very good program picture.—J. J. Kudlack, Star theatre, Ponte, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Universal

The Phantom Melody, with Monroe Salisbury.—Just fair. I don't know why they thought a man could play the char- acter he can suit best.—Jack Cairns, Brooklyn theatre, Detroit, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Trembling Hour, with Kenneth Hurlan.—A very entertaining theme built around the young man who comes back from France suffering from shell shock. Carl Laemmle has one of the best crowd players here.—T. C. Shiplely, Eassanes theatre, Rushville, Neb.—Small town patronage.

The Great Air Robbery, with Lusat Lockwood.—For a laugh this is a very good one. Played three days to good business.—Meyers & Ford, Arcade theatre, La Grande, Ore.—Small town patronage.
EXHIBITORS HERALD

May 15, 1920

What Am I Bid? with Mae Murray.—I played Mae Murray against opposition and bad roads; the opposition did not amount to as much as the bad roads, Mrs. J. L. J., is in doing good work. She draws well. You do not know the solution until the finish.—H. J. Longaker, Howard theatre, Alexandria, Minn.—Small town patronage.

A Silk Lined Burglar, with Priscilla Dean.—This is a very good feature, and many of the patrons came to me to say so. Priscilla Dean is doing good work. She draws well. You do not know the solution until the finish.—J. Allsop, Columbia Hall, Grace, Iowa.—Neighbourhood patronage.

The Gun Fighting Gentleman, with Harry Carey. Good Harry Carey picture to fair crowd on account of rain. E. J. Degenhardt, Palace, Beverly, Kan.—Small town patronage.

The Big Little Person, with Mae Murray.—Poor picture I have run in some towns. It plays. Flawed from the start. Mary like this would soon close your doors.—Guy W. Johnson, Mystic theatre, Mamaroneck, N. Y. —D.

The Day She Paid, with Francelia Billington.—Well produced and well acted program picture that played to good business. H. S. Stine, Picture theatre, Clinton, Ind.—Neighbourhood patronage.

Forbidden, with Mildred Harris Chaplin. An excellent picture that cannot help but satisfy. Edith Roberts a coming star.—Mrs. J. A. Dostal, Ideal theatre, Omaha, Neb.—Neighbourhood patronage.

The Right to Happiness, with Dorothy Phillips.—A good special, but did not draw as expected.—Chancellor Bros., Dreamland theatre, Arcanum, Ohio.—Neighbourhood patronage.

Paid in Advance, with Dorothy Phillips.—Good all around picture. Played in advance prices a good turnout.—Anderson & Jacobs, New Lyric theatre, Castlewood, S. D.—Neighbourhood patronage.

Lascas, with Mayo & Roberts.—A good, clean, pleasing picture. Some fine acting and action in this. These two costars should make good. Is very suitable for family.—Ernest Stelling, Grand theatre, Washington, Ind.—General patronage.

The Prince of Avenue A, with J. C. Corbett.—An excellent picture of the first time I ever had Corbett. Was good to a good house. Most of my patrons wanted me to have Jim Corbett again.—A. W. Primley, Primley's theatre, Ladora, Ia.—Neighbourhood patronage.

The Trap, with Olive Tell.—This is a good program picture. It is a good display of acting, and action in this. The two co-stars should make good. Is very suitable for family.—T. E. Walton, National theatre, New Bedford, Mass.—Neighbourhood patronage.

W. J. B. CORNERS BILLY WEST IN "WHAT NEXT?"

Vitagraph

The Winchester Woman, with Alice Joyce.—A fine production, and the star unusually good. Woman patron.—Will C. Perry, Grand theatre, Alvin, Tex.—Neighbourhood patronage.

The Bramble Bush, with Corinne Griffith.—Placed to good house. Fairly good picture.—Robinson & Lewis, Gaiety theatre, Starke, Fla.—Small town patronage.

Pegeen, with Bessie Love.—A good comedy-drama. The kind that sends people away feeling happy and with a good word for the theatre. Star well liked here.—E. J. Degenhardt, Princess theatre, Mendota, Ill.—Small town patronage.

The Black Gate, with Earle Williams. This is a new star with us but pleased well and the play good.—Will C. Perry, Grand theatre, Alvin, Tex.—Neighbourhood patronage.

The Tower of Jewels, with Corinne Griffith.—Good program picture. No drawing power. Will someone please tell me why Vitagraph pictures do not draw?—Albert Metzger, Fairy theatre, Knox, Ind.—Small town patronage.

Pegeen, with Bessie Love.—A good, pleasant comedy-drama. Everybody enjoyed this. Can't go wrong. Nothing big about it.—Stephen Dziadik, Derby theatre, Derby, Conn.—Mixed patronage.

The Darkest Hour, with Harry T. Morey.—This is a cracker-jack picture. Will please very critical audience. I ran this April 20, 21 and 22 in all three of my shows to good business, and patrons took the trouble to tell me it was a dandy.—John A. Stephens, Jewell, Ionia and Randall theatres, Jewell, Kan.—Small town patronage.

A Girl at Bay, with Corrine Griffith. Very good picture. As a rule Vitagraph has good pictures.—Louis Frana, Olympic theatre, Calmar, la.

The Birth of a Soul, with Harry T. Morey.—Good picture, but first two reels had very poor light on them when taken. Good business. First night. Dropped flat the second.—T. E. Walton, National theatre, New Bedford, Mass.—Neighbourhood patronage.

"The Sporting Duchess," with Alice Joyce.—Best work of this star. She never equalled this. Wonderful scenery, gowns and photography. Big, yes, biggest business for many weeks, at a two-day run. Please keep it up. This is good medicine.—Mrs. J. A. Dostal, Ideal theatre, Omaha, Neb.

Specials

Eyes of Youth (Equity), with Clara Kimball Young.—High-class production that pleased the better class, but not the general small town patronage. Too much footage is the only fault I found outside of the fact that I didn't get the money.—A. LaForce, Happy Hour theatre, Two Harbors, Minn.

Mickey (Western Import), with Mabel Normand.—Played this on percentage to big business at advanced prices.—F. Coffman, Lyric theatre, Carmen, Okla.—Neighbourhood patronage.

Silk Husbands and Calico Wives (Equity), with House Peters.—A very good picture. Very well directed. Acting good and scenes very real. Ran it one day to a very poor business, due to a severe wind storm. Will use again, as it is well worth it.—Mrs. J. A. Dostal, Ideal theatre, Omaha, Neb.—Neighbourhood patronage.

Eyes of Youth (Equity), with Clara Kimball Young.—Wonderful picture. If advertised sufficiently will do big business anywhere. Patrons remarked at Young's impersonation of dope fiend. Big business.—A. H. Schurr, Grand the-(Daye) with Pearl White. We are now on the 13th episode and the serial pleases.

The Black Secret

Drazewin Jack

(Fate), with Jack Dempsey. I have used seven episodes of this serial, and with a special cast. Weather was very cold when I ran this, but did fair. Picture is too long. H. B. Axtile, Scope theatre, Wenona, III. Small-town patronage.

The Unpardonable Sin

Eyes of the World

Once to Every Man

with Jack Serril. Oh boy! Cleaned up on this. It will stand a raise in price. Derby theatre, Derby, Conn. Mixed patronage.

The Snail

with Shorty Hamilton. Fair picture, Somewhat drawn out. Shorty is out of place in this one. He is much better in Western stuff. Fair business. Wm. Thacher, Royal theatre, Salina, Kan.

Foot's Gold

The Sign Invisible

The Long Arm of Manister

Serials

Lightning Bryce (Arrow) with Ann Little and Jack House. Has made the poorest day of the week my best. Has everything a serial should have—pep, punch, action. Samuel Abarrias, Waverly theatre, Chicago, Ill.

Adventures of Ruth

The Adventures of Ruth

(Pathe), with Ruth Roland. A very good start. Please well. However, Ruth Roland not liked very well here. This serial will go without a star. MartCole, Cole's theatre, Rosenberg, Tex. General patronage.

The Silent Avenger

(Vitagraph), with William Duncan. Ran first episode to 1,100 school children on a Saturday morning. All the youngsters like Bill Duncan. First episode is a little tame, but has a thrilling finish. Chas. H. Ryan, Garfield theatre, Chicago, Ill. Neighborhood patronage.

The Silent Avenger

(Vitagraph), with William Duncan. Have run three episodes and can say it is a class serial to date. Duncan is very popular and draws big. Chancellor Bros., Dreamland theatre, Arcanum, Ohio. Neighborhood patronage.

The Invisible Hand

(Vitagraph), with Antonio Moreno. On 14th episode. Lost money on this. No mystery. Nothing to it. People walked out on it. Majestic theatre, Reedsburg, Wis. Small-town patronage.

Big Exploitation Aids Prepared for Serial
President of Canyon Pictures
To Confer With Selig
On Future Films

A big publicity and advertising campaign is being prepared by Canyon Pictures Corporation for the distribution on the state right market of "Vanishing Trails," the new fifteen episode serial produced by William Selig which features Franklyn Farnum and Mary Anderson.

Jack Weinberg, president of the company, is on the coast where he will confer with Colonel Selig regarding future productions featuring Franklyn Farnum. He also will visit state right buyers during his absence from New York. J. M. Goldstein, secretary and treasurer of the company, will handle other sales from the New York office.

Mr. Weinberg has with him new western stories which will be used in future Farnum productions. In addition to a contributing staff which includes such writers as Frederic Chapin, author of "The Lost City," William E. Wing, author of "Vanishing Trails," E. M. Bower, Bertram Sinclair and many others, the company should have a list of very precarious material, it is said. Leon de La Mothe will direct Mr. Farnum in his new productions. He also directed "Vanishing Trails."

Priscilla Dean's Next Feature to Be "Marama"

The next big picture scheduled by Universal for Priscilla Dean, star of "The Virgin Of Stamboul," will be "Marama," a story of the Fiji Islands by Ralph Stock. "Marama" was published as a magazine story in 1913.

As "Marama" Priscilla Dean will have an opportunity, it is said, for the display of her emotional ability. and Universal heads have stated their belief that the character will eclipse her "Sari" in "The Virgin of Stamboul."

Like The Adage, "My Face I Don't Mind It For I'm Behind It Etc."

She has been termed the "ugliest woman in the world," but cameramen discovered when she arrived in the United States recently that she is not at all shy of the motion picture camera.

In fact, says a Fox News photographer, Mrs. Mary Bevan, who came to this country to join a circus, was rather eager to accommodate him. She gazed stoically into the camera without even producing the customary smile.

Mrs. Bevan won a contest in London based on the absence of facial beauty. One look at her face and it must be conceded that the judges did their work well, it is said.

McFarlane Makes Good
As Manager at Detroit

John H. McFarlane, Chicago boy who broke into the film business several years ago and gave up a promising career to enter the army when the war broke out, is back on his way to the top, according to word received from Detroit, where he is making a record for himself as manager for the American Film Company.

McFarlane started in the Chicago office of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, later going with F. O. Neilson to exploit "The Spoffers." After three years with "The Spoffers," he spent a year exploiting "Cabiria," covering Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin for E. L. K. He refused several tempting offers when he enlisted. After being discharged from service, "Mac" went to Des Moines for American and two weeks later was named Detroit manager.

Virginia Lee in "The Road to Arcady"

A scene from Burton King's first independent production which he has just completed.
Can you imagine this egg? Why don't I carry a watch!

Why, I'll tell the whole world right out loud that all I'm monkeying with nowadays is THE BIG TIME.

Say, Bill Barbee flung up a picture palace right where the heart of Chicago's loop palpitates. Who's headlining there? Huh? A. CARNEGIE GUMP—THAT'S ME.

If that ain't big time, what is it?

Boy, I travel in fast company. For instance, everybody knows that Sam Katz is the champeen attraction picker of his weight in the middle west. Sam placed a laugh bet on me, and I finished win, place and show. Now I hang out at the Riviera regularly.

Book me in. Book me in and call a cop to watch your box office—and then call somebody to watch the cop.

Yours for a happy bankroll,

ANDY GUMP.

By all Odds the Biggest Money Maker of the Serial Field

HARRY CRAWFORD knows. We picked his letter out of a bunch—but they were all just about the same—only some better than others.

The idea is just this. Don’t let your hesitation spell “loss of money.” The sooner the bigger. If you’ve seen the picture, we don’t have to talk. If you haven’t seen it, see it quick.

Above everything else, put it in. It’s the biggest business building serial that ever flashed across the film horizon.

BOOKINGS FOR NORTHERN ILLINOIS AND INDIANA

UNITY PHOTOPLAYS COMPANY

FRANK ZAMBRENO, Pres.

207 So. Wabash Ave.

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS
 Reported by “Mac”

The May day riots may come and go but you should have with that gang of exhibitors trying to locate the various film exchanges last Saturday. It’s rumored that after the flurry had subsided E. M. Vandawalker, manager for the Hallmark exchange, came up for air in St. Paul. He is the raffish club of Northwestern University. The exchange of the Greater St. Pauls with its usual top-flight line of films, Elliott, Crockett, and Callaway—was more like a head southward, landing in the Ellisworth building on South Dearborn Street. The Select army, led by Ben W. Beadell, marched to the Film Exchange building to share quarters with Manager Paul H. Bush of the Republic exchange. The film evidently caught Max Levy, manager of the Robertson-Cole exchange, sittin’ pretty, for he dropped to the fourteenth floor of the Consumers building, as though nothing had happened, making arrangements to handle their films at a building on West Madison street just out of the loop. Fox Film Corporation moved the exchange’s executive offices to the Famous Players-Lasky building and the films will be handled from the Film Exchange building.

Al Normal dropped into the old city for a brief visit from sunny California last week. From the way the boys were pumpin’ that right wing of Al’s, imagine Chicago’s former exchange manager was unable to lift anything heavier than a demitasse for several days.

One of the recent theaters opened in this territory was the Orphuem at Hillisboro, Ill., by J. P. Williams.

Joe Friedman was observed in close conference with many of the big fellows from New York and the Coast, but to date we have heard of no new film buys for the busy Celebrated exchange.

Harry Rice, publicity manager for the local Universal exchange, made several inspection trips to the coast along the famous Peacock Alley, convincing his many Gotham friends that the best break New York could expect is a TIE.

M. J. Mintz, special representative for the Celebrated Players Film Corp., in charge of the state rights sales for the famous cartoon films, “The Gumps,” featuring Andy and Min, postponed his trip to the West Coast pending the Convention. Looks like the trip is off for keeps the way he closed sales for territory.

Andrew J. Callaghan, president of the Andrew J. Callaghan Productions, Ind., must have registered about a half dozen hours slumber during the entire session of the Convention with the many parties tendered to him by his many Chicago friends. We heard a Lient. McGuire pass his guard on the first three evenings with no luck.

H. A. Sowards, president of the Commonwealth Pictures Corporation, was in daily convention visitor, giving the many territorial buyers ample opportunity to hear about his company’s recent offering, “Billy Whiskers,” being distributed on a state rights basis.

There were several rumors flitting about the Congress Hotel that Al Lyons, manager of the People’s theatre, had accepted a proposition to go East with the well known Tom Moore theatre interests.

In order to supply his vast following of exhibitors with film at its best, Joe Friedman, president of the Celebrated Players Film Corporation, arranged with Abe Teitel to put all reels of the serial, “The Lost City,” through the Teitel conservation process.

With most of Chi film lights hovering about the Congress Hotel last week we will let ‘er flicker with the Boul Mich date line.

Most of the boys were all dolled up in crepe at the departure of L. H. O’Donnell of Washington, Ind., with his book of “Hoover’s poems.” The last words we heard him say were: “Where, oh, where is Percy Wells?” We wonder.

Between wires from the East and West and selling state rights territory in car-load lots, Joe Brandt seemingly had nothing to do.

Edgar Trinz, of the Madison Square theater, was busy about the Congress lobby giving the many sons of Illinois who served the Colors a brief chat regarding the organization of a film post to the American Legion.

Floyd Brockell and Clyde Elliott of the Greater Stars exchange were over without the overalls but the smiles were beaming. Guess it was the purchase of Will Rogers’ “Illiterate Digest” for this territory that did the work.

Frank Zambrano was kept very busy showing his many friends the route to 207 South Wabash Avenue. Must have been too much noise to converse properly about the Congress, eh Frank?

W. D. Burford has been ill at his home in Aurora, Ill., for the past ten days.

The smiling countenance of Samuel H. Trigger, prominent in film circles for a number of years, especially around convention time, was seen about the loop recently. Sam was in Chicago buying a collection of relics and was being entertained by William J. Sweeney, secretary of the Illinois Exhibitors’ Alliance during his own journies in our midst.

The Loop sales squad sought to tender a measure of gratitude to W. D. Dineen, manager of Harry Moir’s Rose, Alcazar and Boston theatres. Double-header first-runs at the Rose certainly alleviate the situation. And have you see the show at the Rose lately? Two first-run features, a two reel comedy, a news reel and an orchestra for 33 cents certainly builds the record.

What with lady ushers in overalls, operators in silk shirts, janitors coming to work in their own Fawds and musicians dolled up like first nighters, it’s a wise exhibitor who knows his own who’s who these days.

Frank Losch from St. Louis, now holds down the publicity and exploitation chair at the Goldwyn exchange, recently vacated by S. G. Sladid.

Dreamland dance hall was the scene of the motion picture operators ball on Tuesday night. There was a big turn out, this being their twelfth annual affair.

H. J. Almodovar, treasurer of the Rothacker Film Mfg. Company, will spend about a week in the New York office of the concern. He leaves May 12 for Los Angeles where he will give personal supervision to the placing of contracts for the construction of the west coast Rothacker laboratories.

Eddie Polo, Universal’s noted serial star, was a guest at the Blackstone Hotel Sunday and Monday of this week.

Wanda Doubts Him

“Slept all night on a department store roof, eh? That’s a tall one,” says Wanda Hawley to Bryant Washburn in the Paramount Aircraft picture, “Mrs. Temple’s Telegram.”

Capital Will Distribute Foreman Sporting Reel

Distribution rights to Bill Foreman’s sporting page, “The Pink Sheet of the Movies,” has been acquired by Hugh Woody, president, and B. Herbert Milligan, general manager, of Capital Film Corporation, Chicago.

Twelve of these features will be issued annually, and every even numbered month will be covered in them. William S. Foreman, former sport editor on the Chicago Evening Post, will edit the publication.
Woody Enthusiastic At Capital Progress

Returns to Chicago Offices From Production Center On West Coast

Enthusiasm at the progress being made on productions at the Hollywood studios is expressed by Hugh Woody, president of Capital Film Corporation, who has returned from a trip to the Coast. Neal Hart, Al Jennings and Helen Gibson are in the midst of production, he announces.

Work also is progressing, he declares, on a five-part feature, details of which will be announced shortly, on "For the Freedom of Ireland" and on the Pippin comedies, "Witch's Gold," a picture of the Texas oil fields, has been completed. Dancide, a new star, is featured in this.

Rights to "Mother Love and the Law" have been acquired by the company. Dolly Ledgerwood Matters stars in the piece.

National Gets 300 Aps To Start the Production Of "The Son of Tarzan"

Joe Brandt, director general of National Film Corporation, has been advised that Harry Revier, who will direct "The Son of Tarzan" serial and Roy Somerville, who will prepare the continuity, have arrived in Los Angeles to start production. Brandt will leave for the coast soon to be on hand before the players sail for the south Pacific island, where the serial will be made.

Harry M. Rubey, president of National, says that as far as practicable only live animals will be used in this serial, in which Jack Hoxie will play the leading male role and Lucille Rubey will take the feminine lead. Over three hundred apes, orang-outangs, gorillas and chimpanzees have been contracted for.

This is another Edgar Rice Burroughs story. It is understood that $20,000 was paid for the screen rights of this book and in addition a royalty will be paid the author.

ARROW HAS SIX-REEL FILM TO STATE RIGHT

Feature Deals With a Feud Between California and the Mexicans

A six-reel feature depicting a feud between the Californians and the Mexicans and titled "The Daughter of the Don," will be offered to state right buyers by Arrow Film Corporation.

There are said to be some very stirring scenes in this picture and through it all runs a love story that will have a big appeal to all classes of motion picture fans.

Arrow reports that although the print has just been received, two big sales are reported. The first sale is for the seven western states, Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana, California, Arizona and Nevada, and also the six eastern states, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Vermont, New Hampshire and Maine.

It is expected that exhibitors will welcome such a picture because of its exploitation possibilities.

Long-Term Contract Is Signed by Nagle, Lasky

Conrad Nagle has been engaged on a long-term contract to play leading roles in Paramount Artcraft pictures produced at the Lasky studio, according to Jesse L. Lasky, vice-president of Famous Players-Lasky corporation.

Nagle will begin work next month by arrangement with William A. Brady in the latter part of 1919. Mr. Nagle was engaged by Famous Play-Lasky to go West and play the role of Stephen Steward in "The Fighting Chance," from Robert W. Chambers' novel, which was filmed a year ago at the Lasky studio. Since then he has played in a Mayflower production.

"The Silent Avenger"

Sets Vitagraph Record

That the normal selling time required for serials has been beaten by three weeks in the case of "The Silent Avenger," in which William Duncan and Edith Johnson are starred, is the report from Vitagraph headquarters.

At the report was made, some time before the close of the selling campaign, the entire volume of business on previous serials has been exceeded. It is said that many exhibitors have contracted to run each episode a full week, numerous others having booked it for three and four day showings weekly.

Great Southern Organizes

LOUISVILLE, Ky.—Incorporation papers have been filed by Great Southern Film Corporation, which will be capitalized at $10,000. The firm will operate theatres and deal in motion picture products. The incorporators are Henry C. Anderson, Lexington, A. Harrison, J. New Orleans, F. C. Anderson, New Orleans and M. Harrison, New Orleans.

No Vibration in the De Vry!

YOU can balance a De Vry on a tea cup and it produces motion pictures as if shot from a stone wall.

You can put the De Vry on a table, a chair—on any non-rocking object with four legs or none, and it does perfect work. It's in a class by itself in this, as in all other respects. See it and know for yourself.

Preview with a De Vry!

A projector which stands up to that test is what professionals need for previewing.

To a Film Exchange, also, a De Vry is invaluable.

We ask that you let us give you a De Vry demonstration. Say the word and our representative from one of 60 cities will come and show you—in your own office.

There's nothing like the De Vry. So light! So handy! So compact! Remember, a poor projector kills a good film. So see the De Vry before you decide. It is endorsed by the best and most successful people in the motion-picture profession.

They'll Welcome it With Open Arms!

Your people laughed and cried and told their friends about it when you showed "Young Mrs. Winthrop".

Now Ethel Clayton has made another picture with the same deep searching into the human heart, the same emotional appeal. They will laugh and cry at this one too.

And every picture that has this quality is a big money-maker.

"Virgin of Stamboul opened at Alhambra Theatre today. Crowds standing on sidewalks two hours before doors opened. House filled to capacity from two o’clock to eleven. Experienced large crowds before, but never witnessed anything like crowds flocking to see the Virgin. Congratulations."

George Levine, Alhambra, Milwaukee, Wis.

"Great success marked opening of Virgin of Stamboul, Palace Theatre, today. Never in the history of the house has management experienced such tremendous crowds. Enthusiastic to the brim. Scores turned away every minute of the day. No words can express our appreciation. Recommend Virgin of Stamboul to every exhibitor."

'99' is the story of what the police reporters call a Frame-Up:

It reveals the secret working of 'malefactors of great wealth', unscrupulous politicians and master minds of the underworld.

From first to last the sweetest of love stories runs with the changing fortunes of the tale.

WE JUST SAW IT—MARY MILES MINTER’S BEST!

How Many Extra Days Will You Allot?

Yes, the last foot of it tumbled onto our screen a little while ago. And we knew we had witnessed Miss Minter’s greatest photoplay. We knew that was as good a screen production as ever has been made. We knew that Director William Desmond Taylor had "given us something." So it happens that our exchanges will give YOU something—the finest star production you have ever played. But this means little to you unless you can cash in on it. And the opportunity for THAT is through EXTRA DAYS. Our nearest branch manager will tell how we make these extra days of SURE profit to you.

"A Sure Winner"

BOUND TO PLEASE ALL
"The Love Expert" is a sure winner, bound to please wherever shown. It is distinctively a screen comedy by people who know how to write one."—Moving Picture World.

RICH CLASSIC IN COMEDY
"Vital and vibrant personality of the star. Soars with true farcical pretentions and finishes in a blaze of glory. Highly conducive of laughter."—Motion Picture News.

BIG LAUGHS AT STRAND
"Constance Talmadge was the cause of much amusement at the Strand theatre in 'The Love Expert.'"—New York Evening Post.

PACKED WITH FUN
"Packed with humorous situations and both the acting of Miss Talmadge and the titling of John Emerson and Anita Loos are up to the standard set by this capable team."—New York Tribune.

A RIOT OF FUN
"Runs riot with theories of romance—a romantic love research with diverting results."—New York Sun and Herald.

CONTINUOUS LAUGHS
"Great. You can't help but like 'The Love Expert.' Get this one if you can. It's good all the way through. The laughs were continuous and it wasn't difficult to observe that everyone was mighty well pleased."—H'ids.

IRREPRESSIBLE CHARM
"Light comedy plot of purely whimsical order with many amusing complications, developing speed and winding up in satisfactory climax."—Exhibitor's Trade Review.

BRIGHT, AIRY AND GAY
"It is a typical Constance Talmadge picture, bright, airy and gay, and certainly amusing to the onlookers. A novel love plan."—New York Morning Telegraph.

A CLEVER IDEA

It Will Haunt You—

Its impelling fascination, its breathless action—its rich color, its stirring love story, its glorious atmosphere, its baffling mystery—all will haunt you and stay with you and all others who see this splendid big special production that

VITAGRAPH has made from one of

JAMES OLIVER CURWOOD'S greatest stories of the Northwest—

"The Courage of Marge O'Doone"

The most fascinating, unique photoplay story brought to the screen in a generation. You will follow its snowshoe trail to that trackless white waste north of fifty-three. Against that savage background of mountain and gorge, snow and ice, unfettered by society's conventions, you shall see romance, mystery and adventure unfolded in one of the most haunting, startling, electrifying mysterious screen stories ever told.

You will meet David Raine—whose soul has been sundered by a faithless woman, seeking a living tomb in the Arctic.

You will meet Marge, brave and beautiful, slender as a reed, wild and palpitating.

You will hear the call of the North—feel it in fact, as this story of breathless mystery and red-blooded romance unfolds itself before you. And a clarion call it is. The magic wand of the motion picture has turned the warm and glowing pages of a masterly story into a superb, big special photoplay production—made of it a pulsing, living drama, whose sheer charm and realism carries one away to that vast white country "up there" with all its grim glory and grandeur.

Directed by DAVID SMITH.

“Nipoo-win Ooyoo!”

If you knew what that meant in Indian it would make you shiver—make your teeth chatter.

When David Raine, just into the North and mushing along the frozen Arctic trail, heard Mukoki, the Indian guide, mutter it, he was puzzled.

“‘The dogs—they are giving the death howl!’—that is the way Mukoki explained it. And David found later that the old Indian guide was right!

Death was near.

That night they camped in the old deserted cabin of Tavish—the mystery man of the North. Then came that damnable devilish noise against the cabin wall—thud—thud! thud—thud!

Like a ghostly tattoo it sounded. David’s dreams of Marge were interrupted—he decided to investigate—and he found—swinging gently in the wind tap-tapping against the logs—the body of a man. The cold moon shone on the pale bearded face, the gaping mouth was shaped in a frozen grin of agony. It was Tavish—the man whose villainy causes all the pangs, the mystery, the complications, adventure and stirring romance in—

“The Courage of Marge O’Doone”

by JAMES OLIVER CURWOOD—

that splendid story of the Northland; of a man who had “lost himself,” of a brave, beautiful girl who kept herself untrammeled, alluring, in the midst of a den of human beasts.

Made into a sensational, gripping big special photoplay production by VITAGRAPH.

WHAT THE PRESS THINKS OF A COMMON LEVEL

The sets are truly lavish—the atmosphere is faithfully and vividly obtained—photography is excellent! Would probably go big!

—Motion Picture News

An uncommon screen story. Spectacular ensembles in which not hundreds but thousands take part. Great mass effects are handled with masterly skill. Settings are on a grand scale. Edmund Breese gives dignity and sincerity to the entire production. It has an idea and should win with spectators because it will hold close attention wherever it is shown.

Moving Picture World

Exceptional scenes, careful attention to details, interiors all that could be desired. Direction is adequate throughout. Edmund Breese is strong and convincing. Claire Whitney does well.

COMMENT OF THE WEEK

by MARTIN J. QUIGLEY

The Great Issue

The coming Cleveland meeting is either for the benefit of the exhibitors of the country as a whole without reference to the interests and ambitions of any individual or group, or there is no good reason why it should take place at all.

A monumental injustice would be done to the interests of the exhibitors' body if an effort is made to divert this meeting to any purpose other than that pertaining directly to the major issues confronting the theatremen at this time.

The great issue of the moment is producer-owned theatres and this issue should receive before the convention the attention it deserves. And this can only be done by barring from consideration many minor matters of comparatively lesser import at this time. Doubtless there are many matters of lesser gravity which could be considered and acted upon with profit.

But the issue of producer-owned theatres is sufficiently important that the way of wisdom would be to bar out distracting issues, however important in their own sphere, in order that the convention may proceed with dispatch and directness toward a solution of the critical question created by producers' theatre activities.

Leaders in exhibitors' circles representing various sections of the country are showing a thoroughly commendable sincerity and earnestness in mapping out preliminary plans for the convention. An excellent spirit of unselfishness in the face of the great question affecting the common good is being displayed on all sides. Unless a decidedly changed situation is encountered within the next few days, the Cleveland meeting will mark the beginning of the day when the exhibitors' voice will be a voice of real authority in the industry.

The "Show-Down"

The "show-down" approaches. Following many months of discussion, the organized exhibitor comes forward with a definite plan of finding out just what he is to expect in the way of competition from sources to which he has been contributing revenue in the form of rentals.

It may be assumed that a violent effort will be made to block this show-down. The men who have taken upon themselves the heavy responsibility of finding out what the immediate future promises for the exhibitor must steel themselves to the point of thorough determination. No half-way methods will serve any good purpose. The committee in charge must determine as definitely as possible just where every producer stands on this great issue and with this knowledge in hand the exhibitors of America can make their plans accordingly for the coming season.

Politics

With the approach of national elections the motion picture industry, holding today the attention of millions of citizens, finds itself in a position of exceptional authority, influence—and responsibility.

Politics, merely as politics, must never become an interest of the motion picture industry. But as with all good citizens individually the motion picture industry must not be neglectful of political issues which involve the common good.

And in one matter which involves the common good and the particular good of the industry—censorship—the power of the motion picture must be made felt in the coming political contest.

For those who really understand censorship, whether it be of motion pictures or any other popular form of expression, it is not a question for further debate or discussion.

Candidates, nationally or locally, should be invited to make known their attitude on censorship and then should be allowed to abide by it in consideration of what the industry knows to be the right side of the matter.

NEW YORK, May 11.—Ralph O. Proctor has resigned as assistant general manager of the United Artists' Distributing Corporation to become assistant to Fred C. Quimby, general manager of the Associated Exhibitors, Inc.
Mr. Proctor has been assistant general manager of the "Big Four" since the corporation was formed, having resigned from the Pathé organization at that time.

Paramount Is Sued by Warwick for $525,644
NEW YORK.—Alleging a breach of contract, Robert Warwick has sued Famous Players-Lasky Corporation for $525,644. According to the star his contract began on April 1, 1919, and was to continue for three years.
The star claims that his contract, signed with Jesse L. Lasky for the corporation on January 30, 1919, and which became effective on April 1, 1919, continued only until April 7 last, when he was discharged "without cause." Under the agreement, Warwick says he was to receive $185,000 a year as salary.
Of the total amount asked, the star declares that $325,644.23 is due him on the contract and the additional $200,000 is asked for damages for the injury inflicted to his reputation and standing as an actor.

Exhibitors Plan Show-Down On Theatre Question June 3
Producers Asked to Announce Attitude on Theatre Building to Committee Which Will Report to National Convention at Cleveland
Actual work looking toward a solution of the producer-owned theatre question was commenced in New York last week.
Every producer of motion pictures has been invited to make a plain statement of his attitude on the matter.
A sub-committee of the Committee of Ten which was appointed at the Chicago meeting with instructions to present a comprehensive report at the Cleveland meeting, held a three-day session in New York last week.
The sub-committee consists of Frank J. Rembusch, C. G. Whitehurst, William Brandt and Louis F. Blumenthal.

EXPECT REPLIES JUNE 3 AND 4
The sub-committee decided upon a tentative plan of action and issued an invitation to all producers to meet the full committee, a session scheduled for New York City on June 3 and 4. At this meeting it is planned to receive statements from producers indicating what their attitude is to be toward theatre competition with exhibitors.
Following this meeting the committee hopes to be equipped with full information upon which to base a detailed report which will be submitted to the Cleveland convention which will meet on June 8, 9, 10 and 11.

In the preliminary work undertaken by the sub-committee calls were made upon the heads of various producing and distributing organizations who are known to have no theatre plans. In every instance the exhibitors received full assurance that the independent producers are not inclined to enter the work that has been undertaken.

Pledges Are Promised
Exhibitors were advised that agreements would be entered into whereby the independent producers would pledge that they would refrain from entering the theatre business under any consideration and that these agreements would be submitted as the committee meeting on June 3.
A member of the sub-committee outlined the situation as follows:
"With an idea of obtaining some definite data of the prevailing sentiment among independent producers, our group made several calls in New York last week and in each instance were assured of co-operation in our fight against producer-owned theatres.
"This work was entirely of a preliminary nature and the entire proposition will be taken up formally at the meeting of the full committee on June 3 and 4. This committee hopes to be able to furnish complete data to the Cleveland convention which will enable the exhibitors of America not only to understand the situation thoroughly, but which will afford the basis for action.
"Must Be "Showdown"
"There need be no questioning the fact that the exhibitors are going clear through on this proposition. There is going to be a showdown and we are going to find out who are our friend and who are our enemies among the producers. This is a finish fight. There will be no compromise.
"At the conclusion of the meeting it was announced that everything points to a big harmonious meeting at Cleveland and that there is every indication that the various factions among the exhibitors will work hand in hand toward a solution of "The Great Issue."

"Landslide" Declares Frank J. Rembusch
INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 11.—Frank J. Rembusch, chairman of the Independent Exhibitors of America, who has just returned from New York, where he served on a committee which demanded producing companies to state their attitude on theatre building, declared that Selznick Enterprises, Universal, First National, Pathe, Vitagraph, Robertson-Cole and the United Artists have agreed to sign written contracts with the I. E. A. to remain out of the theatre business. He said that the "Big Nine" will come in.
"Wall street capital has already been stopped in one instance and cancellations of service is beginning wholesale," he stated. "It looks like a landslide."

Blumenthal Predicts Split in Industry
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)
NEW YORK, May 11.—Louis F. Blumenthal today predicted 5,000 independent exhibitors would ally themselves with the I. E. A. He declared the theatre question will split the industry in two, compelling producers and exhibitors to take one side or the other.

M. P. E. A. Directors Will Confer May 28

NEW YORK, May 11.—Alfred S. Black and a committee of the Motion Picture Exhibitors of America, Inc., will arrive in Chicago May 25 to confer with Maurice A. Choyinski, president, and Samuel Atkinson, business agent, of the A. A. A. of Chicago, in regard to preparations for the M. P. E. A. convention to be held in Chicago June 28.
The possibility of the M. P. E. A. being officially represented at the exhibitors' conventions in Cleveland June 8 will be discussed.
Pledge Cooperation In Fire Prevention Work
National Committee Attends Association Convention
In Chicago

The pledge of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry to cooperate with the National Fire Protection Association in fire prevention work was reaffirmed at the twenty-fourth annual convention of the protective organization in Chicago on May 4, 5 and 6.

The National Association of the Motion Picture Industry was represented at the convention by J. E. Brulatour, chairman of the committee on fire prevention regulations; Albert de Roode, a member of the committee, and Frederick H. Elliott, executive secretary. The report was submitted by Mr. Elliott and was one of the most interesting and comprehensive documents presented. It was favorably commented on by delegates representing all branches of trade and industry, and many public officials and others identified with fire prevention work.

The report dealt with three phases of activity of the National Association. The first referred to the educational campaign carried on for several years by the fire prevention regulations committee. The second phase dealt with inspection, and the convention was told that during the last ten months field work of the National Association had inspected 129 exchanges in fifty-six cities, a total of 1,375 inspections. The third feature of the report dealt with the constructive activity of the National Association, which included not only the improvement of the existing buildings housing exchanges, but the erection of new and additional buildings. It referred to the fire preventive requirements recommended by the National Fire Protection Association, and adopted by the National Board of Fire Underwriters.

Accompanying this part of the report was a concrete evidence of the National Association's activity in the way of a photograph of the new film Exchange Building in Kansas City, the first building erected in this country for the housing of film exchanges. Similar buildings are in course of construction in Cleveland, Buffalo, Atlanta and New Haven. Negotiations are pending for the erection of new exchange buildings in Omaha and Chicago. The estimated cost of these new buildings is $3,895,000 for the structures, $370,000 for the land, or a total cost of $4,265,000.

This is a unique exploitation enterprise for an actress, who, so far she is scheduled to appear at theaters at Lancaster, Harrisburg and Pitts-burgh.

Canadian Photoplays Votes Cash Bonus to Star and Director
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)
CALGARY, ALTA, CANADA, May 11—The annual meeting of Canadian Photoplays, Limited, of this city, passed a cash bonus of $4,000 to Nell Shipman, star, and $5,000 to David Hartfield, director of "Back to God's Country," this being in addition to salaries already paid them and as agreed when a certain amount of profits had been realized by the company.

It was resolved to continue operations with two of the Ralph Connor stories for the First National Exhibitors Circuit. A half interest in "Back to God's Country" and all new operations was voted to Ernest Shipman, who was present, for his cooperation and enterprise.

Town Uses Reviews Of National Board Pictures Will Be Censored In Accordance With Bulletin Instructions
ADRIAN, MICH., May 11.—The commissioner of public safety has announced that hereafter motion pictures will be censored in compliance with instructions contained in the bulletin compiled by the National Board of Review.

The commissioner says that censorship is not intended to injure the owners of motion picture theatres but merely to insure patrons of clean and wholesome entertainment.

Reference to the National Board's weekly bulletin, he said, would show what pictures to permit and the ones to bar, and also would instruct what portion of some films should be eliminated.

Springfield Adopts New License Scale
SPRINGFIELD, MO.—City council has amended the ordinance governing the license fee paid by motion picture houses. This action equalizes the tax, seating capacities now governing the license fee.

The amendment provides for a tax of $50 for a 500-seat house or less, and the fee is increased in proportion to the number of additional seats. The highest license fixed was $150 for houses seating 2,000 persons.

"Humoresque" Makes Hit At Premiere In New York
Motion picture and social leaders of New York were assembled in the Ritz-Carlton's grand ball room, May 5, to attend the premiere of "Humoresque," Cosmopolitan's latest screen offering, a Fannie Hurst story directed by Frank Borzage and featuring Alma Rubens.

The crowd was given a preview, as the ball room was inadequate and even standing room was at a premium. A twenty-piece orchestra furnished the musical accompaniment. The picture was well received, and the director, Miss Rubens and the cast were congratulated at an impromptu reception which followed.

"The Gamest Girl" D. W. Griffith's Next

"The Gamest Girl" is the title which has been decided upon for D. W. Griffith's latest First National picture, which will be published on May 31. It was changed from "Black Beach," the name of the story by Frank S. Stone, from which it was adapted. The leading roles are played by Richard Barthelmess and Carol Dempster.

NEW YORK, May 11.—Moved by the declarations of a special committee representing three hundred independent exhibitors of Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas, officials of the Associated First National Pictures, Inc., this week invaded the Southwest in force, established a new First National exchange at Dallas, and started machinery which will ally independent theatre owners of that territory in open opposition to the Hulsey-Lynch interests.

This action was decided upon after a committee of exhibitors from the three states appeared before the First National members at their convention in Chicago two weeks ago and explained conditions alleged to exist which made immediate action necessary.

Say Hulsey Refused Sub-franchises

The present status of affairs is particularly threatening to theatre owners, the committee declared, because of the Lynch ownership of Hulsey theatres and control of the Paramount Artcraft program and Hulsey’s refusal to sign new agreements wherein he is obligated to extend protective defensive benefits of the First National interests through sub-franchises to independent theatres in the Southwest.

Made after selling his theatres to S. A. Lynch Enterprises, this decision convinced the independent exhibitors that radical measures were essential to avoid costly and protracted war between themselves as individuals and merged interests entirely controlling one source of film supply and directing in part the disposition of another.

Promise Immediate Relief

First National members in Chicago requested the Southwestern exhibitor committee to report back to their three hundred associates that prompt steps would be taken to establish Associated First National in Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas with no entangling alliances on a basis devoid of personal elements seeking to use to its advantage the production sources to establish competing theatres that could not be classed as independent.

Fulfillment of this began Monday of this week, when Robert Lieber, president of the Associated First National Pictures; H. O. Schwalbe, secretary-treasurer; J. D. Williams, manager; N. H. Gordon, Boston, and Moe Mark, New York, arrived at Dallas and established headquarters at Hotel Adolphus, preliminary to establishing a local office.

The First National branch will be administered from the home office in New York and will function exactly as other First National exchanges in awarding sub-franchises in the three states to independent theatre owners. It will automatically guarantee to each sub-franchise holder exhibition rights for all releases made by the Associated First National.

Call Exhibitors to Dallas

Official notices from New York to the three hundred independent exhibitors calls them to Dallas. It is expected that by Saturday the entire number of theatre owners, represented by the special committee in Chicago, will be in Dallas personally to discuss the situation with First National members and supply information necessary to their applications for sub-franchises.

"While Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas constitute only four and one-half per cent of the territory, the necessity of maintaining absolute independence among exhibitor holders of sub-franchises is as important and necessary here as in the large territories," declared J. D. Williams.

"Our members would not be keeping faith with themselves or with independent exhibitors throughout the country if they did not rally to aid fellow theatre owners, who because of their desire for continued independence are entitled to co-operation.

Regrets Present Situation

"I am extremely sorry this situation has arisen, as Mr. Hulsey was one of the original First National franchise holders, and was counted as a valuable member of the organization. The action we are taking here is evidence that the Associated First National members are unalterably pledged to the preservation of exhibitor independence."

It is stated that the action will not disturb the relationship of Tom Boland of Oklahoma City with the First National in owning the franchise in Oklahoma City territory. The re-alignment of the First National interests at Dallas make it possible for Boland to proceed with the disposition of sub-franchises in his territory.
Corinne Griffith Making Exteriors For "Bab's Candidate' at Savannah

Vitagraph announces that "Bab's Candidate" is the title of the next Corinne Griffith production, which will be published in June. Miss Griffith and a large company are in the vicinity of Savannah, Ga., making the final exteriors for this picture. The company also will make a flying trip to Charleston, S. C., for additional Southern locations not available in the Savannah district.

George Fawcett, a prominent member of the supporting cast, will go direct from Charleston to Florida when he finishes this picture, to start a South Sea story there with Famous Players.

Wins O. Henry Prize

"Bab's Candidate" as a story has a more or less interesting history. It was written by Forrest Crissey, who won it the prize offered by the O. Henry Memorial contest conducted by the American Society of Arts and Sciences, which had for its object the encouragement of young authors to follow the style of the famous master of the short story.

Lucien Hubbard, who adapted "The Sporting Duchess," wrote the scenario for this production, and while doing so stated that there was enough "story" here for seven or eight reels. It is being directed by Edward Griffith, who put on "The Garter Girl," Miss Griffith's previous picture. The O. Henry touch to this story may be seen in many places.

Cameraman Injured

Production on this film was delayed for a few days by an injury at Poolesville, Ga., to Charles Davis, one of the two cameramen on the trip. Davis, a former star motorcycle rider, having won the world's championship in 1916 in the four-mile race at Brighton Beach, put a little too much speed behind a car he was driving to location.

Miss Griffith is supported by a splendid cast. Fuller Mellish, an actor well known on the spoken stage, will be seen as Henry Dawes, the village pauper. George Fawcett, who has starred on the legitimate stage and appeared in D. W. Griffith pictures, will be seen as Senator Melvin. Webster Campbell will appear as David Barrow, a young lawyer, in love with the senator's daughter, played by Miss Griffith. Charles Abbe, who played the character lead in Taylor Holmes' stage production of "Bunker Bean," also has a prominent character role. Others in the cast include Roy Applegate, Joseph Burke, William Holden, Blanche Davenport and Frances Miller Grant.

Manners Seeking to Modify Court Decree

Desires to Exhibit "Peg O' My Heart" in Motion Pictures

WASHINGTON.—Modification of the court's decree so as to permit J. Hartley Manners to exhibit "Peg O' My Heart" in motion pictures under certain conditions has been asked of the United States supreme court by David Gerber and William J. Hughes, counsel for Mr. Manners.

It is proposed that the court's decree shall be so amended as to permit the exhibition of the film without delay except in any city where the spoken play is being exhibited by Oliver Morosco, this being accomplished by the issuance of an order by the court "that there shall be no motion picture exhibition given in any city, town or place during the period the play is being produced by the defendant, in the United States or Canada, during the term of the contract and while defendant complies therewith."

Performed in Large Cities

If this cannot be done, it is suggested that the proceedings be remanded to the district court for such further proceedings as may be necessary to protect each party in their respective rights. "Manners in his right to use the play-in moving pictures, and Morosco the right to produce it under the terms of the contract by living actors."

"The play has been performed in every large city in the United States by Morosco during the past six years, so that a performance in spoken drama, with any hope of profit, can only be given in small cities or towns, or in stock theatres," it is declared in the brief accompanying the petition.

Might Continue Indefinitely

"Under the protection of the decree directed, Morosco may continue indefinitely giving performances in small towns seventy-five times during the theatre season, if only he is willing to hold up the exercise by the author of his motion picture rights, and coercing an arrangement with him (Morosco) giving him an interest he does not at present possess."

Petitioner asks that power be not removed in the respective states and arbitrarily prevent the use of the motion picture rights which the court has decided are the property of the petitioner."

Ingram May Direct Aviation Spectacle

Rex Ingram, director of Metro's successful screen version of "Shore Acres," which stars Alice Lake, may be called to Canada to make a great aviation spectacle to show what part the Maple Leaf birdmen played in the great war.

Ingram is a former member of the Canadian flying forces during the war and is a keen student of aeronautics.

Although he made a number of successfully highly successful productions for Universal and other companies, his "Shore Acres" is the only picture as is regarded as his best piece of directorial work.
Exhibitors Seek Lower Production Costs To Reduce Admission Prices

Northern Ohio Showmen Claim That Salaries Paid To Stars Are Too High—Will Affiliate With Other Theatre Owners At Convention

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

SANDUSKY, OHIO, May 11.—Efforts are to be made by exhibitors to provide motion picture entertainment to the public at reduced prices.

George J. Schade, of the Schade theatres, made this statement following the adjournment of the meeting of Northern Ohio showmen at his Market street playhouse.

Discussion of this subject at the meeting centered on the large salaries purported to be paid to screen stars. The exhibitors condemned these salaries as altogether out of reason, according to Schade, and that they were indirectly responsible for the higher admission prices at the box office.

Theatre owners from Cleveland, Elyria, Toledo, Oberlin, Lorain, Norwalk, Tiffin, Milan, Fremont, Lima and Shelby attended the meeting.

Oppose Risque Film

One of the purposes of the gathering, stated Schade, was to consider ways and means of fighting so-called suggestive and immoral pictures. Schade declared that many of the films distributed today contain questionable characteristics.

The Northern Ohio exhibitors as a unit will affiliate with the theatre owners who convene in Cleveland on June 8, for the purpose of instituting several reforms.

Schade stated that other propositions which would be considered at the national convention would be elimination of advertising from feature productions. refusal of pictures made by producer-exhibitors and elimination of screen advertising for commercial purposes.

One of the local questions considered at the meeting here was the removal of the board of censorship from Columbus to Cleveland. Exhibitors contended that the latter city was the advantage point for the board, as it was the center of distribution activities.

Conditions May Boost Prices

BURLINGTON, Ia., May 11.—L. P. Blank, manager of the Palace theatre, and F. E. Leiser, manager of the Garrick, declare that the high cost of motion pictures is keeping pace with the high cost of living. These increased costs, however, have affected only theatre owners so far, they state.

If conditions continue, they said, local theatres would be compelled to boost prices because of the increased rental fees. They declared that one reason admission prices had not been raised higher than they are was because motion pictures "are considered the poor man's amusement."

Cosmopolitan Acquires New Oppenheim Stories

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, May 11—Cosmopolitan Productions has acquired several new stories for motion picture production purposes. Contracts have been signed with E. Philip Oppenheim and Cynthia Stockley, whereby several of the best stories of these authors which have been published or will be published in Hearst's Cosmopolitan, Harper's Bazar, or Good Housekeeping magazines, will revert to Cosmopolitan Productions.

M. Emile Chautard
To Direct for Fox
His First Work Will Be The Adaptation of A Series of Detective Tales

M. Emile Chautard, the well-known French director, has been engaged by Fox Film Corporation to adapt the series of famous detective stories, "Fantomas," by Pierre Souvestre and Marcel Allain. It is the plan of the Fox organization to make these productions special, with M. Chautard writing his own continuities and with Irene Wareple continuing as cutter.

The work of casting the first story will start immediately at the Fox studio in West 55th street. Several scenic men, carpenters, electricians and painters have been added to the regular staff to aid on the productions.

While portions of these stories already are known to the screen, having been produced in Europe several years ago, it is announced by Fox that all the material which will be utilized for this series will be new and will number twenty-six stories in all.

M. Chautard will be augmented by the addition of the director's entire staff of cameramen, art and technical experts, property men and assistant directors.

Prominent in the personnel of M. Chautard's staff is M. Henri Monessier, art and technical expert; Albert Lena, assistant director and location man; Jack Bizeul, chief cameraman, and Tommy Brannigan, second cameraman.

Dowst Story Is Butler's Second Independent Film

David Butler has chosen Henry Payson Dowst's "Alice in Wonderland" for his second independent production for D. N. Schwab Productions, Inc. "Smilin' All the Way" will be the screen title.

Leatrice Joy will play the leading feminine role and Fred J. Butler will direct.

Say Warfield Consents To Star In Production

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, May 11.—David Warfield may film "The Music Master" for Metro. Marcus Loew admits that he has practically obtained Warfield's consent. The price is said to be $75,000.00 for the one picture.

LONG RUN PRODUCTIONS THE AIM

Mayflower President Says Producers Are Now Concentrating On Pictures of Such Standard To Guarantee Showing of Indefinite Length

Motion picture producers today are concentrating their efforts to put before the public productions of such high standard as will be calculated to guarantee to the exhibitors indefinite runs with corresponding profitable returns, says Benjamin A. Prager, president of Mayflower Photoplay Corporation.

"We have given much consideration to the continually growing demand for such feature productions," declares Mr. Prager, "and it has been our aim to sponsor pictures that will not merely be used for restricted dates but may be kept going for a prolonged period because of popular demand.

"Under the Mayflower plan, directors of the most unquestioned reputations are allowed absolute sway, untrammeled by any restrictions whatever in the preparation of film versions of the works of authors of the highest standing. This brings out the best that is in the director who benefits from the realization that he alone is responsible for the picture from the first step in its evolution to the moment it is flashed upon the screen.

Unlimited Directorial Powers

"With such able directors as Allan Dwan, Sidney A. Franklin and K. A. Walsh equipped with these unlimited powers, their already splendid records undoubtedly will be materially enhanced. It can be taken for granted that all those things that might in the slightest degree militate against the success of a picture will be eliminated.

"To coordinate with these full-power directors, there is a highly organized machine which places at their disposal the very latest developments of the camera, lighting and other equipment, all procured by the liberal expenditure of funds intelligently invested."

Mr. Prager then went on to show that fully 70 per cent of the amusement-seeking public of America attend motion picture shows. Therefore, it should be evident that every possible effort must be made to satisfy such an immense clientele.

"Judging from advanced information furnished with the census of 1920," he said, "it is apparent that the interest in motion pictures is growing in the same phenomenal ratio that has characterized it up to the present. The industry is rapidly striding to second place among the nation's great enterprises.

"We had become somewhat accustomed to the trite but overworked remark that 'the motion picture industry is only in its infancy,'" continued Mr. Prager. "As a matter of fact the infant is now a vigorous youth and soon will be a man full-grown. Then will be its greatest era of its development and usefulness.

"And so we propose to call into united effort the greatest of resources to please such an immense clientele—the forcible author, the artistic and realistic actor, the master director, and the enterprising exhibitor."

CO-DIRECTORS PRODUCING "THE MIDLANDERS"
Schulberg President Of Distributing Firm
Fineman Will Cooperate With Sam Rork on MacDonald Productions
B. P. Schulberg, veteran motion picture man, has acquired an interest in American-Slasky Corporation, which issues Katherine MacDonald productions through First National Exhibitors' Circuit. He also has been elected president of the company.
S. P. Fineman becomes vice-president of the distributing unit. He will remain in Los Angeles where he will co-operate with Sam Rork, president of Katherine MacDonald Productions, on productions of this star and others whom Attractions plans to present on the screen.

Headquarters in New York Schulberg's headquarters will be in the Longacre building, New York. This executive since leaving Famous Players-Slasky Corporation and United Artists has been identified with the export phase of the business. He aided Hiram Abrams in the formation of the "Big Four."

In a statement regarding the new plans of the company, Mr. Schulberg said:
"Although I have thought so for a long time, I have never felt with more conviction that the time has come when individual initiative and original thought and action are at last to bring their fullest reward in the film industry. Whether in the case of star, director, or sales or exploitation, the independent worker in the industry who really serves the screen by conscientious effort and serious purpose can accomplish more than was ever before possible because the industry has reached that stage where personal and specialized methods of presentation and exploitation accordance in value and in effect all the machinery of unwieldy organizations.

To Maintain Policy
"The big successes of the screen have emanated from this spirit and from these independent sources, and from them will spring the future masterpieces of the screen. It is our purpose to maintain such a policy as will enable us to bring more readily and with the least hindrance to the open market all such pictures as we may be selected to sell or exploit, and to bring to independent producers and distributors all stars and directors who will establish independent units of production."

Cleveland Convention Dates
Definitely Fixed June 8-11
Sydney S. Cohen Issues Statement of Questions to be Considered at M. P. T. O. A. Gathering—
Fires Broadside at Producers
The national convention of exhibitors called for Cleveland early in June will open June 8 and will continue in session until June 11.

Following a series of conferences between leaders, it has been decided that the many steps necessary to bring about harmony among all factions and effect a strong organization will require four days at least.

Cohen Issues Explanation of Call Sydney S. Cohen, who will preside at the opening of the convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, has issued a detailed statement explaining the objects for which the organization is called together.

He takes a series of sharp smashes at the producers, declaring they have been "playing on our foolish jealousies and rivalries."

Then, one by one, he arraigns film rentals, advance payments, percentage, advertising in films, and other questions, declaring all demand immediate action.

"This industry needs a thorough readjustment along the lines of sanity and judgment. The producers have been playing upon our foolish jealousies and rivalries.
Too long have they been counting on our indifference, on our deplorable lack of leadership today near the verge of ruin and serfdom," declares Cohen.

Sees Start of New Era
"These foolish jealousies and rivalries on the part of exhibitors have given away to a clear understanding of our community of interest and of our powers to assist each other when ever we unite and act as one body.

The convention will be judged by its fruits, but I believe it will pass into history as the start of a new era, in which the exhibitor will no longer be a hewer of wood and a drawer of water but an upstanding, independent American man, asking no odds, demanding no privileges, but insisting upon proper respect for the rights within the industry.

"We feel that within the last few years the producer and distributor, almost invariably representing the same financial interest, has rapidly encroached on the domain of the exhibitor and by a series of coercive measures has sought to prevent, control and just control of his property—his motion picture theatre.

"I complain of many abuses, but most of them have their origin in the attempt of the producer-exhibitor to step out of his legitimate sphere and force the theatre owner into an unnatural partnership. It is not difticult to trace the steps which have finally led up to this organized attempt at undermining the exhibitor's property.

Excessive film rentals, the arbitrary ex-action of deposits or so-called advance payments, the arbitrary
and the artificial curtailment of production, the hold and persistent drive for percentage booking—all these measures aim at weakening the exhibitor's hold on his investment.

"Constantly increasing film rentals are placing many exhibitors today before the allocation of either selling out or raising their prices of admission. In most cases, the exhibitor might better sell out than make a substantial advance in his price of admission. The existence of the motion picture theatre, its progress and prosperity, all depend on the popular price. It was the popular price which accounts for the conquest of the world by the motion picture. The fact is so well understood that it does not need repetition.

Scores Advance Deposits
"The advance payment now used by producers for the deposit word 'deposit' takes large sums from the exhibitor and uses them not as a security for film rentals but for the expansion of their business and not infrequently for the building or purchasing of competitive theatres. The pretense that the deposit is put as security is without merit as film rentals has been abandoned even by the producer. Film rentals, as we know, are payable in advance.

"It is always an extremely difficult matter to get your deposit back from any producer. In all disputes arising between the producer and exhibitor as to payment of bills, delivery of reels, contracts, etc., the man who holds the deposit holds the whip hand. They have be nig points of the law. Cases have been numerous throughout the country where exhibitors had to invoke civil and criminal authorities to get their money back from producers.

Discusses Percentage Question
"In regard to the percentage system,
I know of no subject on which the exhibitors of the country have ever been more united. From my correspondence and from the many personal visits and from other sources, I know that the exhibitors are determined to resist to the utmost the attempt to force percentage booking upon them. They feel that they should not be content merely with offering passive resistance to this system.
Some form of energetic and affirmative action must be taken as quickly as possible after the convention opens to make percentage booking impossible."

Gore and Lesser to Build In Hollywood
LOS ANGELES—Sol Lesser and Gore Brods, have purchased a $300,000 theatre building in Hollywood in association with J. L. Swopphe, J. M. Young and F. W. Builders of the playhouse hold a franchise in First National Exhibitors' Circuit.

The theatre proper will seat 2,400 persons. The playhouse will be flanked on both sides by a 350-room hotel and an office building. The site of the theatre has not been announced.
Friedman Reports Heavy Booking
On Warner Brothers’ New Serial

"Phenomenal," continues to be the adjective with which J. L. Friedman, president of Celebrated Players Film Corporation, Chicago, qualifies the noun, "business," when discussing "The Lost City," the serial which has caused scores of theatres in the Illinois and Indiana territories to book that sort of entertainment for the first time.

With ten prints working, Celebrated finds it impossible to keep up with the demand from exhibitors, and not a day passes but some exhibitor is disappointed in his effort to obtain an early release in his vicinity.

Stern Voices Approval

Quite as loud as Mr. Friedman, in praise of the film, is Emil Stern, general manager of the Lubliner & Trine circuit in Chicago.

"We consider it," he said, "not only one of the very best serials ever produced, from the artistic standpoint, but one of the very best ever booked from a box office standpoint. I cannot say too much in praise of it."

Another exhibitor whose class of patronage makes his opinion of tremendous value is Al Lyons of the People’s theatre, Chicago.

"Different," Says Lyons

"It is different," was his comment: "the something different every exhibitor is searching for, and it has tremendous box-office value. It increased my Saturday matinee business by 900 the very first day I ran it, bringing my attendance for that afternoon up to 2,200. You can readily understand why I am a booster for it and why I have no hesitancy in predicting it will go over better than any serial we have had."

Numerous very attractive advertising and exploitation aids have been put out by Celebrated to aid the exhibitor in introducing the story to his patrons. Once that has been done, Mr. Friedman feels confident there is no question of its success.

Ten Additional Typhoons Installed In Playhouses

As a preparedness measure during the recent cool weather many exhibitors throughout the country installed their cooling and ventilating systems, according to reports from Typhoon Fan Company of New York.

The more recent contracts for the Typhoon system have been signed with the following theatres: Oracle theatre, Rock Springs, Wyo.; White Eagle theatre, Toledo, O.; Flash theatre, Tonawanda, N. Y.; Criterion Amusement Company, Chattanooga, Tenn.; Colonial theatre, Tarboro, N. C.; Star theatre, Tonawanda, N. Y.; Strand theatre, Amsterdam, N. Y.; Orpheum theatre, High Point, N. C.; Grand theatre, Anderson, S. C.; Garing theatre, Greenville, S. C.

Jacobs On Second Picture

Oscar Jacobs, producer of "The White Rider," has started work on his second production, "The Way of the Law." The same cast and director are making the picture. "The Way of the Law" was written by William J. Craft, the director. Eileen Sedgwick is starred in the picture under Joe Moore, Robert Flemying, G. A. Williams, W. C. Fellows and Curley Dresden supporting.

“Master Mind” First Barrymore Picture

Error Is Made In Announcing Initial First National Publication

Lionel Barrymore's initial First National Exhibitors' Circuit publication will be "The Master Mind," an adaptation of the Broadway stage success.

Whitman Bennett, the producer, declares that a recent announcement that "The Devil's Garden" would be the first publication was erroneous.

In "The Master Mind" Mr. Barrymore is given dramatic opportunities seldom offered, it is said. Incidents leading up to and surrounding the adoption of an orphan girl by a wealthy and fashionable family, the revelation that, unknown to the entire household, the butler (played by Mr. Barrymore) is the father of the girl, the love test that comes with the girl's decision between happiness and wealth, all work together to form a story of appealing tension. The production is now well under way.

Lesser Is Appointed Coast Representative Of the First National

In order to promote closer relations between the First National producing units on the Pacific Coast and the theatre owners who comprise the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, Inc. Sol Lesser has been appointed special representative of the First National executive committee to handle all business affairs for organization in Los Angeles.

The appointment of Mr. Lesser, who in association with the Gore brothers is First National franchise holder for Southern California and Arizona, was announced by J. D. Williams, general manager of the organization. The producing units of the First National at Los Angeles include the King Vidor studios, the Katherine MacDonald studio, the Anita Stewart and Mildred Harris Chaplin productions at the Louis B. Mayer studios, the Charles Ray productions, the Charlie Chaplin studios. The executive west coast headquarters will be established at 634 H. W. Hellman building, at Fourth and Spring streets.

A general publicity bureau will be established under Mr. Lesser's supervision to supply the home office bureau under G. L. Yearly's direction, with live advertising and exploitation angles and photoplay news and feature stories from the coast. J. E. McCormick, well-known publicity man, will handle the West Coast Bureau.

Ruskay Retires from American Cinema Firm

Burrell Ruskay and associates have disposed of their interests in American Cinema Corporation to Walter Niebuhr, president, and Lucius J. Henderson. Mr. Ruskay has retired from the board of directors and the vacancy filled by Mr. Henderson, who has been elected secretary. The company has two successful features recently produced, "The Inner Valley," and "Women of the Forest." With Margarette Narama, the star of another production, "Stolen Moments," now in the course of production, and Wilfred Lucas directing a new picture, "His Brothers' Keeper," recently started.
Realart Managers Will Convene for First Annual Convention on May 17

Data Collected From Exhibitors to Be Discussed at Meeting Which Will Extend Throughout Week At the Hotel Astor, New York

Managers and special representatives of Realart Pictures Corporation will convene at the Hotel Astor in New York on May 17 for the first annual convention of the concern. The meeting will last through the week.

Executives announce that the gathering will be a jubilee meeting in keeping with the great strides made by the infant concern in its first year of business.

To Discuss Exhibitor Sentiment

An unusual feature of the convention, according to the plans outlined by Morris Kohn, president, and J. S. Woody, general manager, will be a discussion of exhibitor opinion on important subjects of the industry.

The twenty-one branch managers of the company will arrive in New York primed with exhibitor sentiment on all the live problems of the day. Subjects that will be discussed by the managers include general policies, exploitation of productions, marketing methods and contracts and the problems arising from increased production costs. Exhibitors visited by Realart salesmen have been queried on these and other subjects and the data collected will be scrutinized collectively.

The managers will arrive in New York on Sunday, May 16, and register at the Hotel Astor. The convention will open officially Monday morning, when Mr. Kohn will welcome the managers.

The succeeding sessions will be presided over by Mr. Woody. The morning sessions will begin at 9:30 and last until 12:30. The afternoon sessions will last from 2 to until 5:30. The first day will be devoted to a discussion of the results obtained in the campaign on Wanda Hawley's first picture for Realart, "Miss Hobbs." In the evening the managers will see "Irene" at the Vanderbilt theatre.

Seek Exhibitor Harmony

The sessions of the next four days will be given over to discussing plans for the coming season and outlining views of exhibitors on problems confronting the producer. The objects of these meetings, according to Mr. Woody, will be to arrive at decisions that will bring Realart family of exhibitors and the company in closer working harmony.

On Wednesday evening the managers will see Ina Claire in "The Gold Diggers" at the Lyceum theatre. On Friday night the managers' dinner will be held at the Hotel Astor and following this the exhibitors will attend a performance of the Ziegfeld Midnight Frolic on the New Amsterdam roof.

At the last sessions of the convention Friday afternoon and Saturday morning, the managers will hear from the various officials of the company regarding departmental matters. Mr. Woody, Jay A. Gove, assistant general manager; Dario P. Parilla, comptroller; Lewis Kniskern, supervisor of contracts; John P. Fritts, director of advertising; Norman Kohn, purchasing agent, and Alan B. Marr of the sales department will present a variety of subjects.

Kohn Issues Statement

In calling the convention, President Kohn said:

"It is with considerable pride that Realart has issued a call to its managers to gather in New York for the first annual convention. Succeeding years may bring increased prosperity and wider recognition to the company, but the first year, with its struggle to establish and perfect a working organization, always will retain a most vital place in its history.

"Realart has accomplished in the past year, I believe, more than has ever been done before in the history of the industry. The company was organized and twenty-one branch offices established in a few months. It engaged three well-known stars and began to make its own productions and to market them in an incredibly short time.

"The success which has accompanied these efforts within six months of actual business is well known in the trade. To have attained the pinnacle in producing quality pictures at the very outset constitutes an achievement of no little consequence. This fact is attested, if in no other way, by Realart's Broadway record, which shows that every picture put out by the company has played at one of the big Rialto houses.

First Is Most Important

"Naturally we regard this first convention as the biggest and most important step in our development to date. It is the first opportunity we have had to get together and talk things over. And, considering the position that Realart has made for itself among producing companies in less than a year, I am sure it is bound to prove an event of no little importance to the trade as a whole.

The Realart field men who will attend the convention are as follows:

MORRIS KOHN
President of Realart Pictures Corporation.

JAY A. GOVE
Assistant general manager of Realart Pictures Corporation.

JOHN S. WOODY
General manager of Realart Pictures Corporation.

WALTER S. SCATES, Boston; Henry E. Wilkinson, Buffalo; Harry W. Willard, Chicago; Mark Goldman, Cincinnati; James B. Reilly, Cleveland; D. J. Callahan, Dallas; Bert R. Lutz, Denver; Ralph Quive, Detroit; John N. MacLean, Kansas City; Oren F. Woody, Los Angeles; Henry L. Hollander, Minneapolis; Lester Adler, New York; Truly B. Wildman, New Orleans; Cornelius G. Keys, Omaha; J. E. Hennessy, Philadelphia; Harry E. Lotz, Pittsburgh; Ben F. Simpson, San Francisco; Albert W. Eden, Seattle; Floyd H. Lewis, St. Louis; William H. Rippard, Washington.
Hampton’s "Riders of the Dawn" Is Given Premiere at New York Strand

Benjamin B. Hampton’s latest production for Hodkinson distribution, "Riders of the Dawn," was given its world premiere at the Mark Strand theatre in New York last week. Publication date of the picture has not been announced.

The production met with immediate success at the Strand, according to reports, the crowds at every performance packing the house.

Shelve Another Picture
Hodkinson reports that Moe Mark, president of the theatre company, and Jack Earle, who is managing director, shelved another picture after previewing the Hampton subject so as to give it presentation at once. Newspaper critics praised highly this screen version of Zane Grey’s "The Desert of Wheat," which is a story of the Northwest.

Its premiere at the Strand is said to bear out the statement of a prominent Eastern exhibitor that "Riders of the Dawn" has the combined ingredients of Hampton’s previous successes, "The Westerners," "Desert Gold" and "The Sagebrushers," wonderful acting, heart interest, faithful scenic effects, plenty of action and a wealth of realism.

Recognition of Zane Grey’s audience-pulling power was shown conclusively in the great volume of business done by the Hodkinson organization on its previous Hampton production, "Desert Gold.”

To Eclipse Predecessor
"Riders of the Dawn," it is said, gives every promise of eclipsing the mark set by its predecessor. The famous novelist manifestly expresses his own satisfaction with the breath-taking rapidity and power of this picture by putting his autographed signature on the opening title of the second of his novels made by Hampton. Mr. Grey has at all times been in close attendance at the Hampton studios, personally assisted in the building of the scenario and continuity and titled the picture in conjunction with Mr. Hampton.

Following are excerpts from the New York daily newspaper reviews:
"The picture is a good melodrama well acted," say the Tribune.
"The big thriller at the Strand this week might be called ‘Action Unlimited,'" declares the Times reviewer.
"The Sun and Herald:" "This photo-play deals with the Northwest grain region vividly and thrillingly, without overstating its case.
"The Morning Telegraph says: "Riders of the Dawn' is an exciting and vivid story."

Taylor Holmes Will Do Serious Role On Stage
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, May 11.—Taylor Holmes will return to the stage shortly in an A. H. Woods’ production, "Tomorrow's Price." Although he has played comedy parts in pictures, his stage vehicle gives him a serious role.

As an independent picture producer, Taylor Holmes recently has made three comedies for Metro. They are "Nothing But the Truth," William Collier’s stage success; "My Every Idea," by William Le Baron, and "Nothing But Lies," by Aaron Hoffman.

Makes Third for Republic
"The Sowing of Alderson Creek," fearturing Bernard Durning, will be the third production made for Republic Distributing Corporation by Macauley Photoplays. "When Bearcat Went Dry" and "The Gift Supreme" were the two previous pictures. Ollie L. Sellers will direct the third.

Earle Directs Goulding Tale Adopted By Browne as Louise Huff Production

Preliminary work has been completed and actual production will start soon on Louise Huff’s first starring vehicle under the Selznick banner.

Associated in the making of this production are four names well known in the industry. They are Miss Huff, William P. S. Earle, who will direct, Edmond Goulding, the author, and Lewis Allen Browne, who supplied the continuity.

Many Noteworthy Pictures
Earle was assigned to handle the megaphone because of the success he achieved in directing Eugene O’Brien in "The Broken Mcloyd" and Elaine Hamerstein in "The Woman Game" and "Whispers."

Under his direction, some of the most noted successes of the stage have been translated into picture form, it is declared. Conspicuous among these were "Within the Law" and "Mary Jane's Pa."

Miss Huff needs no introduction. Beginning her professional career in stock, then playing an important role in " stolen Honor" for one season, she had made a name for herself before she was graduated into the position of ingenue lead on the screen. She was aｓ top-star with Jack Pickford for two years, and she starred in several productions before she signed her contract with the Selznick.

Author Also Director
Miss Huff’s first Selznick picture will be "The Dangerous Paradise." Edmund Goulding is credited with the authorship of the story. Mr. Goulding’s name is known to readers of fiction magazines as well as to countless film fans. During the past year he has written a number of stories in which Selznick stars have appeared and he has turned stories by other authors into picture form for Selznick and he has directed several Selznick productions.

The continuity of "The Dangerous Paradise" was written by Lewis Allen Browne, a Selznick staff writer whose name has appeared in connection with several productions of the company. He is the author of "Sooner or Later," in which Owen Moore was starred, and of "Marooned Hearts," which is being made by Selznick, with Zena Keefe and Conway Tearle in the leading roles. "The Land of Opportunity" also came from Mr. Browne’s pen.

Universal Will Make Scientific Productions

The new technograph division of the educational department of Universal Film Manufacturing Company will start work soon producing scientific films for theatre showing. Realizing that to obtain the most instructive, artistic and interesting results from educational motion pictures it would be necessary to install an animating art department, Harry Levey, general manager of the educational department, has added a specially designed trick-title apparatus.
Theatres Open on Sunday In Some Towns and are Closed In Others

Legal Action Taken Against Exhibitors In New York, Texas, Ohio and Iowa—Seven Managers Are Fined $30 Each

Sentiment favoring the exhibition of motion pictures on Sunday has been expressed in various towns over the country during the last month. At the same time adverse legislation has become effective in other localities and theatres that heretofore have shown on the Sabbath have been forced to remain dark.

For the first time in the history of Martins Ferry, O., theatres are in operation on Sunday. The first Sunday screening of pictures occurred recently at the Fenay and the New Pastime theatres, only instructive subjects being presented.

In inaugurating Sunday shows at the Fenay, the manager said:

"It has been proven that the movie theatre, properly conducted on Sunday, does not, as claimed, desecrate the Sabbath, but on the contrary has a tendency to eliminate many of the objectionable methods of observing the day.

Citizens of Wenona, Ill., at the recent election voted in favor of Sunday shows, 234 votes being cast in the affirmative and 166 in the negative.

Council Upholds Law

City council of Danville, Ill., upheld the exhibition of pictures on Sunday by voting 9 to 1 against repeal of the Sunday show ordinance. One of the aldermen in explaining the council's action declared that the vote of the people a few years ago in favor of Sunday shows, while not mandatory, was directory and therefore it would be unwise to revoke the law.

Bushnell, Ill., is preparing to vote on the question following a discussion of the matter before the council by Jackson Brothers, owners of a theatre there.

In four states—New York, Texas, Iowa and Ohio, officials of various communities have acted to bar the opening of theatres on Sunday as well as instigated legal proceedings in other cases.

Closed on Sunday

The Broad Street theatre at Waterford, N.Y., was closed recently for operating on Sunday. Sunday showings are unlawful, it is said, unless permission is obtained, and, according to local authorities, this had not been granted.

Exhibitors at Red Oak, Ia., decided, following the case which was brought before the justice of the peace for violation of the Sunday amusement law, to remain dark over the Sabbath.

A jury at Wichita Falls, Tex., returned a verdict of guilty in the case against Morris Pois, manager of the Gem theatre, who was charged with violation of the Sunday closing law. He was fined $20. Six other defendants, whose cases have been pending, also will pay the $20 fine.

Four showmen at Findlay, O., have been bound over to the grand jury in a charge of violating the state statute prohibiting Sunday amusements. The cases probably will come up this month.

"Big Six" Directors To Remain on Coast

Associated Producers Units Will Be Separate—Four to Build New Studios

LOS ANGELES, May 11—The Associated Producers will continue to produce in California and no members will migrate to foreign fields as was reported recently. It is probable, however, that one or several of the producers will head companies to England and France for the locale of big serials.

The "Big Six," it is definitely stated, will not produce under one roof. Thomas H. Ince will continue to maintain his big plant in Culver City.

Mack Sennett will continue all production in his own big studios at Hollywood. Although officials of the Sennett organization announce alterations and additions that will materially increase facilities and equipment for the making of super comedies, Maurice Tourneur, George Loane Tucker, and probably Allan Dwan will construct, own and maintain their own exclusive establishments in Los Angeles or the adjacent suburbs.

Marshall Neilan recently entered into a co-operative agreement with Albert Kaufman.

Anita Stewart Begins

New Mayer Production

Anita Stewart's new picture, "Harry and the Piper," has gone into production as the first B. Mayer studio with Bertram Bracken at the directorial post. The story, by Kathleen Norris, originally appeared as a serial in the "Pictorial Review." The screen version was arranged by Monte M. Katterjohn. "Harry and the Piper" has to do with a girl who leaves her small town home to visit New York and see life in its gayer aspects. She becomes a Greenwich Village and enters into a Bohemian marriage contract with a disciple of free love, but realizes her error in time to avoid coming under the ban of convention. Later, when a real pure romance comes into her life, the girl's sad experience in Bohemia threatens to become a stumbling block, but her fiancé proves big enough for the occasion and the story ends with a little surprising twist and with everybody happy and satisfied.
Reelcraft’s Library of Short Films Is Given a World-Wide Circulation

Reelcraft Pictures Corporation’s program represents a “library of short features with a world-wide circulation,” according to executives of the organization.

The short subject, it is declared, holds the same relation to the motion picture industry as the short story does to the world of fiction.

One and two-reel comedies, however, are considered more popular than the short humorous stories of the magazines. The demand appears to be far greater than the supply at all times, it is said.

To date, Reelcraft Pictures has given comedy the first consideration, because of the demand of the exhibitors.

Four Companies Working

Four producing companies, already are furnishing comedies for the Reelcraft program. Billy West is supplying one two-reel comedy every other week. Alice Howell is a two-reel comedy every alternate week; Billy Franey’s one-reel comedies are being published once every other week, while Millburn Moranti is making a series of two-reel comedies that are different from the ordinary laugh producer for issuance every other week.

Moranti has surrounded himself with an excellent cast including Fritzi Ridgeway, Helen Williams, Joe Bonner and Albert Hulston.

For the followers of the melodrama and speedy Western action, Texas Guinan is featured in a series of two-reel Westerns directed by Jay Hunt. Texas Guinan is remembered for her dashing ingenue roles in musical comedies.

To Have Cartoon Issue

Cartoons also have been considered by Reelcraft, negotiations having progressed whereby a nationally known comic artist may soon be drawing an animated weekly issue for Reelcraft.

Educationalists also will be distributed by Reelcraft. The scenic series will consist of the Burnd Sunset series, now being taken by Leland J. Burnd, who travels from place to place in search of natural splendor and beauty by means of a motor car completely equipped to develop the negative as it is taken.

The scenes will be one-reel each and will be published.

Plan Something Different

One of the innovations planned by Reelcraft is a series of pictures different from any now being offered. A popular male star will be featured in a series of stories written by a prominent author. Other novelties are planned for distribution from time to time.

National advertising campaigns will be carried on each separate series. A service department has been established and is working out advertising plans for the individual exchanges distributing Reelcraft pictures.

Gladys George Plays Lead Opposite Douglas MacLean

Gladys George, a Thomas H. Ince find, has been cast in the leading feminine role opposite Douglas MacLean in his first individual starring vehicle, "Yanconna Yillies." Miss George has been with Ince for about a year, playing "bits" at first, then more recently the ingenue lead in "Below the Surface," with Roland Bowdworth and Lloyd Hughes, and the lead with Charles Ray in "Red Hot Dollars."

Douglas MacLean and his company have completed the shadow rehearsals for "Yanconna Yillies." The photographing of the first scenes in the play is now progressing under the direction of Jack Nelson.

National Film Has In Operation
Its Increased Program for 1920

Production activities at National Film Corporation's studios are proceeding in accordance with the prearranged increased program for 1920, according to Harry M. Rubey, president.

The "Buddy" Post unit is engaged on turning out twenty-six two-reel comedies which Goldwyn will publish as Capitol comedies. In addition to this the many Marion H. Kohn Productions' units are making things hum on the National lot.

Prepare to Film Serial

Preparations for the forthcoming National serial, "The Son of Tarzan," rapidly are nearing completion. Roy Somervile already has prepared the continuity for the first three episodes of this Edgar Rice Burroughs serial, which Harry Revier will direct. The company is awaiting the arrival of Joe Brandt at the coast before sailing for the South Pacific island where the main scenes of the serial will be filmed.

Very unusual costumes have been designed especially for the "Son of Tarzan" picture. Harry Revier states that he will introduce several unique ideas into the filming of this chapter picture feature, and that it will be absolutely different in many ways from any serial yet attempted.

Ready for Issuance

"Kentucky Colonel" now is ready for publication, but there will be a little lapse before another feature picture is started because of the illness of William A. Seiter who will direct the next of the "All American" series. Several big stories by famous novelists are now under consideration for a worthy successor to "Kentucky Colonel."

Joe Brandt, director general of National, is optimistic regarding his company's future. The company's "Parted Curtains," "Nobody's" Girl, and now "Kentucky Colonel" are pictures which are representative of National's capabilities," says Brandt. "Our future efforts will be centered on producing a small number of pictures of this calibre each year. We expect to make each succeeding picture better than its predecessors, we expect to spend more money on them and we expect that the exhibitors are going to find out that the extra expense is going to be justified."

For $1,200,000 Rental

The ten-story Healy building at 88 and 90 Gold street and 1 to 5 Ferry street, New York, has been rented by Nicholas Power Company for a period of twenty-one years at an aggregate rental of $1,200,000.

Charles F. Noyes Company leased the building for A. Augustus Healy to the manufacturing company. The Nicholas firm now occupies nearly the entire building.

This deal is said to be one of the largest ever negotiated in the "Swamp" district.

Metro Adapts Another Drury Lane Production

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, May 11—George Terwilliger of Carl Donner's "Vanishing Trails," the Marriages of Mayfair, is being adapted at Metro's New York studio in West 61st street.

VOTE OF THANKS GIVEN
First National Circuit
Canadian Company Celebrates
First Anniversary As A Producing Unit

Officers and executives of the Canadian Photoplays, Inc., celebrated the first anniversary of the company by a joint vote of thanks to First National Exhibitors Circuit and to Ernest Shipman for the splendid exploitation of its first production, "Back to God's Country," by James Oliver Curwood.

The treasurer's report shows, it is declared, that bookings ahead soon will reach the half million dollar mark. So successful has been the first venture under the guidance of Ernest Shipman that the men interested in the organization have decided to put unlimited capital into further productions, it is said.

The company has obtained the exclusive rights to the product of authors of prominence, and the officials estimate that at least $250,000 will be spent in publicizing the screen productions of Ralph Connor, one of the authors under exclusive contract to Ernest Shipman and the companies he represents.

A pleasurable feature of the first annual meeting of Canadian Photoplays of Calgary was the dispatching of telegrams of appreciation to the officials, franchise holders and salesmen of First National Exhibitors Circuit, during an informal dinner to Ernest Shipman, who had been invited to come on from New York for the occasion.

Charles Ray Has Sold
"A Contented Woman"
As Talmadge Vehicle

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, May 11.—Charles Ray, who recently purchased the famous Hoyt comedies, has sold the screen rights to "A Contented Woman" to Joseph Schenck as a vehicle for Constance Talmadge, according to word received from Los Angeles by the Arthur S. Kane offices.

Mr. Ray recently disposed of "A Texas Steer" to Samuel E. Kork, who in addition to his connection with the Katherine McDonald Pictures Corporation is about to begin production of a series of special film offerings in association with Eugene Roth of the California theatre, San Francisco. The big screen possibilities of the story, together with the publicity value in the title of a Charles H. Hoyt comedy, are to be recognized by Mr. Kork's organization in the assembling of an all-star cast for the production.

It is not yet announced whether Mr. Ray will do any of the Hoyt plays himself, and meanwhile General Manager Will reports that he is receiving many offers for screen rights.

Thomas Saxe and R. D. Craver Hold Franchises In Associated Exhibitors

Southern Independents Have Obtained the Dallas Territory, It Is Understood, and An Announcement Is Expected Soon

Thomas Saxe of Milwaukee and R. D. Craver of Charlotte, N. C., are the latest to obtain franchises in Associated Exhibitors, Inc.

The franchise for the Milwaukee territory was transferred to Mr. Saxe from Merrill Theatre Amusement Company, whose Merrill theatre recently changed hands. Mr. Craver, with large independent theatre holdings in the South, obtained the franchise for the Charlotte territory, which includes North and South Carolina.

It is understood also that the Dallas territory franchise in Associated Exhibitors has been obtained by prominent Southern independents, and that an announcement will be made shortly.

Active in Discussions

Both Mr. Saxe and Mr. Craver affiliated themselves with Associated during the convention of independent exhibitors at Chicago, and both were active in the discussions that took place among the franchise holders from Associated during informal meetings there.

Mr. Saxe stated that the majority of the exhibitors in his territory were enthusiastic over the possibilities of Associated sub-franchises. He says that already more than 130 theatre men in Milwaukee have expressed their eagerness to cooperate under Associated's plan.

Mr. Craver was equally enthusiastic over the acquisition of his franchise. He stated that in the South, particularly, exhibitors were in need of an organization that would give the theatre protection as well as profit. He stated that in Associated Exhibitors, Inc., he believed that the really cooperative organization had been found.

Informal Conferences

One of the significant sidelights of the gathering of independent exhibitors at Chicago was the informal "convention" of about a dozen of the franchise holders in Associated Exhibitors, Inc.

While no official connected with the Associated Exhibitors took official part in the doings of the independent exhibitors' convention, it was made known to those in Chicago that Associated Exhibitors, Inc., pledged its support to any plan or scheme that is designed to protect exhibitors' interests. This pledge dovetails with the exhibitors' endorsement of cooperative propositions such as is exemplified in Associated Exhibitors.

"The Associated Exhibitors are heart and soul in accord with any movement or plan that is designed to further the selfish interests of independent exhibitors," stated an announcement, "and for this reason we wish to compliment the First National Exhibitors' Circuit for the great progress made in their convention, and especially to emphasize the value of franchise protection and benefit offered by First National to independent exhibitors.

Cooperation Is Received

The gathering of the Associated men brought to light the fact that the franchise holders in Associated were receiving extraordinary cooperation and pledges of support of the Associated edge from the independent showmen throughout their respective territories. Associated franchise holders also stated that keen interest had been expressed in the announcement that Associated sub-franchises would be available very shortly.

Among those who took part in the informal meetings of Associated franchise holders were I. H. Ruben and M. H. Finkelstein of Ruben & Finkelstein, Minneapolis; Harry M. Lubliner and Joseph Trinz of Lubliner & Trinz, Chicago; John P. Harris, Pittsburgh; L. Libson, Cincinnati; C. M. Olsen of Olsen & Sourbier, Indianapolis; J. H. Cooper, Oklahoma City; Thomas Saxe, Milwaukee; R. D. Craver, Charlotte, N. C.; S. H. Harris, Little Rock; Judge Wilkerson and E. R. Rogers of Signal Amusement Company, Chattanooga; Joseph Morgan, Atlanta; J. E. Quimby, general manager of Associated, and Phil Ryan, also of Associated.

Bessie Love Will Star In "Old Curiosity Shop"

(New York) May 11.—Andrew J. Callaghan, who is in New York to purchase suitable material in which to feature the Thomas Hardy story "Little Dorrit," states that Charles Dickens' "The Old Curiosity Shop" will serve as a feature vehicle for the star. Negotiations are under way to engage a prominent director for the production.

So gratifying are the first results of Miss Love's initial production, "The Midlanders," it is declared, that Mr. Callaghan and his associates are reiterating their original announcement of backing this star to the limit in every detail of production. With this end in view, Mr. Callaghan will remain in New York until he has accumulated a sufficient number of well-known novels and plays to satisfy the star's needs in the immediate future.

Cameraman Mobbed By People Seeking To Quash Notoriety

CRISFIELD, MD.—Both the newspaper reporter and the cameraman for a news reel have their troubles. Neither is immune to the wrath of those who dislike publicity.

A cameraman representing one motion picture concern recently went to Tangier Island for pictures of the principals in the recent shooting affair there. When the irate citizens got through with the cameraman he was minus a machine and about two reels of film, all of which was destroyed.

The residents are resenting the wide publicity given them since Officer Con- traction shot Roland Parks for violating the Sunday ordinance. They claim reports of the case are greatly exaggerated and say they desire to be left alone.

Name of Author With Success of Past Films Exploit Latest Picture

Vitagraph's special production, "The Courage of Marge O'Doone," will go on the market strengthened by ample advance exploitation. The name of its author, James Oliver Curwood, has attained magic charm from his other recent novels and the films that have been made of them. In its original form "The Courage of Marge O'Doone" has been making a literary sensation for more than a year.

The locale of "The Courage of Marge O'Doone" is the region that borders on the Arctic circle. There are scenes of blizzards, bear fights and man fights of extreme heroism and hardship.

David Smith directed this special feature. Pauline Starke and Niles Welch have the leading roles.

Poli Circuit Books Three Select, Republic Pictures

Charles Rogers, sales director of Select and Republic, announces that the Poli Circuit in the Connecticut territory has booked the Selznick production, "The Woman God Sent," featuring Zena Keefe, and the two Republic productions, "The Girl of the Sea" and "Mothers of Man." In addition, Mr. Rogers says that the Keith and Frazier circuits have booked the two Republic productions.

In view of the fact that at least seventeen separate towns and cities will see two of the three productions, Mr. Rogers believes this to be a record booking for film exchanges in the East.

Portrays Three Roles

Olive Thomas is portraying three different characters in the production of "Jenny" for Selznick Pictures, which is being made at the company's West Coast studio under the direction of Laurence Trimble. Roy Hornman wrote the tale.
Wanda Hawley's First Realart Film Is "A Knockout," Declares Ritchey

"A knockout." That was the statement of Will M. Ritchey, supervising director of the Realart studios in Hollywood, after witnessing a run of "Miss Hobbs," Wanda Hawley's first starring vehicle, in its unfinished state.

"I never have seen a picture," said Mr. Ritchey, "that delighted me so much in its early stages. Barely three reels have been shot and of them only one has been assembled in anything like the form it will eventually take. So you can judge the play must have 'something on the ball,' or I wouldn't venture such a positive statement.

"To my mind, 'Miss Hobbs' completely satisfies the public's demand for something different. This story of a girl who hates men and takes to fads, house-furnishing and food of the 'futurist' order brings in effects that are quite out of the ordinary. The lover of the bizarre will appreciate the decorative ideas used in the Hobbson home.

"As far as the star is concerned the part is so different from anything she ever has that it has brought out an amazing store of originality. She shows a deft comedy touch that will, I believe, establish her right to stardom."

"Her fun-making efforts are ably seconded by Harrison Ford, Jack Mulhall, Walter Hiers, Helen Jerome Eddy and Julianne Norton. The five people I have named form a remarkably well balanced cast. In fact, I cannot find a single fault with the production as it stands. Elmer Harris must be credited with having created a remarkable picture plot from Jerome K. Jerome's laughable stage comedy."

McKim Has Role In Screen Crafts Film
Well Known Players Chosen to Portray Characters in Metaphysical Plays

Well known players comprise the cast assembled for "The Great Physician," the first of a series of three seven-reel metaphysical film plays to be produced by Screen Crafts, Inc. The cast has been contracted for the three feature productions.

Heading the cast is Robert McKim, who is remembered for his work as the villain in many screen successes, and Rhea Mitchell, whose pleasing personality and ability to play emotional roles has won for her a berth as favorite in the hearts of exhibitors and the picture public.

Other players in the cast include Arnold Gregg, who has just finished work as leading man for Betty Compson in her first independent production; Lew Morrison, whose work in "Dangerous Hours" and several other screen plays has brought him recognition as a character artist; Snowden Baxendale, a new film light who recently completed a successful career on the legitimate stage; Charlotte Woods, Max Davidson, Robert Anderson, Eugene VanSittert, Olga Gray and Maxine Aidar.

Chadwick Ayres will direct the stories.

Paul Brunet Again Named Vice President, General Manager Pathe

Paul Brunet for the second time was re-elected vice-president and general manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc., at the annual meeting in New York.

The officers named for the following year are: Charles Pathe, president; Paul Brunet, vice-president and general manager; Bernhard Benson, second vice-president; Lewis Innerarity, secretary; Leon Madieu, treasurer; W. C. Smith, assistant treasurer.

The remarkable progress made by Pathe Exchange under the direction of Mr. Brunet during the last two years made it a foregone conclusion, it is said, that he would be re-elected to his commanding position, the scope of which, in its varied activities, is being steadily increased.

Ray To Make First Trip To New York

Charles Ray, one of the few film stars who never has seen New York, plans to visit the metropolis soon to make scenes for "Fifty-Five Minutes From Broadway," the picture rights of which he purchased from George M. Cohan, the author.

The first two pictures the star will make for First National are "Peaceful Valley," adapted from Sol Smith Russell's successful stage comedy, and "Fifty-Five Minutes From Broadway."

Vitagraph Bookings Indicate Big Demand For Curwood Feature

That the booking records of any previous Vitagraph special production will be smashed by the forthcoming James Oliver Curwood production, "The Courage of Marge O'Doone," is becoming more apparent each day, Vitagraph officials state. Every mail brings contracts from the larger cities served by that company's various exchanges, it is said. The advance exploitation received by this film is believed to have created interest everywhere, and several hundred managers of theatres in the smaller centers have also booked it.

Officials at Vitagraph's Brooklyn studio who have seen the film claim that if there is much enthusiasm now, based on the exploitation and the merit of the book from which the story was adapted, the film itself will cause a sensation, as Director David Smith took advantage of many lucky breaks in getting blocked weather at the right time and in getting the grizzly bears and other wild animals to "act."

Vitagraph officials say that there is every evidence that even the records hung up by "Over the Top" will be smashed. This prediction was based on the figures totalled this week, which showed that in addition to the big city bookings, several hundred smaller town theatres had booked the film for showings during the month of June.

Pictures Effect On Youth of Land
"Wholly Good," Says Judge Lindsey

Judge Ben B. Lindsey, founder of the famous juvenile court in Denver, and one of the foremost authorities on the American boy, who, incidentally, is appearing in a five-part feature written by Julia Crawford Ivers, entitled "The Boy," which William D. Taylor is directing for Famous Players-Lasky corporation, has this to say relative to the influence of motion pictures on the children of the country:

"You cannot preach in a motion picture. But you can get your story over without preaching. The audience will catch the spirit of it.

"That is the way motion pictures are having their beneficent effect on the public, old and young. The audience catches the spirit of the picture. Motion pictures are doing a very great work—I am speaking of the better class of pictures, you must understand—and their influence in the future will be even more sweeping than it is now.

"You ask me what I deem the effect of motion pictures on the youth of the land? I believe it to be wholly good. There may have been isolated instances where the effect was bad, of course. Undoubtedly some boys have played hookey to see a motion picture. But that is not the fault of motion pictures.

"I have heard people complain that boys learn to commit crimes from seeing them done on the screen. In all my experience, I do not recall any boy telling me that he did wrong because of a motion picture. But I recall many instances of boys—and girls—telling me they did wrong because of what they read in the daily papers.

"Is it reasonable to think that a motion picture is a menace to the youth of the land because it may depict crime? Should newspapers be called a menace because they print the news of crime? Should every book, every stage play, every magazine that tells of crime be called a menace?

"I believe that many motion pictures have not been what they should be. I am glad that the standard has been raised so high and feel that it will be raised even higher. But as pictures are now, the general effect is entirely good."

Tournier To Take Cast
To Catalina for Scenes

Maurice Tourneur has returned to Los Angeles from Balboa, where he spent several days with his company making scenes for his forthcoming production, "Caleb West, Master Diver." Most of the interior scenes have been finished. The company probably will leave for San Francisco within a few days and from there go to Catalina, where the undersea scenes are to be made. Elaborate preparations are now in progress for the under water scenes.
Suggests Creation of Committee of Three at Salary of $6,000 to Pass Upon All Films and Film Advertising—Would Abolish Pink Permits

Abolishment of the present censorship of motion pictures by the police and creating in its stead a Motion Picture Department, which will have three members receiving $6,000 each per annum, is the recommendation contained in the first draft of the report of the Commission on Moving Picture Censors of the City of Chicago, which has been made public by Judge T. D. Hurley, chairman of the committee.

Judge Hurley's recommendations have been submitted to the committee and will be discussed at a series of conferences. It is the aim of the committee to have the report in the final form within a month in the hope that the proposed ordinance can be presented to the city council before warm weather arrives, he stated.

Would Repeal the "Pink Permit" Clause

Repeal of the present provision of a "pink permit" being issued for pictures deemed suitable for adults only is asked and the recommendations conclude with the statement "no picture should be exhibited that could not be shown before the father and mother in company with their children."

The report recommends that not only films, but all posters, banners and handbills which are used in connection with the showing of film be submitted to the department for approval, and that all film and advertising matter must carry the "Chicago Label" before being shown or displayed.

Addition Is Suggested

At the present time the proposed ordinance reads that no permit shall be granted for pictures that are "immoral or obscene, sacrilegious, salacious, unpatriciotic, or holds up to scorn or ridicule any nation or the people thereof, or falsely represents any person or historical event, or portrays riotous, disorderly or unlawful scenes and has a tendency to debase the public morals."

Judge Hurley, after preparing his report, drew up an addition to this section which would prohibit any picture "whose dominant and principal feature of artistry show prominently the following:

- Adultery, fornication and incest.
- Malpractice and abortion.
- The burning of victims.
- Premarital incidents and scenes, and the continuation of such scenes.
- The consummation of marriage or other indissoluble unions.
- The sale and use of habit-forming drugs.
- Irreverent treatment of churches, clergy and religious customs.
- Vagrancy.
- Birth control.
- Grotiosa, strangulation and other murder scenes.
- Slaughtering and profuse bleeding.
- Torture of human beings or cruelty to animals.
- Counterfeiting.
- Vulgar exhibition of underclothing.
- Indecent and suggestive dancing.
- Drunken scenes carried to excess.
- Language in subtitles which is profane or which has a double meaning.
- Bedroom scenes in which men and women are shown in the nude.
- Dispersion of public characters, of the flag, the country and the national allies.
- Executions and other death scenes.
- Brainless and prolonged fighting.
- Burials of funerals, hospitals, insane asylums, criminals, and bodies of ill-fame.
- Burning, wrecking and the destruction of property.
- Safe cracking and pocket picking.
- The influence of liquor and criminal agents.
- Shooting, the taking of poison and other scenes which will serve to murder or suicide.

Judge Hurley stated that the clause was taken to some extent from the Pennsylvania law.

To Provide Qualifications

The draft provides that the three members include a woman, an educator of at least ten years' experience in the educational field, and a business or professional man of at least ten years' experience in the business or professional field.

It provides for an advisory committee of volunteers to serve without pay.

It gives the department power to recall a film at any time after permission to show it has been granted.

The ordinance provides a fine of not less than $50 and not more than $150 for every violation of the ordinance, and it was indicated that three convictions would result in a theatre license being revoked, and of the department refusing to pass upon films submitted by the offending company or exchange.

Report Is Voluminous

The report which accompanies the proposed ordinance consists of forty typewritten pages. It explains the creation of the commission, reviews its work during the past twenty months, gives excerpts from testimony offered before it, and concludes with the recommendations.

Several warm shots are directed at the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry for its stand on the censorship question.

"We expect the motion picture people to fight this ordinance to the last ditch," said Judge Hurley to the committee after making the report public.

"We have a hard battle ahead,"

Mae Three, critic of the Chicago Tribune, is given an entire page in the report, her review of "The Menace of the Modern" being cited as showing the "need of censorship."

"Give Them What They Need"

"In the final analysis the whole question, as one writer put it, is: Shall we give our children and the weak and thoughtful of the community what they 'want' or what they 'need'? It is one of the stances in the report.

"Motion picture representatives approve of censorship, but insist that they should be allowed to be the sole judge of the films to be shown," is another.

"The commission also realized that there is a small minority in the community who mingle and intertwine the terms 'liberty' and 'license,'" says the report in another part. "These latter people deny the right to prejudge a picture on the ground that it is opposed to American liberty, and in fact are referred to by the supreme court as 'that class of people that are shameless and unclean, to whom nothing is detestable and through whom no picture would be considered immoral and obscene.'"

Wants Report Published

Judge Hurley expressed himself as anxious that the committee's report, the ordinance as finally recommended, and the complete testimony before the committee be published in book form for general distribution.

"I consider it the most valuable data on censorship that has ever been compiled," he declared. "It must be preserved in book form. We have had both sides given their complete expression."

Martin J. Quigley Calls Report "Political Trick" of T. D. Hurley

Referring to the censorship report, Martin J. Quigley, publisher of EXHIBITORS HERALD, who acted as secretary of the commission during its deliberations, made the following comment:

"The report is a political trick of T. D. Hurley, a traditional office holder in Cook county. The report of the commission is the personal work of Hurley as no meeting of the commission has been held in more than a year. The members were not even aware a report was being drawn.

"The report is entirely at variance with the evidence and logical conclusions, and is a desperate effort of Hurley to land a $6,000 job which he recommends in the report. The report is predicated on ignorance, prejudice, and a deplorable minimum of knowledge about motion pictures."

"The city council, which has been aware of the motives of Hurley and the fact that the commission disbanded without action, has refused to permit the printing of the report and it has no official standing."
What Do They Think About When They Are Not Working?

Madge Kennedy, the Goldwyn star, for instance, devotes her time to studying natural history, when not filming scenes for "The Truth." A Deinodon, first cousin to a Dinosaur, is now occupying her time.

You can't kid Lucille Rubey, who appears in support of Jack Hoxie in the National Film Corporation's feature, "The Son of Tarzan," but it is evident she has somebody's goat.

Dinty Moore's bar in "Bringing Up Father," the International's new comedies, built at the Waldorf-Astoria, New York, for the benefit of the American Publishers' Association convention. George McManus, the artist and originator, is having the first kickless drink served, known as a rolling pin rickey.

Doris Pawn finds golf one of the best spring tonics. The Goldwyn star is rapidly making a name for herself on the links. A little thing like a bag of clubs doesn't interfere with her drive.
WRIGLEY'S SECRET

There is, perhaps, no more familiar national advertising than that which literally “tells the world” about Wrigley’s Spearmint Chewing Gum. Staring Americans in the face from billboard, building wall, magazine page and car card, it has become almost as well known as the American Eagle.

William Wrigley, Jr., whose fortune ranks among the industrial marvels of America, has demonstrated his faith in advertising and the value of such faith to the satisfaction of the most critical.

In a magazine interview recently printed Mr. Wrigley gave the following as his “secret of successful advertising.” It is an open secret, a secret that has been stated before, though probably not so pointedly—incidentally a secret that theatre advertisers should convert to their own purposes.

The gist of Mr. Wrigley's statement, as contained in the first sentence, should be printed in letters six inches high, red preferred, and tacked up over the desk of every motion picture theatre advertiser. It is particularly pertinent to his work.

Chewing gum is a constant quantity. It is the same today as yesterday, the same tomorrow as today. The chewing gum advertiser has ample time to study his product and discover new angles from which to approach the public with his sales talk.

The motion picture is a variant. Today the sales talk must center upon, say, comedy. Tomorrow tragedy must be as attractively described. Each day brings its problem, and there is but a few hours, at most a few days, in which to perfect a sales argument.

Picture Is “The Thing”

In every case, however, every day, every week and every year, “the picture is the thing.”

The motion picture, not a single drama, comedy or tragedy, is the real product which the motion picture theatre advertiser must sell.

To create a buying public which will buy but one type of motion picture entertainment is to foolishly limit the appeal of the advertising used. It follows, since no theatre can find sufficient comedy, drama or tragedy of high grade to use it exclusively, that a separate patronage must be built up for each class of production.

Must Sell the Screen

By far the better way, though results may materialize a bit more slowly, is to direct the main force of every selling argument to the creating of a desire for screen entertainment, subordinating the claims made for the specific attraction and the class it represents.

It is better by far to have people say, “The Strand has the best pictures” than to have a certain portion of it say, “If you want to see good comedy go to the Strand,” another portion advise, “When the Strand advertises a drama you can depend upon it being good,” and still another faction claim, “I go to the Strand when they have a tragedy because I can always enjoy a good cry.”

Though more thought, effort and patience is required, it is worth while to educate your patrons to say in unison, “The Strand puts up the best show, no matter what the pictures are.”

What Wrigley Means

Mr. Wrigley’s meaning should be understood clearly.

He does not mean that it is necessary to repeat monotonously. As a matter of fact monotonous repetition is bad business.

He means that the important point, that the article advertised is the best buy available, should be made as briefly and as frequently as possible.

He centered upon a pointed statement of an important point.

“The Flavor Lasts” was his claim.

To see it is to read it.

Brevity Is Important

He “made it snappy.”

Exhibitors should do the same. No matter what they have to say about a picture, or about their theatre, it can be said more effectively in half a dozen words than in half a hundred.

It is easy to write at length.

It is profitable to condense.

Mr. Wrigley’s advice is not new. But it is good.

And it is expressed, like his advertising, snappily and impressively. At least one line of it should be memorized—“Tell 'em quick; and tell 'em often.”

Thirty girls figured in the “Sassy Jane Revue” staged by Sid Grauman at his Million Dollar theatre, Los Angeles, as a protest against the high cost of feminine wearing apparel. The “Sassy Jane” gown is a Los Angeles especially desirable combination at this time. The feature served a double purpose—providing excellent entertainment and identifying the theatre management with the progressives of the day aligned on the side of humanity. There is no more paying form of advertising.

Grauman’s “Sassy Jane” Revue Strikes Blow At Living Cost

Sid Grauman, whose penchant for innovations in presentation is one of the boasts of Los Angeles picture enthusiasts abroad, accomplished a double purpose in his “Sassy Jane Fashion Revue,” given the last week in April at his Million Dollar theatre. As a feature, it was a distinct achievement. As stimulating him a man of the times, with public interest his interest, it gained him many friends. Incidentally, in giving the best sort of publicity to the “Sassy Jane” dress, an economical affair of calico and gingham that combines beauty with saving, a genuine service was rendered the community.

The “Sassy Jane dress” has evolved from a simple little checkered frock to its present elegance in the course of three years, and is the brain child of Miss Rand, 22-year-old Los Angeles miss who started at the age of nineteen with ten dollars, one sewing machine, two apple-boxes, a needle, some thread and much nerve! Today “Sassy Jane” frocks are sold nationally, and Miss Rand employs 456 girls. She is now president of the Sassy Jane Co., of which Syd Chaplin is vice-president. Her product strikes a death-blow at the high cost of living, as her dresses retail at from five to thirty-five dollars apiece.

Sid Grauman conceived the idea of presenting the “Sassy Jane” act at a time when the H. C. L. topic was paramount, and particularly that phase of it touching the cost of feminine wearing apparel. Twenty-five beautiful girls were used in the act, supplemented by a male solo singer and four musicians who stood in the towers seen in the accompanying photographs on this page.

The presentation opened with about one hundred and fifty feet of film showing June Rand designing a “Sassy Jane” frock on a plaster model, while the most diately came to life, a pretty and bewitching maiden. Then was shown Syd Chaplin seated across the room, making funny faces at the girl.

A spoken prologue followed, recited by a dainty little girl in gingham, after which the curtains parted, revealing an unusually pretty garden scene by moonlight, with tall, majestic cypress trees outlined against the moon. An Irish gardener then sang of “Mother Machree,” receiving tremendous applause.

Back of the garden wall, which seemingly en circled the back of the stage, was a concealed elevator, which raised each girl to the center of the top of the wall, from which point she descended a marble staircase, while the orchestra played a number which interpreted her particular dress and general character. Before the first girl gradually appeared on the top of the wall, outlined against the moon, her figure casting a great shadow against a Maxfield Parrish blue background, the caroling of a bird was heard. The bird proved to be the first girl of the “Sassy Jane Revue,” who, then descending the staircase, whistled the chorus of Clare Kummer’s “The Blue Bird.”

From then on, each girl descended in turn, posing to show off her frock in a most appealing manner, while colored lights playing upon her constantly changed the color of the dainty garment.

As the last girl descended the others poured onto the stage, and all formed a picturesque group. Then the Irish gardener again appeared and sang as a closing number a most tuneful little melody, “They’re Like A Great Big Bouquet.”

The act, which lasted nineteen minutes, was acclaimed as one of the most artistic ever presented by Sid Grauman.
Kinema’s “Down On The Farm” Parade Breaks Theatre’s Attendance Record

Seldom have such favorable circumstances marked a picture’s premiere as those which resulted in the definite establishment of “Down On The Farm,” Mack Sennett’s feature-length United Artists production, as one of the “money pictures” of 1920.

Los Angeles, the home of pictures and picture people, the scene of the most modern and spectacular exploitation and presentation, may be considered the telling test. And at Sol Lesser’s Kinema theatre in that city the picture has broken attendance records every day of its, at this time, unfinished run.

Preliminaries were opened on Saturday. The fact that Los Angeles was and is Mack Sennett’s home town, where his achievements have been celebrated in the past, made easy the way to arrange for a parade. It began at Second and Hill streets at two o’clock Saturday afternoon and the objective was the baseball game at Washington Park. Both with the police department and the management of the Park, where the Vernons and the Los Angeles nine were to struggle, the exploiters found co-operative and ready agreement. The police “passed” the parade and the baseball magnates declared it “Mack Sennett Day.”

A procession, the like of which never before made its way through this or probably any other city, wound through the downtown streets and made for the ball park. Everything that moves and has its being on farm was in that cavalcade—everything except a mortgage. Aged vehicles in which old Dobbin might have been hitched thirty-five years ago were occupied by Sennett representatives garbed and made up to resemble the Sennett principals. A steed of mighty horsepower upheld a close imitation of Jimmy Finlayson, who plays the role of the village landlord in “Down on the Farm,” and caused spasms of laughter along the line of march. A stubborn mule whose intelligence is as keen as his bull, and continuing with the assurance that it was no bull that “Mack Sennett’s Five-Part Super-Comedy ‘Down on the Farm’ opens tomorrow at the Kinema Theatre.”

Peril-loving persons on the edge and tops of buildings along the line of march pretended to be motion picture cameramen and snapped imaginary objects aloft till sufficient attention from the street was centered on their hazardous activities, when great banners fell from rolls in their hands announcing the presentation of “Down on the Farm” at the Kinema on the following day. The comedians on the street put up impromptu comedy and crowned their way triumphantly to the great gates of Washington Park, passing through which they gave an improvised show before the multitudes in the ball park and more than justified the fifteen minutes given them to celebrate “Sennett Day” with appropriate farcical and hilarious ceremonies.

It was a great success, and the credit for the event is due Managing Director Jack Callicott of the Kinema theatre, whose efforts to prove his picture-playhouse worthy of a premier were only begun with the Saturday show. Experts on exploitation concede to Mr. Callicott credit for what is probably the most sensational and successful publicity stunt over “put over” in the city where such efforts are events of nearly every week.

The advantage of surrounding a distinctive picture with a setting appropriate and “atmospheric” was disclosed by Manager Callicott on Sunday at the Kinema theatre. Indeed, it was remarked by many “showmen” that such an elaborate “prologue” as that provided would overweight and overshadow most picture productions and thus, having the effect of a too elaborate frame, overwhelm the object framed—that the best would be the prelude. But Sennett's "Down on the Farm" justified its setting. The following:

There was Teddy "in person" and John Henry, Jr., the Sennett baby who after also to be seen shortly on the big screen in the midst of daffy adventures with his gallant friend and ally, Teddy. The latter, superbly unconscious of his celebrity, permitted the youngest to mauhl him, clamber over him and play with him.

To the strains of "The Village Orchestra," played by the Kinema's big orchestra, under the direction of Nicola Donatelli, the picture patron is ushered to a comfortable, commodious seat. Truly it is the "Intrins" of the village orchestra, for it is a version of the town band in the spasm of a first rehearsal. It may be discovered later by the per- spiring leader that there was a misunderstanding about which "piece" was to be played, but for the time it sounds more like the discordant echo—of a bad dream.

Follows then a Kinema Weekly. An organ solo in soft suggestion under the touch of Frank A. León brings back memories or conjures thoughts of other days—days of fine simplicity when most all the world was "down on the farm" and city jazz had not yet come into frenzied being. "When You and I Were Young, Maggie" is the song, and its horns, in the distance, float serenely from three voices. Charlie Murray, irrepresible comedian of the Sennett comedies and one of the princes of the house of Sennett is next represented on the screen by some of his inimitable "naive" full of wit and sharpened with the keen edge of a genial satire. "At the Sennett Studio Ball" sustains the suggestion of Sennett quality and is a song of lively gait and gay humor. "The Barn Yard Blues" comes next from the jazzeed ensemble of the big orchestra and after a Kinema Pictorial Review has achieved the advantages of contrast, there comes the "Prologue."

It was specially staged and devised by Manager Callieott and is a gem of humor called "Trials and Tribulations Around a Barnyard." The hero is a mail with a mind of its own and a dis- position not to be moved, though the heavens fall and the earth he dipped in the sun. The scene is an ensemble of everything that is expected in a farm- yard and some things not expected—hogs and cows, goats and dogs, hens and geese, and finally Teddy himself rumble through the meonte in which lively dancing of "hoe-down" type and ef- fective singing add to the effect, and all beautifullly illuminated and staged—a model set for a modern "Old Homestead," which is what that which comes next proves to be—an Old Homestead speeded up to 150 miles per hour. It is "Down on the Farm."

Let the boxoffice of the Kinema speak. That is the voice that carries ultimate conviction. Records are fre- quently broken—records covering a month of theatrical activity, or two months; records for this particular kind of attraction, but eliminating other and more popular kinds—in short, claims that records are broken are made with such frequency and established with such glib- ness that the mere boast of a record broken carries little weight unless it is known how inclusive the record may be.

The Kinema theatre has been built and occupied three years. It has had its exi- gent experiences—good weeks, bad weeks, great weeks, calamity weeks, triumphant weeks and weeks of defeat, just as come to all playhouses. But Sunday's receipts in dollars and cents were the largest ever taken in during any single day. This is true without exception, equivocation or reservation. And the amount of money that was received in excess of the biggest preceding day at the Kinema is ex- pressed in the hundreds of dollars. Just

A scrim drop, used in connection with elaborate lighting arrangements, gave unusual photographic effect to the Capitol theatre presentation of "The Heart of a Child."

Scrim Drop Gives Screen Effect To Interpretative Introduction

For so many good reasons that it seems almost unnecessary to go into them in detail, the scrim drop should be made a permanent fixture of every motion picture theatre stage. It is the long-sought device that intimately identifies the stage presentation feature with the motion picture—essentially simple, as are most long-sought solutions.

The idea is certainly not new. The application is. And in this case the application is the important thing. Florenz Ziegfeld was probably the first showman to use it effectively, his 1918 edition of the "Follies" depending upon it for a great measure of its scenic splendor.

In that instance, as in practically all straight stage instances, color diffusion was the end desired. The drop served the purpose well.

For picture purposes, particularly for the blending of prologue with feature, it comes more fully into its own.

At the Capitol theatre, New York, as accompanying illustrations show, the device was used to bridge the step between stage feature and the opening scenes of "The Heart of a Child," Nazimova's current Screen Classics production.

The first scenes of the play show the star as a child of London slums, a carefree youngster whose chief delight it is to dance to the music of the street hurdy-gurdy. A clever bit of photography gives the impression of a London fog, and after the first few scenes showing the child dancing a strong dramatic element is abruptly and effectively introduced.

In the Capitol presentation lights came up on a stage set to resemble as closely as possible the first scenes of the play. The photograph reproduced here-with attests the fidelity of the representation. Players dressed like those in the play, with a dancer taking Nazimova's place in the ensemble, closely imitated the picture action.

After a few moments of dancing, during which music was furnished by a hurdy-gurdy, a policeman came upon the scene but did not interrupt the festivities. Then the scrim drop was lowered, giving the impression of the London fog, lights being manipulated to further this effect, and by a careful gradation of shading the picture was permitted to strike upon the drop.

Naturally, the first scene was seen but vaguely. Within a few moments, however, the shadings had been so dexterously changed that the picture was under way upon the screen without the transition having been realized by the audience.

The hurdy-gurdy music, continuing through, completed the illusion. One instance, it illustrates the effectiveness with which this transition, which has puzzled showmen for so long, may be accomplished.

In this case the curtain is black. It has been found that black is preferable where color work is not anticipated. When colors are used a white curtain has been found to give better results.

The cost of such a drop is not prohibitive. With care in hanging and operation it may be maintained indefinitely.

It can be used with any presentation feature and any picture. It would not be altogether unwise to make it a permanent detail. Lighting has everything to do with its success. Properly handled, it can be made to serve as front drop and illusion simultaneously.

Attendants

Among the incongruities of modern civilization must be listed the adult male attired in blue and brass uniform who directs patrons to their seats in a great many of our modern theatres.

There is some excuse for the male attendant at the ticket-chopper. Feminine attendants should make up the remainder of this staff for so many good reasons that it seems waste of space to print them. Any exhibitor who takes a good look at a representative of each sex on duty will see most of them.

They Use Tie-Ups That Tell In Seattle

When "Everywoman" was shown at the Strand theatre, Seattle, Wash., the Chauncey Wright Restaurants Co. used seven twenty-four-sheet stands to introduce the butterhorn, a new confection.

The Eastern Outfitting Co., one of the leading ladies' wear stores, contributed its best window to the campaign.
A masked girl in clown costume paraded Minneapolis Streets in behalf of "The Crimson Gardenia," which was showing at the New Unique.

Masked Girl Feature
Good for any Picture

Despite the most conscientious efforts of producers generally to make pictures that lend themselves advantageously to exploitation, there will always be pictures that are "hard to put over." There are many excellent works that will and should be pictured that do not contain great exploitation possibilities. It is necessary to develop a set of general exploitation devices to take care of these.

The masked girl feature is one that impresses because of its adaptability. The accompanying illustration shows a girl who walked Minneapolis, Minn., streets advertising the engagement of "The Crimson Gardenia" at the New Unique theatre. A. E. Abelson, manager of the New Unique, used the idea with gratifying results.

The girl idea is always good. People look at pretty girls. People look at all girls to see if they are pretty. When they see a girl in an odd costume, they are all the more certain to look at her. And when they find that she is masked, their attention is enduring.

It is obvious that the sign which she carries is going to be read.

Synopses

In preparing synopses for program or newspaper use, the advertising exhibitor should keep in mind the importance of suspense as an aid to interest. To divulge the complete details of a story is to diminish greatly its power to hold an audience.

Incidentally, the drawing power of the production is seriously impaired by the synopsis that tells too much.

The question of just where to stop, just how much to tell and how much to leave untold, is not a serious one. The synopsis in EXHIBITORS HERALD reviews is complete, but can always be made to serve advertising purposes by the elimination of the last two or three sentences.

Criterion Gets Under Way With Riesenfeld's Best Presentation

The Criterion theatre, New York, newly converted to motion picture purposes, got under way auspiciously with what many who were present pronounced to be the best presentation feature ever staged by Hugo Riesenfeld, managing director, "Why Change Your Wife?" Cecil B. DeMille's newest Paramount Artcraft special production, was the attraction, exhibited.

For the occasion special scenery had been built, and a chorus of dancing girls appeared in support of Helen Shipman, vocalist, in singing "Why Change Your Wife?" an especially written number.

Fogany's stage settings have gained considerable attention in New York, but even these had to be retouched to build the body color up to the required brilliance. This exceptional strength of tone was made necessary by the unique manner in which Riesenfeld had determined to open the feature.

The performance began with the orchestra outlined in silhouette against a scrim drop completely covering the proscenium. The lighting arrangement was such that the figures appeared in black and white outline, giving the impression of the motion picture. The music could be heard, the players could be seen, but the details were blotted out—giving the desired cinematic atmosphere.

When the overture was finished, the soloists and chorus appeared and rendered a vocal number. The substance of the word matter was a warning to husbands similar to that conveyed by the picture.

Following this number, a dance scene appeared and gave a number intended to interpret the role portrayed by Bebe Daniels in the picture. The character is a striking one and those who were present maintain that the dancer was entirely successful.

Again the chorus appeared, this time the chorus having the burden of the song. By combination with dance, another warning was directed to husbands, verses dealing with vampires and bright lights being sung, and a solo dance following to set forth the more dignified character assigned to Gloria Swanson in the picture.

At last the picture was flashed on, the transition being accomplished almost imperceptibly by careful manipulation of lighting effects.

Thus did the Criterion begin its motion picture career, and if there is anything in beginnings, as experience teaches that there is, the theatre is destined to success.

The Criterion may properly be considered Hugo Riesenfeld's first independent enterprise, his first entirely original creation. As musical director and later managing director of the Rialto and Rivoli theatres, he found precedent established which necessarily influenced his work.

In the Criterion, he may properly be termed the creator.

The theatre was converted under his instructions—instructions given with his definite individual aims and ambitions in mind.

"The Virgin Of Stamboul" Given Oriental Presentation At Circle

With his usual disregard for expense and characteristic determination to gain his point, S. Barrett McCormick went right to the heart of the matter and gave "The Virgin of Stamboul," Priscilla Dean's Universal-Jewel production, a typical Circle theatre setting. The photograph reproduced herewith, showing the twenty-three people in the playlet at one of the high points in the presentation feature, gives an idea of the magnitude of the enterprise.

The showman who has employed professional talent in these days of salaried artists knows what a company of that strength represents on a weekly basis. The showman who has had scenery especially prepared in these days of union painters knows what a special setting as elaborate as that used at the Circle represents in box office sales.

McCormick knows these things also. But McCormick knows several other things of greater importance.

He knows, for instance, that the big theatre of today that is to be the big theatre of tomorrow must not be operated upon a "shoe string" basis. He knows that the management that does not give value for value is not a desirable business institution, and that undesirable business institutions are soon eliminated by the law of compensation.

The Circle is and has been since its opening the leading Indianapolis theatre. More than that, it is mentioned with the leading theatres of the United States, which is to say, of the world. Furthermore, no one has had the tenacity to state definitely that any of the select half dozen American theatres surpasses the Circle in directorial excellence.

The picture in question, an Oriental story lavishly produced, is what might be termed "meat" for the exhibitor who makes a specialty of presentation. Oriental music has power. If any doubt let them look over the publishers' lists of successes. The percentage of Oriental successes is high indeed.

Operatic Features Add To Strand's Following

The motion picture has been called "the amusement of the masses" long enough. It is, of course, but no one has advanced a satisfactory argument as to why it should not be the amusement of "the classes" also. It is that, and the sooner exhibitors generally are brought to realize that fact the more rapid will be the advance toward that high standard for which all interested in the industry are striving.

Edward L. Hyman, managing director of the Strand theatre, Brooklyn, has introduced a series of miniature operas which serve the very desirable purpose of attracting to the theatre the better class of patronage without loss of what is commonly termed "mass" clientele.

It is the picture, in all cases, that attracts. But when two good pictures are available to a given theatre-goer the choice frequently is based upon the supporting features which are provided. If these are of distinctive nature, individual and characteristic of the management of one of the theatres, it is not difficult to guess to which theatre the hypothetical theatre-goer will be drawn.

The introduction of operatic features in connection with motion pictures presentation is based upon sound logic. It attracts the lukewarm picture attendant, frequently making of him an enthusiast. It gives the enthusiast, already familiar and perhaps a little wearied with the regulation performance, a new angle and a new interest.

It is reported that the operatic features at the Strand have met with remarkable success. It will not be strange if the idea is widely adopted. It is worthy of the serious consideration of all exhibitors.

Adverse Transportation Facilities Overcome by Reelcraft Corporation

The delay in the shipment of films, advertising matter, etc., occasioned by the frequent railroad strikes, express embargoes, congested terminals and other adverse conditions has been overcome by Reelcraft Pictures Corporation. Each of the company’s production units is working overtime in order to provide the home office with several publications in advance. Advertising matter is being prepared on an advanced schedule to permit the shipping of the complete issue from print to paper so several weeks ahead of the publication date.

To Complete Several Films

The fifth series of publications in which Milburn Moranti is featured in two-reel comedies, will have several pictures completed before the delivery date is set. Issuing the Moranti comedies on a basis of one every two weeks and shipping prints and advertising matter several weeks in advance, will insure the exchanges ample time to give the pictures due publicity before publication and will eliminate the possibility of not receiving the print in time for first-run bookings.

The date set for the first Billy Franey publication of one-reel comedies has been fixed for May 17, and prints and advertising matter sent to the Reelcraft and Allied Independent Exchanges. Advertising matter also will be shipped several weeks in advance. Prints for foreign countries will be shipped in advance of scheduled date.

Press Gets Stories

The publicity department has completed the nation-wide circulation of over 2,000 newspapers in cities and towns all over the United States, with a news letter containing stories of Reelcraft stars and pictures.

Chadwick Films Offers Briggs’ Comedies Series

The Chadwick Pictures Corporation, with offices at 130 West Forty-sixth street, New York City, has been incorporated, with I. E. Chadwick as president and Jacques Kopstein as vice-president and general manager.

The purpose of this new organization is to sell all type of merit film on the open market. The product which will be handled will include feature attractions and short subjects from one-reel length up. Among the first subjects which have been acquired by the Chadwick Pictures Corporation are a series of new Briggs comedies.

Donald Crisp Will Direct Monroe Salisbury Players

Donald Crisp, who is best known perhaps for having directed "Ramona" and "The Eyes of the World," has been engaged as the director for the Monroe Salisbury Players, according to an announcement from the West Coast.

The Monroe Salisbury Players is a new producing company starring Monroe Salisbury. "The Barbarian" is the title of the first story to be adopted. It is from the pen of Theodore Solomons, a well-known author and magazine writer, and is said to have cost $10,000. Jane Novak and Barney Sherry have been signed to support Salisbury.

Merit Opens Branch Exchange In Indiana Milwaukee Office Planned to Meet Increasing Demand for Film

Responding to the requests of Indiana and Wisconsin exhibitors served by his company, D. Padorno, general manager of the Merit Film Exchange of Chicago, has opened a branch office at 122 West New York street, Indianapolis, and will soon have in operation a branch in the Toy building, Milwaukee.

The Indianapolis office is under the management of W. W. Everett, formerly connected with Vitagraph and Universal. He is assisted by B. E. Padorno, son of the general manager. Ed Mordue, formerly with Pathé, has been made sales manager of the Chicago office. Mr. Friedlob, recently with Universal, is at present covering the Illinois territory.

"The Independent exchange is the only means the independent exhibitor has to ward off the growing danger of producer controlled opposition houses," declares Mr. Padorno, "and in order to combat this evil the independent exhibitor should support the independent exchange wherever productions of real merit are offered. Both depend absolutely upon one another for their existence and a greater co-operation than now prevails should be effected. To this end we will do all in our power toward placing upon the independent market for independent showmen such box office attractions as we are able to secure, or failing in this to produce ourselves. As long as there are independent exchanges of a high grade order the independent exhibitor need not fear for his independence."

PROSPERITY TODAY UNEQUALLED

Selig Man Declares That Exhibitor Feeling Against Producer Who Is Acquiring Playhouses Is Becoming Very Wide-Spread Over the Country

Exhibitors are enjoying prosperity that has never been equalled and the motion picture industry is at the threshold of a most progressive and prosperous era, according to Charles Rogers, director of sales of Select and Republic, who is back in New York from a trip throughout the country. Mr. Rogers asserts that the exceptionally prosperous state of affairs surprised him a little.

The sales director made a complete tour of the exchanges of Select and Republic, and reports that the various branches have tackled their work with new vigor as a result of the successful convention held in New York recently.

Demand Big Productions

Big productions are in popular demand in all sections, according to Mr. Rogers' observations. The public at the present time appears to be in a receptive mood for the biggest productions that can be secured from the producers, and owing to this demand it is reported that some exhibitors, to satisfy their public, are offering exceptionally large amounts for pictures that really are big and worth while.

These productions are not merely "played," it is said, but are presented following a proper exploitation campaign that impresses the subject thoroughly upon the minds of the people and intimates the quality of production they will see.

"The underlying feeling against producers who aspire to exhibit," said Mr. Rogers, "is surging up to the surface at all points throughout the country. This wave of feeling against the producer-exhibitor is fast sweeping the land and independent exhibitors are taking up the battle in earnest to protect their interest and the interests of the public. It is thoroughly realized that with the producers controlling the theatres, quality production will cease to be a factor in the making of profits."

A united endorsement of independent exhibitors toward independent producers has been made, Mr. Rogers contends. He declares that Lewis J. Selznick, as an independent producer with no desire to encroach upon the exhibitors, merits a world of favorable comment. This is solidly proven in the branches where the volume of business and results has been far greater than expectations of every one.

Successful Meetings

The salesmen's meetings which were held in the various branches were very successful, according to Mr. Rogers. In addition to obtaining a clearer picture of all conditions of the day, the men were imbued with enough enthusiasm to carry them well on their way for the coming year.

In connection with Republic, it is announced that at the recent Chicago convention, several producers expressed themselves as desiring to distribute their products through Republic Distribution Corporation on account of the gratifying results that have been obtained since this organization came under the Selznick banner.

"The Whirlwind," the first serial to be handled by Republic, is said to have done much to boost Republic in the estimation of exhibitors. This picture, featuring Charles Hupchison, is said to have proven of the highest quality, and all exhibitors who have seen it have declared that they could have expected nothing better.

"All signs," according to Mr. Rogers, "point toward a successful year the motion picture industry has ever had. We have a better understanding of what the public wants than ever before, and this, together with the fact that our relations with exhibitors are at the most enjoyable sort, gives us added incentive to do still better."

Madlaine Traverse to Star for Open Market

Madlaine Traverse, well-known star of motion pictures, who terminated her contract with Fox Film Corporation upon the completion of "The Spirit of Good," will star in features to be published on a state rights basis. The plans for the making of Madlaine Traverse's productions have been completed, and work will start on the first feature to be released by the new organization in August.

"Whiff of Heliotrope" Being Titled by Baker

Director George D. Baker, who has been working for the past several weeks on Richard Washburn Childs' "A Whiff of Heliotrope," for Cosmopolitan Productions, is now cutting and titling the picture. No publication date has been set.

Unity Will Publish Twelve Tex Pictures And "Hawk's Trail"

Unity Photoplays Corporation, of which Frank Zambreno is president and Frank Flaherty is sales manager, is preparing to launch an extensive exploitation campaign to introduce to the exhibitors of Illinois and Indiana a newly acquired serial and a series of twelve new features.

The serial is Louis W. Burston's "Hawk's Trail," which is heralded as one of the biggest box office attractions placed on the independent market this spring. It will be published by Unity May 23, following the last episode of "Lightning Bryce." Arrow's record-breaking chapter play.

The newly acquired features are the Tex mystery pictures, produced by Arrow. Advance showings of several of the series was held in Chicago recently and a flood of inquiries as to publication dates resulted. The first will probably be issued early in June.

"The Window Opposite," featuring Leah Baird, Unity's current offering, is piling up a looking record for the exchange. Among the houses showing the feature are the Band Box, Gold, Dearborn, Avon, Crown, Lake-side, Strand, Armitage, Madison Square and Kedzie.

"TheARIABLE" to be offered will be "Frivulous Wives," an all-star production.

Selig to Produce for Canyon Pictures Firm

Jack Weinberg, president of Canyon Pictures Corporation, has contracted with Col. William X. Zambreno whereby the latter will make five-part Franklyn Farnum pictures for the Canyon company. The deal involves $250,000, it is announced. Production will begin on May 24.

Mr. Farnum is working out the details of his first production, and has acquired a well-known story, title of which will be announced later. Each story will present this popular star in his western parts, but the locales will vary in the East and West.
Canadian Exhibitors Sign With Hodkinson Exchange Contracts to Issue All Current and Forthcoming Pictures

A deal has been closed whereby the Canadian Exhibitors’ Exchange will distribute in Canada all of Hodkinson’s current and forthcoming productions.

Negotiations at the Hodkinson home office for the Exhibitors’ Exchange were conducted by J. C. Brady, president of the Canadian organization, and H. Alexander, one of its directors. The Exchange, which numbers among its 160 members many of the best known showmen in Canada, has branches in all the principal cities in the Dominion. William E. Allan, general manager of the exchange, will open offices in Winnipeg and St. John.

Date of Distribution

Though the Hodkinson output will be published formally in the fall, some of the big specials including “Sex” and “The Lone Wolf’s Daughter,” will be ready for Canadian exhibitors within a few weeks.

Among the pictures to be distributed by the Canadian Exchange are the product of the following Hodkinson producing units: J. Parker Read, Jr., Robert Brunton Productions, Joseph Levering, Deitrich-Beck Productions, William Parsons, Louis Tracy Productions, Irvin Willat Productions and the Dial Film Company.

Pictures to Be Published

Other productions for Canadian distribution are Leah Baird in “As a Man Thinks,” “The Volcano,” “The Capitol” and “Synthia-of-the-Minute”; Doris Kenyon in “The Bandbox” and “The Harvest Moon”; J. Warren Kerrigan in “A White Man’s Chance,” “The Joyous Lie,” “Live Sparks,” “$30,000,” “The Dream Cheater,” “No. 99,” “The Green Flame” and “The House of Whispers”; Mitchell Lewis in “King Spruce”; Billie Rhodes in “The Blue Bonnet”; Lillian Walker in “The Embarrassment of Riches” and “The Love Hunger”; “His Temporary Wife” and a number of others.

Metro Signs Olive Tell To Be Star in “Clothes”

Metro has engaged Olive Tell to play the leading role in “Clothes,” an all-star picturization of the Avery Hopwood-Channing Pollock drama, which is to be the next production made at Metro’s New York studios, No. 3 West Sixty-first street, under the personal supervision of Maxwell Karger, Director General.

Miss Tell is already busy preparing an elaborate wardrobe for the picture, which Metro expects to be the most memorable fashion display ever put on the screen. All of the latest costume designs are to be represented and for this reason Metro production officials are in consultation with a number of the most advanced artists in designing women’s clothes and millinery.

Metro Buys Wilkie Tale

“Bonds of Fate,” a novel by John E. Wilkie, for sixteen years Chief of the United States Secret Service, has been purchased by Metro for production on the screen.

Here’s a Pathe “Find”

Lucille Lennox, who has just signed a long term contract with Pathe to play in serials, she is now playing in “Velvet Fingers,” a serial being produced by George B. Seitz, in which he is starring for Pathe.

Universal Comedies to Carry Only One Brand

Beginning early next fall, Universal will publish only one brand of two reel comedies. They will all be called Century Comedies, and the Century bathing girls will figure largely in most of them.

Heretofore, Universal has released several brands of comedies, including some straight Universal comedies, and the Century and Rainbow brands, produced by the L-Ko company. The Rainbow Comedy now in production, called “An Awful Skate,” featuring Zip Monberg and Edna Gregory, will be the last Rainbow to be made. Including this one, there still are four Rainbow comedies yet to be released.

Joins Universal Staff

Bob Horner, formerly continuity writer for several eastern companies, has joined Universal. He will write the scenario for “The Boss of Blue River.”
Kosmik Films Official Formerly Was U. S. Secret Service Agent

Men connected with the motion picture industry have come from practically every walk of life. Taking, for example the treasurer of Kosmik Films, Inc., L. C. “Jack” Wheeler. He formerly was a United States secret service agent, and during the Roosevelt and Taft administrations he was stationed at the White House. He accompanied both presidents on their trans-continental tours.

Resigning from the secret service, Wheeler became editor of the old Selig News Weekly and later the general manager of the Selig Company. When Uncle Sam declared war on Germany, he resigned to enter the service and represented the department of public information, division of films, in Europe. At the war’s conclusion, he became associated with George Kleine and the Kosmik Films, Inc., was organized.

Future Productions

“We expect to build new studios and enter very extensively into the production of films,” said Mr. Wheeler. “Immediately following the completion of ‘The Hope Diamond Mystery’ featuring Grace Darmond, directed by Stuart Paton, we expect to start work on another serial and feature dramas. We are negotiating for the services of additional stars and capable directors, and have purchased a number of high class stories from the pens of well known authors.

“Mr. George Kleine, president of our company, is too widely known to the public to need mentioning here. But it behooves me to add my tribute to those of others. One of the earliest of film producers, he saw the value of high class feature plays and was responsible for presentation in America of such stupendous plays as ‘Quo Vadis,’ ‘Caribis,’ etc. It also will be recalled that he successfully guided the destinies of the old General Film Company for a long time.

Improved Serials

‘Mr. Kleine believed with me that the time had come when the serial film play must be placed on a higher plane considering cast, direction, photography and sets. Many serials, as every exhibitor knows, has the usual story, a popular star and very cheap sets. This story usually costs about $25,000 to make.

‘We are changing all of that. ‘The Hope Diamond Mystery,’ a fifteen-part serial, was written by May Yohe, formerly Lady Francis Hope, with Charles Godward, John H. Clymer and Harvey Gates preparing the scenarios. Stuart Paton, whose name is a strong serial asset, is directing and we have a strictly all-star cast supporting Grace Darmond and George Chesebro.

The players include Harry Carter, Carmen Phillips, Boris Karloff, William Marion, Wm. Buckley, Captain C. Clayton and others. Our photography, directed by William Thornley, is of the highest class with beautiful lighting effects. Samuel De Val, for years with Griffith, is our technical director.

“We have spent $100,000 up to date for sets and they range from the interior of a millionaire’s home to a Buddhist temple in India in the Sixteenth Century."

Edith Hallor Has Lead

In Cosmopolitan Film

Edith Hallor has been signed to play the leading female role in Winston Churchill’s ‘The Inside of the Cup,’ which Albert Capellani is making for Cosmopolitan Productions. Miss Hallor will play the role of Allison Parr.

Loew Adds Several Theatres to Circuit

New Houses Will Be Erected In Boston, Kansas City And St. Louis

Between fifteen and twenty theatres have been added to the Loew circuit within the last few weeks, including six in New York and nine at Cleveland. In Loew’s Southern and Southwestern chain four playhouses at Alexandria and Shreveport, La., and Vicksburg and Meridian, Miss., have been opened within the last two weeks.

The new theatre to be erected at St. Louis at an expenditure of $1,000,000 will be called the Loew’s State theatre. It will have a seating capacity of 4,000. It will be located at Eighth street and Washington avenue.

For Schiller, general representative of Loew interests, announces that $1,200,000 are assured for the erection of a theatre palace in Kansas City. The site of the theatre has not been made public. Excavation work has started in Boston for the new Loew house there. This theatre, which will stand at Massachusetts and Norway street, will seat approximately 4,000 persons.

Loew interests now control between 300 and 400 theatres throughout the country.

Harry Weiss Buys Two More Pictures

Superior Screen Service to Have ‘Neglected Wives’ and ‘Sacred Flame’

Harry Weiss of the Superior Screen Service exchange, Chicago, has closed negotiations for rights to two more productions, publication dates of which will be announced within a few days.

From Wistaria Productions, Inc., he has obtained Illinois and Indiana rights to ‘Neglected Wives,’ featuring Anna Luther, Clare Whitney and Charles Girard.

Agnew Egan Cobb, representing the Schenley Film Company, has purchased rights to ‘Sacred Flame,’ starring Emily Stevens.

Mr. Weiss has arranged a series of downtown runs for his first attractions, “The Confession” opened at the Play House for an indefinite run May 2. “The Sport of Kings” opened at the Band Box theatre for one week May 2 and will be moved to the Star theatre, Madison street, May 9. “The Flame,” starring James H. Kedle, will open at the Band Box May 16 and will be moved May 23 to the Star.

Wheeler Oakman to Star

Undersol Lesser Banner

Wheeler Oakman, who supported Annette Kellerman in the pictures on which she has just completed for Sol Lesser, will become a star in his own right under the Lesser banner.

While a new studio is being built to house all the Lesser productions, and while a story is being obtained for Oakman, he will be loaned for two pictures to other well-known producing companies.

Selznick Announces One Special and Four Star Pictures for Publication

Faversham’s Initial Production for Company Was Issued On May 3—“The Valley of Doubt” Will Go To Exhibitors On May 24

Four star productions and one special are being published this month and the first of June by Selznick Pictures Corporation.

Coming publications are “Whispers,” featuring Elaine Hammerstein, May 17; “The Valley of Doubt,” a special May 24, and “The Desperate Hero,” with Owen Moore, June 7.

William Faversham portrays a dual role in “The Man Who Lost Himself,” one character being Victor Jones, an American commercial agent stranded in London, and the other, the English reporter, known as one of the worst bounders in London.

Supporting Cast

Supporting the star are Hedda Hopper, who plays the leading feminine role as Teressa, Countess of Rochester, Violet Reed, Radcliffe Steele, Claude Payton, Madeline Brundage, Emily Fitzroy and Downing Clarke. The picture is an adaptation of a story by H. Devere Stac- pen, and is produced by Robert Northey.

Olive Thomas, in “The Flapper,” is credited with giving a capital performance as “Ginger King,” a 16-year-old boating school inmate, who aspires to a knowledge of the world and its wickedness, in a very youthful manner.

Included in the cast supporting Miss Thomas are Arthur Houseman, the well-known heavy, Warren Cook, Louise Lindroth, Charles Craig, Theodore Westman, Jr., William P. Dunne, Wil- liam Johnston, Maury Stewart, Ray- mond Hewitt and fourteen school girl chorus. “The Flapper” is from the pen of Frances Marion. Alan Crosland di- rected.

Star Very Delightful

Elaine Hammerstein in “Whispers,” scenes for which were taken in and around the capitol. Washington, D. C., and in and about the Pennsylvania station.

Miss Hammerstein is said to give an unusually delightful performance in the role of “Daphne Moore,” a woman of all her life with an aunt, a social pretender, always “hard up” and always hoping to bring about a rich marriage for her niece who is, really, means to an end. Of course, the aunt has a youth with much money and no brains, who is the candidate for Daphne’s hand.

And through this middle of her aunt’s, Daphne becomes involved in a divorce scandal. Pat, a reporter, is assigned to the case. How Daphne, with the aid of Pat, re-asserts herself is said to make a wonderful production.

In the cast supporting Miss Hammerstein are Matt Moore, who plays the part of the reporter, Phillips Teed, Charles Girard, Arthur M. Lawrence, Frederick Loewe, Warren Cook, Temolar Sax Maud Hill, Dorothy Worth, George Stevens and Edward Hudson, a millionaire’s son of Switzerland.

“Whispers” was written by Marcus V. Connolly and directed by William F. S. Earle.

The special production, “The Valley of Doubt,” is announced as a virile story of the far north from the pen of the famous playwright, Willard Mack.

Director Burton George, it is stated, has injected into production some unusual novelties in the way of outdoor shots and northern interiors. The story revolves around a dissolute youth, his devoted sister, Marion, Juile Bonnivet, a young French Canadian, and Jack Macey, manager of a lumber camp.

The leading masculine role is played by Thurston Hall, ably supported by Arline Pretty, Anna Lehr, Jack Costello, Bobby Agnew, John Ardizzone and other well-known screen players.

Owen Moore in “The Desperate Hero” is said to portray the role of a young newspaper man who tries to maintain a certain amount of “front” in order to get a better price for his own inherit- ance, an oil lease.

In his effort to get away from a tailor who threatens to bring suit for his bill, Owen Moore runs into all sorts of trouble and finally bumps into Joe Plant, who married one of his former sweethearts. The situa- tions which arise from a series of mis- understandings how he turns the tables, sells his oil lease and wins the girl, after what seems to be a hopeless case, is said to form the nucleus of a very clever comedy-drama for Mr. Moore.

The direction of the unusual set for “The Desperate Hero” is reported as having necessitated the construction of a whole new city. In the earlier hundred extras were used. Sup- porting Mr. Moore are Gloria Hope, who plays the leading feminine role; Nell Craig, Henry Miller, June King, Charles Arling and other prominent screen players.

“The Desperate Hero,” written by Edgar Franklin, was adapted for the screen by Zelda Crosby. Wesley Ruggles directed.

Famous Players-Lasky Organizes Production Unit In Bombay, India

Adolph Zukor, president of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, announced, in conjunction with a syndicate of British and Indian bankers, Famous Players-Lasky Corporation soon will begin production of motion pictures in Bombay, India, for distribution throughout the Indian Empire and other countries of the Far East. The name of the newest subsidiary is the Indian Empire Famous Players-Lasky Film Company, Ltd., and it has a paid-in capital of $3,000,000.

Arrangements are being made for the erection of a large studio and laboratory in Bombay, where the most approved American methods of picture production will be introduced by American production executives. It is indicated that in the near future the Indian studios, under the general supervision of Mr. Robert L. Lasky, vice-president of Famous Players, will be turning out Paramount Artcraft pictures on the same scale that prevails in this country.

The new studio in Bombay will be started by Frank Meyer and Tarking- ton Baker, who recently formed his own producing organization. Mr. Baker, it is understood, will remain in India as general Indian representative of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, with complete charge of the production and distribution activities.

Industrial Companies Use Power’s Machines

The Power’s projection machine was used by the National Marine Exposi- tion held in New York to promote in- terest in the navy and merchant marine.

The Winchester Arms Company, ac- cording to the New York office of Nich- olas Power Company, uses the Power’s projectors to show customers who are contemplating hunting trips just the kind of country they are going into and what their equipment will need. This is an indication, it is pointed out, of the progress being made by industrial concerns in adapting motion pictures to their businesses.

Terhune’s “The Fighter” Purchased by Selznick

“The Fighter,” said to be an unusual story, has been purchased by Myron Selznick from Albert Payson Terhune. The story originally appeared in one of the leading magazines, and is said to have created widespread attention, due to its unusual trend of character- ization. Myron Selznick’s assistant Director Robert Ellis to guide “The Fighter” to the screen. He will produce the story at the Selznick Fort Lee studio.
HOLMAN DAY'S fascinating narrative of the Maine forests makes an ideal screen vehicle for the virile Mr. Mitchell. It is his kind of a story and as presented by W. W. Hodkinson in picture form is said to contain plenty of action as well as picturesque backgrounds. Mignon Anderson is the girl, while Melbourne MacDowell and James O'Neil are also in the cast.
Volplaning Around N'Yawk

With J. B.

It was recently announced that George L. Sargent, who just completed his first Vitagraph picture starring Alice Joyce, was to begin a second at once, for which arrangements have been made. Meanwhile it would seem, according to changes which have been brought about, Mr. Sargent will direct Corinne Griffith in a Vitagraph production. Mr. Sargent, who is a member of the coast lodge of M. P. D. A., is beginning to be well known for his work in the east as well as in California.

These days find Del Henderson, who admits he is the "biggest director" in the M. P. D. A. according to all weights and measures, is a busy little fellow preparing to shoot scenes for his next picture for William Fox.

After two months in Florida following a serious illness, Van Dyke Brooke, pioneer actor and director, has returned to New York. He attended lodge at M. P. D. A. headquarters and reported feeling decidedly improved and assured everybody that he would be among the "working classes" very soon.

When James Vincent, president of the M. P. D. A., takes a company on location he doesn't miss a spot where the sun shines brightest. He has recently returned after having taken shots in St. Augustine, Fla. and adjoining towns, as well as Savannah, Ga. He arrived in New York in time to preside at the regular semi-monthly meeting of the M. P. D. A. May 4.

Charles Giblyn, with a company of forty players, left May 3 for Pineville, Ky. for mountain locations for the next Fox production starring Pearl White, "Pagan of the Hills," a Charles Neville Buck story. While Miss White had not yet landed in America from Paris, when the company left, she is expected within a few days and will follow immediately. This is the second picture Mr. Giblyn has made with the famous star in the leading feminine role.

The May 4th meeting of the M. P. D. A. was made most unusual by the initiation of a pioneer director, Harry MacRae Webster, who spent many years in the industry as director general of Essanay. A large attendance gathered to welcome the new member, now engaged in preliminary work on the Captain Stoll picture "Determination," photographing of which will begin early in July.

A new Vitagraph picture is already under way, in which Roman Gordon will appear for the second time with the Vitagraph star, Alice Joyce, being loaned again by Commodore J. Stuart Blackton, who holds Mr. Gordon under contract until July. The termination of his contract with Mr. Blackton, Mr. Gordon will become the star of the Robert Gordon Productions Company.

At the next regular meeting of the Motion Picture Directors' Association on May 18, the directors will be hosts to the fair members of their families, feminine stars, or lady friends, each member being obliged to appear with at least one lady and not more than three. The meeting will be called at eight-thirty. Afterward the ladies will be escorted by the "guards" to the secret chambers and given a bit of entertainment which is to be held as a surprise. The exclusive little affair promises to be most enjoyable and the members are showing an unusual amount of interest in assuring the Committee that they will be present at the next meeting.

Maurie Meyers of the Sol Lesser Enterprises expects to take lessons in the aquatic arts this summer from Annette Kellerman. Maurie always was a "cut up," so we imagine he will soon learn to do the "jack knife."

Peter Hendexter of La Toppa Cina Company, Panama City, is in New York. Mr. Hendexter expects to purchase projecting machines and accessories while in the city.

The last issue of the A. M. P. A. Bulletin was an all-trade paper number, edited by Pete Smith. Pete made a record even if Charlie Burrell didn't think so.

Vivian Moses, manager of the Guy Empre Pictures Corporation, is in the midst of the season's favorite pastime moving Vivian has the place to put the furniture but no one to do the putting.

Joe Sameh of the Forward Film Distributors, Inc., expects to take a jaunt down to Cuba very soon in the interests of his company. While there don't forget to think of us, Joe.

Landy and Turnbull
Are Van Loan Agents

H. H. Van Loan, scenario writer, has signed an agreement authorizing Landy and Turnbull, with offices in the Selwyn Theatre building, to act as his "agents and representatives in the Eastern part of the United States while he, himself, will handle his business on the West coast." The contract gives to the firm "the right to handle any business between H. H., Van Loan and motion picture producers, relating to the disposing of his stories for the screen."

Some of the producers who have closed contracts with Van Loan include Hope Hampton Productions, Inc., which has bought an Hawaiian story for Miss Hampton, and Selznick Picture Corporation, which has closed deals for several stories written especially for its various stars.

"Wee-gee, Tell Me What I Want to Know"

Apparently the ouija board craze has hit the Marshall Neilan outfit with a bang. Here's the director himself deeply engrossed with an incoming message. Wesley Barry, however, finds it hard to keep his mind on the board. He's probably thinking of that ol' swimming hole 'er something while "Bull" Montana sings "I hear you calling me," but who she is he doesn't say.
THE practical abolition of the routine publication date, whatever else its effect, has already resulted in improved production. Unless there be more evil effects than have been brought to attention at this time, the new policy should be preserved for that reason.

Producers laboring with one eye upon the calendar, knowing that the finished print must be in the home office upon a certain day in order that bookings based upon general office calculations might be filled, were all too frequently forced to take short cuts involving eliminations that seriously lowered the quality of their products.

Today, in the majority of instances, studio work is well advanced before anything is said regarding the date upon which the picture will be available at exchanges. As a result the director is at liberty to take advantage of every opportunity that presents itself to improve upon the original plan of production.

The sole complaint that has been heard comes from exhibitors and is to the effect that the carefully made production costs more. There may be foundation for the claim—but it cannot be legitimately classified as a complaint.

Better pictures are worth more money. They make more money for the exhibitor.

"ATONEMENT" (Pioneer) features the popular Conway Tearle in a cleverly picturized version of Tolstoi’s "The Corpse." The play is heavily dramatic characteristic of the author, but a dream ending comes as a complete surprise and leaves better than the usual impression. The star’s name should prove a valuable factor from the box office standpoint.

"RIDERS OF THE DAWN" (Hodkinson) is a melodramatic picturization of the Northwest from Zane Gray’s novel, "The Desert of Wheat." Action is very tense at all times. Ray Stewart is excellent in the leading role and has been given very competent support. The production has much in the way of box office value.

"HUSBANDS AND WIVES" (Gaumont) presents winsome Vivian Martin in a story of the South. It is an entertaining picture in plot, acting and scenery. Hugh Thompson plays opposite the star and with the remainder of the cast makes a picture that should satisfy the majority of audiences.

"SHERIFF" (Pathé) proves a fit “follow up” for "Other Men’s Shoes." Edgar Lewis’ last previous success. The play has a strong human interest appeal, as is characteristic of the Lewis product, and is well calculated to meet with popular favor. Pat O’Malley, in the title role, features a well-balanced cast.

"THE DANCIN’ FOOL." (Paramount Artcraft) is Wallace Reid’s latest starring vehicle. It is a Saturday Evening Post story, and like "The Lottery Man," offers the genial "Wallie" splendid opportunities of which he takes full advantage. Bebe Daniels, Raymond Hatton, Tully Marshall, Lillian Leighton, Willis Marks, Ernest Joy and a score of other well-known Paramount players appear in the piece.

"THE GIRL IN ROOM 29" (Universal) has Frank Mayo in the leading role. Audiences may resent being tricked upon seeing this five-part drama. It is the old story of the "planted" actors who apparently put up a desperate fight to kidnap a girl, the girl being eventually rescued by the hero. In this case it was all done to get the hero to write a play. Plenty of action and well directed.

"THE WOMAN GOD SENT" (Select) is a special feature with Zena Keefe in the principal role, that of a little factory girl who secures the passage of a child labor law against considerable odds. The story, which was adapted from Sophie Irene Loeb’s book, is a modern Jean of Arc tale, and the wistful and young Miss Keefe wins the complete sympathy of her spectators.

"THE MIRACLE OF MONEY" (Pathe) is the handiwork of Hobart Henley and another example of what can be achieved by departing from the beaten paths in picture making. It is the story of two old maids who go to New York to seek the enjoyments of youth that they have missed, a mixture of comedy and pathos that should give universal satisfaction.

"THE SEA WOLF" (Paramount Artcraft) is a very well made second version of Jack London’s story. Noah Berry in the role of "Wolf" Larsem displays unusual talents and gives a good account of himself. It is his best screen work so far. Mabel Julian Scott, Tom Forman, Walter Long, Raymond Hatton and a typical Paramount cast are in support.

"SIMPLE SOULS" (Pathe) differs radically from other recent productions in which Blanche Sweet has been starred and will be considered by many her best work. It is a light comedy-drama with an English setting, in which the romance of a shop girl and a member of the nobility is pleasantly set forth. It is in six parts and merits the extra footage.

"THE HAWK’S TRAIL" (Barston Films, Inc.) contains the elements that history has established as requisite to the successful crook-detective melodrama, plus the action that is all-important to the serial form of entertainment. King Baggot is at his best in the leading role and ably assisted by Grace Darmond. Rhea Mitchell’s name may also be used to advantage in advertising.
Blanche Sweet in SIMPLE SOULS
Six-part comedy-drama; Pathe.
Directed by Robert Thornby.
Published May 23.

OPINION: Blanche Sweet has never been given a more interesting and lovable screen character to interpret than that of Molly Shine, the pretty little English dreamer who is the central figure in Jesse D. Hampton's production of "Simple Souls."

Differing radically from Miss Sweet's other recent pictures, it serves to emphasize her versatility. Molly Shine is a romantic shop girl with a passion for books who marries a duke and holds his affections despite the determined objections of his family and friends. The duke is an absent-minded young man with a fondness for biology.

Add to these two characters a tongue-wagging mother and henpecked father for Molly, and an aristocratic sister of the duke's who is determined to protect him against the "adventures," and it is easy to picture the series of mirth-provoking situations which develop in rapid succession.

In staging the production, Jesse D. Hampton has provided cast, settings and atmosphere in keeping with the previous Sweet starring vehicles. Charles Meredith as the duke, Kate Lester as Lady Octavia, Herbert Standing as Peter Crane, Mayme Kelso as Mrs. Shine and Herbert Grimwood as Peter Shine take the leading supporting roles.

SYNOPSIS: Molly Shine, a shop girl with a fondness for booking and day-dreaming, accidentally meets the Duke of Wyningham, an absent-minded biologist. The duke generously insists on mailing her two pounds each week with which to purchase books and she innocently accepts the money. Her parents misunderstand, laugh at her explanations, and demand justice from the duke. He surprises everyone by marrying Molly. The duke's sister immediately tries to break up the match, but her persecution of the girl brings realization to the duke that he is truly in love with his wife.

Edgar Lewis'
SHERRY
Seven-part drama; Pathe.
Directed by Edgar Lewis.
Published May 30.

OPINION: The inscription, "Edgar Lewis production," has always been a guarantee of high-class entertainment, but the first two pictures of his new series for Pathe—first "Other Men's Shoes" and now "Sherry"—gives an added significance to it.

"Sherry" is a George Barr McCutcheon story. It is the recital of how Sheridan Redpath, a likeable young Irishman, who suddenly finds that he is referred to as the "town drunkard," quits drink and in reforming himself wins a bride and a partnership in a lucrative real estate business.

There is mystery, romance and action throughout. As usual, the producer has shown exceptional judgment in selecting his cast and handling it.

Pat O'Malley, who is rapidly making a name for himself on the screen, is well fitted for the title role. Lillian Hall, Maggie Fisher, Alfred Fisher, Gertrude Norman, Harry Springer and Richard Cummings, chosen for the other important characters, play their parts faithfully and consistently.

The strength of the production, however, lies in the Lewis touch—the quixot bits of humor, the human appeal and that indefinable something which critics from time to time attempt to explain—to analyze and cannot.

SYNOPSIS: Sheridan Redpath, happily lucky young Irishman, suddenly realizes that the people of Farragut regard him as the "town drunkard." He resolves to stop drinking and make good. When he talks Morna O'Brien out of running away from her grandmother, Mrs. Compton, he makes two friends. When he later goes to work for Andrew Gilman, the town miser, repairing his walk, he makes a third. Gilman hires him to become a bodyguard. Redpath prevents the robbery of the Compton home and captures two burglars. One proves to be Gilman's stepson, whose mother has protected him for years. The two break jail. Redpath captures one after a hard fight. The second, Gilman's stepson, hides at the Gilman home, but is captured by Redpath when he attempts to escape at night. His heroism wins him the love of Morna O'Brien and results in Gilman inviting him into partnership.

Wallace Reid in
THE DANCIN' FOOL
Five-part comedy; Paramount Artcraft.
Directed by Sam Wood.
Published May 23.

OPINION: Exhibitors who have made money on previous Wallace Reid pictures, such as "The Lottery Man" and "Excuse My Dust," ought to "cash in" on "The Dancin' Fool" without any trouble.

It is a vehicle well suited to the genial "Wallie" and by many will be considered his best work to date. It is a Saturday Evening Post story, written by Henry Payson Dowst, and much of the dialogue is borrowed from the original. Clara G. Kennedy, who adapted "Double Speed" for Mr. Reid, wrote the scenario for "The Dancin' Fool."

As the breezy six-dollar-a-week office boy in his uncle's jug establishment, Reid gives the piece a charlesray touch that is delightful.

Bebe Daniels, as "Jennie Budd," a cabaret entertainer, is a splendid foil for Reid, and the cabaret scenes are carefully and lavishly presented. Raymond Hatton gives one of his inimitable characterizations in the role of the crabbed uncle and Lilian Leighton is particularly pleasing as "Ma" Budd.

"The Dancin' Fool" affords the live exhibitor many opportunities for unusual exploitation stunts. A lobby to represent "The Garden of Roses," one of the features of the picture, would serve as a novelty, while window tie-ups with musical instrument shops and sheet music stores present themselves on every side. It is full of jazz music, too, as "Yes' Tlab (Wallace Reid) is a dancer's fool whenever an orchestra strikes up, and this gives the orchestra leader his opportunity to help put the picture over.

SYNOPSIS: Sylvester Tabb (Wallace Reid) is a dancin' fool whenever an orchestra strikes up, and this gives the orchestra leader his opportunity to help put the picture over.
Humphrey is a brilliant dancer. Directed by George Melford.

SYNOPSIS: Once more "The Sea Wolf," Jack London's thrilling tale of an eccentric seaman, comes to the screen. Just why it was thought necessary to screen this story again, when it was so well done by Hobart Bosworth but a few years ago, is a mystery. However, Melford Productions has set a high standard for itself in "The Sea Wolf" and if succeeding plays of the series are as good as this one, there will be no cause for complaint. No better actor could have been selected to play the role of "Wolf Larsen" than Noah Beery. He is the type needed for the part and he plays it with unusual force and conviction and has

Zena Keefe in THE WOMAN GOD SENT
Five-part drama; Selznick Pictures. Directed by Laurence Trimble. Published in May.

OPINION: After a number of years appearing in the support of some of our best known screen beauties Zena Keefe comes to us as a Selznick star in her own right. And how well she makes good can best be judged by the applause her work is receiving wherever the picture is being shown.

"The Woman God Sent" is the story of a little girl's fight against wealthy factory owners for the possession of a child's land. Taken from Sophie Loeb's book. It is a story that will appeal to most audiences, and Miss Keefe's sincere work in the role of Margaret Manning wins the complete sympathy of her spectators. Comedy and pathos are about evenly divided in the story's unwinding, and the plot has been well developed to bring out the dramatic incidents of the book.

Clever camera work, good lighting and exceptional direction make it a worthy addition to the Select program. Exhibitors should make the most of the fact that this is Miss Keefe's first starring vehicle and, by billing it as "a picture that will not disappoint," considerable interest can be aroused in it.

The cast includes Russell Hewitt, a freckle-faced youth who has a small part, but whose work stands out not in that of Miss Keefe. Here is another "Wes" Barry if properly handled.

SYNOPSIS: Margaret Manning is employed in a factory with hundreds of young boys and girls who daily risk life and health in insanitary surroundings. She resolves to rescue her little one from Jimmy Dorgan's fate, when she suffers the loss of a hand in a stamping machine. She succeeds in interesting a young Senator and has a bill drafted and presented before the legislature wiping out child labor. Numerous enemies, both political and social, beset her path, but through the aid of a wealthy youth she is successful finally and, besides finding

The physical strength and stature as well. To Roberta, as Humphrey, "The Sea Wolf" gives a fine portrayal of the wealthy youth forced to menial labor, while Mae Clark and Raymond Hatton are adequate in the parts assigned to them.

"The Sea Wolf" is perhaps one of London's most striking stories, and this take of the exploits of a crew of rough seal hunters presents unusual means for getting the crowds into his theatre. It is a story of one of the sea's maddest thinkers. Will M. Ritchey adapted the story. A 1919 release. "Wolf" Larsen, captain of "The Ghost," a sealing schooner, receives a severe blow on the head in a fight with his brother, "Death" Larsen, on the same day he is to marry VanWeyden, a rich idler, and Maude Brewster, his fiancee, are picked up by Larsen's crew, following the wreck of a ferry boat. "Wolf" refuses to put the castaways ashore and makes Humphrey cabin boy. George Leach, former cabin boy, and Johnson, a sailor, enraged against "Wolf" for his brutal treatment, throw him and the mate overboard. The mate is drowned, but "Wolf" comes up the same afternoon and kills them both. Once on deck, he beats up his whole crew. "The Ghost" reaches the seal grounds. "Him" Larsen's shot heaves into sight. "Death" tries to come aboard "Wolf's" ship with part of his crew, but "Wolf" has them bound and gagged. That night he goes into his uncle's uncle's ship, his brother's vessel. Going to Maud's cabin, he attacks her. Humphrey puts up a losing fight to defend the girl, but at the climax "Wolf" succumbs to a blinding headache.

Humphrey and Maud escape in an opentop to an uninhabited island. The "Wolf's" crew deserts and he is left alone on "The Ghost," which runs ashore on a sand flat. "Wolf" starved, paralyzed, blind and helpless, is cared for by Maud. Soon afterward he dies and the castaways are picked up by a revenue cutter.

Benjamin B. Hampton's RIDERS OF THE DAWN
Seven-part drama; Hodkinson. Directed by Hugh Ryan Conway. Published in May.

OPINION: Benjamin B. Hampton's latest contribution to motion picture entertainment further demonstrates that he is equal to the responsibilities that must be shouldered by producers before a production is a success from the viewpoint of the exhibitor.

His productions, "The Westerners," "Desert Gold," and "The Sagebrusher," were evidence that he had grasped the exhibitorial angle. They were material proof that he possessed the ingenuity and skill to handle big subjects successfully. And to this, perhaps, can be attributed the success of his former productions.

"Riders of the Dawn" can be said to be a really big picture. It is a finished adaptation of a powerful novel of the Northwest, "The Desert of Wheat," by Zane Grey. The theme of the picture deals with a subject vital to the whole country and the western news in which it is presented presages success.

The action of the play is intense throughout, and this has been accomplished by presenting it in a straightforward manner the activities of a class of men who have sought in the past to destroy the enormous wheat crops of the Northwest and in other sections of the country.
Melodrama and romance are interwoven skillfully. Particular care has been shown in selection of the scenes, no details being omitted. Of unusual interest are the pictures of the wheat fields, the methods of harvesting the grain, and the gun battle between the vigilantes and the scoundrels seeking to destroy the property.

Roy Stewart is excellent in the role of a former soldier who shoulders the burden of combating the activities of the "Reds." Claire Adams is very commendatory in her support, as is the remainder of the cast.

Exhibitors should find this production of great value. It is a special in every sense of the word. Advertise it as a powerful story of the Northwest from Zane Grey's novel, "The Desert of Wheat." Exhibitors in rural districts have added possibilities of exploitation, for the picture should make a strong appeal to the people directly or indirectly interested in farming.

SYNOPSIS: Captain Dorn returns from overseas to find that farmers are in danger of having their wheat fields destroyed by "Reds." An attorney who is silently leading the destructive measures seeks as the same girl that the captain loves. When the latter wins, the attorney connives against him and, though the lawyer's scheming girl arrives in the town and introduces herself as the French wife of the captain. Matters look discouraging for a time, but the events in the "Reds" own game and the activities of the attorney are disclosed.

Frank Mayo in THE GIRL IN ROOM 29

Five-part comedy-drama; Universal. Directed by Jack Ford. Published in May.

OPINION: As a rule, motion picture audiences do not like to be misled, and there is apt to be a feeling of resentment following the showing of "The Girl in Room 29" for the exhibitor who shows it, unless he advertises it for just what it is—a light comedy-drama with little or no plot and one made along lines of numerous other screen plays.

For those who like lots of action, "The Girl in Room 29" holds plenty. There are fights and flights, automobile chases, and lusty encounters galore. Frank Mayo throws "Bull" Montana about at will and breaks up the furniture in a road house while standing off a half dozen others who apparently have designs on his life.

But it is all over though, you learn that "Bull" and the others were only hired actors and, with the girl, were used to infuse a playwright with new ideas for his series, had contracted to write, but which he refused to devote the time to.

SYNOPSIS: Upon the success of his first play, a young author is urged by a big producer to immediately write another. He continually delays the matter until he comes to a crossroads and has contracted to write, but which he refused to devote the time to.

Frank Mayo and support in a scene from "The Girl in Room 29" (Universal)

Vivian Martin in HUSBANDS AND WIVES

Six-part drama; Gaumont. Directed by Joseph Levering. Published in May.

OPINION: First of all, this Gaumont production is presented under a title very desirable from the point of exploitation possibilities. The action of the play clings closely to this title, dealing with the domestic vicissitudes of newlyweds. Theatres of this nature, when well presented, is capable of attracting the attention of a theatre's clientele, and when this is accomplished the needs of an exhibitor have been satisfied.

"Husbands and Wives" is the screen version of "Making Her His Wife," by Cora Harris. It is the story of a young Southerner, John Arms, who essays to transform his wife, who has lived a "butterfly" existence, into a helpmate, sweet in her simplicity. The efforts of the wife to comply with her husband's wishes, then again her revolting attitude toward her husband's commands, and finally her gaining wealth and their reunion, make a picture entertaining throughout.

Exhibitors themselves know the popular appeal that Miss Martin makes with their audiences. She is very fascinating as the "butterfly" wife and she has been surrounded by a very capable cast of players, including Hugh Thompson in the male lead. The small town scenes are well depicted.

Several opportunities are apparent for exploiting the subject. Supplanting the unique title are the name of the star and the theme of the story. The latter may be capitalized by announcing that all newlyweds and couples contemplating marriage should see the picture for instructions pertaining to a life of domesticity. Advertise "Sweetheart" night by mailing postcards to the younger set and on each card have such phrases as "Should a wife conform to her husband's views?" "Should the husband rule the household?" "See Husbands and Wives, then start life anew," etc.

SYNOPSIS: Olive Thurston, heiress, marries John Arms, a young Southerner proud of his heritage but compelled to work hard in his small town store to provide sustenance for his mother and himself. Olive, a lover of beautiful gowns and excitement, tries to conform to her husband's views of womanhood and live within his means. Finally she revolts and returns to her uncle, Arms, determines to "try her hand" on a new mine on his property. He becomes affluent and Olive returns to him.

Booth Tarkington's EDGAR SERIES

Two-part comedies; Goldwyn. Directed by E. Mason Hopper. Published every two months.

OPINION: Two of Booth Tarkington's "Edgar" stories, "Edgar and the Teacher's Pet" and "Edgar's Hamlet," have been adapted as part of Goldwyn's program of six for the year. They will be distributed in the order named.

Readers of Tarkington tales know of the human appeal they contain. There isn't a "grown-up" or a youth who has read the stories who has not suffered with the mischievous boy when one of his pranks necessitated a trip to the woodhouse, where the father retaliated by the "laying on" of the whip.

Tarkington has depicted real boyhood in his short stories and in the screen versions this quality has been retained in a most satisfying manner. The result is bright and wholly enjoyable comedy that every member of a family from father to 5-year-old William, Jr., will want to see.

The desired results have been obtained through the efforts of the director, E. Mason Hopper, and he has a cast of players composed of real children—children who perhaps have experienced in actuality the incidents which they are called upon to portray in these photo comedies.

Playing Edgar in this series is Johnny Jones, and the little folk who so pleasantly assist him are Lucille Ricksen, Roberta DeBliss, Marshall Ricksen and Lucretia Harris.

One of the reasons why the kiddies as well as their elders will want to see the first named picture is because it recalls the "good old school days." In the second is depicted "that afternoon in the dilapidated barn when the gang gave a show, admission 3 cents." Everybody will say "those were happy days" and for that reason if for no other they will enjoy thoroughly this new Goldwyn series.
EXHIBITORS HERALD

Hobart Henley's
THE MIRACLE OF MONEY
Five-part comedy-drama; Pathé.
Directed by Hobart Henley.
Published May 9.

OPINION: Hobart Henley's inclination to stray from the beaten paths and give the screen "something different" from time to time has caused him in this instance to picture the comic and tragic story of two old maids, who inherit a fortune of $300,000 after youth has flown and they are too old to fully appreciate what money can buy.

Under Mr. Henley's skillful treatment the story is told in such a way that it strongly plays on the emotions, fluctuating from comedy to tragedy and back again. It invites tears and laughter alternately.

While the picture will have a special appeal to people of mature age, it should be particularly popular with women. It tells the story of a woman and man, who "waited" until they had enough money to be married on instead of plunging into matrimony and seeking money afterwards. It is a human story, a picturization of a page from life familiar to all.

Bess Morrison and Margaret Seddon play the roles of the old maid sisters who inherit the fortune. They are well cast. The action centers about them continuously.

SYNOPSIS: The production is an adaptation of the story "Marrying Off Emmy" by Beulah Lyonet. Misses Emmeline and Patience Hodge, who run the Bon Ton millinery store in Provincial-town, have fallen heir to $300,000. They go to New York to play they are young again and seek pleasure, adventure and romance.

In New York they find it difficult to become "young" despite youthful dresses and the efforts of beauty doctors. They are on the verge of despair, when Emmy's old sweetheart appears in the hotel, explains his long absence satisfactorily and they are married. Patience is not the marrying kind and seeing Emmy marry brings her happiness.

Conway Tearle in ATONEMENT
Six-part drama; Pioneer.
Directed by William Humphrey.
Published on state rights basis.

OPINION: The popularity of Conway Tearle, leading man par excellence, is sufficient guarantee as to the box office qualities of "Atonement." His name should be played up in all advertising. The material, a Count Leo Tolstoi, whose story, "The Corpse," is less important in advertising directed toward the masses, but will bring to the theatre infrequent visitors—a valuable service.

The picture is decidedly unusual. It deals with the semi-tragic incidents with which Tolstoi's readers are familiar in plain, unembellished style. It sets forth situations as facts, not always pleasant ones, and holds interest by seeming to make no effort to do so.

Considerable suspense is built up, and there is a genuine surprise ending. The dream ending is particularly well handled and wholly unexpected. It serves its purpose as in few instances of its use.

Players in support of the star are uniform as to type and carry their parts satisfactorily. The settings are modern and wholly in keeping with the modernization of the story.

SYNOPSIS: Theodore Proctor, cashier in a bank, loans his wastrel brother money upon improper securities, is held responsible for the shortage and loses his position. His wife turns against him when she finds him, after his dismissal, in the company of a Gypsy dancing girl. As time goes on, Proctor sinks lower and lower, finally pretending suicide, after which his wife marries a former sweetheart. After years of wandering, he returns with the Gypsy girl to see his child, is discovered and held as a witness in the charge of bigamy which is placed against his wife. As he succeeds to save her, he awakes to find it all a dream and that his brother has raised the necessary funds without borrowing the money.

King Baggot in
THE HAWK'S TRAIL
Fifteen-episode serial; Burston Films, Inc.
Directed by W. S. Van Dyke.
Published in May.

OPINION: The ingredients that have characterized successful serials for the past few years are present in "The Hawk's Trail." There is little doubt that proper exploitation and advertising, for which the production supplies ample material, will make the fifteen weeks of the chapter play's duration profitable ones.

King Baggot is excellent in the leading role. He is a curious mixture of criminal and detective which keeps interest keen from one episode to the next. There is none of the "cut and dried" mechanical that has been the cause of many of his office disappointments in the few serials that have fallen short of expectations.

The serial is an exceptionally robust form of entertainment. It thrives in the cinema palace and the "shooting gallery" alike, perhaps because it pleases the popular and humorous taste for melodrama.

"The Hawk's Trail" should thrive in these places, and in theatres that come between the two extremes.

In support of the star Grace Darmond and Rhea Mitchell appear to the best advantage. The former has the bulk of the footage in the first three episodes and rises to every emergency.

Action is swift and interspersed with periods of comparative quiet which give the beginning and ending of each episode added power.

The advertising possibilities are plentiful and a well composed press book sets out one of the better methods that may be employed.

Crock stories are invariably popular, and this is one of the best crook serials that have been offered.

"Love, Honor and Obev"
Now Is Being Produced
At Metro's N. Y. Studio
Production has been resumed at Metro's New York studio No. 3, under the personal supervision of Maxwell Karger, director general.

The first production to get under way is Eugene Walter's picturization of "The Tyranny of Weakness," the successful novel by Charles Neville Buck. This picture, an S-L production which Metro will distribute, is being made under the working title of "Love, Honor and Obev."

Eugene Walter recently joined Metro's staff of authors, and "Love, Honor and Obev" is the famous playwright's first screen dramatization under Metro auspices. It will be interpreted by an all-star cast. Wilda Bennett has the leading feminine role. In support are Henry Harmon, Kenneth Harbin and George Cowl. Leander de Cordova is the director.

"Invisible Ray" Serial Completed by Frohman
With the return to New York of the cast of "The Invisible Ray" from Jackson- ville, Florida, last Friday, the Frohman Amusement Corporation announces the entire completion of the 15 episode serial, "The Invisible Ray," starring Ruth Clifford and Jack Sherrill.

The production was thirty-four weeks in the making, principals of the cast traveling as far west as Los Angeles, and as far south as Miami, Florida, with the opening episodes made in New York City.

MARGHERITE DE LA MOTTE
Who appears in Metro's production of the Deary Lane melodrama, "The Hope," soon to be published.

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS
In a scene from "The Mollycoddle," his next United Artists picture. Note the moustache. Cute, isn't it?
With the Procession in Los Angeles

By Harry Hammond Beall

Jesse D. Hampton announces the purchase of "That Girl Montana," a best seller from the pen of Marah Ellis Ryan, for a Blanche Sweet starring vehicle.

Neil Craig, the former Essanay star, is back on the screen after an absence of two years. She is supporting Owen Moore in "A Desperate Hero."

Mason L. Little will start work immediately directing the filming of Booth Tarkington's boy story, "Camping Out," which is one of the Edgar series being written especially for Goldwyn by the famous Hosier author.

Philo McCullough is supporting Tom Moore in the Goldwyn picture, "The Great Accident."

Annette Kellerman all dressed up—that is for Annette for sea-shore taggery of Annette's long suit. "What Women Love" is her latest, a Sol Lesser product.

Will Rogers, Goldwyn star, has found another pupil to instruct in the art of roping goats—Jack Pickford. These two Goldwyn stars can be found quite often on the back lot of the studio indulging in this sport.

"Miss Hobbs," first Relastart starring vehicle for Wanda Hawley, is rapidly nearing completion. Helen Jerome Eddy has an important part in the picture.

Bert Lytell's current Metro production, "The Temple of Dawn," is progressing rapidly under the direction of Dallas Fitzgerald. Senna Moore supports the star.

Horace Bosworth and William Conklin are batting desperately for the love of Anna Q. Nilsson on Santa Cruz Island, where J. Parker Read's current production, "Under the Mast," is being filmed.

Robert Thornton, after eleven years' experience as a director of many well known stars, makes his bow as a feature director for Jesse D. Hampton, with Frederic Islam's famous book, "Half a Chance," with an all-star cast.

Harlon Hamilton, who recently appeared successfully as Horace Swins in "The Deadlier Sex" and other notable productions, appears in the dual role of "Sailor Brigham" and "John of the Coast" in "Half a Chance," and Lillian Hall has been selected to play the feminine lead. Herbert Standring, Sidney Ainsworth, Wilson Taylor, little McAllister and John Gough complete an exceptional cast.

Harry Rapp, the general manager of the Selznick west coast studios, and Laurence Taylor, who is directing Alice Thomas in the production of "Jenny," now in process of being filmed, have chosen a supporting cast of marked talent and prominence which is composed of Barney Sherry as John Holbrook; Betty Schade as Francine Devore; Colin Kenny as Jack Holbrook; Richard Tucker as Milburn Wagar; Margaret McWade as Aunt Agnes; Walt Whitman as James Gilroy; Andrew Arundale as Mr. Moore; and Mrs. George Hernandez as the Widow Cotter.

Work has commenced on Mary Roberts Rinehart's story, "Empire Builders," under the direction of E. Mason Hopper at the Goldwyn studios. The all-star cast included some of the near stars of the screen, including Cullen Landis and Clara Horton, who are famous for their work in "The Girl from Outside"; Molly Malone, who has supported Roscoe Arbuckle in his last two features; Howard Ralston, who will be remembered as the boy in Mary Pickford's "Pollyanna," and Ralph Buxman, son of Francis X. Bushman. The part of the college professor is played by Alice Thomas in who is remembered for his remarkable work as "Lovey" in support of Tom Moore in "The City of Comrades."

Marson H. Kohn of the Marion H. Kohn Productions, Inc., announces that "The Illiterate Digest" negatives and all the indoor being made of the Goldwyn studios on the west coast, thereby giving exhibitors a short subject with prints in which the photography is up to the standard of its dramatic productions. Mr. Kohn announces that the Will Rogers short subjects can also be advertised as a feature in which the Goldwyn star will personally appear, as Rogers himself poses for a series of clever maneuvers before and after the screening of his witty songs and caustic comments on current events.

Jack Hoxie, who was slated to appear in the leading role of "The Son of Tarzan," which the National Film Corporation of America will produce, will not be cast for the serial, but will be starred in a series of western features to be produced by the same concern, according to an announcement made by Capt. Harry M. Rubey, National Film Corporation president, who will go to work on the live-reeler about June 1st.

Polly Moran is busy on her third Marion H. Kohn Production. "The Son of Tarzan," produced exclusively at the National Film studios in Hollywood, Calif., which will be the first of Polly Moran's "Sheriff Nell" series, will be made entirely for the John concern. Ward Hayes is directing.

A Day’s Pleasure, with Charlie Chaplin.
—Very poor picture. Everybody disappointed. When you play A Day’s Pleasure be sure and have a good picture to go with it.—Louis Fran, Olympic theatre, Calmar, Iowa.
Daddy Long Legs, with Mary Pickford.—Held up well two days. Story will please young and old.—E. E. Bonham, Bonham theatre, Prairie du Sac, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Thunderbolt, with Katherine MacDonald.—A picture that pleased and drew more than was expected.—Bert Norton, Kozzi theatre, Eureka, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Choosing a Wife, with a special cast.—Business fair. A few said they liked it. Some walked out. Our personal opinion is it will please about ten per cent.—Peters & Johnson, Liberty theatre, Milligan, Nebr.—Small town patronage.

The Devil, with Tom Mix.—A sure winner. Be sure and book it and boost it.—Harry Hoelohr, Maxine theatre, Imlay City, Mich.—Small town patronage.

The Orphan, with William Farnum.—A most impossible story. Farnum's acting is good. It's strange that a man who has lived for twenty years in the hills always wears perfectly new and clean clothes all through the picture. If you can overlook details you will probably enjoy the picture.—Alvin S. Frank.

The Long Trail, with William Farnum.—This is one of the best Farnum's we've ever put on. Bill has wonderful support in this production. Book it. You will make it.—G. N. Armstrong, Y. M. C. A. theatre, Rose Lake, Idaho.—Neighborhood patronage.

Checkers, with a special cast.—Although it drew good crowds and made good money we have had several better pictures.—Bert Norton, Kozzi theatre, Eureka, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Speed Maniac, with Tom Mix.—This picture sure is a go getter. Mis always takes good here. He sure is some star. Book his series. They sure are good.—Hubbell & Koehlhuber, Rex theatre, Allen, Nebr.—Small town patronage.

What Would You Do? with Madaline Traverse.—Only fair.—C. F. Hancock, Lyric theatre, Stuart, Fla.—Small town patronage.

Should a Husband Forgive? with a special cast.—Fox stars and special productions will bring the crowds.—C. W. Griffin, DeLuxe theatre, Bristow, Okla.—General patronage.

The Daughter of the Gods, with Annette Kellerman.—To those who will appreciate elaborate productions, beautiful scenery, wonderful sets, it is a perfect show. All others dissatisfied. It has been cut to six short reels which helps the picture considerably.—Bert Norton, Kozzi theatre, Eureka, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

When Fate Decides, with Madaline Traverse.—Our patrons like it. Better every time we have it. Good picture. You can't go wrong on Fox pictures.—Philbrick & Koehlhuber, Rex theatre, Allen, Nebr.—Small town patronage.

The Last Straw, with Buck Jones.—Buck is a comer. Good Westerns always please.—A. R. Powell, Sugg theatre, Chiekena, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

Broken Commandments, with Gladys Brockwell.—Excellent picture. Adventure is absolute in all. Hope it will be shown in any theatre. People walked out on it. This picture did me more business than I will be able to build up in a month. For the good of the industry and the exhibitor this picture should be dumped in the river.—Ask anyone who has seen it.—E. E. Harman, Opera house, Elgin, Ore.—Small town patronage.

The Shark, with George Walsh.—Poorest Walsh picture to date. No story. Just rough stuff, but some people liked it at that.—W. H. Creal, Suburban theatre, Omaha, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

Hell Raoin' Reform, with Tom Mix.—Sure pleased our patrons. You can't do wrong on Mix.—C. T. Metcalf, Opera house, Greenfield, Ill.—Small town patronage.

The Daredevil, with Tom Mix.—Packed house for two days.—L. W. Heal, Sterling theatre, Superior, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

Heart Strings, with William Farnum.—Very tender story. Not the kind for this star.—C. F. Hancock, Lyric theatre, Stuart, Fla.—Small town patronage.

A Woman There Was, with Theda Bara.—Patron disappointed. Not the right kind of play for Theda. She can do better. Too old for the part she took.—G. W. Johnson, Mystic theatre, Marion, N. B.—Neighborhood patronage.

Durand of the Bad Lands, with Dustin Farnum.—Dandy Western picture. A re-issue, but went over big.—Peter Krauth, Denison theatre, Denison, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Cleopatra, with Theda Bara.—This was played during the heaviest storm for three days, snow and rain. Still I had a fair house. All were well pleased. Theda Bara takes well here.—John All- sor, Columbia Hall, Grace, Idaho.—Neighborhood patronage.

Goldwyn

The Strange Borderer, with Will Rogers.—Good picture and pleased as usual.—Peter Krauth, Denison theatre, Denison, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Love of Letty, with Pauline Frederick.—One of Miss Frederick's best pictures. Business big.—J. Hickey, Grand theatre, New London, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Thirty a Week, with Tom Moore.—I can always pack my house with Tom. A very good picture. Had some comments on it.—J. Saunders, Cheney theatre, Cheney, Kans.—Neighborhood patronage.

All Woman, with Mae Marsh.—This is an extra fine feature. Poor title, but O, Boy! plenty of pep and action in this, and the kind of story most everyone will enjoy. Book this.—C. L. Beede, Beede's theatre, Enfield, N. H.—Small town patronage.

The Pest, with Mabel Normand.—An old one, but Mabel is very popular. Nothing big, but entertaining.—W. H. Creal, Suburban theatre, Omaha, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

Six Hopkins, with Mabel Normand.—Very good picture though old. Drew good crowd. All satisfied.—O. Tingley, Grand theatre, Big Sandy, Mont.—Neighborhood patronage.

ETHEL GREY TERRY

Besides being a charming Goldwyn player, is somewhat of a culinary artist when it comes to making a Welsh rarebit.

Ralph Spence

Some folks call him a title writer; others a film editor. However, he has made a name for himself with William Fox as Sunshine Comedy expert and has introduced many screen novelties, it is said.

EXHIBITORS HERALD
Betty of Greystone, with Dorothy Gish.—Griffith picture re-issued for Tri-angle, and is about the best Griffith I've shown. Will please better than his later pictures.—G. W. Johnson, Mystic theat- tre, Marmarth, N. D.

Jill of the Yukon, with Dorothy Dalton.—Doily plays a great part with very good support. Some of our patrons thought there was too much dance hall, but will please ninety per cent. Played to good business.—G. N. Armstrong, Y. M. C. A. theatre, Rose Lake, Idaho.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Heart of a Child, with Nazimova.—A much better picture than Stronger Than Death, and was well liked by our audience.—H. V. Friedrich, Majestic theatre, Sheboygan, Wis.—Downtown patronage.

Stronger Than Death, with Nazimova.—Great. Has them all beat.—Tim Rob- erts, White Way theatre, Mansfield, Ohio.—Transient patronage.

The Willow Tree, with Viola Dana.—Very poor. No excuse for Metro to put this one on the market. Not a thrill or laugh in the picture. A very draggy, uninteresting picture.—Fred Cosman, Electric theatre, St. Joseph, Mo.

Blackie's Redemption, with Bert Lyt- tell.—Good. Star new here, but went good. If balance of his productions class with this one, will be a good card.—L. G. Sewing, Crown theatre, Calu- met, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

Please Get Married, with Viola Dana.—Better Dana pictures on old pro- gram.—Goetz Bros., Monroe theatre, Monroe, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Right of Way, with Bert Lytell.—Went over good. Wonderful offer- ing.—Tim Roberts, Park theatre, Mans- field, Ohio.—Transient patronage.

Full of Pep, with Hale Hamilton.— Full of action and will make them laugh. Hamilton is a good star.—R. Ross Riley, Wigwam theatre, Oberlin, Kans.—Small town patronage.

Our Mrs. McChesney, with Ethel Barrymore.—Very good picture.—L. M. Kuhns, Gibson theatre, Gibson, N. M.—Mining camp patronage.

The Brat, with Nazimova.—A very good picture. Sure to please.—Fred Paulick, Paulick theatre, Muscoda, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Walk Offs, with May Allison.— Will get over when you want a fairly good fill-in.—Fred Cosman, Electric theatre, St. Joseph, Mo.

Out of the Fog, with Nazimova.— Good picture, but a little old. Is a little strong in place but will get by.— T. J. Kempekse, Lyric theatre, Crete, Neb.

National Picture Theatres

Just a Wife, with Roy Stewart.—An excellent picture, which promises a good future for National.—H. V. Friedrich, Majestic theatre, Sheboygan, Wis.—Downtown patronage.

Just a Wife, with Roy Stewart.—A high class play that appeals most strongly to people of education and refine- ment. Well acted by a capable cast. Went over fine for me at advanced prices.—J. B. Stins, Gem theatre, Clin- ton, Ind.

SCENE FROM "ONE MAN IN A MILLION," TO BE DISTRIBUTED BY SOL LESSER. HELEN JEROME EDDY AND OTHER WELL-KNOWN SCREEN ARTISTS ARE IN THE BEBAN CAST.
Just a Wife, with Roy Stewart.—Can't see where $100,000 was spent on this production. However, the picture is not disappointing. Attendance was very good.—Mary Cole, Liberty theatre, Rosenberg, Texas.—General patronage.

Paramount Artcraft

The Thirteenth Commandment, with Efelt Clayton.—Very good. You can buy less good than this. It makes good business.—Will F. Krahm, Lorin theatre, Berkeley, Calif.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Miracle Man, with a special cast.—No better ever made. Extra big business.—Goetz Bros., Monroe theatre, Monroe, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Extravaganz, with Dorothy Dalton.—Teaches a good lesson, and is fine in every detail.—C. Oldham, Dixie theatre, McMinnville, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

Alias Mike Moran, with Wallace Reid.—This is a good war story, but will not go now. Would have been dandy during the war.—T. J. Kempe, Lyric theatre, Crete, Nebr.

What Everywoman Learns, with Emil Bennett.—The first picture so far made that pleased. Better than the title indicates.—A. P. Wall, Sugg theatre, Chickasha, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Rescuing Angel, with Shirley Mason.—This is a good one. This star ought to be chassed with the best. Had to put out S. R. O. sign.—George I. Wahl, Princess theatre, Cambridge, Wis.—Small town patronage.

Male and Female, a Cecil B. De Mille production. Two days to capacity. Patrons liked it better than any picture shown here. Could stand a scene.—J. W. Allen, Queen theatre, McAllen, Texas.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Valley of Giants, with Wallace Beery.—Fairly good.—Jean Dagle. Hippodrome theatre, Murphysboro, Ill.—General patronage.

The Egg crate Wallop, with Charles Ray and Fats Pinn.—Big business as too many patrons stayed in to see the picture twice. Everybody satisfied.—John Hafner, Princess theatre, Donora, Pa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Wagon Tracks, with William S. Hart.—Only fair picture. Hart must be in a wild and wooley picture to please people.—Preston Bros. Crescent theatre, Audubon, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Girls, with Marquette Clark.—Clark always goes over here. Business very good. Picture a very fine comedy-drama and gave the best of satisfaction.—Pfeifer Bros., Opera House, Kenton, Ohio.—Neighborhood patronage.

I'll Get Him Yet, with Dorothy Gish.—Good as usual. Everyone pleased Good business.—Weather had.—Peter & Johnon, Liberty theatre, Milligan, Neb.—Small town patronage.

Pathé

Rio Grande, with a special cast.—Oh, boy, you will like this. Loaded with thrills, love, laughter, punch, pepper and pathos. Don't let it get by.—Tim Roberts, Keene theatre, Mansfield, Ohio.—Transient patronage.

My Husband's Other Wife, with a special cast.—A beautiful picture and different. Big theme settings and out-of-doors scenes are elegant. Big business. Boost it. It will stand it. We think it one of the big things in pictures.—H. P. Thompson, Liberty theatre, Pardeeville, Wis.

Other Men's Shoes, an Edgar Lewis production. The best picture I ever ran. All my patrons raved over this picture. Many of my patrons say you is to play it. Simply can't go wrong.—Russell Pinney, Lyceum theatre, Columbus City, Ind.—General patronage.

Oh Boy, with June Caprice and Creighton Hale.—Get this. It's positively one of the very best pictures I ever ran in my fifteen years' experience in the game. Boys, this is a sure fire winner. More like the.—C. L. Beede, Beede's theatre, Enfield, N. H.—Small town patronage.

Dolly's Vacation, with Marie Osborne.—This picture gave ninety per cent satisfaction. Little Sambo is really the star in this one.—L. A. Hasse, Majestic theatre, Mauston, Wis.

Other Men's Shoes, an Edgar Lewis production.—A real honest-to-God picture. One you can review each day week and enjoy it. Cleared up Book H.—Tim Roberts, Park theatre, Mansfield, Ohio.—General patronage.

Judy of Rogue's Harbor, with Mary Miles Minter.—This is an extra fine production. Better than Anne of Green Gables. This was more talked about and boys, this will please one hundred per cent of patrons in any audience. Get this.—C. L. Beede, Beede's theatre, Enfield, N. H.—Small town patronage.

Anne of Green Gables, with Mary Miles Minter.—Very good. One that gets under your hide. Book it.—Tim Roberts, Park theatre, Mansfield, Ohio.—General patronage.

Judy of Rogue's Harbor, with Mary Miles Minter.—Very good. Drew a large house in rainy weather. My patrons like this star better than Mary Pickford.—Peter Krauth, Denison theatre, Denison, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Three Faces of Green Gables, with Mary Miles Minter.—One of the pictures I have run in a long time. If you want the best picture, and service on earth book Realart.—C. Oldham, Dixie theatre, McMinnville, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Fear Market, with Alice Brady. —Very good indeed. Alice Brady and some elaborate clothes. Did not go over at all. Look out for this boys. It is a satisfying picture by Mary means.—C. L. Beede. Beede's theatre, Enfield, N. H.—Small town patronage.

Eirstwhile Susan, with Constance Binney.—Can't go wrong on any of Realart's subjects. Can't beat this for all. Constance Binney is fine.—C. Oldham, Dixie theatre, McMinnville, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

Republic

The Woman of Redemption, with June Evldige.—I regard this as an exception- al picture and good program with a lot of fan-cy and interest, and some of the finest scenery that I have ever seen.—S. B. Brock, Elecetre theatre, Hagerman, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Little Intruder, with Louise Huff.—A good interesting picture with quite a little comedy mixed in.—E. J. Degenety, Princess theatre, Mendota, Ill.—Small town patronage.

When Bear Cat Went Dry, with a special cast.—The worst yet. It is a mountain feud stuff didn't get by at all.—C. Oldham, Dixie theatre, McMinnville, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Bluffer, with June Evdige.—Just an average program picture.—S. B. Brock, Electric theatre, Hagerman, N. M.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Man of Bronze, with Lewis Stone.—Good Western.—H. Bl. Axline, Scope theatre, Wenona, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Robinson-Cole

His Birthright, with Sessue Hayakawa.—Not one of star's best, but very good and pleased.—F. Hanceok, Peer theatre, Stuart, Fla.

The Beloved Cheater, with Lew Cody.—Nothing big. Just average program picture. Fair business.—Shew & Shew, Fullwood theatre, Clinton, Ind.—General patronage.

The Tong Man, with Sessue Hayakawa.—A-1 feature. Big drawing card. Can be clased as a feature under showing room only. Played two days.—Henry Turner, Empress theatre, Missoula, Mont.—General patronage.

Singing They Two, with Al St. Pitts.—Did not please. The poorest picture we have had for some time.—Peter Krantu, Denison theatre, Denison, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

His Debt, with Sessue Hayakawa.—Hayakawa is fine, and draws well in every way. His Debt is good.—C. Oldham, Oldham theatre, Maniester, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Illustrious Prince, with Sessue Hayakawa.—A good picture.—Harry Holgate, Star theatre, City Day City, Mich.—Small town patronage.

The Beloved Cheater, with Lew Cody.—Very clever comedy-drama. Excellent business for two days. Am sure my patrons are strong for this type of comedy-drama. Admission price 25 and 35 cents.—D. C. Scott, Margaret theatre, Anconda, Mont.—Downtown patrons.

In Search of Arcady, with Billy Rhodes—Very good Star draws well for Miss G. Oldham. Oldham theatre, Manchester, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

Select

The Shadow of Rosalie Byrnes, with Elaine Hammerstein.—Everyone liked this. Plays a wonderful dual role.—A. R. Powell, Sugg theatre, Chickasha, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

His Wife's Money, with Eugene O'Brien.—Eugene O'Brien's very best picture to date. Drew only fair business as his previous pictures were not very strong.—John Halfiner, Princess theatre, Donora, Pa.

The Honeymoon, with Constance Talmadge.—Here is a good one. It drew a full house in a dirt storm. Well spoken of. This star draws well here.—J. Saunders, Cheney theatre, Cheney, Kan.—Neighborhood patronage.

His Wife's Money, with Eugene O'Brien.—A good picture, but bad weather kept attendance down.—E. J. Degenhart, Princess theatre, Mendota, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Out Yonder, with Oliver Thomas.—A good bet from all angles. Characters true to type and the usual Selznick attention to detail is evident.—D. X. Frazier, Sterling theatre, Fairmont, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

She Loves and Lies, with Norma Talmadge.—First day good, second day better, third day great.—Tim Roberts, Park theatre, Mansfield, O.—Transient patronage.

Greater Than Fame, with Elaine Hammerstein.—Picture did not draw for us.—Peter Krauth, Denison theatre, Denison, la.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Woman Game, with Elaine Hammerstein.—Probably the best we have seen of Miss Hammerstein.—H. V. Friedrich, Majestic theatre, Sheboygan, Wis.—Good showing.

The Isle of Conquest, with Norma Talmadge.—An excellent picture. Ran it two days to capacity. Patrons said it was her best picture. They all like Norma here.—F. J. Degenhart, Princess theatre, Mendota, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Pica ddy Jim, with Owen Moore.—Just average program picture. It should be changed.—F. Cosman, Electra theatre, Hatton, N. D.—Neighborhood patronage.

Out Yonder, with Olive Thomas.—Best one Olive has done for a while. Will get good.—Fred Cosman, Electric theatre, Hatton, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Regular Girl, with Elsie Janis.—Not much of a hit. A fairly good program picture only.—W. B. Henderson, Dixie theatre, Ripley, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

His Wife's Money, with Eugene O'Brien.—My patrons can't see this star. Too effeminate.—W. H. Mart, Strand theatre, Grinnell, la.—College town patronage.

Out Yonder, with Olive Thomas.—Average program picture. Fair business.—Will F. Krahn, Lorin theatre, Berkeley, Calif.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Glorious Lady, with Olive Thomas.—Very fine picture.—Will Perry, Grand theatre, Alvin, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

Redhead, with Alice Brady.—Best Brady we have had. Better than her later pictures.—Goetz Bros., Monroe theatre, Monroe, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Probation Wife, with Norma Talmadge.—This is a good picture by a good star.—Will Perry, Grand theatre, Alvin, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Probation Wife, with Norma Talmadge.—Simply the best one yet of Norma's. The Talmadges can't be beaten, and I'd never miss booking them.—C. Oldham, Oldham theatre, Manchester, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Country Cousin, with Elaine Hammerstein.—Story fair. Star will not go. They don't like her appearance.—E. J. Kemphis, Lyric theatre, Crete, Neb.

The Perfect Lover, with Eugene O'Brien.—A good house and everybody satisfied. O'Brien very popular here.—R. R. Hess, Marion theatre, Edna, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Probation Wife, with Norma Talmadge.—Excellent picture. Patrons well pleased. Never had a poor Norma Talmadge yet. I must hand it to Select for good goods.—J. H. Wall, Auditorium theatre, Highland, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Isle of Conquest, with Norma Talmadge.—Some picture. Go the limit on it. Played to good business in bad weather.—T. J. Kemphis, Lyric theatre, Crete, Neb.

The Shuttle, with Constance Talmadge.—Fine. They all go crazy over Constance.—C. Oldham, Oldham theatre, Manchester, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Glorious Lady, with Olive Thomas.—A fair program picture.—Harry Holobol, Maxine theatre, Inlay City, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Who Cares? with Constance Talmadge.—A first rate drama by a popular star. Ably directed and well acted. This star always brings us good patronage.—Will C. Perry, Grand theatre, Alvin, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

United Artists

Pollyanna, with Mary Pickford.—Everybody liked it. That ought to be endorsement enough for any picture.—Alvin S. Frank, Jewel theatre, Lafayette, Colo.—Small town patronage.

When the Clouds Roll By, with Douglas Fairbanks.—Best yet. Appeared to my patrons from 7 to 70 and sent them away with a smile.—C. F. Hancock, Lyric theatre, Stuart, Fla.—Small town patronage.

When the Clouds Roll By, with Douglas Fairbanks.—One of the best pictures we ever played. Raised admission. Had big crowds.—Preston Bros., Crescent theatre, Audubon, la.—Neighborhood patronage.

Broken Blossoms, a D. W. Griffith production.—Most displeasing special we have ever run. Business dropped completely second day.—Goetz Bros., Monroe theatre, Monroe, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Pollyanna, with Mary Pickford.—A regular knockout. Extra big business. Conceded to be the best Pickford picture of her career.—Will F. Krahn, Lorin theatre, Berkeley, Calif.—Neighborhood patronage.

Broken Blossoms, a D. W. Griffith production.—Oh, a wonderful picture! Sad, but pleased. Miss Gish the most beautiful girl on the screen, and her acting simply great. I ran this after I heard reports from many not to.—Mrs. J. A. Dochstal, Ideal theatre, Omaha, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

When the Clouds Roll By, with Douglas Fairbanks.—Opinion divided. I thought it was a good Fairbanks picture. A bit padded.—Alvin S. Frank, Jewel theatre, Lafayette, Colo.—Small town patronage.

When the Clouds Roll By, with Douglas Fairbanks.—Drew well. Few comments, most of which were that it was not as good as they expected.—J. W. Lumpkin, Cupid theatre, Miles, Tex.—Small town patronage.
Universal

Riders of Vengeance, with Harry Carey.—This is a dandy and pleased all. Western pictures of this type take well.—G. W. Johnson, Mystic theatre, Marmarth, N. D.

Overland Red, with Harry Carey.—Another good Carey picture. Went over with a bang to P. A. Creel, Suburban theatre, Omaha, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Spiffire of Seville, with Hedda Hopper.—An average picture to average business.—E. J. Degenerhardt, Princess theatre, Mendota, III.—Small town patronage.

Loot, with Ora Carew.—A very good crook story and a good drawing card.—E. F. Harman, Opera House, Elgin, Ore.—Small town patronage.

Rouge et Riches, with Mary MacLaren.—Very good picture. Good photography. Quite a few compliments saying Mary is getting better.—L. G. Sewing, Crown theatre, Calumet, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

Marked Men, with Harry Carey.—The one best picture of its kind we ever ran. Big crowd and all were pleased.—Preston Bros., Crescent theatre, Audubon, la.—Neighborhood patronage.

Ace of the Saddle, with Harry Carey.—Good Western picture. Average business.—Wilf E. Krah, Lorin theatre, Berkeley, Cal.—Neighborhood patronage.

What Am I Bid? with Mae Murray.—A very good picture, and drew well.—R. Ross Riley, Wigwam theatre, Oberlin, Kans.—Small town patronage.

Overland Red, with Harry Carey.—A swell picture and one any exhibitor can clean up on. All of Carey's are good drawing cards. Business good.—J. Hickey, Grand theatre, New London, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Heart of Humanity, with Dorothy Phillips.—Otherwise good picture spoiled by old chestnut of heroine struggling for her heart. When will producers of "Better Pictures" lay off of this relic handed down from the old one-reeler days?—Fahnney & Elson, Electric theatre, Alto, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

Blind Husband, with Eric Stroheim.—As a special it made a good program picture. Too long and druggy.—Bert Norton, Kozy theatre, Eureka, III.—Neighborhood patronage.

Rouge et Riches, with Mary MacLaren. This picture made us money. Best Mary MacLaren ever did. People did tell me this star in good plays has her sister. Miss MacDowald, neat for good, really good, acting.—Mrs. J. R. Duval, Ideal theatre, Omaha, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Heart of Humanity, with Dorothy Phillips.—The best and most interesting picture ever made.—Wm. Call, Kozy theatre, Moroni, Utah.—Small town patronage.

Borrowed Clothes, with Mildred Harris.—Good picture. Well acted. Patrons well pleased.—Kenneth Snyder, Pa-tim-e theatre, Mapleton, Minn.—Neighborhood patronage.

Vitagraph

When a Man Loves, with Earle Williams.—This is a good program offering which the public is taking to in the plot.—E. J. Degenerhardt, Princess theatre, Mendota, III.—Small town patronage.

A Girl at Bay, with Corinne Griffith.—Good picture. Book Vitagraph pictures, and you won't regret it.—W. H. Griffith, De Luxe theatre, Bristow, Okla.—General patronage.

The Tower of Jewels, with Corinne Griffith.—Very good. Played this with Vamps and Variety, a Vitagraph comedy.—A good program.—C. Brown, Star theatre, Viroqua, Wis.

Too Many Crooks, with Gladys Leslie.—Program picture. Not much to it.—Opera House, Hatton, N. D.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Gamblers, with Harry Morey.—An average Morey picture.—Bert Norton, Kozy theatre, Eureka, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Wolf, with Earle Williams.—Many favorable comments from patrons. Plenty of action and good story.—E. F. Bonham, Bonham theatre, Prairie du Sac, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Midnight Bride, with Gladys Leslie.—This is a good picture and true to life. People like realism, not the impossible. Miss Leslie is a very attractive screen star, and this play shows her up good.—Will Perry, Grand theatre, Viroqua, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Winning Woman, with Alice Joy.—Just a regular picture. I can't get the crowds with Vitagraph for reasons that their pictures are not as clear and plain as others.—E. H. Hisher, Opera House, Camp Point, III.—Small town patronage.

The Hornet's Nest, with Earle Williams.—This picture highly pleased. Brought in new friends for the star, and us good business for one night.—Mrs. J. A. Dostal, Ideal theatre, Omaha, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Flaming Clue, with Harry Morey.—This picture highly pleased. Brought in new friends for the star, and paper good business for one night.—Mrs. J. A. Dostal, Ideal theatre, Omaha, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

Peguen, with Bessie Love.—Vitagraph skipping. Worst business on this picture that I have had for months. Advise exhibitor that has the picture booked to go fishing the day he runs it.—A. R. Nelson, Paramount theatre, Kokomo, Ind.—Transient patronage.

The Tower of Jewels, with Corinne Griffith.—This is a good picture. Above the average. Holds interest to the last. Has John A. Dennis, Randall theatres, Jewell, Kans.—Small town patronage.

The Fighting Colleen, with Bessie Love.—This is a winsome little play, and the star does herself credit. Good house.—Will C. Perry, Grand theatre, Alvin, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Vengeful One, with A. D. Harlan.—A good, well acted picture.—J. W. Harris, Bonham theatre, Prairie du Sac, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Heart of Humanity, with Dorothy Phillips.—Very excellent production, but drawn out too long. Not enough action. Good for high class patronage.—E. F. Bonham, Bonham theatre, Prairie du Sac, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Climbers, with Corinne Griffith.—Best production in months. Everyone highly pleased. Book it. It's fine.—Opera House, Hatton, N. D.—Neighborhood patronage.

E.H.
INDIANAPOLIS, IND., May 10, 1920

A. B. BECK was in this city this past week putting over the novel expositions in the booths at the Ohio theatre on "The Luck of the Irish" for Mayflower. A. C. was seen going into the cigar stand next door quite frequently.

R. S. STRAHLER has been made Central Distributor Manager for the market of Indianapolis, Terre Haute, Evansville, and even as far away as Cincinnati. Mr. Straehler will find the territory well established with office staffs, and it will be his business to develop the market. The following assistants are working for the territory: A. W. Carrick, C. Rosnac, G. C. Dickson and "Jack" Flanagan.

FLOYD BROWN, the genial branch manager of First National is sorting the contracts that are flooding this office since the Chicago Strike. Mr. Brown and T. L. Lincrider, the booker, is placing dates away up in December. J. M. Jacobs handles the special representative end with H. C. Knox and Carl Cox working the “sticks.”

GEORGE W. WILSON, known around Chicago as the Pathe husler, is now in charge of the Pathe Office in this village. R. E. Roland rides the rattlers for this exchange.

C. W. TAYLOR, manager of the Robertson Cole office, reports big doings May 29. George Carpenter will be entertained by the Eks of Indianapolis on that date. The advance bookings are very heavy on "The Butterfly Man," so C. W. states. L. A. Angler, A. G. Waeger, and W. J. Taylor are the chief of this office. John J. Neff, formerly of the Mar, is the new director of publicity.

H. C. HELSINK, owner of the Colonial at Ft. Wayne, was seen in the Universal exchange planning a trip to Portland, Oregon. The seven-midget Chandler will shortly grace Exhibitor Hepler’s garage.

FRID W. SANDERS, owner of the Sanders theatre, has just arrived home after a vacation spent in Miami, Fl.

F. R. BRITTON is putting on some fine programs at the Tacoma and Garden theatre. These settings will be installed at the Tacoma.

The Tuxedo theatre of this city is about to change hands again. This looks like a real live spot for a real exhibitor.

Capt. Robert M. Eichelkraut has resigned his commission to take charge of the Rembusch Theatre Enterprises publicities. Best of luck, Bob, as the league needs good fighters now.

C. W. LAWTON, branch manager of the Unity, advises that he will release "The Hawk’s Trail," featuring King Baggot at an early date.

C. E. PENNEN, alias "Smiling Bill" of the local Fox office, reports that "Les Misérables" will have its premier in this city at the Ohio theatre the week of May 9.

A new state rights exchange has entered the local field—the Tri-State Film Company, of which J. C. Hicks is manager. "The Fall of Babylon" and "The Mother and the Law" have been purchased from the D. W. Griffith Service for Indiana and Kentucky.

O. P. FAULKH, manager of the Com- edy exchange, reports the following bookings: Majestic, Evansville, four days; Strand, New Orleans, three days; Columbus, Muncie, four days; Victory, Kokomo, three days; Starland, Anderson, four days, and the Washington, Richmond, four days.

F. L. McDERMOTT, owner of the Ark theatre at Logansport, was a caller in the city last week securing bookings at the First National exchange.

A. R. NELSON, manager of the Star and Paramount theatres, Kokomo, beamed on FLOYD Brown but to no avail. Rumor! There is talk that the last named theatre in Kokomo will have its name changed.

It looks like the city will very shortly take possession of the property that the Idle Hour is located on. Plans have been drawn to cut a street right through the theatre.

The fair owner of the Hamilton, Mrs. C. Harlow, plans to start work at once enlarging this house to 600 seats. A steam heating plant will also be installed.

RALPH ARBET, branch manager of the local Universal office, is busy O. King the flood of "Sambous" contracts on his desk. Ralph stated that the theatre was looking solid up into July and four prints are now working in this territory.

S. DERBY, the inventor of Terry Haute, and, as a side line, owner of the Princess, has just recently hung up a new Rembusch screen, size 9x12. The New Park, also owned by the inventor, is being entirely remodeled.

A. F. BRENTLING, general manager of the B. & M. circuit, Fort Wayne, was in this city this week looking First National service. The Orpheum, Mr. Brentlinger advises, will shortly have a French stage, or a three-in-one as it were.

R. E. GUMM, manager of the local branch of the Exhibitors Supply Company, advises that this firm will entirely equip the new Columbia City Amusement Company theatre at Columbia City, Ind. This house will have a seating capacity of 1,000 and is expected to open its doors July 1.

R. R. BAIR, exhibitor and purveyor of soft drinks, has just booked a five-piece jazz orchestra at the Southside. Roy has been in the business eight years in this city and knows what the public want.

J. FREIDMAN, who takes tickets at the Prospect theatre, and friend wife that over- seas the job, have also installed a five-piece orchestra, which gives patrons of this popular house the best of high-class music.

Considerable damage was done in several theatres of this city a few weeks ago when the heads of six machines were destroyed. S. W. NEALL was one of the sufferers at the Garfield. S. W. is planning to change his entire lighting system and remodel the front.

W. M. SWAIN, manager of the Indiana Calicheum Co., states he has installed two Floral color machines within a radius of two blocks of the Washington and Illinois theatres.

For a bird’s eye view of Indianapolis ye scribe advises a trip to the Doll Van Exchange on the sixteenth floor of the Merchants’ Bank Building. P. S. Allson will greet you and point out the most important points of interest and then will hand you the pen and say “sign here.”

T. G. PERFECT of the Perfect theatre at Huntington, called on S. Barrett McCormick last week at the Circle theatre. T. G. is not a perfect exhibitor by any means, as it is rumored that he has a corner in sugar.

Twenty-three years in the show game and still going strong. The record of Messrs. Bingham & Cohen of the Colonial and Regent theatres. Two husky fighters that have put over a lemon and deserve credit for the success the Colonial is now enjoying.

Big Ben BRIMLEY is packing them in at every performance at the Emerald. Ben plans to remodel his place this summer and will install an automatic player.

SAM SAX, branch manager of the Sel- nick office, advises that he has just arrived home from a trip to Cincinnati, Chicago, and St. Louis. The Republic territory branch office for this section will be located at Indianapolis, with D. WILLIAM as branch manager.

R. R. FOSTER, formerly with the local Select office, has tendered his resignation and will take charge of the sales and office work for Victor-March-Faulkner of the Comediy exchange.

Joe FORPASO is selling the Scenic theatre and will take a trip to California next month.

The Gem, under the management of A. G. Wannier, is undergoing a face lift and pairs. The entire front is being remodelled and interior decorated. A new Rembusch Screen is being hung up.

F. C. McPHERSON, a newcomer in local exhibitors’ ranks, has purchased the Toak and remodelled and placed this house in first class condition. Mac is not a novice in the show game by any means, as his many friends among the old sawdust crowd are legion.

The best of friends must part so I will say goodbye to the good fellows I have met in Indianapolis and will pack the old keeper for a trip among the Wolverines at Detroit.

The Sile Film Exchange of Chicago has purchased Illinois and Indiana rights to “The Scar of Shame,” a five-part drama in which Lucille De Tar plays the leading role. The picture was produced by Tyrad Pictures, Inc.
New Fox Studio In New York City
Will Be Opened Officially May 24

Many Notables Expected At Dedication Ceremony
At Structure On Tenth Avenue Between 55th and 56th Streets

Fox Film Corporation's new studio and distributing building in West Fifty-fifth street, New York, will be officially opened on May 24. An impressive ceremony is planned at which many notable guests are expected to attend.
The building, which fronts on Tenth avenue, extending from Fifty-sixth street to Fifty-sixth street, has been completed, to outward appearance, since February 1, when the entire corporation, with the exception of the New York exchange, moved from its old quarters in West Forty-sixth street to the structure.
Since that date, all eastern business of the corporation has been transacted under its roof.

Departments Near Completion
During this time, workmen have been steadily employed in completing those sections of the building which are devoted to the dark rooms, developing rooms, dressing rooms and raw-stock vats. The restaurant also has been delayed, owing to the inability of the manufacturers to furnish suitable equipment.

These departments now are nearing completion and will be running on schedule for the official opening, so that the visitors may see the extent to which this concern has gone toward the development of the better motion picture under a single roof.

In this building, William Fox has achieved his greatest aim in linking up every department of his organization in proper relation to its neighbors and thus establishing the smoothest possible order of production.

Expedites Production
With the perfection of equipment, including every latest modern improvement in the photographic branch of the business, Fox Film Corporation will be enabled to execute each phase of motion picture production within the walls of the building, and with a speed and precision hitherto impossible.

There are many attractive features in this big structure. Even the laying of the corner stone was an impressive ceremony, so will be the official opening.
At the laying of the corner stone, Frank L. Dowling, president of the borough of Manhattan, officiated, surrounded by a group of stage and screen stars and people prominent in the affairs of the city government. The Rev. Justin Corcoran and the Rev. Meyer Kopstein represented the church world.

For the opening of the building, William Fox has planned an invitation af-air. A novel program of entertainment is being arranged, and the entire place, from the sub-basement to the studio, or top floor, will be thrown wide open to the visitors.

The plan of the building, with its main entrance on Tenth avenue and ramps leading to the second and third floors on the Fifty-sixth street side, offers facilities for an ideal carriage call service, which will be used on that day to handle the traffic which is expected.

Size of Studio
The stars' dressing rooms, located on the studio floor, will be opened to the inspection of the visitors, as will the dressing rooms on the main floor of the building. Here the guests will gain a comprehensive idea of the efficient way in which the producer has attended to the welfare of his players.

The main stage in this building offers a director who may require it a straightway "shot" 280 feet long. This enables the Fox directorial staff to stage here exteriors in inclement weather, and permits the erection of almost a city block street scene, an army encampment or a long "shot" of the Sahara Desert which would deceive the eye of the most experted.

Another noteworthy feature of this new Fox building is the fact that there is not one elevator within its walls. The employees of the building all use the main entrance on Tenth avenue, and only those whose quarters are located on the second floor of the building reach that floor by way of stairs.

Covers Four Acres
All deliveries of studio materials, properties, art decorations, special scenic effects, etc., are made by way of the ramps which extend from the Fifty-sixth street level to both the second and third floors. These ramps were originally tested by driving up their full length, first, regulation United States army ramp tanks and later a full battery of field artillery, sufficient test for a structure designed to support the weight of ordinary delivery wagons and automobile trucks.

As the building stands today, complete in practically every detail, there is 150,- 000 square feet of floor space—about tour acres.

The original cost estimate for the building was $2,500,000, but with the many minor improvements added by Mr.
Fox prior to the completion, this total has jumped to nearly $5,000,000.
The structure accommodates nearly 5,000 persons.

Masterpiece Announces
Seven More Productions

The Masterpiece Film Exchange of Chicago has announced seven more pictures for distribution: "A Butterfly on the Wheel," "The Divorce Game," "The Honor of the Family," "Whims of Society," "The Closed Road," "The Hungry Heart" and "The Hidden Scar," featuring the following stars: Alice Brady, Robert Warwick, Ethel Clayton, Holbrook
Blinn, Vivian Martin and House Peters.
The supporting casts include June El-ridge, Gerda Holmes, Henry Hill, Alec
Francis, Barbara Tennant and Madge
Evans.

Phil Solomon, manager, declares that bookings to date have far exceeded expectations and that he is more than pleased with the results obtained. He stated that a series of Clara Kimbrell Young pictures will be published begin-ingen June 15.

Production to Start Soon

Associated Exhibitors, Inc., announces that production of Geraldine Farrar's initial picture for the concern, "The Riddle: Woman," will begin within a few days. Director Edward Jose at present is busy with preparatory production details.

Chicago’s New 3,000-Seat Theatre

Stratford Theatre, Chicago, Installs Modern Ventilating System

Of the half-dozen big theatres scheduled for completion during the coming year in Chicago, the Stratford is, at present, in the limelight because of the promise shown as the date of opening, July 15, draws near. It is the consensus of opinion among those who have visited the Chicago United Theatres Co. property at 63d Street and Union Ave., that the city may be justly proud of the completed structure.

The Stratford, seating 3,000 persons, was planned and designed by Walter A. Ahlschlager, Chicago, and it can be truthfully stated that Mr. Ahlschlager in his plans has left nothing to be desired in the way of modern equipment for the comfort of the public.

One of the most important items to be considered in the equipment of the Stratford was the cooling, heating and ventilation system and after a thorough investigation of the various devices on the market is was finally decided to install the Typhoon cooling, heating and ventilating system.

Typhoon Engineers Assist Architect

Cooperating with Mr. Ahlschlager, the Typhoon engineers are said to have devised a plan that will thoroughly cool and ventilate the entire house during the warm weather, while the system also takes care of the heating during the winter months.

The Typhoon system is based on a common sense principle. Instead of small, high powered fans, operating at high speed, the Typhoon system uses immensely large fans running at comparatively low speed. Duets are entirely done away with, thus effecting a considerable saving in the cost of installation and operation.

The primary idea underlying the duct system has always been to obtain a smooth, even distribution of air. It required in addition to a heavy outlay for the ducts themselves, a high pressure fan with a motor powerful enough to counteract the resistance which the ducts offer to the passage of the air. Not a little of the electric current consumed by the duct system has been due directly to this resistance.

Eight Sets Installed

The Typhoon installation in the Stratford theatre consists of two No. 19 Typhoon single sets, one No. 29 Typhoon twin set, four No. 18 Typhoon single sets, and one No. 27 twin set.

For heating purposes, the two No. 19 Typhoon single sets, which are located in special chambers in the attic space, draw the air through 3,264 square feet of vento-heaters and discharges this air into the theatre through grilles located on each side of the stage. This equipment will blow ten and a half million of cubic feet of fresh heated air per hour into the theatre.

To keep the theatre before opening up, the air can be re-circulated through the auditorium by the No. 27 twin set, located in a specially constructed chamber on the roof of the theatre at the back of the balcony. This No. 27 Typhoon twin set takes the air from the grilles located underneath the balcony, and the grilles located in the ceiling of the lounging room and returns the air to the No. 19 heating Typhoons, located in the attic space on each side of the stage, thus obtaining a considerable saving in the consumption of coal.

By a simple damper arrangement, this same No. 27 Typhoon twin set is made to exhaust the air when necessary.

Cools Theatre in Summer

For the cooling and ventilation of the house during the summer months, the cooling equipment consists also of the two No. 19 Typhoon single sets (in summer the heating stacks being cut down and balance passed) and in addition there is also used a No. 29 Typhoon twin set located in a specially constructed chamber over the stage. This equipment takes fresh air from high above the street and blows it into the theatre through the grilles located in the proscenium arch and on each side of the stage.

Above the balcony there is also located in addition to the above equipment, in specially constructed chambers in the attic space, four No. 18 Typhoon single sets, which discharge large volumes of fresh air directly into the theatre through circular grilles located just over the balcony. The air is blown out through the entrance doors and through the grilles located in the ceiling at the back of the balcony, assisted also by a No. 27 Typhoon twin set which, during the summer, is used for exhausting purposes.

Through the use of these Typhoon cooling equipments, there is blown into the theatre every hour thirty-five and a half million cubic feet of pure fresh air, creating a steadily refreshing breeze throughout the entire theatre without draughts. The accompanying photograph shows a reproduction of the architect’s drawing of the interior of the new Stratford theatre.

Holubar Now Taking Scenes In the Desert

Allen Holubar, Dorothy Phillips and Olga Lincek Scholl, the Holubar-Phillips scenario writer, have deserted Los Angeles for the wilds of the desert in order to get the finishing touches on the story for the production which Holubar and Miss Phillips are to do at the Hollywood studio under Al Kaufman’s banner.

Holubar refuses to divulge the name or character of the forthcoming production, but admits that it will be a more elaborate feature than he has ever produced. The pictures, he adds, Holubar are planning to take the production to New York when completed and stage it for a long run at a Broadway theatre.

Producer Buys Star’s Interest In Picture

A transaction has been consummated whereby Walter Niewehr has purchased the E. K. Lincoln share of the recent screen production, “The Inner Voice,” for American Cinema Corporation, who made the picture.

An extensive advertising and publicity campaign will be launched for “The Inner Voice” shortly, to mark the picture’s debut as a subject of the State Right Market. It is understood considerable money was received by Mr. Lincoln for his interest in the feature.

Hirsch Buys Comedies

Nathan Hirsch, president of the Aywon Film Corporation, announces that he has acquired the world’s rights to the Joy Comedies and that he will produce a series of fifteen two-reelers starring Charlie Joy, known on the stage as Charlie Granilich, and a bevy of Miami beauties. The first three, which are already completed and ready for distribution are, “Too Much Garlic,” “Back To Nature” and “The Vamp Hunter.”

The Gumps

By far the funniest of the Animated Cartoons --

Buzz around me brother—Hark to the tale I tell—I'll say the way they're treating me is positively swell—I've surely got 'em guessin', I'll tell the world out loud—Why every theatre I play is sure to pack a crowd.

Don't take my word—ask anyone, just speak to Bill Barbee—He'll tell you what I did for him and what he thinks of me. Say brother, if you're wise you'll hurry up and take the jump—Book me in and watch the money grow.

Yours truly,

FRED AIKEN, manager of the local Vitagraph exchange, announces the arrival of GEORGE M. ROWELL of the Milwaukee office. George is to specialize on the big James Oliver Curwood feature, "The Courage of Marge O'Doone," from the Chicago office. FRANK ZAMBRONO, president of the Unity Photoplays Company, was quizzed the other day as to whether he was busy these days. The quiet and suave film official gaily replied, "Oh! If you mean the Unity! Oh! I moved my residence several blocks and my office location is still under dispute; besides, the leases on my string of wholesale meat markets were renewed and according to Manager Frank J. Flaherty the Unity exchange is showing an increase over April's showing." Gosh, it must be some stunt to register busy with chief Zambreno, eh?

He came romping home with a mess of the finny food and a couple of contracts. Business before pleasure. Some are born with a golden horse-shoe, which mine.

Looks like Manager GUNNELL of the Bryn Mawr theatre was elected for a set-in on the big Universal feature, "The Virgin of Stamboul." Favorable Report On Anti-S. R. O. Bill is Not Expected in East

WASHINGTON.—A favorable report on the bill introduced by Congressman Loren E. Wheeler of Illinois, which would prohibit the sale of tickets in Washington after a theatre is filled capacity, is not expected from the house
District of Columbia committee.

At a recent hearing on the measure no person appeared in support of it. Jack
S. Connolly, Washington representative of National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, Inc., had charge of the hearing for all the theatre and amusement interests. A meeting of the theatre managers was held prior to the hearing and Mr. Connolly was invited to serve as chairman of that meeting as well as to preside at the hearing.

All the arguments at the hearing were in opposition to the bill. Congressman Wheeler, when asked to make a statement to the committee, refused to do so.
The other witnesses, theatre managers which has had charge of the campaign against the bill is made up of Roland Robbins, of the Keith theatre; Tom Moore of Moore Enterprises; Charles Linkins of the Empire theatre, and Lawrence Beatus of the Marcus Loew interests.

Harry M. Crandall, president of the Associated Exhibitors of America, also owner of a chain of motion picture theatres in Washington, made the principal argument against the bill, which prohibited theatres from selling more tickets than there are seats. He declared that the immediate effect of the passage of the bill would be that the theatres would have to increase the price of admission.

New Houses and Studios
Being Erected In Japan

That large film studios are being built in common with other real estate construction was disclosed recently when Dr. Iwao Tschiya, physician to his majesty the Emperor, visited the Tokyo Players-Lasky studio at Hollywood for a conference with its executives.

"Two producing corporations of $10,- 000,000 each had just been formed when I left Japan," said Dr. Tschiya, "and Japanese capital is building hundreds of luxurious theatres, equal in every way to the best in America. The Imperial theatre, just finished, in Tokio seats 7,500 people and in attractiveness rivals the pick of the New York playhouses. Moving pictures are very popular in Japan."

Welfare Department
Uses Selznick News

When the second issue of Selznick
News was exhibited at the Columbia theatre, Dayton, O., Edward V. Stoecklein, secretary of the Department of Welfare, then engaged in attempting to floor the local bond issue for the precuring of a fire tower, was in the audience.
The fire scenes in the issue gave him an idea.

Accordingly, he wrote Sam E. Morris, general manager of Selznick Pictures, asking permission to use that portion of the pictures for the furthering of his project. The request was readily granted and the film shipped to Mr.
Stoecklein, with the result that the bond issue is now practically assured of success.

Big Box Office Values
In Republic Version of Flynn Detective Dramas

Edward Bowes, managing director of the Capitol theatre in New York, has written Herman N. Busch, president of Republic Distributing Corporation, that "I do not know of any two-reel subjects that have more real entertainment or box office value than Chief William J. Flynn's detective dramas which are distributed by Republic.

Two two reel dramas crammed with action and suspense from start to finish," Mr. Busch says, "none can compare with the Flynn series. They have been the delight of the thousands upon thousands of persons who daily jam their way into the Capitol theatre. And this fact, in addition to other exhibitor testimonials of approval, has been communicated to me."

In the introduction to the series Chief Flynn himself appears. Herbert Rawlinson portrays the leading role in the series. The center series is: "The Silkless Bank-note," "Outlaws of the Deep," "The Five Dollar Plate," "Chang and the Lwai," "The Poppy Trail," "The Phantom Butler," "The Faker," and "The Kalba Ruby."

"RIDERS OF THE DAWN"
A PRONOUNCED BOX-OFFICE FAVORITE

All the money-making screen values are to be found in this picture in rare abundance.

A REAL STORY OF PUNCH AND PEP written by Zane Grey, America's greatest living novelist.

A CAST OF EVEN EXCELLENCE, not one star and the other actors of doubtful value, but a constellation of stars working together harmoniously to visualize the story and not to glorify themselves: Roy Stewart, Joseph J. Dowling, Claire Adams, Robert McKim, Frederick Starr.

THE THEME IS THE TALK OF THE HOUR AND THE TALK OF THE WORLD.

IT'S A BENJAMIN B. HAMPTON PRODUCTION, greater than his "Desert Gold," "The Sagebrusher," and "The Westerners."

CLEAN, WHOLESOME, THRILLING, SENSATIONAL, A COMPELLING COMBINATION.

Nothing draws the crowds like a celebrated novel translated into the language of the screen. It is sure fire every time.
"RIDERS of the DAWN"

at the STRAND in NEW YORK

HAS had a wonderful "press," as they say on the other side. Comments of the New York papers were unanimously favorable. This is the first time in many months that the New York papers were a unit in their praise of a picture. Neither the "World" nor the "American" offered any comment whatever on either the "Riders of the Dawn" or the program at the Strand. The other papers commented as follows:

TELEGRAPH

"An exciting and vivid story."

TRIBUNE

SUN-HERALD

"This photo play deals with the North West grain region, vividly and thrillingly, without overstating its case."

TIMES

"The story might be called 'Action, Unlimited.'"

These comments were given by experienced writers and in no way influenced by advertising. They were fully endorsed by the How's this for 3rd run?

'THE VIRGIN OF STAMBOL' broke all records at the Standard Theatre, Cleveland, Ohio, today. Although this picture played Loew's Stillman and Loew's Mall in this city for one week each I had to stop selling tickets three times and at nine-thirty there was a line of people over a city block long waiting to get in. Was compelled to run till midnight. 'THE VIRGIN OF STAMBOL' is the greatest of great features.'

The VIRGIN OF STAMBOL

UNIVERSAL-JEWEL

$500,000

Production de Luxe

Directed by Tod Browning

Story by H.H. Van Loan
A murder committed in a motion picture studio; circumstantial evidence points to the guilt of a girl star in that studio; the chief argument of the prosecution is a motion picture film which apparently shows the girl in the act of committing the crime. Certain dangerous men, to serve their own ends, seek to fasten the crime upon the girl, while her own friends do their best to save her.

With such a plot, with such a sterling actor as Warner Oland playing the "heavy," with such a charming star as Eileen Percy and with fast and furious action in every episode, you may depend upon it that this serial is there.

Independence for Producers and Exhibitors
“Film Beauty a Great Actress”

That’s what the Chicago Tribune says of

Katherine MacDonald

The American Beauty

presented by

Katherine MacDonald Pictures Corpn.
Sam E. Rork, President and General Manager

in

“Passions Playground”

A romance of Monte Carlo taken from the novel, “The Guests of Hercules,” by C.N. and A.M. Williamson

AN IDEAL HEROINE

“Katherine MacDonald is an ideal heroine in ‘Passions Playground.’ She is beautiful, she is young and she can act. She looks out on the world with extraordinary clearness and innocence, a true gift in the realm of filmdom. No false note is struck as Miss MacDonald portrays her role. Full of melodrama, with the light of pure romance. A truly Mediterranean atmosphere has been achieved by the splendid use of superb natural scenery.”—Chicago Tribune.

PLAY EXTREMELY INTERESTING

“The screen beauty, the seeming goddess of marble, Katherine MacDonald, really can act. Miss MacDonald’s face has been her fortune, but she really lives, and moves and has a being—cries, laughs, faints, walks, emotes, and does all the necessary things to compel you to believe that she underwent all the trials and finally won out in ‘Passions Playground.’ As is customary she has been placed in settings of beauty which add rather than detract from her own. The picture is extremely interesting and exceptionally well acted. Miss MacDonald is very pleasing, and the story is very melodramatic.”—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

STRONG CALL OF ADVENTURE

“Never has the call of adventure been so strong.”—Cleveland Leader.

Money Makes High Quality Pictures!

Of course you must have a great artist. But the only way such an artist can do his best is to have the best possible material to work with. He must have the best stories obtainable—and such stories cost money.

He must have the best support, the best locations, and the best settings—and this means money.

The pictures result in just what you put into them.

Circulation Plus Readers’ Interest

The fact that Exhibitors Herald prints exclusively every week many of the most important news stories of the industry—and displays them so they may be easily and quickly read—is just one of the many reasons that has made Exhibitors Herald the publication of pre-eminent interest among the exhibitors of America.

An advertisement must be seen and read to be of value to the advertiser—

Ask any exhibitor which trade paper he finds most interesting.
A Gulp in the Throat—

You'll feel it—

you'll feel it when you see the father of Marge O'Doone playing his violin in the deserted hut, a thousand miles from civilization.

Its crooning strains seemed to bring him back to years agone, when the woman he loved and the child he cherished were at his side.

There's gulps and throbs, thrills and romance,
surprise and suspense,
zip and zest in the story that very best he has ever written—a classic of the great Northwest:

"The Courage

It's a big dramatic, fighting photoplay story.

The arena of action is that most thrilling, vigorous and romantic of all the world's stages—the wild,
white wastes of the frozen North.

There are primitive men, gritty and beautiful women, men fighting against the elements;
man against man;
bear fights and the long lonely trails that break the hearts and sinews of men—there is that red-blooded romance and adventure of the great story, right where it belongs,
right where it is bred.

It is a masterpiece of dramatic writing made into a master photoplay.

It opens in the Arctic and it ends there after a succession of breathless, thrilling and unusual episodes that keep the pulse pounding and anticipation whetted as it sweeps along to a swift, smashing and unexpected climax.
The foremost theatres of the country are preparing now for their presentations of one of the year's most important releases—

State Right Buyers—

BILLIE RHODES IN His Pajama Girl

It's Success'll Be Record-Breaking

It has the goods from main title to "finis."
It will long be remembered by state right buyer and exhibitor as one of the biggest money making productions ever put out in the independent market.
It has every element to qualify it as a big money maker; star, story, title and novelty.

—and it has that big possibility of putting it on in connection with a chorus of Pajama Girls.

Its Exploitation Angles are innumerable.
The mails are too slow for some state right buyers, they're wiring and both foreign and domestic territories are going fast.

EDUCATIONAL FILMS CORPORATION OF AMERICA announces the early opening of its own exclusive short subject exchanges in the twenty-two recognized distributing centers.

Each exchange will be under the direct control of Educational, yet the territorial manageaments will be financially interested.

Instead of a mere "branch" with a salaried employee in charge, exhibitors will find successful theatre men working for box office results.

You have the guarantee of Educational for quality product—a guarantee you have known for five years—PLUS the financial concern of leaders in your territory.

Such an organization has brought immediately to Educational the opportunity to select the material most desired by exhibitors, as voiced by their representatives in each section. Each producing unit brings an enthusiasm inspired by the excellence of the distributing system.

This combination assures the best in short subjects and the fullest measure of service, while competitive exhibitor purchase opportunity is maintained by control of each office in Educational Films Corporation.

Contracts already signed assure the greatest array of short subjects ever offered, including Bruce Scenics Beautiful, Chester-Outings, Screenics and a dozen other travel, novelty and educational series.

Two reel comedies include Chester Comedies, Torchy Comedies and Mermaid Comedies, each to be released monthly, and a bi-weekly release from an organization famous wherever comedies are shown.

These will be handled by Educational exchanges in the following cities:

Watch Your Step

FOR a long time those forces which are opposed to unity among exhibitors have been pleased to make sport of every effort looking to genuine and substantial organization and cooperation among theatremen.

The same attitude is being assumed toward the Cleveland meeting. A subtle campaign of destructive propaganda has been instituted. Possible effects of the forthcoming session of independent exhibitors are being minimized—and all for the distinct purpose of clouding the issues and creating a spirit of discord.

It now remains to be seen if the exhibitors of America are going to walk into this trap with their eyes open.

It is true that the exhibitors are not now agreed on many minor questions but the great question of whether a trust within the industry is to be allowed to be built up admits of no ground for argument. The forces which are seeking to throttle the business of the independent exhibitor are well aware of the situation. They realize that if the exhibitors at the Cleveland session are allowed to concentrate their attention on the big issue progress will be made for the independent exhibitor and against the producer who is seeking to compete with them.

For this reason they have gone into a determined campaign to split up the Cleveland convention in every possible manner. Through their agents working in the ranks of the exhibitors they will seek to stir up petty squabbles of every description, for the single purpose of diverting the attention of the independent exhibitors of America from the real business of the coming convention.

In this connection we desire to direct the attention of exhibitors to the fact that Mr. Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players-Lasky corporation, succeeded at a meeting of the executive committee of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry in getting the annual session of that body scheduled for dates concurrent with the exhibitors' meeting at Cleveland.

Admission Fees

MR. W. W. HODKINSON has come forward with a pronouncement relative to admission prices which must be regarded as of signal importance. Mr. Hodkinson contends that the present levels of admission prices are the highest that can safely be effected and that the greater future of the industry can only be realized through the maintenance of reasonable price schedules.

A striking forcefulness is given to Mr. Hodkinson's assertion in the fact that practically single-handedly he was the agent of destiny in blotting out the nickel admission charge of the early days of the industry.

It might be interpreted that Mr. Hodkinson has undergone a change of heart on the subject of theatre admissions. As a matter of fact his position today is identical with that of several years ago when he fought and beat the nickel charge: He insisted then and he insists now upon a reasonable, and only a reasonable, charge.

Literary Sense

WE ARE inclined to think that the industry is being grossly victimized by a quiet propaganda put out by literary agents and owners of material adaptable for screen purposes along the line that there is a dearth of stories.

Viewing the matter abstractly it would seem that it would in fact be a very remarkable thing if after the centuries of story writing the screen in a few years would have been able to exhaust the supply.

Concretely the supply has not been exhausted; in fact, the surface of the supply has hardly been scratched and even in the absence of any original and new story material being offered the screen would still have a long, long time to go before there would be any real grounds for alarm relative to the dearth of material.

The crux of the situation lies in the fact that unfortunately there is no department store of stories where the producer may stroll through leisurely and pick out of the show-cases what he may desire. The stories exist but they are not on display. They must be dug out of their resting places and, obviously, the digger must be one who is qualified to recognize what he is seeking when he finds it.
Heraldgrams

FRANK KEENAN has a brand new 1920 model grandson. The little fellow was born to Col. and Mrs. Frank Sloan of Portland, Ore., all of which makes Mr. Keenan's vest unusually full of chest.

DAVID WAREFIELD has left the Good Samaritan hospital in Los Angeles, where he has been confined to his bed as the result of injuries sustained in an automobile accident, and has taken a suite at the Alexandria Hotel.

Rogard Rogers, widely known as a writer of press copy, has been added to the Thomas H. Ince publicity and advertising headquarters at Culver City, Cal.

C. Gardner Sullivan, who "set sail" for a tour of the world early in March and then hurried back to his post in Culver City, will make a second start this week. He will spend a week in New York City before boarding a steamer for Liverpool.

David P. Howell and Arthur S. Kane have been added to the directorate of the Catherine Curtis Corporation.

Harvey C. Horate, managing director of the Pantheon theatre at Toledo, Ohio, has returned to his home after combining business and pleasure in a trip to New York.

Frank J. Remus, chairman of the Independent Motion Picture Exhibitors of America, has been ill at his home in Shelbyville, Ind., for several days. He is said to be rapidly recovering.

H. A. R. Dutton, president of the Exhibitors Supply Company, left Chicago on May 17 on an inspection trip to St. Louis.

Stanley Adams, president of the Apex Pictures Corporation of Indianapolis, Ind., is in New York on a business trip. Mr. Adams expects to remain in the city about ten days.

Ben Whitham has been appointed assistant to W. J. Gage, purchasing agent of the Allen chain of Canadian theatres.

J. N. Naulty, general manager of the Eastern studios for the Famous Players-Lasky studios, has resigned effective May 31 to form a producing company in conjunction with Gardiner Hunting, supervising director of same studios.

E. H. Siegists, special representative of Special Pictures Corporation, will spend several months in the East in the interests of the company.

R. Ellis Wales has resigned his position as director of production service with the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation and will establish his own producing unit on the West Coast.

Emil Kehrlein, head of the Kehrlein theatre chain in California, is in the East studying presentation ideas and theatre construction.

Sessue Hayakawa left Los Angeles for New York a few days ago on important business.

Sidney R. Kent, sales manager for the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, has left New York on a tour of the exchange centers. He will go to the West Coast.

Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, and Charles Chaplin are said to be contemplating a trip to New York early in June.

Koot Mulaney, well known in film circles, has been engaged by Myron Selznick as casting director for Selznick Pictures Corporation.

H. Lyman Breiwick has been added to the producing staff of Marshall Neillan and Albert A. Kaufman and will act as cameraman for the Kaufman unit.

Hoff Hampton has returned to the West Coast to begin work on her second picture in Hollywood and Hawaii.

Edward C. Mix, former manager of the Republic San Francisco branch, is now managing the Los Angeles branch. Haddon Stephens, formerly at Los Angeles, has been shifted to San Francisco.

Pearl White, Fox star, is returning from abroad after a rest which included a tour of Great Britain and the continent.

Burton Holmes, globe trotter, lecturer and author, will sail from New York May 19 on another film-gathering voyage. His itinerary calls for a three months tour of the Near East, Turkey, Spain and a part of Bohemia.

The following has just been received from P. Dubb, the pioneer film exploiter, who is returning to foreign shores in the interests of the exhibitors of this glorious land of the free and home of the brave:

Endorsements of Col. Dubb's trip to Yap continue to pour in, by mail and wire (collect), and our only request is this: Don't send us adjectives describing Dubb. We have too many of them in the office, and plenty of adverbs, too. Send only nouns. We thank you.

Let's Hope Not—
See where there's a new film company formed in Jersey called the Nick Film Laboratories. The past particle of "Nick" is "Nicked," isn't it?

Headed Toward Washington—
They have put bars on the President's bedroom windows. Has he heard Villa's loose again?

"The Napkins Are Very Fine Today"—
An unconfirmed report from New York states that some of the big restaurants are now serving food with their napkins. Frankly, we don't believe it.

How Does He Know—
Surgeon General Blue, U. S. A., is exploring the women folk of the nation to cease smoking because, he informs, it is a detriment to beautiful complexion. The surgeon-general must have some inside information, as we haven't seen the real hue of a woman's cheeks since the tie-up between the cosmetic manufacturers and the fair sex.

IN the mind of an audience a photo-play may quite obliterate the memory of the posters which advertised it. If the audience in question was unusually large, however, the exhibitor will remember that the posters used were RITCHEY posters.

Independent Exhibitors to Hold Their Own Convention

Frank J. Rembusch Closes for Accommodations at Cleveland Hotel—Alliance with Sydney S. Cohen Still Possible but Remote

Two separate and distinct exhibitors' organizations are to convene at Cleveland, June 8.

All doubt as to the Independent Motion Picture Exhibitors of America holding their own convention has been removed by the official announcement of Chairman Frank J. Rembusch that the Hotel Cleveland has been secured for the convention of the I. M. P. E. A.

Consolidation Is Still Possible

It is still possible that a consolidation will be effected with the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America before the end of the four-day sessions of the two organizations.

The Independent Motion Picture Exhibitors of America, however, has made it clear that it will retain its separate identity unless the proposed new national organization, embracing all factions, is dedicated first of all to vigorously fighting the exhibitor-producer. There will be no compromise on this point.

Second Warning Against Politics

Another point upon which the independent exhibitors are unanimously agreed is the warning sounded three weeks ago—NO POLITICS. It is certain that the men who assembled in Chicago April 26 and 27 in response to the appeal of Willard C. Patterson for help will refuse to join hands with any group which is controlled by any one man or group of men with ulterior motives.

Disapprove of Screen Advertising

Although no public statement has been made, it is apparent, too, that the independent exhibitors view the "screen advertising plan" fostered by Sydney S. Cohen, Sam Bullock and others, with disapproval.

The I. M. P. E. A. has taken the attitude that producers must remain producers, and exhibitors must remain exhibitors. If the officers of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America insist that the fusion-league must accept an alliance with their producing unit, the threatened break may develop.

Dues Are Important Question

Dues again form a distressing question. The national organization, fostered by Sydney S. Cohen, proposes to give the exhibitor the option of paying cash dues or running advertising slides or film from which the association will collect the revenue.

This means of financing a national organization has been advocated from time to time with varying success. Many exhibitors believe it the only successful way to raise funds. Others are firmly opposed to it.

Two Organizations Are Possible

It is not unreasonable to believe that the great gathering of exhibitors at Cleveland June 8, 9, 10 and 11 will result in the formation of two national organizations, both of which the majority of those present will join.

One organization, it is predicted by men in close touch with the situation, will be for the purpose of taking up general questions of concern to all exhibitors, regardless of their affiliation with producers—the other, composed of independent exhibitors only, with the one purpose of fighting the producer invasion of the exhibitorial field.

Nine Companies Are Pledged

In the meantime, the Independent Motion Picture Exhibitors of America isspeeding the work of pledging producers to remain out of the theatre business, and flooding exhibitors with bulletins of each step in the fight.

It has announced that the following companies have signified their willingness "to give us all the pictures we need and sign a contract not to go into the theatre business:"

SELMZICK ENTERPRISES (including Select Pictures, Selznick Pictures, Republic Distributing Corporation and National Picture theatres).

UNIVERSAL FILM MANUFACTURING COMPANY.

FIRST NATIONAL EXHIBITORS-CIRCUIT, INC.

It is stated that other companies are expected to be heard from within a few days.

Quote from the "Big Offenser"

One of the letters sent to exhibitors contains the following conversation with an official of a producing organization.

"The Big Offenser" said: "You should be at home attending to your own business. We have a right to take every dollar we can away from the exhibitor."

Your chairman replied: "Under such business relations, every exhibitor is justified in making arrangements from independent producers only.

One post card carries the following in capital letters:

CANCEAL SERVICE WITH THE FILM TRUSTS WHO USE YOUR DEPOSIT TO BUILD THEATRES IN YOUR TOWN.

A letter sent out under date of May 12, asks the members to do the following:

(1) Insist that all producers get out of or not go into the theatre business.

(2) That we buy our film service exclusively from film companies who agree to this in writing.

Similar advice is contained in other bulletins issued at frequent intervals from the office of Frank J. Rembusch, chairman of the directing committee.

Urges Wiring for Reservations

Henry H. Lustig, president of the Lewis Motion Picture Exhibitors League, has accepted the responsibility of "host extraordinaire" to the hundreds of exhibitors who are planning to attend the convention, making arrangements for the comfort of all visitors.

In view of the increasing number of applications for accommodations, Mr. Lustig urges all exhibitors planning to attend to avoid inconvenience and annoyance by getting in touch with the Cleveland committee on mail or preferably by wire immediately.

"We want every exhibitor to enjoy the hospitality of Cleveland," he said, "and we want your pleasant recollections of the city. Therefore, I say let the boys hurry up and we will do our share."

Enthusiastic Meeting at Philadelphia

Two hundred theatre owners of Southern New Jersey, Delaware and Eastern Pennsylvania were assembled in Philadelphia recently at a "pop" meeting to arrange for the holding of conventions and assure a large delegation. Sydney S. Cohen of New York was the speaker by invitation. Albert J. Fisher, president, and Rembusch, secretary of the Philadelphia organization, issued the call.

"This is the psychological moment," declared Rembusch, "and it must now assert their power."

"You have described this gathering as a 'call to arms.' This is a fact. I fully endorse the language of your call, although I say your existence as an independent exhibitor is threatened. You cannot be ignored. Are you with us or against us?"

A movement was started to interest exhibitors of Eastern Pennsylvania.

Rembusch Is Speaker at Cincinnati

Frank J. Rembusch, chairman of the Independent Exhibitors of America, was the speaker at a recent meeting held in Cincinnati by the Cincinnati Motion Pictures Exhibitors. The meeting was taken at Chicago April 26 and 27, and urged the exhibitors present to lend their aid.

Our pledge to our southern exhibitors to stand by and protect them to the last ditch," he declared. "This is a serious and alarming period in the movement. We do not wish to destroy anyone. We simply find that for the protection of our business we must do our best to support any producer who aims to monopolize this industry. We are to have a showdown."

"We are to ask all of the producers to get out of the theatre business. We are to meet at once, to buy pictures from producers who agree to stay out of the theatre business and discontinue buying from producer-exhibitor film companies.

Chicago Exhibitors to Watch Developments

Dr. Samuel Atkinson, business agent of the Allied Amusements Association of Chicago, has announced definitely that Maurice Chovichs, president of the A.A.A., will be a delegation to the Cleveland conventions.

We are going to watch developments of the national executive committee of exhibitors' organizations, we will not affiliate with either. We will join with a real national organization, however, with the understanding that we will continue to handle our own local problems in our own way."

"I have always advocated an independent exhibitors' organization and I believe that the individual exhibitor must be barred, however, and bona fide exhibitors put into office."

South Preparing to Send Delegations

From all parts of the South and Southwest, word is coming in that scores of delegates will go to Cleveland to attend the convention of the Independent Exhibitors of America, which has been called by Frank J. Rembusch, chairman of the Southeastern section. The exhibitors are looking to Willard C. Patterson for leadership. Mail and telegrams continue to reach him from various cities, asking for information and pledging every possible assistance.

Indications are that every city of size will have at least one delegate in Cleveland and that many of the smaller cities and towns will send men or proxies.

It has been declared by Patterson that the same organization of the South will join the I. E. A. in a body.

Other States Send In Assurances

Mr. John Prag, speaking for Kansas exhibitors, stated that there would be an exceptionally large delegation from the state. He has received personal assurances of a score of the prominent theatre owners.

Michigan exhibitors have sent word they will be out in force. Detroit especially will be well represented. The smaller cities of the state will have one or more exhibitors present to participate and support business and their associates when decisions are reached.

Sam Bullock of Cleveland, temporary secretary of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, has been making a series of trips urging attendance, most recent being to New Jersey.

Attitude of M. P. E. A. Not Announced

National Association Will Hold Its Annual Meeting at Cleveland

The fourth annual meeting of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry will be held at Cleveland, O., on Tuesday, June 8, the date upon which the exhibitors will assemble in Cleveland to organize a new national organization. This decision was reached at a special meeting of the Executive Committee of the National Association which was held at the headquarters, New York Theatre Building, Thursday, May 13. Those present were: Atkinson for president, and Frank J. Rembusch, executive secretary.

The Producers, Distributors, Supply and Equipment and General divisions of the Association will be called together before the annual meeting for the purpose of nominating forty-two directors to serve on the Board for the coming year.

The work on a new film exchange building has been started in Cleveland, and it is not unlikely that the corner stone for the building will be laid at the time of the annual meeting of the National Association.
Exhibitor Meetings Becoming Numerous

Exhibitor conventions, it is declared, are springing up like mushroom rooms all over the country. Many of these, are of the ordinary or garden variety.

Since the Chicago convention, when First National made public its sub-franchising plan extending to independent exhibitors not already members of its organization a number of other National sub-franchise plans have been announced.

Perhaps the most unusual was the "family convention," called recently in St. Louis by Webster Amusement Company to consider the details of the firm's National sub-franchise plan. This amusement company owns and operates the Webster theatre and Airdrome. Five male members of the Graham family, Grover C. and his sons, W. W., D. R., Thomas E. and George, comprised the expedition.

The convention was called at the instance of S. J. Baker, manager of First National's St. Louis office, who explained the details of his organization's new plan. The five Grahams listened with the keenest interest, and after unanimously signed up for the first subfranchise granted by First National in the St. Louis territory.

The choice of the location was significant.

A large series of conventions officially is still a matter of doubt.

An important meeting of directors of the organization is scheduled for May 25 in Chicago and it is said that details of a definite decision will be reached.

The M. P. E. A. has called a convention in Chicago for June 25. Present indications are that the convention will be held as planned. It has been proposed to have an exhibition in conjunction with the gathering.

F. J. Godsol Speaks for Goldwyn

F. J. Godsol, chairman of the executive committee of Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, has issued a statement in which he plainly states Goldwyn's attitude on the theatre question.

We will make our position clear in view of this talk about the way exhibitors feel towards producing companies owning theatres," he declared.

Months ago Mr. Godsol told where we stood and later I issued a similar statement. Now I want to repeat it. The only place where we will buy or build where we shut out a town. Goldwyn productions must be shown and if any condition exists where our pictures cannot be shown in important communities, then we will have to build or buy.

Goldwyn is averse to buying theatres. We will not build or buy. We are interested in production only and except when unusual conditions confront us we will not buy theatres.

Says Exhibitors Insist on Selling Interest

By this I mean that situations arise that do not seem consistent with our general policy of operating with exhibitors who feel that they must become allied with a strong producing organization to assure themselves of a proper program, and they approach us to purchase an interest in their houses with that end in view. They, on occasions, intimate and even insist that they will sell to our competitors unless we buy. We therefore at times feel compelled to do this in order to protect ourselves.

"Here is an example. In a certain Western city an exhibitor came to me and said he wanted us to buy an interest in his house. I asked him why. He said it was in order that before he would have to sell to one of the big companies to make sure of being able to show good pictures. I told him to go ahead and not worry; that we would assure him of having our pictures, and he was happy. The fear of opposition might have caused another type of exhibitor to sell out. But this exhibitor will remain in business with our product as one of his chief assets.

"That is the heart of the matter, and so far as we are concerned that is all there will be. No exhibitor need worry about Goldwyn buying theatres. We will be the happiest of people if we never have to buy, or build one. It is not our business. We are producers."

Rembusch Declares "Both Sides Wrong"

Declares This Idiosyncrasy of Goodfellowship Is Damn Funny

"It's damn funny, this idiosyncrasy of goodfellowship being exhibited among exhibitors and producers," says Frank J. Rembusch, chairman of the Independent Motion Picture Exhibitors of America. "These boys are fine fellows personally, but Oh. Boy, some of 'em are dirty in their business dealings. I know 'em from ten years of national activity in this game.

Eliminate Unfair Methods

"To know the individuals in this industry," said Mr. Rembusch, "from the big producer to the big and little exhibitor, to be such splendid goodfellows, it's hard to believe the despicable methods of trade can't be eliminated."

"There's something wrong with both sides of this game."

"The committee, from the independent exhibitors, who, when last week called on the big producers in New York, heard of exhibitors, big exhibitors, who sign contracts for pictures of exhibitors who buy pictures, put up a small deposit which they are willing forfeit, just to keep time from going out of business," said Rembusch. "On the other hand, we know of distributors who wouldn't accommodate an exhibitor to the extent of a one-sheet."

Men with millions invested and with no credit, of exhibitors who have dark houses because of a difference of a few dollars on top of town's quota."

Ought to Clean Up Industry

"There are exhibitors," continued Mr. Rembusch, "who through organization, do not pay a just share of the cost of a production which leaves the unorganized exhibitor to pay the tab."

"How can these things be adjusted?" asks Mr. Rembusch.

On to Cleveland

The City of Cleveland will witness the greatest gathering of the motion picture industry in history June 8, 9, 10 and 11.

The Independent Motion Picture Exhibitors of America has called a convention on these dates at the new Hotel Cleveland.

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America has called a convention on the same dates at the Hotel Winton.

The National Association of the Motion Picture Industry will open its annual meeting there June 8th.

The Motion Picture Exhibitors of America, Inc. is expected to call its members to Cleveland on these dates.

Big June Meeting of Exhibitors in Denver

Biggest Two-Day Convention Ever Staged in Colorado Being Planned

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

DENVER, May 15.—Two-thirds of the exhibitors in this territory are expected to attend the motion picture convention here on June 18 and 19.

Men in charge of the affair have received the cooperation of the Retail Merchants' Association, the Manufacturers' Association and the Railroads, and it is expected that the convention will be the biggest of its kind ever staged in Denver.

Exchanges and supply houses are making reservations for booths in the Auditorium, where the affair will be held. Goldwyn, Metro, Paramount and Robertson-Cole already have assured those back of the project that they will have stars in attendance.

Every means possible of exploiting the convention is being used, and neither time nor money is being spared, it is said, in making it a successful undertaking.

To Circuit Prologues Among Coast Theatres

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, May 18.—Atmospheric prologues for screen productions will be circulated the same as vaudeville acts by Jack Callcott, managing director of the Kinaema theatre.

A Pacific Coast circuit is to be formed immediately for which Callcott will furnish prologues made in Los Angeles. The plan started because of the compliments Callcott received for his efforts here.
Illinois Exhibitors Alliance Will Send Sixty Delegates to Cleveland Abandon Commission Form of Government at Annual Meeting—Joseph Hopp Elected President—
Speed Organization of State

With sixty members pledged to attend the national convention of exhibitors at Cleveland, June 8, 9, 10 and 11, the Illinois Exhibitors Alliance has made arrangements for a special car to make the trip, leaving Chicago the afternoon of Monday, June 7.

Joseph Hopp, newly elected president of the organization, will head the delegation. It has definitely decided to participate in the convention called by Sydney S. Cohen of New York.

Speed Organization in State
In an effort to complete organization of the entire State of Illinois before the Cleveland convention, the alliance has named William J. Sweeney organizer, and he is now at work canvassing the down-state exhibitors. While the greater number of delegates going to Cleveland will be from Chicago, it is expected that the down-state cities will be well represented.

Officers were installed at a meeting held Monday, May 17.

Are Sponsoring Film
The alliance is sponsoring an educational film, "The Lace of Lake Erie," which is being exhibited down state. It carries the alliance's seal of approval on the main title.

Funny Jimmy Aubrey
Stays With Vitagraph

Jimmy Aubrey, featured in Big V comedies, has signed a new contract with Albert E. Smith, president of Vitagraph, which covers a period of two years. A new producing unit, with Jess Robbins as director, goes with the contract.

Evelyn Nelson will play opposite the comedian in his new series, while "Ike" Hardy will continue as his helper. The first picture in the new series will be titled "He Laughs Last."

Indepednts See Decisive Victory In Fight On Hulsey-Lynch Houses

Full Strength of Associated First National Pictures Is Back of the Campaign Being Waged in the Southwest; Opens New Exchange in Dallas

A decisive victory to maintain "a place in the sun" for independent exhibitors in Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas is forecast in the fight being waged in those states against the Hulsey-Lynch interests by the independents and the combined strength of Associated First National Pictures, Inc.

An open break with E. H. Hulsey, owner of the original First National franchise in that territory, has been precipitated by Associated First National officials, who opened a new exchange in Dallas following the acceptance by 300 independents from the three states of the aid proffered by Associated First National.

Pledge Support to Independents

To further their campaign, executives of the co-operative organization pledged, through sub-franchise grants, the independently produced publications now contracted for by Associated First National to a chain of theatres to be erected immediately in Dallas, Fort Worth, Houston, San Antonio and other strategic points by independents now competing with Hulsey-Lynch controlled houses.

This, according to those behind the campaign, constitutes the most drastic and sweeping action ever taken by a national group of independent theatre owners in defense of individual exhibitor interest in any one territory. It is pointed out by the committee of Southwestern exhibitors that it is the first time that country-wide assistance from independent theatre owners has been rallied for the protection of showmen in a particular district.

It is expected, according to developments in Dallas, that the action of Associated First National Pictures will divide the Southwest into two opposing groups of theatre owners. One will be the Hulsey-Lynch consolidation, owning and operating the theatre properties which were included in the merger of last winter, and depending, in the main, it is declared, on the production sources controlled in the Southwest by S. A. Lynch for the major portion of the film supply for this chain of houses.

The large field of unorganized independent exhibitor opposition which, it is said, has been more or less ineffective in checking the increasing theatre acquisitions of the Hulsey-Lynch interests, now becomes a unit, with national syndication in having a bona fide quarter from which to obtain continuous film service. This grouping of the independents with sub-franchises in Associated First National as the force for cooperative action, creates the division which now gives the Southwest two factions.

Plan Is Sanctioned

The committee of exhibitors, consisting of J. A. Horton, Port Arthur, Tex.; Saul Harris, Little Rock, Ark.; Tom Boland, Oklahoma City; Walter Faerman, Bryan, Tex.; E. T. Peters, Dallas; Ben Lewis, El Paso; H. S. Cole, Ranger, Tex.; C. J. Musidelberg, Paris, Tex., and J. S. Ford, Dye; Ford & Rogers, Wichita Falls and Amarillo, Tex., went to Dallas with authority from an aggregate of more than 300 independent exhibitors, representing a total of 500 theatres in the three states, to sanction, in their behalf, whatever plan or action resulted from the committee's conferences with Robert Lieber, president of Associated First National, H. O. Schwalbe, secretary-treasurer, J. D. Williams, manager: Sol Lesser, Los Angeles, and N. H. Gor-PERFECTION IN PRODUCTION AIM
Lewis J. Selznick Declares That the Success Of National Productions Is the Result of the Amicable Combination of Exhibitor-Producer

Since the inception of National Picture Theatres, Inc., and its initial publication "Just A Wife," adapted from the play by Eugene Walter, there has followed in the wake of its appearance in motion picture theatres throughout the country a wave of approval that has struck the pinnacle of faith in the amicable combination of exhibitor-producer, according to Lewis J. Selznick, president of National Pictures.

This approval has been doubly attested by exhibitors in "Blind Youth," the second National Pictures published on March 15, and "The Invisible Divorce," issued on April 15. With three excellent productions backed by exhibitor and public approval, and which give the exhibitor a voice in selecting the picture which was to be made before actual production was started, it is declared that in this joint combination nothing but high quality commercial pictures must naturally follow.

Perfection in Production
"National Pictures aim at perfection in the true sense of the word," said Mr. Selznick. "Perfection in production and perfection for the box office. If we give our franchise holders throughout the country precisely what they say they want, and with this want is revealed by the box office receipts, it follows that we are giving them high quality pictures with commercial value."

"Just A Wife" tells the story of a man who married merely to obtain a woman of social standing. On the other hand the wife confesses, during the honeymoon, that she married to secure luxuries. Thus the basis of a separation comes to pass, but in the wind-up the wife and another woman vie for the love of the man; the wife wins.

The cast contains the names of Roy Stewart, who plays the leading male role, Leatrice Joy, the leading lady, Kathryn Williams, who also plays a prominent role, Albert Van and William Leon West. Howard Hickman directed, and Katherine Reed adapted the story for the screen.

A Broadway Success
"Blind Youth," the second National Theatre offering, March 15, is a screen version of the Broadway stage success of the same name by Lou. Tellegen and Willard Mack.

It is said to tell the story of an artist's adventures in New York and Paris. He is deeply in love, and when the blindness of youth is revealed to him, he finally meets his true mate. And he has learned his lesson. Scenes in "Blind Youth" show the colorful life of the Latin Quarter in Paris and studio life in Greenwich Village.

Presents Life's Problems
"The Invisible Divorce," the third production from the pen of Leila Burton Wells, is said to give a new angle of the ever present divorce question.

Imbued with a theoretical conception of life's problems, a young married couple, it is said, soon find love flying out of the window and poverty taking its place. Now the youth is loved by an elderly married woman, and through her husband's office. The trend of circumstances that follow are said to be woven so intricately that toward the close the invisible divorce takes place. And in the ripening thereof, a startling denouement is revealed.

In the cast are included the names of Walter McGrail, Leatrice Joy, Walter Miller, Grace Darmond and others. Thomas R. Mills directed and Katherine Reed picturized the story.

Willat Throws Out All Dead Timber at National Studio
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)
LOS ANGELES, May 15—"House cleaning" is the order of the day at the Hollywood studio of National Film Corporation of America. And C. A. Willat, the new general manager, is making the dust fly.

Departments and production units are being reorganized by the official. "When I took charge of the studio," said "Doc" Willat, "I was told by Harry M. Rubey, president, that dead timber must go.

"The corpses have been decently buried, but there still are some half-dead folks here on the lot who are functioning, and some production units trying to imitate those working at top-speed. Unless these men and units were to be buried, I'd have the birds sing, out they go."

Mayer Obtains Rights To Harold MacGrath's "Drums of Jeopardy"

Harold MacGrath's Saturday Evening Post story, "The Drums of Jeopardy," has been purchased for production by Louis B. Mayer. It has not been announced which of the producer's stars, Anita Stewart or Mildred Harris Chaplin, would be featured.

The success of "The Yellow Typhoon," it is said, prompted Mr. Mayer to acquire the latest offering from the pen of the well-known author. "The Drums of Jeopardy" has attracted very great attention since it appeared first in magazine form.

Many producers sought to purchase the screen rights to the story, it is said, but the author favored Mr. Mayer because of the success obtained in adapting "The Yellow Typhoon."
Realart's Branch Managers Gather
In New York for First Convention
Discuss Success of Wanda Hawley Selling Campaign at Opening Business Session—Field Men Report on General Conditions

By JAMES BEECROFT
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, May 18.—Realart branch managers have taken complete possession of New York for the present week.

Oren F. Woody, Los Angeles manager, and Ben F. Simpson of San Francisco, arrived Saturday. Every incoming train brought others Sunday and Monday morning, and by yesterday noon, practically every one expected had checked in.

Is Organization's First "Get-Together"

The convention in session at the Astor Hotel is the first "get-together" meeting of the Realart field forces since the company was organized. The chance to get acquainted was eagerly grasped by the various managers. Good fellowship was the keynote of the session.

Monday morning was devoted to an inspection of the home offices and meeting of the various officials. Luncheon was served at the Astor.

Discuss Hawley Success

The first business session was held Monday afternoon. A discussion of the results of the Wanda Hawley selling campaign was opened. There was so much valuable information offered by the men that the discussion continued into Tuesday's session.

Succeeding days are to be given over to reports of the various managers on field conditions.

An attractive booklet has been prepared dealing with the officials, mangers and stars, giving their photographs with live personal data.

Entertainment for Evenings

Evenings are to be given over to the theatres, including "Irène," "The Gold Diggers", and the "Midnight Frolics". At a large number of the managers brought their wives and families. Several made the trip by automobile.

Among those present were:
Melville E. Maxwell, special representative; Joseph L. Marenette, Atlanta; Walter E. Stas, Boston; Henry E.
Wilkinson, Buffalo; Harry W. Willard, Chicago; D. J. Goldman, Cincinnati; James B. Reilly, Cleveland; Diaz Callahan, Dallas; Bert R. Latt, Denver; Ralph B. Quive, Detroit; John N. Mas-cos, Pittsburgh; City; Oren F. Woody, Los Angeles; Henry L. Hollander, Minneapolis; Lester Adler, New York; Truly B. Wildman, New Orleans; Cornellus C. Kindley, Omaha; J. E. Hennessy, Philadelphia; Harry E. Lotz, Pittsburgh; Ben F. Simpson, San Francisco; A. J. Bodie, Seattle; Floyd L.
Lewis, St. Louis; William H. Rupp, pard, Washington.

Schenck Buys Vehicles
For Talmadge Sisters

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, May 18.—Joseph Schenck, president of the two Talmadge production companies, has purchased "Smiling Thro'ough," in which Jane Cowl is now playing on Broadway, as a vehicle for Norma Talmadge.

"Curiosity," with H. Austin Adams, and "Wedding Bells" by Salisbury yield, have been purchased for use by Constance. Schenck is negotiating for other dramas and comedies and short stories.

$3,000 Loss in Fire
In Michigan City, Ind.

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

MICHIGAN CITY, IND., May 18.—A fire in the operator's booth at the Garden theatre recently caused a loss to the management of approximately $3,000.
Seven reels of film were destroyed.

Rothapfel in New York

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, May 18.—Samuel Rothapfel has arrived in New York. Gossip links his name with the Capitol theatre, in which Goldwyn has purchased a substantial interest.

"Big Six" Incorporate

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

DOVER, Del., May 18.—The Associated Producers has been incorporated here, with a capitalization of $1,000,000.

Hodkinson Denies
Published Report

Denial that J. Parker Read, Jr., two forthcoming Louise Glauand Bosworth productions will be distributed through First National Exhibitors' Circuit is made by W. F. Hodkinson, whose organization now is publishing these pictures.

A recently published statement prompted Mr. Hodkinson's denial. He said the report was without foundation.

"I cannot make it too emphatic," said Mr. Hodkinson, "that no such state of affairs exists. The two forthcoming Glauand Bosworth releases will be hand-dled by this organization."

Appoint Counsel For Associated Exhibitors

M. L. Malevinsky Also Named
Secretary At Meeting of Directors

NEW YORK.—The board of directors of Associated Exhibitors held a meeting here, appointed M. L.
Malevinsky of the law firm of O'Brien, Malevinsky & Driscoll, general counsel and secretary of the organization.

H. W. Wellerbrink, who has held both the offices of secretary and treasurer, retains the treasurership.

Many matters of importance were disposed of at the two-day meeting. Much of the time was consumed in whippin ghim-sha-shoep the sub-franchise proposition, it is announced.

Plan Is Satisfying

Associated's sub-franchise plan, it is said, has occupied the minds of some of the leading exhibitors of the country for nearly a year, and at the meeting final details were gone over and polished in such a satisfying manner as to justify the expectation that full details of the plan will be made known within a month.

Associated claims to have a sub-franchise plan under which every exhibitor participating is given a fully equitable deal. The organization promises independent showmen an ideal arrangement —an arrangement under which a theatre owner can be assured that the business he builds up remains his business—its success entirely dependent on his efforts and its profits accruing only for his benefit.

Exhibitors Endorse Aims

At the directors' meeting there were read several letters from independent exhibitors complimenting As-soiated Exhibitors on its stand in endorsing the aims and activities of Independent Exhibitors of America.

Among those who attended the meeting were Harry Crandall of Washington; D. C. H. H. Woodcock of Newark; Samuel Harding of Kansas City; Harold B. Franklin of Buffalo; Dr.
Hugo C. Lambach of Portland, Ore.;
Harry N. Lubliner of Louisville; Morris Harris of Pittsburgh; I. Libson of Cincinnati; Paul Brunet and General Manger F. C. Quimby.

Readers Asked to Aid
Search for Missing Girl

Believing that 15-year-old Marie
ingham Place, Chicago, with the hope that she might fulfill her ambitions to become a motion picture actress, the EXHIBITORS HERALD has been appealed to to aid in the search for the girl. She left her home on April 13, last.
A person supplying information which leads to the return of
Marie will receive a reward of $100.
Marie, who is large for her age, is 5 feet 6 inches in height. She has a fair complexion with brown curly hair and brown eyes. Her mouth is large, while her nose is small. She could be identified by a mole which is on the right cheek-bone.

The girl speaks English with a slight French accent.

Should anyone in the industry locate the girl, please notify the EXHIBITORS HERALD, or the girl's mother, Mrs. Frederick Sicher, 681 Buckingham Place, Chicago.
Looks Tough for Polly

Polly Moran, the National Film Corporation of America comedienne, and Warde Hayes, her director, stage an old saw-mill scene with all its attendant thrills. Polly is only sorry she has but one life to give before the censors cut the films to pieces.

Motion Picture Industry of World Dominated by American Interests
Production of Films In the United States Has Increased From 6 to 65 Per Cent of Total Output In Six Years

American interests today are the ruling force in the motion picture industry of the world.

Estimates of the proportion of American films used in other countries as compared with those manufactured elsewhere show the predominating influence of financial interests in the United States.

Big Increase Shown

The great strides made by the industry in this country are indicated by the fact that in the last six years American production has increased from 6 to 65 per cent of the total output of film. The percentage of American films used in other countries is estimated as follows:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Country</th>
<th>Percentage</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>England</td>
<td>55</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>France</td>
<td>60</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Australia</td>
<td>90</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>South Africa</td>
<td>90</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

In other countries such as China, Japan and South America, American pictures are considered the most popular. In each foreign country the American film must be re-edited so as to eliminate any scenes which might be offensive to the people of any particular place.

Same Stars Popular

Stars that are popular in the United States have the same following abroad. Each country has a certain degree of favor for some one type of picture. In England, it is the society drama set in luxurious backgrounds, whereas in France, the fans find slapstick comedy and tragedy the most entertaining.

It is said that serials are received with more favor abroad than in the United States, especially in the West Indies and in South America.

Continuous shows are arranged in Havana. The theaters there open at 11:00 a.m., and run until late at night without repeating the pictures. Between each performance, ushers go through the audience and collect additional fees.

Vivian Martin Makes Independent Film

“Song of the Soul”

With the return of the Vivian Martin Company from Florida, where exteriors for the first Vivian Martin independent production were being made, Thomas F. Walker, vice-president and general manager, announces that the picture has been completed.

The title, which has heretofore been kept secret, is now officially announced as “The Song of the Soul.”

The picture is now in the stage of cutting and titling under the supervision of John Noble, who also directed it. When completed, the picture will probably be put out in six reels, but as yet no method of distribution has been announced.

Employee Interest
Keeps House Open

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., May 18—The newspapers in this day of unrest devote considerable space to strikes and the salary demands of labor.

But there is a brighter side to life after all.

As an example of the latter and more pleasant condition take the case of the Auditorium theatre here, Charles G. Branhman, managing director, and Richard Hor- gan, manager, were prepared to forfeit their lease because the financial support of United Artists Corporation had been withdrawn.

Then came Richard Long, director of the orchestra, in the role of the good Samaritan. As spokes- man for fifty employes he said:

“We want to see this thing through with you Mr. Branhman.

We are willing to work all summer for nothing if necessary. If you need it we will raise plenty of money.”

This employe interest resulted in the formation of a cooperative association and the Auditorium will remain open as a motion picture playhouse.

Callaghan Retains Two Directors for Features

Proof of the success of an unique departure in modern production is contained in the announcement that Ida May Park and Joseph De Grasse, joint directors of Bessie Love in “The Midlanders,” have been retained by Andrew J. Callaghan, head of the producing organization of that name, for the second offering of the star.

Negotiations to this end were completed by wire from New York, where Mr. Callaghan is engaged in the purchase of future vehicles for Miss Love.

In the adaptation to the screen of Charles Tenney Jackson’s famous novel, “The Midlanders,” Mr. Callaghan created considerable excitement in the picture circles by the announcement that Bessie Love was to be the first star in the history of the business to have the benefits of the combined direction of a man and woman. The contract just closed by Mr. Callaghan with Miss Park and Mr. De Grasse reflects the successful culmination of this novel experiment.

Los Angeles Women To Produce Picture

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, May 18.—The City of Los Angeles is to become a motion picture producer, “Mother Love” being the title chosen for its first production.

Mayor Snyder, Sid Grauman and the City Mothers have joined hands on the project. The picture will probably be made at a Hollywood studio and will be an educational, carrying a message into every home. All funds derived from its exhibition will be used for the City Mothers’ bureau to establish day nurseries in different sections of Los Angeles.
Chicago Censorship Commission
To Make Ordinance More Rigid Provide for Altering of Main Titles of Pictures and Supervision of All Billboard Advertising—Anxious to Censor Newspaper Ads

Provisions, which permit the rewriting by censors not only of subtitles, but the main titles as well of all motion picture productions, are to be incorporated in the proposed new Chicago censorship ordinance by Chairman Timothy D. Hurley on the suggestion of Rev. Dr. W. S. Fleming at the meeting of the Moving Picture Censorship Commission of Chicago, held May 14.

The suggestion was one of two adopted at the meeting to make the proposed ordinance more rigid. The other extends the control of the proposed censorship commission over posters and banners to include all signs placed in any part of the city advertising a motion picture performance. The original draft of the ordinance gave the censors control over only those signs placed on the theatre building.

Would Like to Censor Newspaper Advertising

“...would like to censor the theatres' newspaper advertising too, but I know that it is impossible on account of the so-called freedom of the press,” said Rev. Fleming. Judge Hurley and other members of the commission agreed with him both on wanting to censor the advertising and that such a step would be impossible.

“There are a good many things in the Chicago newspapers which need censoring,” said Judge Hurley.

Rev. Fleming, in insisting on censors having the authority to rewrite the main titles of film productions, stated that he understood it was done in Pennsylvania and that he considered it a good idea.

“That is true,” said Chairman Hurley, and he read a list of objectionable titles furnished the commission by Ellis P. Oberholtzer of Pennsylvania.

Will Not Censor History

Mrs. Henry Solomon then voiced objection to the clause in Judge Hurley's ordinance which would refuse permits to any picture which "misrepresents any person or historically event.

"The motion picture is intended to amuse, not to educate," said Mrs. Solomon. "I don't think we ought to include this phrase."

Judge Hurley objected, but other members of the commission sided with Mrs. Solomon and the words were stricken out.

The chairman called attention to the fact that he has stricken "fraternal societies" from the list of organizations which would be permitted to show uncensored pictures.

"This would leave the door open for too many evasions," he said.

Wants Record Carefully Guarded

“It is apparent that the motion picture people will go to any ends to prevent the publishing of our report," said Judge Hurley. "I would like a motion passed authorizing me to hold on the record, and refuse to let it go out of my office."

"As it is now, any member of the commission can take the record or any part of it from my office. I would like to have it settled that anyone wanting to see the record would have to look at it in my office."

"I don't believe a motion will be necessary," said Rev. Fleming. "We will verbally instruct you to hang on to it."

Just as long as that is understood," said Judge Hurley, you bet I will hold onto it."

Anxious Report Be Published

Continuing, Judge Hurley said that the printing of the testimony taken by the commission and its report would be a book of about 700 pages. He estimated it would cost $1,000 to issue the book.

"And we must get the money," said the judge. "We will go to the city council for it. If we can't get it there, I am willing to stand on the street corner and beg people."

He appointed a committee of five to take the matter up with the council's finance committee to obtain funds.

Resolution Censure Quigley

Martin J. Quigley, editor of EXHIBITORS HERALD and secretary of the commission, who in published statements disclaimed any responsibility for the report prepared by Judge Hurley. He sent word to the commission that he was detained in New York and would not reach the city until May 18.

In his absence, Rev. Fleming introduced the following resolution:

"Resolved, That the Moving Picture Censorship Commission of Chicago characterizes and resents as false and malicious and premeditated the attack by Martin J. Quigley on T. D. Hurley, chairman of the commission, as published on page 31 of the EXHIBITORS HERALD of May 25, 1920. In drafting the proposed ordinance, Mr. Hurley acted on the appointment of the commission as shown by the minutes of the meeting of the commission held June 27, 1919, and in conformity with general principles laid down by the commission and has presented to them for their consideration the results of his work, and this report, now being considered by the commission, all of which Mr. Quigley knew perfectly well, as he is secretary of the commission."

Resolved, That this resolution be spread upon the minutes and given to the press."

The resolutions were seconded by Mrs. E. R. McDowell and passed without a dissenting vote. Six of the seventeen members of the commission were present.
Lewis J. Selznick Advises Theatre Men Not to Ride the "Fatal Horse"

Advocating the dogmatic principle upon which exhibitors can only hope to retain a lifelong interest in their theatres without fear of the encroachments of big financiers, Lewis J. Selznick, president of National Picture Theatres, Inc., sets forth his ideas in two striking inserts in the motion picture trade journals.

One insert shows a goose laying the golden eggs, and the other is captioned "A horse on you!" These are advocated by Mr. Selznick primarily to fight the interests aiming to squeeze the soul out of all exhibitors. Mr. Selznick, in the goose advertisement, says, in part:

Laying Golden Eggs
"I hear you're such a goose that you'll keep laying golden eggs for the interests organizing to kill you. Concerns for whom you've built up good will with your good ideas and your good capital aren't satisfied with the millions you've provided. Now they want your profits, too."

"And since you're figured as an easy mark, they expect you to keep featuring their productions, exploiting their stars and furnishing the funds to buy your own theatres until they possess all the choice locations in the best paying towns of America."

"If the exhibitor stands for this raw deal, if he sharpens the knife that cuts his throat, he deserves to be a cooked goose. I call it a raw deal because it's a double deal, and an ungrateful deal. I'm for you because you've been for me. Lay on."

"Humoresque" Director Says Reviews Gratifying
Frank Borzage, director of "Humoresque," a Cosmopolitan production, says: "It's a great source of personal gratification to me that the critics have so kindly received 'Humoresque,' my first subject for Cosmopolitan Productions."

"But I feel that I was very fortunate in having the proper materials to work with and I wish therefore to give credit where credit is due."

Mayflower Executives Unanimous in Lauing Allan Dwan's "The Scoffer"

Twelve Mayflower Photoplay Corporation officials who witnessed a pre-release showing of Allan Dwan's latest production, "The Scoffer," were unanimous in praising it as "one of the strongest ever screened."

These executives expressed the opinion that the picture would meet with the success of "The Miracle Man."

Second Publication
This latest Dwan picture, which will be First National's second publication under the Mayflower contract, is said to be replete with action and heart interest. The entry into life of the young is the motif which makes it the plot, it is said. "The Scoffer" (James Kirkwood), an upstanding figure, a doctor gifted with rare and progressive talent, a staunch believer in the omnipotent power that rules the universe, suddenly is distorted in mind through the vicious caprice of a nerve-racking demon (Ethel Mitchell) and the base treachery of an erstwhile chum in the profession (Philip McCullough).

The Scoffer becomes a cynical and morose reviler of the Almighty power. He nurses this hate of man into such viciousness that he becomes its slave andvent his blasphemous views at every possible opportunity.

But there comes a moment when a wounded man regains his strength but pathetic appeal to his slumbering humanity, and he unbends his stern will to relieve the suffering brute's agony. His wonderful surgical skill then is invoked to save the life of a boy crippled by the onslaught of a whiskey-madened father. The doctor struggles against his ruling demon of hate and his vow never again to raise a hand to help a human being.

Finally, Margaret Haden (Mary Thurman) challenges him to prove his claim that the power of man is greater than the power of God, and in answer to this challenge the Scoffer undertakes an operation which he knows will save the boy.

A terrific storm breaks and the lights go out. The Scoffer, with his whole thought now centered on saving the life of the boy, is forced to admit defeat. Realizing his helplessness, he calls upon God for aid. The answer is a blinding flash of lightning.

The manifestations from the clouds at the moment of the Scoffer's blasphemous challenge restores the faith that he had cast aside: the citadel of hate crumbles and the eyes of Margaret Haden gaze with joy into those of the man she loves and weds—"The Scoffer."

Ethel Clayton Buys Santa Monica House

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)
LOS ANGELES, May 18—Hollywood stars and directors continue to invest in California real estate. A few weeks ago, Allen Holubar purchased a new $10,000 home in Hollywood and now Ethel Clayton has bought a home of similar value at Santa Monica, near Anette Kellerman's recently purchased home."

What Happened to Troy
In the "A Horse on You" advertisement, Mr. Selznick relates the strong position of the Trojans, and how the hostile Greeks bowled them over unawares.

"What happened to Troy," says Mr. Selznick, "can happen to Selzncatly. He's got just such Trojan horses in your theatres at this very instant. Genuinely promoting popularity for stars and productions which you'll lose as soon as over-reaching interests feel it is more expedient to take your crowds than to take your contracts."

"I'm protecting my own future when I advise you to protect yours. If the exhibitor isn't a successful free agent, I'm a failure."

Mr. Selznick stated he intends to keep hammering away for the benefit of exhibitors with further forgetful advertising talks. His motto, "I consider a failure unless the exhibitor is a success," is the wedge with which he intends to pry open the gates of exhibitor freedom from outside interests.

High Admission Prices Destructive

W. W. Hodkinson Declares That the Very Existence of the Motion Picture Depends On Its Popular Price and That His Organization Will Fight Any Exorbitant Fee

Motion picture fans in the United States number millions. No other amusement can boast of such an enormous as well as cosmopolitan following. One reason more than any other, perhaps, has been fundamental in bringing about this condition. Popular admission prices that have existed since the inception of the industry are accountable for its development and its present hold on the leadership in the world of amusement. Efforts to raise admission prices to excessive figures have met a resistance from many sources. Exhibitor organizations have expressed a desire to lower production costs so that admission prices may be lowered. But the theatre owner is not alone in his fight to keep these prices at a minimum. W. W. Hodkinson, president of W. W. Hodkinson Corporation and a former exhibitor, has sensed the imperative need for lower prices.

"The present need of the hour," declares Mr. Hodkinson, "is a downward revision of the scale of prices of admission to the motion picture theatres.

In the opinion of the distributor, the very existence of the motion picture depends as much as ever on its popular prices. Mr. Hodkinson speaks from a thorough knowledge of the industry, as he is a pioneer in the exhibiting, producing and distributing of pictures.

"When the motion picture became a commercial possibility more than a decade ago," declares Mr. Hodkinson, "the nickel seemed to be a psychological demand. While in other countries the motion picture theatres charged 10 cents or more from the very start, we, in this country, had to invent the odious name of nickelodeon because the nickel seemed to be the accepted price.

Opposed 5-Cent Shows

"At that time I was an uncompromising opponent of the nickel, believing that the motion picture could not attain its full growth and develop into something like an art and a high class entertainment on the basis of 5 cents. I realized what was necessary to produce a first class motion picture worthy of the patronage of the best classes of our population.

"I encountered a violent storm of protest when I announced my intention of raising the price of admission. I need say nothing further on the subject of my movement for divorcing the motion picture from the nickel. The results speak for themselves. Even the enemies of the motion picture admit today its improvement both as to ethics and art and the 5-cent houses have practically gone out of existence.

To Fight High Prices

"Now, however, conditions have gone to the other extreme, and I do not hesitate to say that I will fight a departure from the popular prices just as hard as I fought against the nickel as the last word in admissions.

"The craze for excessive prices started some time ago when we heard a good deal about the 'Two-Dollar Movies.' I believe an attempt was made to get $2 for an average feature. The matter was finally put on a basis of admission for a feature as usual, however.

"Raising the prices of admission narrows the field of the motion picture and is absolutely destructive. The very nature of business demands a popular price. It is the possibility of popular prices combined with the possibility of a good picture which has made the motion picture industry an important civic factor and withal a commercial institution.

50 Cents Enough

"Without trying to lay down a definite scale of prices I would say that any price

"It is perhaps natural for the motion picture theatre owner to try and pass the enormous increase in film rental charges on to the public. The theatre owner today, for no sound reason, charged such high prices that in many cases he must impale himself on either horn of this dilemma—either sell out or raise the price of admission.

"The Hodkinson organization proposes to fight exorbitant admission prices in a definite, practical way, about which we will have much to say in the near future."

Gardner to Return to Screen In August To Make Western Series

Jack Gardner, the vaudeville star who has been absent from the screen for some time, has signed with Richards & Flynn, Kansas City exhibitors, to make a series of twelve five-part Western productions. Actual production work will start on the West Coast on August 14, when the star's vaudeville tour is completed.

N. J. Flynn now is on the Coast attending to preliminary matters pertaining to production activities. Among other things, he is looking for studio space. No announcement regarding distribution has been made thus far. Gardner's former pictures were made for Essanay and were well received in the trade.

Richards & Flynn hold the First National franchise in their territory.

Van Dyke Directing Pathe's Next Serial

W. S. Van Dyke, who directed Jack Dempsey in Pathe's "Daredevil Jack," is directing the serial in which Charles Hutchison will star for Pathe, under the supervision of Robert Brunton at the latter's studio in Los Angeles.

Van Dyke's commission to direct the Hughes automobile serial is in a way of being a special arrangement, due, it is said, to the high esteem in which the Pathe production heads hold him for his work on the Dempsey picture, which has been pronounced by many exhibitors of Pathe serials the finest from a standpoint of production that company has ever presented. The important roles have been given to Josie Sedgwick and Carl Stockdale, both of whom were prominent in Dempsey's support.

$2,000,000 Playhouse and Hotel for Chicago

Plans for building a $2,000,000 theatre and hotel building at the corner of Sheridan road and North avenue, Chicago, have just been announced. Harry F. Bloomfield has just purchased this plot of ground, which is 100 by 143 feet, from Max Ehrman at a reported expenditure of $250,000.

The building will be twelve stories high and will include the theatre, which will seat 2,200 persons, and a 400-room hotel. Construction will begin in July.
Educational Will Have Its Entire Exchange System Operating June 1
Nothing But Short Subjects Will Be Handled and Local Exhibitors Will Have Interest In Each of the Offices

Educational Films Corporation's own exchange system, which will handle no subject over two reels in length, will be in operation by June 1. These offices will afford the first national specialization in short subjects ever offered by a film organization.

Contracts have been signed for the exchanges in Boston, Philadelphia, Washington, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Louisville, Cleveland, Indianapolis, Chicago, Detroit, Minneapolis, Omaha, Los Angeles, San Francisco and Seattle. Announcements of the contracts for St. Louis, Kansas City, Denver and Salt Lake City are expected soon. An official of the New York office is in the South to arrange for exchanges in Atlanta and either Dallas or New Orleans.

Exhibitor Interest
This new system will mark an advance in motion picture distribution, it is said, in that local exhibitor interests will own a portion of the stock in each office, though the control will be vested in the parent company. This arrangement is expected to have the result of increasing the sales effort and assuring the exhibitor of the fullest co-operation. Each exchange will be under the direct supervision of the general sales management in New York and each will receive the entire exploitation and exhibitor aid service from the main office.

The company will start distribution through its own service with what it claims to be the greatest number of new short subjects ever offered by any organization.

"We feel that we have completed an epoch in our organization," said E. W. Hammons, vice-president and general manager. "When Educational began its activities, it generally was regarded as an experiment though we were convinced that there was ample room for us before the company was organized. We always have looked forward to the day when we could have our own distributing organization. We first had to establish the merit of our own product and then to win for ourselves a position of unquestioned dominance in the short subject field so that other producers of one and two-reel pictures would be in a position to sell us short which we were able to offer suitable sales facilities.

System Unsatisfactory
"The vast number of offers that we have had from various producing interests has been marked appreciation of the standing of this company. We have in the past been distributing through independent exchanges, but this has been unsatisfactory because we have in a large measure lost control of our product after the reels are sold. We have not been able to afford the exhibitors the sort of co-operation that we desired or to follow up our various pictures and keep a close touch on the exhibitorulse. We have appreciated, too, that it is not possible to properly handle both the short subjects and the feature through the same exchange.

"In establishing our own exchanges, we have departed from the usual policy in offering exhibitor interests in various territories participation in the ownership of each exchange. We have not undertaken to give our franchise of good will as a portion of the stock, but in each instance have supplied the cash. We believe that this local participation in the various exchanges will be an assurance to the exhibitors of each section, because all of them may be assured that the men who are interested in the exchange are going to deal from our company the utmost in quality pictures and the fullest amount of co-operation for the theatre.

Retains Control
"But we have avoided the danger of control of our pictures falling into the hands of any group of theatres and have assured a competitive exhibitor market by retaining the control of each exchange in the home company."

Educational publications include Bruce Scenes, Outing-Chester, Screenics, a series of forty foreign travel subjects, the Red Cross pictures, and a half dozen other scenic and travel pictures, as well as a number of educational and novelty subjects. In the comedy field there will be two-reel Chester, Torchy and Mermaid comedies and two other two-reelers to be announced shortly. Contracts already signed assure five two-reel comedies each month and it is possible that this will be increased, while one-reel comedies will be added in a short time.

K. C. Vitagraph Branch in New Exchange Home

Vitagraph's Kansas City branch has taken new and larger quarters in the exchange building, which has just been completed, at 1303 Third avenue.

In Seattle, Vitagraph has erected its own building, while in Portland, Ore., the company has opened a new exchange.

NEW YORK, May 19.—Cecil B. DeMille, who has been reported as considering offers from the "Big Four" and from the Associated Producers, has signed a five-year contract with Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

DeMille for more than five years has been director general and a member of the board of directors of Paramount. The director has returned to the West Coast to begin work on a production in which a new leading woman will be introduced.

The director said he decided to remain with Paramount because the organization is so splendidly capable of getting wide distribution of its product and because "it is not forced to levy exorbitant prices upon a few exhibitors."
Public Is Vague In its Picture Requirements
Director Says Exhibitor Also Is Unable to Prophesy For Hoi Polloi

Who Knows?

Does the exhibitor know what the public wants?
Is he qualified to tell the producer the public desires?
Does the director know?
Does the very public itself know?

Erich von Stroheim, well-known director, asked these questions in a talk before the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers in New York. The director’s answers to his questions were:

He was positive that the exhibitor could not prophesy for the hoi polloi.
He seemed a little less positive for the producer and director.

Another Feminine Star Has Been Acquired by Realart Corporation
Name Has Not Been Announced But it Is Said She Is a Popular Screen Personality—Extensive Publicity and Advertising Planned

Realart Pictures Corporation again has the trade guessing, for a condensed statement from the New York offices announces: "Realart has signed a new star."

"This is the fifth star acquired by Realart and, as in previous cases, the choice was a young woman. The big question is, who is she?"

Rumors have been current for some time that, Morris Kahn, president of Realart, was seeking new star material. It is understood that several names of established stars were under consideration. This report is quashed by the announcement that the young lady chosen reaches stardom for the first time under Realart.

Policy Is Successful

J. S. Woody, general manager of the company, declared that the policy of developing its own stars had been so successful in the cases of Constance Binney and Wanda Hawley that it was determined, to repeat the successful method. An extensive publicity and advertising campaign has been prepared to launch the new star.

Only meagre information has been given out concerning her, but it is known that the new star is a well-known and popular screen personality.

"While we are not prepared to announce the young lady’s name at present," said General Manager Woody, "we can promise that she will fill an entirely new niche in the Realart program. She is different from the men already signed and will be presented in a line of productions different from anything we now are offering."

"Once more Realart has decided to create a star. Although it was possible to go into the competitive market and obtain so-called established stars, we decided it would be more advantageous both for ourselves and our exhibitors to obtain new and fresh talent to develop in line with Realart standards."

Tell It to the Exhibitors

"Obtaining, as we have, a young lady who has been prominently featured as leading woman in some of the best productions of recent years, the exhibitor is offered a tangible and definite box-office asset upon which to introduce the new star to his patrons. He has a strong and substantial foundation at the outset to base his bid for patronage."

"As to the future, Realart policy opens up great possibilities. Unhampered by new performances in restricted stellar roles or by talent gone stale by traveling in rutts, we are able to take the young lady at the proper moment and guide her by expert direction to great heights."

"In this way, the young star develops her personality as a Realartist and becomes a definite asset for our company and its clients. This policy is working out so nicely in the cases of Miss Binney and Miss Hawley that we could not but choose to follow it again."

System In Its Infancy

"This announcement also will let the world know where Realart stands on the question of featuring, which has been much discussed recently, particularly the claim that the star system was being replaced by the feature production system."

"The star system is only in its infancy. It stands just about as much chance of disappearing from the motion picture industry as it does from the universe. Far from being in a moribund condition, it is one of the healthiest infants alive."

"The star system is based on the natural public tendency to make heroes and heroines and worship them. No matter how much credit the producer or the director deserves for their parts in making a production the public will never grant them one-half the interest they attach to the star."

Twenty-Six Additional Theatres in Chicago Sign With Vitagraph

Vitagraph’s increased activities in Chicago and its environs has been further evidenced, it is said, by the addition of twenty-six first-class theatres which now will present Vitagraph stars.

Through contracts just signed with Lubliner and Trinz fourteen theatres controlled by them were added to those already showing Vitagraph productions and twelve more were added through a similar contract with Ascher Brothers, who have now included the Larry Semon comedies in their book and who will exploit and present them as features.

The new contracts call for the next six or more productions of Alice Joyce, Corinne Griffith, Larry Semon, Harry T. Morey and Earle Williams.

Writes for Ray

ROB WAGNER
Whose Saturday Evening Post readers are legion, is now writing his first scenario for Charles Ray, which will be published through First National.

ERIC VON STROHEIM
He declared that if the public knew what it wanted those wants certainly were ephemeral.

"You could offer them something today," he said, "and the gladiatorial public would turn down their thumbs. Offer the same thing another day and they would eat it up."

Mr. Stroheim apostrophized the class anachronisms and inconsistencies still persisting in productions today. The war, he said, had bettered the industry in this respect. No longer was it possible to arm a film army with civil war rifles, put them on Flanders field, and get away with it. He believed that the time was coming and would soon be here when a picture could be an artistic success without being a financial flier.

Of special interest to the publicity men among Mr. Stroheim’s audience was his talk on the art and difficulties of the scenarist. As author and director of “Blind Husbands” and “The Devil’s Punchbowl” Stroheim was accepted as an authority on the scenario and its making. The speaker detailed the actual privations he had experienced in an attempt at recognition and to get food to eat.
Exhibitor Will Screen all Fifteen Episodes of “Lost City” in Week

In Class by Itself
"The only reason we have decided to adopt this course," he said, "was because the serial is the serial it is and, in our opinion, in a class by itself. We were too interested in the development of the story we were unable to convince ourselves that we should make our patrons wait two weeks between episodes, and that was the main cause of the decision." Mr. Heller believes this method of showing a serial will establish a new record in each of his houses, putting all present booking plans to the back-ground, and Mr. Friedman, from his knowledge of what the serial is doing in houses, where but one episode is shown a week, believes the results will exceed even the expectations of Mr. Heller.

Manager Heller is arranging some unusual publicity and exploitation "stunts," in connection with the showing and is bending every effort to put his idea across to complete success.

Plot Is Emphasized in "The Kentucky Colonel"
That "The Kentucky Colonel," the National Film Corporation feature which is now ready for publication, depends for its effectiveness on its plot, with the result that the plot is the claim of Joe Brandt, director general of National.

The picture was adapted for the screen from the novel of the same name by Opie Read and, though a love theme runs through it, the climax is reached when the hero and his friend meet in a duel to establish a point of honor.

Name Dunas Chicago
Hodkinson Manager
Phil Dunas, salesman for the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation for the past year, has been named manager of the Chicago office of the company. The appointment is in line with Mr. Hodkin-son's expressed policy of "promotion from our ranks."

Mr. Dunas has been active as manager and salesman in Chicago for the past eight years. He was manager of the Sunshine Film Company, and later served as salesman for the V. L. S. E., Universal, Goldwyn and Central Film exchanges. A year ago he joined the Hodkin-son force, covering Illinois and Indiana.

Reichert at Capital
For Realart Pictures
Louis Reichert has been appointed Washington manager of Realart Picture Corporation, succeeding William H. Rip-gard. Since February, 1920, Reichert has been assistant to Harry W. Willard, Realart's Chicago manager.

The new Washington manager has been with the picture industry more than fourteen years. He was first connected with Thomas A. Edison, Inc., as office manager of the foreign depart-ment. From there he went to General Film Company, as purchasing agent, which position he held for two years, when he returned to the office of assistant general manager. He later went with Metro.

50,000 Titles Suggested for Fox
Initial Five-Part Sunshine Comedy
Fifty thousand titles, it is said, have been suggested thus far by theatre manag-ers, fans and other people interested in motion pictures for the forthcoming five-part Sunshine comedy which Fox Film Corporation is producing under the personal supervision of Hampton Del Ruth.

No date has been set for selection of the title, but a statement from the company's New York offices indicates that an announcement will be made within the next six weeks giving the name of the person whose suggested title will be used.

Many Letters Daily
Four months ago, William Fox asked for suggestions from persons in this and in foreign countries. Since then, it is said, the daily mail has brought to the company's headquarters hundreds of letters proposing various names.

Nearly every town and city in the United States and Canada where pictures are shown are represented by people who have presented names, it is de-clared. The South American showmen have come forward with several thou-sands of titles.

From Great Britain the producer has received hundreds of attractive titles from exhibitors, as well as from thou-sands of fans. It is from Great Britain alone, of all the countries concerned in the contest, it is said, that the public has taken a hand in offering titles.

Foreign Parts Interested
Exhibitors in all parts of France, Belgium, Germany and Italy have contrib-uted a goodly share of suggestions, and Algiers and other parts of Africa are well represented.

Plans for the distribution of this Sun-shine special have been perfected for its publication in the near future. Special photos of attractive poses by the seventy-five Sunshine widows who throng the many scenes of the picture have been prepared for distribution.

With the publication of this produc-tion, Sunshine fans will have an opportunity of seeing together in one picture all of the Sunshine players who have been associated with this brand of film for many months. Among them will be found Alta Allen, prima donna of the piece; Harry Hecker, Laura LaVerne, Chester Conklin, Dorothy Lee, Alice Davenport, Glen Cavender, Ed Kennedy, Jack Cooper, Ethel Teare, Blanche Pay-son, Slim Somerville, Tom Kennedy, Rosa Gore, Hyman Binnsky and Bobby Dunn.

Doctors View Privately
"Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde"
Leading members of the medical pro-fession in Toronto, Canada, were given a private showing recently of the Para-mount Artcraft production F.Dr. Jekill and Mr. Hyde." All were enthusiastic over the picture.

Before the screening of the picture, Albert E. S. Smythe, president of the Theosophical Society of Canada, dis-cussed the problems of psycho-analysis.
CONFIDENCE IN PRODUCER ESSENTIAL

J. S. Woody Says That Practically All of the Leading Exhibitors Have Booked Wanda Hawley’s First Subject Solely On the Strength of Realart Pictures Promise

Confidence in the producer is essential to the proper development of the motion picture industry, according to J. S. Woody, general manager of Realart Pictures Corporation, in commenting on the fact that practically all of the leading exhibitors of the country have booked Wanda Hawley’s initial production, “Miss Hobbs,” solely on the strength of Realart’s promise of a worthwhile production.

“It has proved that if exhibitors can be convinced of the honesty of a producer, they will trust him as they would any other friend. The results speak for themselves. ‘Miss Hobbs’ today is sold in every nook and corner of the United States. Playing dates are set and in our hands. Prints allotted to our various branches are booked solid for two months, despite the fact that the printing order was increased by one third for this production. You can’t beat that, can you, as evidence of the fact that all the exhibitor asks is a square deal?”

“We are proud of the confidence that has been manifested in us and now we are going to keep faith. Exhibitors will need their saucers ready when Miss Hobbs’ comes along.

“It is important for a motion picture concern to have a definite idea of its probable income. The manufacturing plants of the country, from the harvesting machine to matches, fix their budgets on a quarterly or yearly basis of unrolled contracts. Steel is perhaps the best industry to illustrate this point, but there is hardly one that does not bear it out.

Letters Are Frank

“...and so it seems to me, a similar condition is bound to come to the motion picture industry. The high class exhibitor appreciates this. Some of the letters we have received recently are notable for their frankness. Look at this one from E. H. Hulsey, general manager of Southern Enterprises, Inc.:

‘You have violated precedent in favor of the exhibitors,’ he writes: ‘hence, I am violating one of our precedents in your favor.’

“The rule I am setting aside for the first time in three years concerns the writing of letters regarding our opinion of pictures.

“I feel, however, that you are thoroughly entitled to commendation for the unusual method you have adopted of introducing your new star, Wanda Hawley. To offer one picture instead of rushing forth with a series contract to your regular customers is the refusal of the producer which is more noteworthy.

Certain of Popularity

“We have booked ‘Miss Hobbs,’ the first Wanda Hawley production, without previewing. We have done this because we are certain of the popularity with our audiences, because we have pre-tested the suitability of her first story and because of your method of offering this picture is such as to indicate your own faith in your undertaking.

“You have our ‘best wishes for success’ in your new venture. Our confidence was indicated by our prompt expression of willingness to meet you more than half way.”

Another letter was from Tom Moore of Indianapolis. He says he booked Miss Wanda Hawley in ‘Miss Hobbs’ because of his knowledge of Miss Hawley’s entire future and success with Realart hinge on her first production, and realizing this fact I feel quite certain that ‘Miss Hobbs’ will reach my fullest expectations, not forgetting in the meantime, the good treatment accorded me by Realart executives,” he writes.

Bingham and Company, operating the Oriental and Regent theatres at Indianapolis, in commending the Realart plan of booking “Miss Hobbs,” forward this signal compliment: “We have had various experiences in the film game and we wish to assure you that this is the first time we have done this sort of thing.”

Exportation of Films Is Steadily Increasing

WASHINGTON—Exports of motion picture films are increasing steadily according to a report just issued by the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce of the department of commerce. During March our shipments to foreign countries included 2,106,688 linear feet of unexposed film, valued at $65,743, and 25,789,100 feet of exposed film, with a value of $1,141,204.

While our export business in unexposed film is concentrated among a few friendly countries, exposed films appear to be reaching every corner of the earth, among the countries receiving shipments during March being Germany, Russia, Turkey, Haiti, Japan, China and the Congo.

The entire foreign rights for 'The Hope Diamond Mystery' serial will be controlled by Bech, Van Siclen & Company, 42 East Seventeenth street, New York City, according to a statement by L. C. Wheeler, treasurer of Kosnik Films, Inc., for which company the serial is being made. Stuart Paton is directing Grace Darmond, George Cheseboro, and an all-star cast.

The very fact that we are receiving flattering propositions by cable from England, India and France for foreign rights to 'The Hope Diamond Mystery' is the best proof that the 'showmen of these countries appreciate the value of our serial,' asserted Mr. Wheeler. "You may state that we have not closed for any territory and will not until the entire serial is completed. We have the goods and we know that when they are shown there will be a scramble on.

"The fact that May Yohe, formerly Lady Francis Hope, wrote her life story into the serial and also appears in the film is an item that is appreciated by the shrewd film men of England, Canada, Australia and elsewhere.

Jans Sells Rights On Olive Tell Production

In an announcement from the home offices of Jans Pictures, Inc., the sale of state rights for Louisiana and Mississippi on "Love Without Question" to the First National Exhibitors Exchange of New Orleans is recorded.

This sale leaves very little territory on the first Olive Tell production still to be disposed of, it is said.

Proof
That Twenty-Four Sheets as Well As Billboards May Be Used to An Advantage In Advertising

Exhibitors with the "show me" spirit, attention!

Many towmen in the past have described the value of twenty-four sheets and billboards in advertising the productions running at their theatres.

To satisfy the "show me" spirit of these theatre managers and to prove that twenty-four sheets and billboards serve their purpose well, Selznick Pictures made an experiment on Seventh avenue in New York.

Chief in the feminine support of Mr. Faversham in this picture is Lucy Bolton, whose popularity is recognized as being nation-wide through a long list of series, as well as having brought her a host of admirers. Other widely known motion picture people who have been engaged include Eleanor de Cordoba, Henry Warwick, Lulu Warren, Evelyn Sherman, Bobby Agnew and Frank Evans.

The story of "The Sin That Was His" was written by Frank L. Packard, who wrote "The Miracle Man," acknowledged one of the best stories ever devised for the screen.

William Faversham, whose first Selznick production, "The Man Who Lost Honolulu," has just been released, has started on his second picture for the company, "The Sin That Was His" under the direction of Hobart Henley.

Follow Stage Version
In Filming Cohan Play

That "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway" George M. Cohan's stage success was successfully picturized by the Arthur S. Kane Pictures Corp. with Charles Ray as the star for First National distribution, will follow closely the stage version is the announcement made by the producer.

The needs of screen adaptation are very often sufficient excuse for radical changes in the form and story of copy-play vehicles," said Mr. Kane. "In the case of "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway" we are fortunate in having a story especially suited and easily adaptable for screen purposes. The spirit of the score is being retained intact. The picture from "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway" will be pleasantly familiar to old-time theatre-goers and delightfully surprising to the new."
"Courage of Marge O'Doone" Has Genuine Dramatic Merit

The Courage of Marge O'Doone," James Oliver Curwood's novel of life "North of 33," is tellingly transcribed by Vitagraph in the special production of the same name. It is a box office attraction of unquestionable merit, especially notable at this time as representing the type of motion picture that becomes all important with the passing of the star system.

Though Pauline Starke and Niles Welch, leading players in the production, both have been starred in features by various companies, they are not commonly referred to as "stars of the first magnitude." Their salaries have not been played up by fan magazines in special articles.

In the sterling contributions they make to the success of the present production may be seen a concrete working out of the new and logically arrived at system. The composition, as a whole, is proof of the soundness of the argument upon which the new scheme of things is based.

As readers know, "The Courage of Marge O'Doone" is a virile narrative, typical of the author's undeniably popular style. It deals not in commonplace, hackneyed incidents rearranged and stock characters monotonously paraded—but in novel situations, primitive emotions and characters that coincide.

It is obvious that expense was not the consideration of the producing company. Several scenes were essential to the success of the play and genuine locations were obtained. They are not mere "back lot" sets; they are vast, unbroken stretches of whiteness that seem to transport the observer bodily to the scene of the action.

The play opens with a melodramatic prologue that bristles with action. With no more than absolutely essential explanation the first half reel passes swiftly, leaving the audience so deeply interested in what is to follow that a protracted period of straight narrative and character portrayal is bridged successfully.

In the prologue, Michael O'Doone, who lives with his wife and small daughter, Marge, in the snow country, beloved of all who know him for his kind deeds and cheerful philosophy, leaves his cabin to go to the aid of an Indian who has been stricken ill. While he is gone, Tavish, who covets his wife, visits the cabin, but is frightened away.

O'Doone suffers an accident which delays his return, but his dog team arrives at the cabin without him. His wife, her reason failing her, believes that Tavish, who returns, is her husband and goes to his cabin with him, taking Marge. When she recovers her reason she escapes, leaving the child with Tavish.

Years later, David Raine, who has been unfortunate in love, seeks forgetfulness in the North country. He meets Father Roland, a kindly old man whose good deeds have earned him that title, and journeys with him into the fastness. On the train he finds a photograph of a girl whose personality at once charms him. Upon the back of the picture is her written appeal for rescue.

Journeying fifteen hundred miles over the mountains with only Baree, an outlaw dog which recognizes only him as friend, as companion, he comes upon Marge O'Doone, the girl of the picture, whose only friend is a bear, which acts as a bodyguard.

Together they return to "The Nest," a notorious resort in the wilderness, where Marge's guardian has sold her to a ruffian. The following day a bear fight is staged in which Marge's pet vanquishes its adversary. Marge, confined to a room, nude, escapes and inspires Raine to victory in his struggle with the bully of the community, who covets Marge.

Back across the mountain they come, meeting Michael O'Doone, "Father Roland," and his wife, who has found him after a search of years, and receiving their blessing.

The action, which slows down materially after the prologue, maintains a steady pace until the lovers have returned to the mountain resort. Here it takes on a more sinister gait, building up rapidly to the big scenes and continuing throughout a chase, at the end of which Marge O'Doone and David Raine defend a deserted cabin against the ruffians. In the fight which takes place here Baree is killed in defending his master and the bear avenges his death.

Quickly then the picture is brought to a close—a close which should send audiences away eminently satisfied.

As concerns the advertising of the picture, the exhibitor will do well to utilize the splendid copy used by Vitagraph in its trade paper advertising. It is forceful selling argument and lends itself admirably to newspaper use.

In addition to this, two excellent campaign books are furnished. They cover the ground thoroughly, describing innumerable devices that may be used with good effect and suggesting exploitation features that are certain to have the desired result.

Exhibitors who play the picture will do well to take full advantage of the opportunities offered, for the picture is one which should be shown to the largest audiences that can be assembled. The exhibitor's signature can be affixed to a guarantee with complete confidence.

Camera Work Complete
On First Hawley Film

Camera work on "Miss Hobbs." Wanda Hawley's first production for Realart has been completed at the Realart studios in Hollywood, and the work of titling and cutting is now being done. The picture will be ready for publication early in June.

The final scenes for the picture were taken at Carmel, Calif., one of the most famous historical shrines in America, where Director Donald Crisp took the company for some exterior shots. He is said to have obtained some exceptionally beautiful outdoor scenes.

Falkner and Tyrol in Producing Corporation

Falkner and Tyrol Productions, Inc., has been formed and incorporated for $250,000, it being the present plan to produce four features annually and to purchase finished productions.

Tred W. Falkner is president of the new concern, and Jacques Tyrol is secretary and general director. Offices have been opened at 117 West 46th St., New York. It is said that rights to several Broadway successes already have been purchased.

Three scenes from Vitagraph's picturization of James Oliver Curwood's novel, a story of the Canadian north, which contains many melodramatic thrills.

Cropper Indicates That Demand for Reelcraft Pictures Exceeds Supply

Distribution Matters Discussed at Chicago Meeting Which Is Attended by Branch Managers In the Middle West

R. C. Cropper, president of Reelcraft Pictures Corporation, announceS that the demand for Reelcraft short subjects at present exceeds the supply.

The president based his statement upon data gathered during his recent tour of the company exchanges and allied distributors.

Report Many Sales

Standard Film Service of Cleveland, Cincinnati and Detroit: S. & S. Film and Supply Company of Pittsburgh: Dooley Exchanges Inc., Buffalo and Syracuse R. D. Marson Attractions of Boston, all distributors of Reelcraft pictures, and the managers of the Reelcraft exchanges in New York, Chicago, Indianapolis, Milwaukee and Minneapolis, report an unprecedented number of bookings on their short subjects, he says.

While in Chicago, Mr. Cropper called a conference of branch managers. Managers Carl Harthill of the Chicago branch, George Wilson of the Indianapolis branch, Larry Stiles of the Milwaukee branch, Harry Muir of the Minneapolis branch, and Vice-President Frederick I. Ireland, in charge of productions at the Chicago studio, were present. Important matters concerning distribution were considered. The future plans of the producing department also were outlined.

Discuss Educational Series

Discussion relative to the coming series of educational pictures brought forth many interesting facts not generally known, it is said. It appears from facts offered that the United States department of agriculture is one of the largest producers of interesting educational subjects in the United States, not confining the subjects to one and two reels, but owning at least one eight-reel feature picturizing “Cotton,” from the seed to the finished product and all of the by-products of the cotton plant. Other series range from a one-reel educational, titled “Why Eat Cottage Cheese,” to a photographic illustration of how to make hens lay more eggs. Reelcraft plans its educational to be along these same interesting lines.

Build More Stages

Increased production at the West Coast studios has compelled Studio Manager Nat Spitzer to build additional stages to accommodate producing companies. Three companies are working at the Hollywood plant and provision is being made for another producing unit. Texas Guinan is making a series of two-reel Westers under the direction of Jay Hunt. Billy Franey, under the direction of George Jeske, is producing a series of one-reel comedies, and has been working nights and Sundays endeavoring to have several productions completed before May 17, which has been set as the first publication date. Milburn Moranti is at work on a series of two-reel comedies of a farcical nature.

Production at the Chicago studio is going on rapidly, with Alice Howell making her two-reel comedies.

Rothacker Recalls 10 Years Ago When Film Company Was Founded

The curtain rises. The scene is the interior of Watterson R. Rothacker’s office at the Chicago headquarters of Rothacker Film Manufacturing Corporation.

Time, one Saturday in May, 1920.

Mr. Rothacker, president of the company, is seated at his desk gazing reminiscently out the window. Off stage employees of the firm are very perturbed, for ordinarily their chief is such a busy man that he dictates even his shoulder as he hurries in and out of the plant.

A hum of voices is heard off stage.

Director Ray Attenk: “It can’t be the weather. It isn’t hot enough yet.”

S. J. Stoughton: “I’ll call a nearby doctor.”

F. W. Kramper (whispering): “I’ll phone his wife.”

The three were startled as their chief suddenly turned in his chair, chuckled at the discomfiture of the group, and shouted:

“FELLOWS, WE’RE TEN YEARS OLD!”

Then each in the group looked at the other and each began to smile, for they realized that it was the tenth anniversary of the organization. Mr. Rothacker would not be the least old, for having been established in 1910.

Today work is being turned away at the Chicago Rothacker laboratories. Treasurer H. J. Aldous is in Los Angeles to let the contract for construction of the Coast laboratories. Mr. Rothacker has a site option for another in New York. Next summer he goes to Europe to start a laboratory in London and a service station in Paris.

Today the Rothacker industrial division has branches in New York, Buffalo, St. Louis, Los Angeles and Philadelphia and others are to be established in Detroit, Boston and New Orleans.

Reelcraft Officials

spent considerable time at the Chicago studio, preparing to make room for an additional producing unit. The out-of-town managers were kept busy entertaining exhibitors from their local territories, showing them around the studio, while Alice Howell was at work on her “Cinderella Cinder” picture.

Foreign Rights Are Sold

The entire foreign rights on the “Jolly” comedies have been sold by Film Specials of New York to M. P. Sales Agency Ltd., London, England. The Wisconsin, Minnesota and North and South Dakota rights have been disposed of to Mid-West Distributing Company, Milwaukee; Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana territory to Oregon Film Exchange, Portland, and California, Arizona and Nevada rights to Peerless Film Service, Inc., San Francisco.
Italian Interests Seeking Embargo

On Importation of American Films

Foreign Producer Declares That Motion Picture Men Abroad Say Laboratories More Highly Perfected Than in U. S.

NEW YORK, May 15.—Motion picture interests in Italy are urging government officials to place an embargo on the importation of American films.

This interesting statement on the foreign situation was given exclusively to a representative of the Exhibitors Herald by a well-known Italian producer who arrived recently in this country.

Purpose Is Twofold

There is a twofold purpose prompting this sentiment, according to the producer. First is the effort of Italian interests to make work for their own laboratories, and second is the exchange rate situation.

Laboratories in Italy, in the opinion of native interests there, according to the producer, are better equipped with newly perfected devices for the printing of positive film than are the American plants.

The producer said that it was accepted generally in his country that once this embargo was placed it would not be removed unless American producers agreed to send negatives to Italy, where the positive prints could be made for that country and surrounding localities.

Interchange System

It is also claimed, according to the producer, that before the embargo is lifted, if ever it is placed, the film men will demand from the government that some arrangement be worked out with the American producers whereby there will be established some system of interchanging American films for Italian films. That is, the Italian film men plan on working out a scheme whereby for every American film imported there will be exported to America an Italian film, or one of Italian films that are of sufficient value to equal the value of the American product.

He declared that it was claimed that in this way the exchange rate between the two countries would become more stabilized, and it was predicted that if this plan were put into effect with any degree of success among the film industry, a similar system would be inaugurated in other industries where the Italians and the Americans are manufacturing a like art.

Others Not Affected

Whether or not the real purpose back of this plan is to stabilize the exchange between the two countries is a matter of speculation. In contrast to this plan, as relates to American films, it has been pointed out that there is no attempt being made to work out a similar arrangement with the English, French, Swedish or German producers, in spite of the fact that the rate of exchange between Italy and these countries is also causing the Italians serious loss.

The real purpose back of this movement is that the Italian, like many other foreign producers, realizes that his native people are coming to recognize that American productions are superior to all others. In his effort to push his own products, he is using the difference in the exchange as a blind.

Moss Contracts for "Return of Tarzan"

NEW YORK, May 15.—"The Return of Tarzan," will open at B. S. Moss' Broadway theatre on June 1st, an indefinite run. The first Tarzan picture, "Tarzan of the Apes," scored a record-breaking success at the Broadway several years ago.

In anticipation of a long run of this Goldwyn production, the management of the Broadway is making no bookings for the weeks following May 30. It is probable that shortly after that date, indefinite run engagements will be launched at the leading theatres in other large cities. Goldwyn Distributing Corporation will handle the picture as a big special production in all territories.

Alfred D. Brick of Bayonne, N. J., is sporting a black eye and a bruised nose —and is proud of it. These evidences of calumetry do not indicate that Brick was the vanquished party in a battle, but are the result of his having gone up in a Navy airship to take pictures for Fox News and having come down much more rapidly than is considered proper for airships and their crews. But he got the pictures he was after.

What the Picture Did for Jenkins!

With the May 7 issue of "The Squawk," the house organ published by J. C. Jenkins, proprietor of the Auditorium theatre, Neligh, Neb., this form of advertising attained its highest efficiency. Mr. Jenkins, whose theatre newspaper long has been pointed out as the best in its class, has advanced it a long step ahead of its rivals by providing a basis of facts that cannot be questioned, authority that carries weight.

Mr. Jenkins' innovation, like most innovations, is striking in its simplicity. It consists of backing up his claims for coming attractions with statements culled from the "What the Picture Did for Me" department of EXHIBITORS HERALD.

That there is sound logic in the idea, that it is practical and that its practicality is demonstrable, is best attested by Mr. Jenkins' own words in his report on "In Old Kentucky," presented herewith.

"The best advertising on earth," though a strong statement, is well founded. There are innumerable good points in Mr. Jenkins' method, and no weak ones. "The Squawk" is read by Auditorium patrons. It is written by a publisher in chatty, informal style, in every-day English. And the editorials, usually semi-humorous personal narratives, are better reading than that found in most popular magazines.

Readers who do not know Mr. Jenkins personally know him well by his writing. What he says carries weight, for he does not play with the truth in his printed statements.

When his claims are backed up by the statements of a score of other theatre men in as many cities and states the claims made for a given picture are accepted as facts.

The following is an exact transcript of that portion of "The Squawk" for May 7, which applies to the present discussion.

Next Week's Attractions

You can't judge so well by what we say of a coming attraction as you can by what other exhibitors say who have played it. We might be prejudiced and therefore high-light our opinion. If you will read the following reports, you ought to be able to form an accurate opinion as to whether or not the attraction will please you. If they pleased in other towns they should please here. These reports are taken from the Exhibitors Herald and are unbiased. The attractions for next week come in the following order:

Monday, Bert Lytell in "Blackie's Redemption" (Crook).

Wednesday, Louis Bennison in "High Pockets" (Western).

Friday and Saturday, Kay Laurell in "The Brand" (Alaskan).

The Brand, with Kay Laurell.—Fine from a box office standpoint, Excellent picture.—J. C. Geller, Peninsula theatre, Portland, Ore.—Suburban patronage.

High Pockets, with Louis Bennison.—Good.—J. W. Baird, Crystal theatre, Plattsburg, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Brand, with Kay Laurell.—A very pleasing offering. Exceptionally good story. Star great. Business good. Author popular.—J. C. Wilson, Star theatre, Clinton, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Blackie's Redemption, with Bert Lytell.—Star popular. Good story.—Mrs. R. J. Jordan, Hinsdale theatre, Hinsdale, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Blackie's Redemption, with Bert Lytell.—You can't go wrong on Bert Lytell. We take them all and never get a poor one.—G. L. Deady, Palace theatre, North Rose, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Brand, with Kay Laurell.—One of Rex Beach's best. Only fair business due to sickness.—H. M. Bird, Summer theatre, Summer, Wash.—Small town patronage.

High Pockets, with Louis Bennison.—Bennison satisfying our patrons and we do good with him. This is a good picture.—C. T. Metcalf, Opera House, Greenfield, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Ramsey's Open Work Page-Deep Powerful

With the shortage of newsprint paper at its present point, with newspapers cutting down in size, dropping running heads, eliminating advertisements and all but the most vital news, it would be interesting to know by what process the best intentioned theatre advertiser could obtain four columns for display. It is even more interesting, perhaps, to consider what one exhibitor who did obtain such space did with it.

Howard G. Ramsey, proprietor of the Royal theatre, El Dorado, Kan., managed recently to buy that quantity of space for a display advertisement of "Why Change Your Wife?" Cecil B. DeMille's recent

Moore's Strand Theater

A three-column display that gave prestige to the picture advertised by Tom Moore's Strand theater, Washington, D. C.

Moore's Old English Set-Up Is Impressive

That there is such a thing as a class picture has been demonstrated. That it is foolhardy to present a class picture to an ill-assorted audience is no less common knowledge. What is less familiar is the means by which the advertiser may predetermine the class to which his picture is to be shown. One method is illustrated above.

When Tom Moore booked "The Servant in the House" for his Strand theatre, Washington, D. C., he believed that its appeal was stronger to what is commonly termed "the better class."

It was to this class that the stage play had been presented most successfully, so there was excellent ground for his reasoning. He went over the matter of limiting his audience to that class in the workmanlike manner that he has gone about practically all matters pertaining to the successful operation of his well and widely known theatres.

It is an unusual thing to find Old English in present day newspapers. The moderns tired of it long ago. That is why it was abandoned. But the term, "the moderns," must not be misinterpreted.

The class that is the better literature, that knows painting, music, drama, not as pastime, but as art, is not and never was opposed to the elaborate old type face.

Mr. Moore doubtless knew that many would pass his advertisement without attempting to learn what it was all about. He was satisfied that those who would pass it should pass it.
Contest That Stirs Indianapolis
Exploits "The Luck of the Irish"

Common as are exploitation contests in this day of progressive advertisers, special credit must be given to Robert M. Eichelsdoerfer, director of the F. J. Rembusch Enterprises publicity department, and Harry Koch, manager of the Ohio theatre, Indianapolis, Ind., for their recent campaign conducted in the interests of "The Luck of the Irish," then showing at the Ohio, for obtaining all of the good results of the contest and eliminating practically all of the objectionable features.

As is well known, a string of pearls plays an important part in the picture. It is one of the chief factors about which the action centers.

It was natural that a thinking showman should think of the possibility of offering a pearl necklace as a reward in a contest of some sort, and just as natural, perhaps, that he should abandon the idea as impractical owing to the high price of pearls.

The gentleman in charge of the Ohio theatre campaign, did not, however, abandon the idea.

Instead—they visited a jeweler.

Leo Krauss was the merchant approached on the subject, and it was not difficult to show him the good things to be gained by lending a helping hand.

The window display which is reproduced herewith gives a very clear idea of the extent to which he shared faith with the showmen. It is the best window in this store, and many claim that the display is the best that ever graced it. Certain it is that it attracted more attention than anything within the memory of the neighboring trades folk.

About the necklace which was offered to the holder of the lucky number little is said beyond that it was of sufficient value to justify the publicity that the event was given.

More important is the manner in which it was offered.

In this matter the objectionable disappointment element which has ruined many an otherwise successful contest was eliminated by "keeping out of debt." No person was urged to take a chance. No person who took one had any claim whatsoever upon the theatre or the jeweler—for he gave nothing in return.

The chances are that he did not forget about it, however, for business was of such magnitude during the run that it was apparent some extraordinary attraction was responsible.

In order that the jeweler might not believe himself loser for his participation and cooperation, notwithstanding the added attention his window received, a screen announcement pertaining to that window was made and Mr. Krauss himself was provided with plenty of free tickets to use as he saw fit.

Perhaps you do not realize what a free ticket to a theatre means to one not in the habit of getting them. If so, try sometime to buy a friend or relative tickets to a certain show. They may accept them. If they do they will register gratitude measurable by the expenditure represented. Again, later, give that same person complimentary tickets. The expenditure represented is supposedly nil. The gratitude is immeasurable. Don't try to explain the phenomenon—use it.

The Ohio theatre contest was successful in more ways than one.

It got business. It formed a valuable popular association with a hitherto untried institution, the jewelry store. It made the people believe the picture was something big before they saw it—and the picture convinced them.

The necklace, of course, was for good measure. And it paid for itself many times over.

The next time a brilliant idea occurs to you—don't drop it because it is expensive. There never was a "too good" idea.

Front view of the Ohio theatre, Indianapolis, Ind., during the intensively exploited engagement of "The Luck of the Irish," Allan Dwan's Realart production.

A jeweler's window which stimulated interest in the "prize pearls" contest conducted by the Ohio theatre, Indianapolis, Ind.
Possibly the last remaining objection to the store window as an exploitation possibility is removed with the account of the unique employment of two drug store windows in San Francisco in advertising "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" during its engagement at the Imperial theatre.

That motion was not a feature of the store window display, and that its attractive powers were greatly diminished because of that lack, has been the sole objection offered to this form of advertising.

There was motion in the Imperial displays.

As may be seen in the illustrations presented herewith, a circular stage was installed in the center of the window. A razor display, which is unimportant, occupied the outer portion of the window floor.

As the stage revolved slowly two scenes from the play were disclosed alternately, one showing the star, John Barrymore, in effigy as Mr. Hyde, the other as Dr. Jekyll.

By the very motion of the setting attention was attracted.

By the revolutionary nature of that motion attention was held while a complete view of all sides of the center piece could be obtained.

It is safe to say that the motion display is worth many times as much as the still advertisement. To note and determine the cause of any and all motion is one of the primal instincts. It is one that advertisers do well to recognize.

Perhaps it is in that fact, that motion does play upon a primal instinct, that the remarkable success of the Imperial advertising window lies.

Exhibitors do well to consider the less obvious facts when preparing campaigns. To dispose of such suggestions with superior sneers, masking ignorance, is a simple but certainly not creditable expedient.

To take them seriously into consideration, to build campaigns and individual advertisements upon the firmest of all foundations, human nature, is the best sort of advertising.

Motion picture producers realize the importance of playing upon human nature and human emotions. They have learned it of that master teacher, experience.

The picture that does not strike a human note, does not play upon human emotions and set up sympathetic emotions in its audiences, cannot be called a complete success.

Advertising that does not arouse human sympathy is as much a failure as the picture that falls short of this requirement.

In the present instance at least one important disclosure is made.

Window displays are unquestionably valuable. When motion can be introduced that value is immeasurably enhanced. When it can be introduced in connection with a display as good as the Imperial composition, a composition in which two scenes from the play representing the two important phases of that play are represented, there can be no question of the value of the enterprise.

A drug store window in San Francisco, Cal., fitted out with a revolving stage carrying two scenes from "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," then showing at the Imperial.

Another view of the revolving stage used as a window display for "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde."

Ideas

Ideas are the advertiser's most important working materials. Ideas are found in unexpected places and at unexpected times. It is easy to forget them.

A word or two scribbled upon the back of an envelope or whatever surface is available will serve to freshen the memory. It's a good habit to cultivate.

What Next?

In Richmond, Va., Ken Findley, manager of the Broadway theatre, lost his bet with Jack Peggler, of the Mayflower Film Corp., that there weren't 15,000 children with Irish surnames in the city. He offered a free admission to every youngster whose name was savor of the Celtic and they came in such numbers that the only line he could draw was the color line. He still believes one of them misrepresented—but he finds consolation in a front page news story.

Citizens of Canton, Ohio, congested one of the most prominent business streets recently to watch a death struggle between a man and a woman on the roof of one of the highest buildings. Breathing ceased when the man slipped and plunged headlong to the sidewalk—bearing a sign which read, "Don't Miss 'The Luck of the Irish' at the Alhambra Theatre."

A "Cock-Eyed Quartette" was employed by Paul Gray to parade Dayton, O., streets while "Down On the Farm" was being shown at Loew's Dayton theatre. Nature provided the material and material provided—business.

They made Oriental dancers out of ten Avant, Oklahoma, girls, when they couldn't get professional ones for the prologue when "Eyes of Youth" was shown. Everybody, approximately, came.

Cliff A. Carroll, manager of the Carroll theatre, Rome, N. Y., took six chorus girls from a local theatre on one of the longest afternoon automobile rides they had ever experienced. When he finally let them out they found a sign upon the car reading, "Chorus Girls! Chorus Girls! Chorus Girls! Here They Are. Look at Them." The next few lines told about Anita Stewart as a chorus girl in "The Mind of the Paint Girl" at the Carroll theatre. Mr. Carroll escaped without injury.

What exploitation expert has purchased the space privilege on that rocket they're going to send to Mars? It ought to be a good investment, whether the rocket rockets or not.
Alhambra Atmosphere

George Fischer and Edward J. Weisfeldt, manager and exploitation director of the Alhambra theatre, Milwaukee, Wis., believe that the picture that is worth playing is worth playing right. The theatre is practically reconstructed for every production featured.

The above photographs show the striking screen setting and a lobby niche decorated for "The River's End".

Below may be seen the lobby as it appeared during the run of "The Virgin of Stamboul."
Timeliness

Timeliness can always be capitalized. Exhibitors who played "The World Avlame," "The Greatest Question," and similar timely productions know the added value that timeliness gave these attractions.

But not all timely productions are stamped "timely" in title or descriptive sub-line. In many pictures that are published without undue ostentation contain sub-plots or incidents that have a distinct value because of their relation to matters of current importance.

The best way to keep informed on these matters is by careful attention to reviews and synopses. Reviews in this publication call special attention to "Aflame," "Extraordinary Wives," "Oyez, Oyez," "Eyed of Youth," and others.

Rialto Theatre Style Varies With Pictures

American exhibitor advertisers seem evenly divided upon the question of style. For every man that advocates adherence to a set style for all pictures there is another man advancing claims that each production should be advertised in a distinctive manner. Without attempting to pronounce either right or wrong, it is worth while to give attention to a theatre of the latter classification.

The Rialto theatre, Tulsa, Okla., in the Rialto, uses a specific style for each production played. The Rialto advertising manager is a keen thinker, a man who does not follow custom when the breaking of a precedent will further his aims and bring business.

Herewith are presented two recent Rialto compositions, both big displays greatly reduced in the reproduction. The "Eyes of Youth" display is as unlike the "Silk Husbands and Calico Wives" composition as it could have been made, yet reports indicate that both were powerful in a box office sense.

In the former the opinions of men and organizations from all parts of the country were worked into the layout, two small cuts being the only material not taken from the printer's stock. It is a device not customarily used, and a device that should be used occasionally by every exhibitor.

The other composition is apparently a stock cut to which has been added the box containing theatre name and playing dates. It is an unusual display and doubtless owes much of its success to that fact.

The Rialto theatre is said to be extremely successful with this method of varying styles with productions. It's argument will have weight with many.

Bank Aids Theatre In Unusual Exploitation

Every exhibitor that effects a new tie-up, a more intimate relationship between hitherto unrelated bodies, does the motion picture industry a genuine service. In opening up new avenues for exploitation the exhibitor is furthering his own cause and the cause of his profession.

"The Virgin of Stamboul," Priscilla Dean's Universal-Jewel production, was shown at the Ansonia theatre, Butte, Mont., to the biggest business that theatre has experienced. A new tie-up, and a promising one, was one of the reasons for the big patronage.

Paul De Mordaunt, manager of the Ansonia, with H. Elliott Stuckel, publicity manager for the Butte branch of Universal, arranged with the Silver Bow National Bank for vault space in which to keep the print while the picture was in engagement.

Policemen were assigned to the guarding of the film on its way to and from the bank.

A bonding company bonded every employee through whose hands the print was passed during its stay in Butte.

The whole affair was conducted with an air of seriousness which gave the impression that the $500,000 value advertised was the value of this particular print alone.

The business mentioned was one of the results.

Another result was the linking of names, theatre with bank, and an association of ideas is mighty important to the theatre.

Timidity is too often man's chief fault. The chief difference between the big men and the little men of history is that the big men did what the little men thought of doing.

The exhibitor, particularly, of all business men, because his success or failure is measured by his advertising and exploitation ability, cannot afford to be timid.

A Dynamic Drama of Domestic Differences

An effective layout gives force to this easily-read five-column ad from the Rialto theatre, Tulsa, Okla.
H. A. Albright, manager of the American theatre, Butte, Mont., believes in keeping some single phrase constantly in the public eye. In this lobby display the title of the picture is used.

H. A. Albright’s “Coca Cola” Sets “Tell ‘em Quick and Tell ‘Em Often”

H. A. Albright, manager of the American theatre, Butte, Mont., can be depended upon to come forth with something new and something good just about as often as any man in the theatre advertising business. And that something can be depended upon to be just about as good as anything that is offered during his reticent periods.

The latest material from the Albright brain and hand is a “Coca Cola” lobby theory that is as good if not better than anything of like nature recently advanced.

The “Coca Cola” association is Mr. Albright’s own. He states frankly that his lobby theory is identical with the theory back of the advertising which has made that drink a nationally known product.

“I believe,” says Mr. Albright, “that when one is selling a good star or a good story the main thing to do is to get it before the people as many times and in as many places as possible.”

Speaking of the front used for “Thou Art the Man,” he says, “Robert Warwick is an established product. You will note that I have coined a name for him which, I think, has greater sales value, just as has Coca Cola. A freak front would help none in the least to push the sale of Coca Cola, nor of Big Bob Warwick. Why not get ‘em just as Coca Cola does—put a reminder on every place possible? A person passing this front could hardly overlook the fact that Warwick was on the screen.”

When “Sex” was the production upon exhibition the title of the picture was chosen as the point to be featured. It is brief, sounds vital, may be spoken easily and read instantaneously.

That its constant repetition is provocative of concrete results a glance at the photograph reproduced herewith will testify.

We do not often have an opportunity to present photographs of better lobby displays than those upon this page. We do present more elaborate ones, occasionally a more expensive one, but it is doubtful if many of these have the direct hitting force of the Albright product.

In the “Sex” display the letters are in black against a bright orange background except for the shadow-box which hangs in the center above the sidewalk, where the color scheme is reversed.

Mr. Albright does his own painting and knows color value. His choice in this instance is ideal. There is that in the production, and in the title, which is easily associated with those hues.

But the Albright theory is the thing.

The lobby display which includes a miniature mountain, running water, horses, chickens, perhaps an automobile or a threshing machine, undoubtedly arrests attention. But it is the mountain, water, horses, chickens, automobile or threshing machine that attention centers upon.

The Albright lobby appeals as strongly to the eye. It is obviously impossible to pass within sight of the display and fail to catch the full significance of it.

And here it is the title or the star that gets the attention.

That is the thing that is to be sold.

Readers will recall the pointed advice given by William Wrigley, Jr., in regard to advertising of whatsoever character “Tell ‘em quick and tell ‘em often” was his admonition, and it is backed by his brilliant example.

“Coca Cola” advertising, when the matter is considered, does not differ greatly from “Spearmint” advertising. In essentials the two are almost identical. The name is driven home repeatedly. It is done quickly and frequently.

Mr. Albright’s lobbies come under the same qualifications. That they are, in their sphere, as successful is the obvious conclusion.

“Big Bob Warwick” was the phrase selected by A. H. Albright to focus attention upon “Thou Art the Man,” the production being shown at the American while this lobby was maintained.
Patrons Write Songs
In Olympia Contest

Nothing is ever so good that it cannot be made just a little bit better, developed to a more productive state, by rightly directed enterprise. Among the old and half-forgotten advertising "stunts" are to be found innumerable opportunities by the man who takes the time to find them and bring them up to date. The latest striking instance of such modernization of worn-out material occurred in New Haven, Conn.

"Alias Jimmy Valentine," Bert Lytell's Metro special, was the picture which gave rise to the project. Manager Sprague mentally associated the title with Gus Edwards' song success of a few seasons ago, "Look Out for Jimmy Valentine," and the "community sing," so popular while the war was at its height, was the next recollection in order.

A novel placement by which the benefit of two pages is gained by the Rialto theatre, Tacoma, Wash.

Roediger Originales
Novel Double Truck

Students of literature declare that there are but thirteen original plots. It is common knowledge that the re-arrangement of factors in these basic plots, whether there be that number or more or less, constitutes story writing in the majority of cases. There are not many more original methods of advertising. But each new arrangement that is advanced is valuable.

Charles R. Roediger, advertising manager for the Jensen-Von Herberg theatres in Tacoma, Wash., has contributed a double truck that impresses as entirely original. The reproduction presented herewith gives a fair idea of the original.

Mr. Roediger has broken away from the conventional by centering his actual advertisement, leaving three columns of each page open for the printing of publicity stories and the usual newspaper motion picture section.

The idea is good. The advertisement itself has not lost power by the arrangement. It is well composed and has a great effect as presented as it would have had with the entire double spread given over to it exclusively.

It may be possible in some cases to extend the idea to the point where the columns left open need not be paid for. That is desirable, of course, but not essential. The arrangement is capital.

Type Display Article
Applied by Exhibitor

In line with an article published in this department recently suggesting that exhibitors let their jitters help in preparing their advertising comes a sample mailing card prepared by the Electric Theatre Company in Perryville, Mo.

The card, which is reproduced here, is striking for its artistic layout. In contrast with the usual mailing card, the reproduction is divided into attractive columns of white space and is the result of careful consideration.

In the upper left-hand corner of the card is a half-column starred cut of Mary Miles Minter, furnished by Realart Pictures Corporation as one of the production accessories. It is a coarse screen newspaper cut, but has reproduced well on the surface of the card, which was of a light cream color.

The type selection shows that the printer did his utmost to produce a neat and distinctive result.

The judicious use of white space and the small ornament should be studied. In most of the mailing cards used by exhibitors the entire card is covered with printed matter from the top to the bottom of the card, and the result is a brownish mass of type.

One of the sheets filled in by patrons of the Olympia theatre, New Haven, Conn., while "Alias Jimmy Valentine" was being shown into harmonious and productive whole was the employment of F. Tierman and E. M. Barnes, song writers, to compose the music to a song that could be called "Alias Jimmy Valentine." The words of the verse and the last words of the chorus were also written by them, and the song was ready for use.

Four hundred copies were printed, the space being left blank for the chorus to be written in. The sheets were then distributed, with printed directions upon the back for the guidance of those who wished to try their skill at composition. A suitable prize was offered for the best composition, though no conditions were specified.

The result was altogether gratifying. A surprisingly large percentage of the sheets were turned in, and at each performance much entertainment was provided by the "trying out" of the composition.
"DOWN ON THE FARM"

When Mack Sennett produced for United Artists the comedy feature that is stirring exhibitorial ranks to unprecedented exploitation activity he rendered American theatre advertising a genuine and invaluable service. It is in providing this type of material for the exhibitor, material that may be most profitably marketed, that the producer lends greatest aid in the commercial development of the industry.

The photographs on this page are interesting.

Clyde Boak, at the left, is a professional actor who follows the picture in the Pittsburgh territory, selling his services to exhibitors. It may not be long before an enterprising concern expands the thought to embrace exploitation road companies for each big production.

The Auditorium theatre, Minneapolis, was the home of the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra until Charles G. Branham converted it to motion picture purposes and opened with "Down on the Farm." The street view during the run and girls used in exploitation are seen below.

Twenty persons (few stage productions list as big a cast) took part in the prologue at the Strand theatre, Fort Wayne, Ind. The photograph at the bottom of the page shows the ensemble.

Men of vision will not miss the point of this page.

Six Coast Beauties Have Joined Kohn Productions

Marion H. Kohn Productions, which is making the series of twenty-six single reel "Smiling Bill" Jones comedies, recently announced the addition of six of Los Angeles' fairest girls to this comedy unit. It has been decided to star these girls with "Smiling Bill" Jones in several bathing suit comedies. Marion H. Kohn has commissioned one of the leading modistes to design some unique bathing suit creations for Misses of the "Smiling Bill" series.

Six Coast Beauties Soon will be on the "Smiling Bill" Jones show. They are: Dolores Toomey, J. B. Harris, Paulinestar, "The Blow That Killed Father," "A Dog Gone Shame" and one other, the title of which has not as yet been announced. Joe Brandt, eastern representative for Kohn, is publishing the series to state rights buyers.

Pathe Inaugurates Drive This Month On J. Stuart Blackton Productions

The sales force of Pathe Exchange, Inc., will inaugurate this month a concentrated drive on J. Stuart Blackton productions. A publicity campaign which will aid exhibitors in presenting these pictures is being conducted by Pathe prior to opening the sales drive.

Particular stress is to be laid upon "My Husband's Other Wife," "Respectable by Proxy," and "The Blood Barrier," all of which have been published.

Passers-by," the photoplay version of C. Haddow Chambers' successful stage attraction which will be issued on June 20, also will be promoted by the Pathe sales force.

Prepare Press Sheet

To further the interests of exhibitors playing "Passers-by," Pathe is preparing a special press sheet, aside from an unusually attractive campaign book, which will be distributed to 5,000 of the biggest newspapers in the United States. These press sheets are written exclusively by newspapermen who are specialists in this type of publicity.

Blackton productions have been hitting the mark in every respect, it is said, but it is for the purpose of meeting an increased quota that has just been established on all Blackton pictures that Pathe is to concentrate its selling efforts on them.

"My Husband's Other Wife" has attained almost its first quota, it is declared, and its financial return is one of the most successful pictures ever filmed by the producer. "Respectable by Proxy" is running the earlier production a close second.

Holds High Mark

"The Blood Barrier" is last of the Blackton productions to reach the market. It has been published only two weeks, yet in that time has exceeded the best figures attained by any Blackton attraction over a similar period. "The Blood Barrier" is melodrama, with a strong love and patriotic impulse, and is of the type of screen attraction that meets with favor from a vast majority of audiences.

Without question, "Passers-by" is the most appealing story Blackton has offered. All copies of the pictures were purchased at an expenditure that rivals the entire cost of most productions, it is said, and the lavishness with which these pictures are being distributed by the sales force is making them an even more appealing offering on the screen than on the stage.

A wonderful cast appears with Herbert Rawlinson, who is starred by Mr. Blackton, Tom Lewis, W. E. Ferguson and Dick Lee furnishing the principal support.

Cleveland, Pittsburgh

Firms Acquire Rights

on "Gumps" Cartoons

A sale of territory in every city visited is the record M. J. Mintz, who has charge of dis-posing of territory for "The Gumps," is chalk up at the offices of Celebrated Players' Film Corporation, Chicago.

Mr. Mintz returned last week after visiting Pittsburgh, where he disposed of Western Pennsylvania and Ohio theatre rights. He also journeyed to Cleveland, where he placed the new series of cartoon comics in the hands of Warner Film Attractions for Ohio and Kentucky.

In connection with the latter sale, he discovered no Cleveland paper was running "The Gumps" in cartoon form, and realizing the value of having at least one newspaper in the territory carry the comic strip from which the animated cartoons are made, he telegraphed to the Chicago Tribune for permission to sell the rights to the use of the Sidney Smith plates to one of the Cleveland papers. This permission obtained, he interviewed the Cleveland News, with the result the activities of Andy and Min will be seen in that paper daily and in the Cleveland Leader News each Sunday.

Dwan Working on Last

Subject for Mayflower

Allan Dwan has started work on his sixth and last production for Mayflower Photoplay Company. The project is in the mountain country of the California Sierras on location.

Mary Thurman and Niles Welch will play the leading roles in the all-star cast. Miss Thurman has been featured in two of the most recent Dwan productions—"In the Heart of a Fool" and "The Scoffer," which will not be published until autumn. Niles Welch has the leading role in the latest Vitagraph publication, "The Courage of Marge O'Doone," Joseph Dowling, Frank Campeau, George Hackathorn and Stanton Williams are other important players.

J. Von Herberg of Jensen & Von Herberg announces that the company may erect a second motion picture theatre at Yakima, Wash. The new playhouse, which is now under construction, is expected to be completed within six weeks. Mr. Von Herberg states that negotiations were under way for obtaining another central site for the second playhouse.

MARION DAVIES, the beautiful Cosmopolitan star, is said to be following in the footsteps of that other fair woman, Shakespeare’s Portia, by the assiduous study of the law. Miss Davies comes naturally by her interest in the law as she is the daughter of Judge Dorias, a prominent member of the New York bench, now actively engaged in defending the rights of tenants against grasping landlords.

That “gorgeous man” is still stopping at the Hotel Astor and everything would seem to indicate that he will remain for some weeks to come.

Some one suggested that H. H. Van Loan call his Hope Hampton Hawaiian story “The Kiss of Fire.” Must think it’s an anarchist’s propaganda sketch. Why not call it the “Soviet’s Carees”?

JUNE TERRY and ARTHUR RANKIN, two young and talented representatives of England and America’s most famous theatrical families, appear in the screen version of “Romance” in which Doris Keane is starred. June is the daughter of Jack Terry who ably assisted Director Chet Wreye at Jack Wreye pictures. She is the grandniece and god-child of Ellen Terry, and Chet Withey believes that she had inherited some of her famous grand- auntes’ gracious charm. Arthur Rankin is the grandson of McKee Rankin and Kitty Blanchard, who respectively created “Jenky” in the original London production of “The Two Orphans.”

Intermarriage has brought many of the old theatrical families closely together; so Arthur claims kinship with the illustrious Barrymore and Davenport families. Chet Withey, whose direction of Edward Sheldon’s “Romance” adds another leaf to his laurel wreath, is a descendant of a distinguished family. His grandfather, Solomon Lewis Withey, was appointed by President Abraham Lincoln as Circuit Judge of Michigan, Ohio and Indiana.

The Harvard athletes have found that one of the most valuable aids to training is via the motion pictures. They have a series of pictures showing the right method of taking a jump and the wrong way. It has always been hard to get the students to take the water jump, but with the assistance of the cinema and the Volstead act they have taken it to like ducks.

DAVID KIRKLAND, having completed direction of CONSTANZA TALMAGE in “The Perfect Woman,” is touring through Virginia in search of locations. He has taken a camera with a view to securing test films of Southern scenery. Mr. Kirkland will return to New York this week, as he is booked to sail for Europe on May 22.

FRANKIE MANN, co-star of the Pathe series “Trailing by Three” and “Baby Vamp” family scenes, is spending a few days on important business in Philadelphia.

FRANK P. DONOVAN, arranging the “makings” for a motion picture under his direction, is keeping the telephone operators busy at the Green Room Club making appointments. Nobody says it’s easier to break them that way.

DON MEANLY, supervising director of Juanita Hansen, who played the daring serialist under contract with Pathe, has evidently become reconciled to establishing a New York residence, although he claims his new town car is for Mrs. Meany.

ROSE MINTZ, widely known in film circles as the beautiful, dark shadow of the heralded blonde RUBY DE REMES, has left her post and signed with a Broadway show. Some producer will suddenly become aware that he has been overlooking a bet when Rose flaunts her Latin beauty before the footlights.

J. SEARLE DAWLEY has been spending a great deal of time and more of his heralded patience in perfecting the art of color registering film. One day last week at the old 35th street studio, Mr. Dawley directed an ensemble of blondes and brunettes in gorgeously colored gowns and make-ups. We wonder if the next picture under his direction will blaze with light and color? Usually, the pioneer director has an axe to grind when his operator “grinds” the camera. But speaking of color pictures, Fred Thomson, please write.

JUANITA HANSEN’S new Mercer racer is white. You step in, step on—and look out! Traffic laws and Juanita are friendly, but not on speaking terms.

EARL HUDSON, one of First National’s publicity directors, had a birthday last week, which in itself is nothing particularly new because Earl has been having those for some years past. I don’t know just how many and inasmuch as he is married it doesn’t make any difference but this particular birthday was meritorious because Jim Anderson is said to have presented him with Golden Rod, one bottle for each year. Now Earl’s a millionaire and Jim is busted.

Four New Productions Ready for Publication On Reelcraft Schedule

The Reelcraft Pictures Corporation Production Department announces the completion of four more one- and two-reel productions for the Reelcraft short subject program.

Billy West has finished his production of “Stop Burglar,” in which Ethlyn Gibson is co-starred with the comedian. This picture was produced under the personal direction of Billy West and Theodore Lorch, Bud Ross, Leo White and Al Martin have prominent roles in the picture.

West Coast Studio Manager, Nat Spitzer, has shipped to the general offices in New York, Texas Guinan’s latest two-reel Western feature, “The Desert Vulture,” Jay Hunt was responsible for the direction and kept the company two days on location in the mountains. Franey’s one-reel comedy, “The Glutton,” has also been completed and sent East for distribution.

The Chicago Reelcraft Studio has completed the final cutting and editing of the Alice Howell two-reel feature, “Cinderella Cinderella.” Director Frederick J. Ireland claims this picture to be the fastest comedy in which the popular comedienne has ever appeared.

Franklin Finishes Filming Of Chamber’s “Athalie”

Filming of Robert W. Chambers’ novel “Athalie” has been completed by Sidney A. Franklin for Mayflower. After a vacation of two weeks in the California mountains the director will cut, edit and title the production.

The cast of “Athalie” is a well-balanced all-star aggregation of players, who were recruited for the production because of their “type” and dramatic abilities.

Sylvia Breamer plays the title role. Conrad Nagel, co-star with Alice Brady in “Forever After,” the New York success, and leading man in several recent pictures, plays opposite Miss Breamer. Rosemary Theby does some of the best work of her career in “Athalie.” Robert Cain plays the heavy. Sam De Grasse and Edward Martindel are also in the cast.

The story of “Athalie” deals with a spiritualistic theme. The wave of attention which the writing and lectures of Elia Wheeler Wilcox and Sir Oliver Lodge, the British scientists, who recently toured this country, makes the production timely in interest.

Quality Gets Right to “Dream of Fair Women”

Willis Kent, head of Quality Pictures Company of Denver, has purchased rights to “A Dream of Fair Women” from Fine Art Pictures, Inc. This production features the winners in the “Fame and Fortune” contest conducted by three fan magazines.

Mr. Kent also purchased for his territory, which consists of Colorado, Utah, Wyoming and New Mexico, the comedy feature, “Up in Mary’s Attic,” which is being distributed on the state right market by Fine Arts Pictures.
REALISM SO REAL THAT IT HURT

Fairbanks and Five Other Members of the Cast Which is Making "Mollycoddle" Injured When Buried Beneath Avalanche of Rocks and Earth

LOS ANGELES.—A too realistic avalanche of earth and rock recently trapped Douglas Fairbanks and five members of his company, partially burying them beneath it. Fairbanks was painfully injured, and for a brief moment the lives of all were imperiled.

Betty Bouton, Adele Farrington, Paul Burns, Maurice Hughes and George Stewart were the companions of the star in the adventure.

Fairbanks has a bad laceration above the right eye, a deep cut on the bridge of his nose and numerous bruises on the face, arms and body.

Trap Door Breaks

The accident came as a climax to a thrilling scene in "The Mollycoddle." Guided by the star, the players were climbing the side of a steep embankment. Fifty feet above them was stored an enormous supply of earth and rock, on a slide, but held back by a trap door. It was to have been released at the moment when the players had reached an overhanging ledge that would protect them against the sliding mass.

Suddenly there was a roaring above, and the avalanche was upon them. The trap door had yielded beneath the pressure before the moment had come to spring it. Fairbanks' companions were close to the shelter of the ledge and all of them managed to haul theprecipice and escape the weight of the landslide.

Fairbanks, too close to the outside edge, was smashed with the force of the descending mass. A huge stone struck him a glancing blow on the head. With an effort he hurled himself from where he lay to the partial shelter of a protruding rock, four feet away.

Second Injury Suffered

More than 100 spectators watched the landslide in helpless terror. When the contents of the bin above had all been spilled, they rushed forward and in a few minutes dug out the partially buried players.

Only a short time ago, Fairbanks returned to studio work after three weeks of idleness caused by the breaking of the index finger of his right hand while doing a stunt at the 110th Indian Reservation in Arizona.

At the office of United Artists Corporation it was said that their only advice on the matter was that Fairbanks was back at work after the "slight accident," as they called it, and that "The Mollycoddle" would be published early in June. A ample evidence of the exceptional athletic prowess of Fairbanks will be demonstrated in this picture, it is said.

Fights with Beery

One of the high spots in this production is the star's fight with Wallace Beery. Fairbanks is five feet ten inches in height and weighs about 164 pounds, while Beery towers over him by four inches and has an advantage in weight of forty pounds. Both men always are in physical trim.

In order that this fight would be realistic, Fairbanks did not make it known that there was such a scene until a few minutes before it was filmed. Then he outlined it to Beery, and they both smiled. The star knew what it meant for him to struggle over cliffs, down the side of steep embankments, into a tall tree and then continuing fighting to the ground, with a man of Beery's size and physical power. The results obtained, it is said, are realistic.

"Peggy Rebels" to Be Published This Month

American Special Presents Mary Miles Minter at Her Best

American Film Company, Inc., will publish the latter part of this month "Peggy Rebels," a Mary Miles Minter production which is adapted from "The Mitre of the Sally Ann." Miss Minter is said to be at her best in this "Flying A" production.

Alan Forrest, who heads the supporting cast, has made love to Miss Minter in several of her successful dramas. He is a finished actor who has been on the stage or before the camera ever since his school days.

George Periolat's work in the role of the good old grandfather is excellent. A prominent player who is not listed with the other players is Mary Miles Minter's pap, "Foxy," who appears to know his lines well and enters into the spirit of his role to perfection.

The scenes were filmed on the picturesque coast of the Pacific where many a beautiful view of the rocky shore and the sea beyond were snapped. The filming was directed by Henry King.

In this drama Miss Minter portrays as a ragged little girl in rough blouse and trousers, running over the rocks in bare feet, her only companion a demented old grandfather. She captives a stranded vessel her only home. Grief had seemed to steal out the old man's mind, and after going through all the nautical routine of commanding a ship in commission on the high seas, he and Peggy together take a daily oath on the old sword: "I swear to find the pirate dog—wherever and whenever he may be—who stole my daughter and left her child without a name—and run him through—and through—and through."

The time comes when Peggy rebels at the old man's unrelenting restrictions and the loneliness of the old schooner, and the judge who lives in the "castle" on a near-by hill, proves she is his daughter.

"Overalls" Not a Find

In This Actor's Life

When David Butler, the "cheer-up" boy of the screen, appeared on the lot at the Hollywood studios the other day to make some of the interior scenes for his second independent picture, "Smilin' All the Way," for the D. N. Schwab Productions, Inc., the new members of his company hailed him as a disciple of the new overall movement to reduce the H. C. L., for Dave was dressed in a brand-new suit of the canvas covering. But Dave smilingly told them—"Nothing doing; I've worn overalls in practically every part I've played since I entered pictures, and, judging from the ample supply of rural parts ahead of me, I'll not fall down on the standing order I placed with one of the local factories a short time ago. I am not worrying, though—I may be able to slip in a dress part and fool 'em yet."
With the Procession in Los Angeles

By Harry Hammond Beall

Director RICHARD DAVIES will commence work this week at the Goldwyn Culver City studios on the all-star production of "Black Paw," a story of the sea by Ben Ames Williams. Basil Simpson will play the title role. The part of "Red Paw" has not yet been filled. John Bowars will play Dan Rurrin; Helenie Chadwick will be Ruth Lyton and Alec B. Francis will be Samuel Peer.

MABEL NORMAND, Director Victor Shertzinger and the entire company now making "Rosa Alvaro," has been filming scenes in San Francisco. In one of these Mabel Normand is taken into the ocean from the deck of the ship.

ALEX J. HOLUBAR is soon to start on his first independent production with Dorothy Phillips starring. Mr. Holubar is associated with Al Kaufman for his first picture and Harry Hoquet, who assisted the famous director in his past successes, will act as his chief deputy for the forthcoming feature.

MONROE SALISBURY has engaged DONALD CRISP to direct the Monroe Salisbury Players in the first independent screen vehicle selected by the star-producer. Mr. Salisbury has left Los Angeles for the Shasta country where he will film "The Barbarian." The story, which was written by Theodore Seixas Solomons, enjoyed wide circulation in a popular magazine.

CHRISTY CARANNE, directing Bessie Barsek, is trying to get between a cap with gold braid and a Panama paraso for his summer headgear. The noted director, it is said, has been offered a commission in the French army to film a war drama in the battlefields with actual veterans participating. Upon the completion of his present Frothingham feature with Miss Barsek, he will consider an offer made by a syndicate of oil men that will take him to New York as director-general of a newly organized company.

"The Vanishing Dagger," the Universal serial, that was produced under the supervision of HONE LORING, has been completed. The serial stars EDDIE POLO and was filmed in Europe, Asia and America. Miss Loring wrote the continuity, accompanied the expedition to Europe and has been supervising the production since her return to Universal City as production manager of serials, westerns and short reel features.

"Hoot" GIBSON, Universal cowboy star, is now directing himself. His first self-supervised effort will be "The Fighting Terror," with VIETTE MITCHELL playing opposite.

CARMEL MEYERS' initial feature under the supervision of Mr. Meyers will be "The Cat That Walked Alone," by John Colton.

TOM MOORE, who is now making "Officer 606," is expecting his little daughter Alice Joyce Moore to arrive within a week from New York to visit with him during the summer. Mr. Moore's mother is leaving shortly for her native land, Ireland, to remain until fall.

RAYMOND HATTON, famous character actor, now appearing exclusively in Goldwyn pictures, has just purchased a dwelling on Snake Island, Oregon, and is having this remodeled and decorated. "Why" says the actor in his enthusiasm, "You can sometimes smell the cherry blossoms in Japan."

PAUL SCARFO, who has had wide experience as a director, has been engaged by Jesse D. Hampton to direct BLANCHE SWEET in a series of features, "Port O' Caprice," an original story by Kenneth B. Clarke, will be Blanche Sweet's first vehicle under the supervision of her new director.

Mullin Joins Gibraltar Pictures and Will Write Scenario for “Heart Line”

Eugene Mullin, well-known scenario writer, has joined Gibraltar Pictures. His first work under this banner will be to adapt “The Heart Line,” by Gelett Burgess.

Screen rights to this story were purchased recently by Arthur F. Beck, president of Gibraltar, for a reported expenditure of $25,000. Production on it will start shortly at the Robert Brunton studios in Los Angeles.

Delighted with Opportunity

“I am delighted with the opportunity to adapt ‘The Heart Line,’ because it is a story that I have been after for years. I know it thoroughly, having had its adaptation in the back of my mind for a long time. I am glad of the chance now offered me by Mr. Beck to carry out my original plan.

“This is one of the best pictorial prospects extant. It stands out like a sore thumb as a picture story. I think it will make a splendid play on the screen.

“On general principles, I am against book and play adaptation for the screen—that is, to the exclusion of direct writing for the screen. The practice now in vogue of paying high prices for play and book rights cannot last. The original story, written for the screen, is coming very fast. The sooner producers recognize the screen authors' bid for recognition, the sooner we shall have that higher standard of pictorial products demanded by those who recognize the imperfections of the average adaptation.

Recognizes Requirements

“I have written and directed for the screen for a long time. I think I recognize the requirements from an unbiased point of view. Producers will soon have to recognize the screen author, because he is already here, but only indirectly recognized. He should be and he will be, ere long, as well paid, and as much in demand, as the director. In fact, he should, and I think he will, take precedence over the director as a first essential to pictorial success.

“It's quite true, there are exceptions to every rule, and Gelett Burgess 'The Heart Line,' is one of them. It is fundamentally a screen story of rarely exceptional merit. It might have been written expressly for the silver sheet, although, of course, it was not so written.

“I may mention in joining the Gibraltar organization, I am among old friends. I wrote several of Leah Baird’s earlier screen plays and have always been interested in her career.”

“Don't Ever Marry” Is Record-Holder in Akron

Marshall Neilan's second independent production, “Don't Ever Marry," recently published by First National, holds the box office record at the Waldorf theatre, Akron, O., having passed the mark set by “The River’s End,” the producer's first independent effort, which formerly held the record.

“Don't Ever Marry” was adapted from Edgar Franklin's story and Matt Moore, Marjorie Daw and Wesley Barry are the featured players.

U. S. Photographers May Enter Ontario

Province Official Lifts the Ban

On Entrance of American Motion Picture Men

American motion picture operators and photographers are not to be excluded from the Province of Ontario, and will not have to be Canadian subjects, according to information received by the Washington bureau of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry from the state department.

Last August, the Canadian authorities promulgated regulations which required persons engaged as operators or photographers in Ontario to obtain a license. Applications to such licenses were to be issued only to British subjects.

Jack S. Connolly, Washington representative of the National Association, took the matter up with the secretary of state, with the result that a protest was sent to the treasurer of the province of Ontario. The treasurer agreed to issue permits to American operators for the present year on the understanding that they must take out their naturalization papers if they wanted licenses. The treasurer further agreed that this new regulation would not go into effect until May 31, 1920.

A number of senators in Washington assisted the National Association in its protest and a telegram just received by the state department announces that licenses will be issued to aliens who are not enemy aliens.

Marion Kohn Defends Slapstick Comedies

Marion H. Kohn, head of the Marion H. Kohn Productions, producers of short subjects, exclusively, in a statement just issued has championed the much-abused "slapstick" in comedies.

"With many short subject producers talking against slapstick, it seems to me," says Kohn, "that a word of defense could be said here and now. If refined and wholesome, always did get laughs and always will. The so-called 'high-brow' theatre is in the majority. There are scores of the middle class theatres to every 'high-brow' palace. These theatres actually demand slapstick and rough tactics in comedies. They ask for 'slapstick.'"

"It is a peculiar thing that when one of the 'palaces' shows a re-issue of an old slapstick comedy the house roars with hearty laughs just as they used to Slapstick in comedy appeals to the boy in all of us."

"That is why the Kohn Productions have decided to feature Polly Moran, the reputed "Queen of the Slapstick," in a series of pictures. The middle class theatres are clamoring for them. Many of the 'palaces' are booking them. That is reason enough for making them."

Frohman Corporation Has Signed With Four Authors

F. E. GERMANN who entered the glorious pastime via the Ferryfield theatre route, has joined the Realart forces as salesman.

W. C. BARNES, branch manager of the local Fox exchange, is having his hands full these days handling the contracts that are coming in with every mail. W. C. slipped us the info. that he had over 700 contracts in the last sales drive. But where would the manager be without his humble salesmen J. A. MOWAT, N. J. WIDGER, J. H. Birkenhauer and Assistant manager W. C. GEHRING?

H. I. KRAUSE, former assistant branch manager for Paramount at the Denver office, did not stay long in Detroit in the same capacity. He just said, "Hello" to Manager Perry and had hung up his coat when he received word to report to the Boston office to take charge of same. Congratulations H. Adele Blood Supports Geraldine Farrar In "The Riddle: Woman"

Edward Jose, who will direct Geraldine Farrar in her initial production for Associated Exhibitors, "The Riddle: Woman," has signed Adele Blood, well-known leading woman on the stage, to play the principal feminine role in the Farrar cast.

The complete cast will be announced later. The director will start production immediately after the return to New York of the opera star. The Thanhouser studio in New Rochelle will be used.

Mr. Jose is exercising the greatest care in the selection of players who will appear in the cast. Adele Blood's reputation on the stage extends across the country. Starting with the extended run of the production in New York, Miss Blood played the title part in Henry W. Savage's "Everywoman" for four years. Soon after she was starred in "Mile-a-Minute Kendall," giving a remarkable performance.

Vignola Prepares to Begin New Cosmopolitan Picture

Robert G. Vignola, Cosmopolitan Productions' director, has completed the cutting of "The World And His Wife," his first Cosmopolitan picture, and expects to begin on his second soon. The story is Samuel Merwin's, "The Passionate Pilgrim," which appeared serially in Cosmopolitan Magazine several months ago. Vignola is now assembling his cast.

Dispose of Territory On Talmadge Reissue

Joe Brandt, director general of the National Film Corporation, which company is planning to re-issue "Captivating Mary Carstairs," in which Norma Talmadge is starred, states that the list of unsold territory on this feature is growing smaller every day.

Among recent sales reported by Brandt on the Talmadge film are: Southwest Film Company of Dallas, for Texas; Oklahoma and Arkansas; First National Exhibitors Exchange of the Northwest, for Minnesota, Wisconsin, North Dakota and South Dakota; Hennessey & Morrows of Detroit, for the state of Michigan; Greater Productions Company of Des Moines, for Iowa and Nebraska, and the Exhibitors Film Exchange of Washington, for Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia, Virginia and North Carolina.

New Directors Working With Talmadge Sisters

Norma and Constance Talmadge are at work on new productions under the guidance of new directors. Albert Parker is handling the megaphone for Norma, whose next production will be "The Branded Woman," an adaptation of Oliver D. Bailey's three-act play, "Branded."

Constance has for her new director R. William Neill, who has been signed for one year by Joseph Schenck, president of the two Talmadge production companies. Constance is making "Good References," by E. J. Rath.

DOUGLAS D. ROTHACKER

Who is now general manager of the Industrial Division of Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company and will have general charge of production department, sales force, service department and the organization of the new Rothacker branches.
“Gumps” Popularity Is Growing Every Day
Mintz Returns to Chicago
After Successful Trip Through the West

Andy and Min Gump, the cartoon creations of Sidney Smith of the Chicago Tribune, which have been animated by Celebrated Players Film Corporation of Chicago, are becoming more popular every day, according to M. J. Mintz, Celebrated’s territorial director for the “Gump” cartoon.

Mintz has just returned to Chicago after a successful trip through the Western states in behalf of the comparatively new subject.

Territories Are Sold

Celebrated controls the world rights on “The Gumps.” Within the last two months the following exchanges have taken over the territory indicated for “The Gumps”: First National Exhibitors Circuit of Boston, Mass., for the New England States; Merit Film Corporation of New York City for New York state and northern New Jersey; Apex Pictures, Inc., of Pittsburgh, for eastern Pennsylvania and southern New Jersey; Apex Pictures, Inc., of Pittsburgh, for western Pennsylvania and West Virginia; Celebrated Players Film Corporation of Chicago for Illinois and Indiana; Savini Films, Inc., of Atlanta Ga., for North and South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Tennessee and Florida; Pearce Films of New Orleans, La., for Louisiana and Mississippi; Warner Film Attractions of Cleveland for Ohio and Kentucky; Strand Features, Inc., of Detroit, for Michigan; Merit Film Co., of Minneapolis, for northern Wisconsin, Minnesota, North and South Dakota; K. D. Lewis Film Co., of Oklahoma City, for Texas, Arkansas and Oklahoma; Supreme Players Corp., of Denver, for Colorado, New Mexico, Utah, Wyoming, Montana, Idaho, Montana, Washington and Oregon; Ludwig Film Exchange of Milwaukee for southern Wisconsin.

Comedy Sketches Sought

In making “The Gumps” cartoons, Sidney Smith is endeavoring to stretch out into a new field. Instead of merely animating the funny figures which appear in the paper, Mr. Smith, through Anson McCullum and Joseph L. Friedman of Celebrated, has decided to back up the “Gumps” with a story which fans will bring to fans with the best comedy scenarios which the market affords. Each of the Gump cartoons will bring laughter and entertainment, not only through its animation but through the story it tells.

An interesting angle of these cartoons is that the motion pictures and various newspaper cartoonists all across the country seem to help each other to a great extent. There are close to sixty papers now running “The Gumps” cartoons daily. Chicago being the starting place of “The Gumps” cartoons, it is interesting to note that the finest of Chicago theatres—the Riviera, Woodlawn, Barbey’s Loop, Randolph, and many others—are steady users of “The Gumps.”

EILEEN PERCY
Player Has Carried Leading Feminine Roles in Support of Male Stars for Three Years. Starting Her Screen Career With Douglas Fairbanks

“Eileen Percy to star in Fox Films,” read the heading on a short notice issued by William Fox, president of Fox Film Corporation, recently, and folks began to speculate on the judgment displayed by the producer who has given many stars to the silent drama.

As a matter of fact, Mr. Fox started the charming Eileen Percy on the road to stardom some time before official announcement was made. Now, in confirming the news of her rise, the Fox organization recalls for the benefit of those who may not have followed the work of this talented young actress, the foundation upon which Fox found her standing prepared for her promotion.

For nearly three years Miss Percy has been playing the leading feminine roles opposite the biggest male stars in pictures. She started in pictures as leading woman to Douglas Fairbanks, and did four features with that star, during which time she established herself as a welcome addition to the screen from the Broadway stage.

Played in “Bluebird”

Her eyes are large, round, grey-blue and wide apart, denoting highly developed artistic sense and depth of feeling. It was her youthful beauty which gained for her in New York the opportunity to play one of the principal roles in the famous Maelsterlinck fairy tale “The Bluebird,” which made its bow to the theatregoers of the metropolis at the Century Theatre. Here and on the road, for a period of three years, the refreshing Miss Percy played practically every child part in the show.

From “The Bluebird” Miss Percy went into Elsie Janis’ company, then playing “The Lady of the Slipper.” Here she was a member of the pony ballet, and distinguished herself by her specialty dancing and singing.

This experience freed the new Fox star in good stead during her early screen career. But it was her experience in both the musical comedy and the straight dramatic field that really trained her for the work she has done and which she now has before her in Fox productions.

Played Dramatic Role

With the late Gabby Deslys, Miss Percy made a drowsy hit in musical numbers, and her dancing is still remembered by Broadwayites who keep pace with the season’s successes. Later she played the part of Mary Nash and Henry Hull in “The Man Who Came Back”—this while she was engaged in the midnight show at the Folies.

Harrison Fisher selected Eileen Percy for one of his famous Fisher Girl series, and her beauty has adorned many magazines and periodicals which brought her admirers from the far corners of the globe. It was while she was appearing at the Century Roof that she was discovered by the Fox people and signed up for a series of film features.

With the success she has achieved in the parts she already has assumed before the camera, there can be little doubt, in the minds of “those who know,” as to the outcome of the decision by William Fox to make her a star.

Miss Percy already has completed her first starring vehicle for William Fox. It is a screen adaptation of Arline Van Ness Hines’ stage success “Her Honor the Mayor.” This will be announced for publication shortly. Already her next two plays have been obtained by Fox. They are: “Myra Meets His Family,” a Saturday Evening Post story by F. Scott Fitzgerald, and “Beware of the Bride,” a novel by Edgar Franklin which soon will reach the fiction lovers through the pages of one of our most popular magazines. Surely a good start for such a charming new star as Eileen Percy.

“Silent Barrier” Now In Hands of Cutters

“The Silent Barrier,” first of the Louis Tracy novels to be done into pictures by Louis Tracy Productions, Inc., for Gibralter, is now in the hands of the cutters and title writers and will soon be given its first trade showing.

The picture was nine weeks in the making and it is said to be one of the most expensive of modern pictorial offerings, both the indoor and exterior scenes having been obtained without regard for expense. The cast includes Sheldon Lewis, Gladys Huley, Corinne Barker and Florence Dixon.

WITH the passing of the star system and the consequent supremacy of the quality production, exhibitors feel more acutely than ever before the need of unbiased, comprehensive and informative reviews. Under the new order of things whatever dependence it may have been the custom to base upon the presence of a given star in the cast of a production is swept away.

As players’ names dwindle in importance, quality of production and dramatic strength becomes paramount. And the variance of these in productions from a given source is even greater than in individual star performances.

Reviews in this department are written with the new condition clearly in mind. Special effort is made to give the reader all important information as to the type of story presented, the manner of its presentation, its strong and weak points and its general quality.

With the information provided the reader knows just how big the “log” picture is, just how well it is suited to his purpose and just what steps to take, what points to emphasize, to make it run a successful one.

"THE COURAGE OF MARGE O’DOONE” (Vitagraph) should leave behind it an enviable record of box office successes. In it Pauline Starke, Niles Welch and a capable cast give excellent portrayal to the James Oliver Curwood characters familiar to the reading public. A complete review will be found upon a preceding page.

"DANGEROUS TO MEN” (Metro- Classics) provides highly attractive screen material for practically any and all theatres. Viola Dana has a characteristic role, a role that gives ample play to her mischievous talents, and Milton Sills supplies the essential contrast. The production is excellently contrived and fitted out with the best of furnishings throughout.

"LEAVE IT TO ME” (Fox) reveals William Russell and a Fox cast at what seems a happy mixture of work and play in California setting. The players seem to enjoy themselves thoroughly in the making of the comedy and something of their good humor is imparted to those attending the theatre where it is shown. It provides an hour of unusual and different entertainment.

"HUMORESQUE” (Paramount Arclight) is a screen transcript of Fanny Hurst’s story of the same name. It tells an unusual tale intelligently and impressively. Alma Rubens, the featured player, contributes a telling portrayal, though several members of the cast perform as important and effective service. The whole is an offering to be pretentiously and carefully presented.

"THE DEEP PURPLE” (Rendart) brings to the screen a stage play of considerable note. R. A. Walsh and Miriam Cooper figure prominently in its success as director and star. A drama of crook life which has been imitated by many producers, it has the distinctive stamp of the original and should fare well when submitted for public approval.

"THE DARK MIRROR” (Paramount Arclight) taken from Louis Joseph Vance’s story, offers more than the usual number of thrill-containing under-world stories. Here we have the talented Dorothy Dalton playing a dual role of widely different characters and doing it very effectively indeed, "The Dark Mirror” should prove a money-getter for any theatre.

"OUT OF THE STORM” (Goldwyn) Gertrude Astor’s novel, “The Tower of Ivory,” adapted to the screen, holds one’s interest by reason of its melodramatic moments, which are punctuated by other scenes that lack reality. Barbara Castleton, always pleasing optically, has the leading role but she plays it with far too much restraint. John Bowers, Sydney Amsworth and Doris Pawn are also in the cast.

"THE LOVE EXPERT” (First National) is a delightful comedy along the line of Constance Talmadge’s first successes. Written by those masters of technique, John Emerson and Anita Loos, it will not fail of its purpose to entertain in any community. Give it to all of your best exploitation efforts and it will repay you many fold.

"A LADY IN LOVE” (Paramount Arclight) presents Ethel Clayton in the role of a young and unsophisticated convent girl who runs away with and marries a married man. She later falls in love with the lawyer who obtains her divorce. Harrison Ford is the lawyer. Not as good as "Young Mrs. Winthrop,” her former success.

"THE NOTORIOUS MRS. SANDS” (Robertson-Cole) presents the so-called social climber, the abused wife, the depraved husband, etc., in a picture featuring Bessie Barriscale as the wife who is wrongly known as "The Notorious Mrs. Sands.” The cast is suitable to the story, and the scenes, both interior and exterior, have been well chosen.

"DOLLARS AND THE WOMAN” (Vitagraph) is another Alice Joyce vehicle, with Robert Gordon and Craufurd Kent also featured. This trio of players makes an interesting picture of an Albert Payson Terhune story. Miss Joyce is cast as the wife of an inventor whose finances have reached a low ebb, necessitating their giving up society and their home among the elite.

"THE CONFESSION” (National Film) according to an exhibitor who has played it, is one of the best box office pictures that he has screened in some time. Henry Walthall does excellent work in his role of a priest, and the supporting cast’s able assistance goes a long way in making the production entertaining.

"THE SPORT OF KINGS” (Buffalo Motion Picture Corp.) depends for such power as it possesses upon the work of Matt Moore so-starred with Margo Kelly, a young lady whose lack of familiarity with the film medium is obvious. There is a race track background that should be played up prominently and two or three thrilling incidents which will gain strength if given proper presentation.
Constance Talmadge in

THE LOVE EXPERT

Six-part comedy; First National.

Directed by David Kirkland.

Published May.

OPINION: The ever delightful Constance Talmadge comes to us again in a thoroughly delightful comedy written by John Emerson and Anita Loos. "The Love Expert," while it may not gain for itself a niche in the hall of fame nor be acclaimed the year's greatest picture (comedies do not aspire to such high honors), still it will be remembered as one of the brightest bits of screen fiction for some time to come. Its sprightly subtitles remind one of the early Loos contributions to the screen in which the athletic Doug Fairbanks was wont to gambol. Would that we had more of them. And evidently the authors have been following Briggs' cartoons, "Wonder What They Think About," for they introduce "Mark Smith," of cough drop fame, whiskers and all, in a very subtle way.

Through it all Constance is the life of the party, and how she marries off a whole family and clears the way for her own happiness forms the plot of the story. A novelty is introduced in the tinting of the faces of the characters, showing them blushing while undergoing the love tests of the "love expert."

A very capable cast surrounds Miss Talmadge, and the Palm Beach scenes are beautiful in contrast to the snow-covered streets of Boston. It is one of the brightest bits of Miss Talmadge's picture repertoire.

SYNOPSIS: Babs is sent home from boarding school because she persists in carrying on her fanciful love researches instead of studying her lessons. Continuing these experiments at home, her father, the influential and stern Mr. Hardcastle, punishes Babs by sending her to Aunt Cornelia in Boston instead of taking her to Palm Beach. In Boston, Babs finds fertile soil for her experiments. Aunt Cornelia has for six years been engaged to Jim Winthrop, Hardcastle's Boston manager, but a wedding is remote, as Jim has two unmarried sisters and an elderly aunt to look out for. Something had to be done, and it was Babs who did it by means of a fake telegram which results in her going to Palm Beach with her troupe of Bostonians, to the amazement of her father. Romance after romance followed in the wake of her experiments. Then comes the news from Boston that Aunt Cornelia, who had been left behind, had married a college professor. This news does not break the handsome Jim Winthrop's heart, for the "love expert" uses one of her unfailing remedies.

Louise Fazenda in

LET 'ER GO!

Two-part comedy; Sennett-Paramount.

Published in May.

OPINION: Those who sit back, loosen their belt and get ready for a real laugh when the title of a Mack Sennett comedy is flashed upon the screen will not be disappointed when "Let 'Er Go!" is the comedy in question. It contains more laughs in the first reel than have been present in the last half dozen of Sennett's program subjects.

Though Louise Fazenda is the featured player, there is a representative Sennett cast doing better than even the Sennett standard grade of work.

The setting is rural, and those who have seen "Down on the Farm," the feature length United Artists publication, know that the farm is rich in comedy possibilities and the Sennett workmen know how to make the most of them.

The company that appeared in "Down on the Farm" made "Let 'Er Go!" considering its length, it is a fit companion-piece.

OUT OF THE STORM

Five-part drama; Goldwyn.
Directed by William Parke.
Published in May.

OPINION: "Out of the Storm" is the screen adaptation of "The Tower of Ivory," Gertrude Atherton's popular novel, and is presented as an Eminent Author's Production. As screen fiction it will add little to Goldwyn's reputation, although it contains many dramatic moments, and one of the best shipwreck scenes filmed of late. The principal fault with the picture is the unnatural and stilted acting of Miss Castleton in the principal role. We have seen this young lady give a very good account of herself in other vehicles, but here she rarely unbinds, and throughout is the most unnatural and unsympathetic of the entire cast. John Bowers, as John Ordham; Sydney Ainsworth as Levering; Doris Pawn as Miss Cutting; Edythe Chapman as Lady Bridgeminter, and Lawson Butt as Lord Bridgeminter give excellent performances.

In advertising "Out of the Storm," lay stress on the fact that Gertrude Atherton wrote the story, that it contains many thrills. It is a story of an American cabaret entertainer who, after many vicissitudes, marries a titled Englishman.

SYNOPSIS: Margaret Hill, a singer in a disreputable cale, attracts the attention of Levering, and he offers to give her voice cultivated. At the end of several years Levering is arrested for embezzlement and confesses he has stolen to give Margaret her chance. While he is serving his sentence Margaret finishes her musical education and tours England, where she meets John Ordham, who saved her from drowning in a shipwreck while en route to Europe. Levering escapes from jail and arrives in London to claim his protege. To protect Ordham from the wrath of Levering, she tells the Englishman that Levering is her husband. Police pick up the trail of the ex-convict and, while he is trying to make his escape, he is killed, thus leaving nothing in the way of the love of Margaret and Ordham.

DO LLARS AND THE WOMAN

Five-part drama; Vitagraph.
Directed by George Terwilliger.
Published in May.

OPINION: "Dollars and the Woman" is good entertainment. It is a meritorious picture from several angles. A trio of popular players, each one of whom has been featured in other productions, an intriguing story by Arthur Payson Terhune, and logical adaptation are the factors which make it good program material.

Vice Joyce, star of many Vitagraph productions, Robert Gordon, co-star in J. Stuart Blackton pictures, and Craufurd Heygate as featured performers in Edgar Lewis' "Other Men's Shoes" should be advanced in the ad-

Each name alone undoubtedly would prove sufficient to successfully exploit the picture, but with the three names there should be an added incentive to fans to view the subject.

The story adapted is not startling, but it is replete with human interest of the kind that will appeal to everybody. It is based on the theme of a young married couple battling against financial difficulties, where the overtones of their financial difficulties. Dan is jealous of Arthur Crewe, a former sweetheart of Maggie. Then comes the moment when Maggie pleads for help. Maggie, after Dan has sold another invention, makes good her debt to Arthur and Dan, finding the check, leaves home. In despair, Maggie tells Crewe that she will be divorced and marry him, but Dan returns very soon, chagrined and explains that affairs leaves the Hillyers a happy couple.

THE THIRD EYE

Fifteen-episode serial; Pathé.
Directed by James Thorne.
Published in May.

OPINION: H. H. Van Loan has established what many will pronounce a precedent in providing a sane and sensible, as well as intensely interesting, serial. "The Third Eye" is worthy of the attention of the best-theatres—one of the few chapter plays that seems qualified for exhibition in "the big houses.

There is genuine plausibility in the story, yet it holds the attention by melodramatic force. Dan, not content with this element. The scenes are laid in a motion picture studio for the most part, which adds a special interest of value to the exhibitor.

Warner Oland and Eileen Percy are well cast, having the character in a cast of capable players. Good acting with voluminous action makes a combination of unquestionable box office value.

Van Loan's story is a well knit composition incorporating unusual features and blending spectacular bits in a harmonious whole. There is reason to believe that serial makers will watch his work with heightened interest in the future.

The play deals with the operations of underworld characters determined to fasten upon the feminine lead responsibility for a murder of which she knows nothing. The case is unravelled promi-

HUMORESQUE

Six-part drama; Cosmopolitan.
Directed by Frank Borzage.
Published by Famous Players-Lasky.

OPINION: The success of the motion picture drama is founded upon human interest. Successive, or any other standard that can be applied. Human interest is the outstanding feature of "Humoresque."

Frank Borzage, whose direction of well known stars has placed him well up among the leaders in his profession, has surpassed his previous efforts in this instance. There is little doubt that his name will be linked with the picture in the public memory from this time on.

The story by Fanny Hurst was excellent material to work with. It sets forth vividly life on New York's East Side. Some of the best bits recently produced are contained in the first part of the picture, scenes for which were obtained on the ground.

It is in the second part, when the children of the first part are supposed to have attained maturity, that Alma Rubens makes her appearance. To the players and the director credit must be given for keeping her role from overshadowing what has been, thus far, an evenly balanced performance. Though the star's work is fine and has a sure effect, it remains but a part of the picture until the end.

There is unlimited opportunity for exploitation. The obvious connection between the musical work and its film namesake should be capitalized to the full. Special effort should be made to bring the players and patrons also in interested in music, as the picture is essentially well suited to this class of patronage.

Fanny Hurst's unique matrimonial arrangement should not be overlooked.

SYNOPSIS: "Humoresque," born in the equalor of New York's East Side, shows an early musical ability that wins his mother's support, despite the objections of his stepfather. When he improves his talent until, as he is about to sign an important contract, he is called to war. Returned to life, he is broken in spirit as well as body and has lost faith in all that he ever cared for. Again the mother love comes to his support and the happy ending is brought about when he recovers the use of his arm and again takes up his violin.
Human Interest Touches from "Humoresque"

Alma Rubens as Gina Berg, Vera Gordon as "Mamma" Kantor, Bobby Connelly as Leon Kantor, and Miriam Battista as Minnie Ginsburg have the principal roles in this Cosmopolitan production made from Fannie Hurst's story. Franke Borzage directed it and the six-part feature will be distributed by Famous Players-Lasky.
Miriam Cooper in

THE DEEP PURPLE

Six-part drama; Realart.
Directed by R. A. Walsh.
Published in May.

OPINION: With the stage record as a basis, the popularity of Miriam Cooper and R. A. Walsh, star and director, as working material and the splendid campaign book published in connection with the feature as a guide, the exhibitor should experience little difficulty in mapping to the showing of "The Deep Purple." The picture will give entire satisfaction to persons attracted by characteristic advertising.

No less well defined than the following of the crook melodrama is the appeal of that style of entertainment. As produced by Mayflower, "The Deep Purple" makes fitting screen material for the purpose.

Miriam Cooper appears to advantage as the country girl lured to the city by the crook who wishes to use her in his nefarious operations. Other members of the cast portray satisfactorily the roles assigned them, especially the credit being due W. J. Ferguson for fine workmanship. His "Pop" Clark is one of the sterling characterizations of recent months.

Many motion pictures have been produced with "The Deep Purple" as inspiration. In not every case has credit been given, but the effect is the same—the picture suffers somewhat by reason of plot familiarity. It is not reasonable to believe that this will greatly diminish the impressive power of the production, however, as some of the greatest successes of recent history have been picturizations of plays and novels familiar to all.

The picture has several angles that may be capitalized effectively by exhibitors. A careful, thorough campaign will be well rewarded.

SYNOPSIS: Doris Moore, village maiden, listens attentively to the wooing of Harry Leland, a crook, who is visiting the neighborhood with "Pop" Clark, another professional crook. Having in his promise of marriage, she follows him to the city when he and Clark return. Kate Fallon, a rooming house keeper, protects Doris from Leland, but she becomes involved in a plot to rob William Lake, a wealthy Westerner, swinging around to the right side when she meets Lake and love springs into being. How the crook is defeated in their designs and Lake and Doris are brought to happiness furnishes the big moments of the production.

Bessie Barriscale in

THE NOTORIOUS MRS. SANDS

Five-part comedy; Robertson-Cole.
Directed by team C. Catanne.
Published in May.

OPINION: Bessie Barriscale is again cast in the role of an abused wife of an unfaithful husband. Her mother, Mrs. Ware, a so-called social climber, faces an embarrassing situation because of the small balance in her bank book and the many bills which must be met.

A Mr. Sands, financially stable, but tottering socially, gains entrance to the homes of the elite through Mrs. Ware. He is an admirer of Mary Ware, but in turn is despised by her. Finding that he has paid her mother's debts, she feels it her duty to wed him, which necessitates breaking her engagement to Ronald Cliffe. She marries Sands with the understanding that affection shall not enter into the matrimonial contract.

Many incidents follow which have a bearing on the plot, serving as they do to develop a hatred for Sands, who intimidates his beautiful wife by becoming intimate with another woman. He also resorts to mean tricks in an effort to make his wife love him. In his scheming he endeavors to compromise his wife and her former sweetheart, resulting in his wife being wrongly known as the notorious Mrs. Sands.

After beating the character of his wife, he grants her a divorce and she returns happily to her first love. The interiors and exteriors have been well chosen and photographed. The plot presents a few inconsistencies, but Miss Barriscale's work is excellent. The supporting players are very capable, Harry Meyers succeeding in making himself a much disliked person in the character of Sands.

SYNOPSIS: Mary Ware and Ronald Cliffe become engaged. While planning their marriage, Mary finds that her mother is indebted to a Mr. Sands, who desires her hand in marriage. Feeling that her duty is to her mother, though despising Sands, she breaks her engagement and consents to wed the capitalist. Being a loveless marriage, she is constantly ill-treated by her husband, who, new to the game, will make her love him, although he himself has intimate relations with another woman. He succeeds in partially compromising his wife with her former sweetheart, and thereafter she is known as the notorious Mrs. Sands. After succeeding in his depraved scheme, he divorces her and she returns to the man whom she first loved.

William Russell in

LEAVE IT TO ME

Five-part comedy; Fox.
Directed by Cummings J. Flynn.
Published in May.

OPINION: "Leave It To Me" is less a motion picture than it is entertaining sidekicks on motion picture California. It is no less entertaining, indeed more so, because of the fact.

Three subtitles that carry as many genuine laughs each introduce the pictures, these subtitles written by typical California settings nicely photographed and showing William Russell, Eileen Perce and a representative gathering of Fox players enjoying a luxurious swimming pool and the w. k. California sunshine. Santa Barbara is the locale, according to the story, so there is no attempt to camouflage the appearance.

By and by the story begins. It deals with a wealthy young man whose financee insists that he go to work or she will not marry him. He buys a detective bureau because there has never been a crime in the city and he knows he will not have to work. Then, humorously, he is made to take the central part in a number of common robberies, abductions, etc., that hold interest until the finish of the picture.

As a story, it is neither new nor brainy.

As a picture, the purpose of which is to please the motion picture audience, it is excellent.

Nothing quite like this has been done before. It must be seen to be appreciated. It can be booked with confidence. It will not give patrons what they come to the theatre expecting to see. It will give them something better—novel, interesting entertainment. It is distinctly worth while.

SYNOPSIS: Dickey Derrickson, son of wealth, is told by Madge Earle, his financee, that she will not marry him unless he goes to work. Accordingly, he buys a detective bureau which he is assured has never had a client. Then his chum, Tom Burroughs, enlists his aid in recovering love letters written in a foolish moment to a chorus girl. He employs a second story man to get them. But, as the story man is a member of Madge's jewels. Complications follow, in which he imports a band of criminals that prove more than he can manage. By a lucky turn of circumstances he wins out over his adversaries, however, and Madge promises to go through with the wedding.

Flanagan and Edwards

Comedies for Goldwyn

Goldwyn Distributing Corporation will publish the series of two-part comedies featuring the vaudeville team of Eddie Flanagan and George Edwards which National Film Corporation of America is making. The subjects will go out under the Capitol comedies trademark. Flanagan and Edwards duo was one of the best known "brother" acts in vaudeville. Eddie, the senior member of the team, recently was seen in National Hall, also starring in comedies. George only recently was discharged from the A. E. F. Harry Edwards will direct these comedies.
Dorothy Dalton in
THE DARK MIRROR

Five-part drama; Paramount Artcraft.
Directed by Charles Gilbey.
Published May 30.

OPINION: Psychic influence is the basis of "The Dark Mirror," a Louis Joseph Vance story that appeared serially in a popular magazine. In it Dorothy Dalton plays a dual role, although at no time is double photography resorted to, as the two characters are not required to appear in the same scene. It is a rather jumpy affair, ranging from the studio and magnificent home of a Fifth avenue belle to the hovel of an underworld girl, and contains more than the usual number of thrills for stories of this character.

Mystery, romance, gun-plays, quick get-aways and adventure are interwoven as only Vance can weave them into a story, and through the careful direction of Charles Gilbey, assisted by a cast of well-known screen players, the whole make an absorbing screen drama that merits attention. Huntley Gordon appears opposite Miss Dalton and gives a fine performance. Pedro de Cordoba has the underworld character part, as does Walter Neele, Jessie Arnold, Lucile Carney, Donald MacPherson and Bert Starkey. In settings and lighting effects, "The Dark Mirror" is a splendid example of thoughtful staging.

SYNOPSIS: Priscilla Maine, a member of New York society, is troubled with strange dreams, in which she vividly recalls underworld characters involved in a murder. She confides her troubles to Dr. Dobick, who undertakes to solve the mystery. As if to make her dreams come true, she is mistaken for Nora, a belle of the Bowery, who is kidnapped by one of the thugs. Nora is known as "Red" Carnahan's girl. She is loved by Mario Gonzales, a Spaniard. Mario rescues her from Carnahan's clutches and marries and excludes her in Jersey. Carnahan and his pals search for her. "Red" discovers the body of Nora and drowns her.

Priscilla is rescued by Mario, who believes her to be Nora, his wife. Fosdick is attempting to explain to Mario the truth of the matter, when Miss Jenkins' Jersey retreat, when Priscilla looks out of the window and sees "Red" Carnahan by the shore of the nearby lake. She rushes out and draws the body of Nora from the water. He is horrified to see Priscilla, her exact counterpart, there, and drowns himself in superstitions fear.

It develops that Priscilla's father had early in life married a gipsy girl. Nora was their child, taken by the mother when she ran away. Priscilla, when these explanations have been made, consents to wed Doctor Fosdick.

Henry B. Walthall in THE CONFESSION

Seven-part drama; National Film Corporation.
Directed by Bertram Bracken.
Published May 30.

OPINION: Exhibitor expressions on the worth of a picture have proved to be reliable. This is a logical condition, for it is the theatre owner who has lost or gained on some production and this experience has enabled him to place an actual value on the picture.

Although it is an accepted fact that clientele and localities differ in the manner in which they receive a picture, exhibitors have expressed their confidence in the judgment of other theatre operators who have had occasion to give an early showing on a picture.

With this existing fact, exhibitors will attach significance to the recent contribution to "What The Picture Did For Me" by William M. Roob, manager of the Grand theatre, Port Washington, Wis. Mr. Roob is a practical showman and bases his comments on "The confession," not on hearsay or theory, but on what the production did for him. He says:

"Here, boys, is acorner. Whether you have a Catholic, an Italian or a Jew, he'll get you the people in more the second than on the first night. Very near as good attendance as on May 30."

Based on an actuality, only one conclusion can be drawn from his opinion and that is that if he made money on the production others will do likewise. If B. Walthall gives a very enjoyable portrayal, although the nature of the role in which he is cast, that of a priest, rather limits his work. Others in the cast are given the more dramatic opportunities and their efforts are very commendable.

SYNOPSIS: Father Bartlett, after hearing the confession of one of his parish that he has killed a man, is faced by the fact that his brother is to be hanged as the supposed murderer. The priest, however, refuses to reveal the real murderer who has fled to his mother in the far North. The priest's brother escapes and goes North to find the real murderer. The priest in turn goes to apprehend his brother but in so doing finds the real criminal who, near death, returns to Montana, confesses to the authorities and saves the priest's brother, who has been returned by the mounted police from the roose.

Margot Kelly and Matt Moore in THE SPORT OF KINGS

Five-part drama; Buffalo Motion Picture Corp.
Directed by Frederick Thompson.
Published on a state rights basis.

OPINION: Matt Moore is an experienced actor and a popular one. He, rather than Margot Kelly, the star, given most prominence in the cast of characters, is the feature of "The Sport of Kings."

It is to his efforts that the picture owes such entertainment value as it possesses.

Recent spectacular successes in which the race track and the melodramatic incidents with which fiction has associated it have figured prominently evidence a popular demand for this type of production. It is well that such is the case, for the picture is not so well made that it can succeed notably without an advantage of some sort.

The best thing in the picture is the horse race. It is well photographed. But the story leading up to it and following lacks realism. The picture is very much a mixture of romance and adventure and falls to impress as genuine. At no time is the fact that the characters are actors striving to entertain lost sight of.

The general impression is that of an amateurish production and, with the exception of Matt Moore, amateurish acting, at least acting of lower than cinema grade.

As mentioned, there is a demand for the race track picture. Possibly this demand will counterbalance in great measure the play's shortcoming.

SYNOPSIS: Sale Kerner, horseman, is barred from the recognized race tracks when he fails to prove an assertion to the effect that the Clason entries are favored by the judges. At the same time Vivandiere, a mare owned by Bobbie Leland, a young woman deeply interested in racing matters, is barred from the official tracks. Sale goes to Florida. Bobbie sailing on the same boat, with her horse. Sale saves the horse in a wreck and fire, and is employed by Bobbie as stable manager. When the Clason interests effect Vivandiere's defeat on an outlaw track, suspicion is directed toward Kerner. Bobbie still has faith in him, however, and he eventually establishes his innocence and wins the next race and Bobbie's hand in matrimony.
When Barbara learns that Clara plans to run away with Rhodes, she follows the woman to Rhodes’ rooms, discovers Burton hiding there, and obtains evidence that secures her freedom from the marriage vows and paves the way for a happy future with the young Mr. Brent.

Sunshine Players in A HIGH DIVER’S LAST KISS
Two-part comedy; Fox. Published in May.

OPINION: The ridiculous note sounded in the title is maintained throughout the two reels of ludicrous happenings which constitute “A High Diver’s Last Kiss.” At no time even approximating the plausible, it is well fitted for the purpose it serves—program contrast.

With the action laid at a seaside resort, bathing girls are brought into play with the customary result. They are good to look at, these Sunshine girls, and they appear in this case with reason.

The plot has something to do with a high diver who insists upon marrying his employer’s daughter before he makes his thrilling leap into the tank of water. When her sweetheart kidnaps him, the girl volunteers to make the dive in his place. A bomb which has been placed at the top of the ladder is discovered by the girl and thrown into the assembled throng, her one-piece bathing suit is matched from her back by her sweet-heart, who seeks to rescue her in an airplane, and she rushes from the tank to his arms, an aerial elopement providing the ending.

It is well produced, swift of action, and contains new material in quantity. It should thoroughly justify its exhibition.

“Up in Mary’s Attic”
Great Showman Film Distributor Says It Contains Everything That Feature Picture Should

Nat Robbins, president of Robbins Film Company, Utica, N. Y., declares that “Up in Mary’s Attic,” which is being handled by Fine Art Pictures, Inc., is the greatest showman’s picture he ever has seen.

Robbins has acquired distribution rights on the production of the Twentieth-Fox, and announces that re-editing and titling are progressing rapidly.

In “Up in Mary’s Attic,” says Mr. Robbins, “contains everything that a feature should. There is rollicking comedy without any slapstick, and in addition, considerable drama, situations, pathos and heart appeal which will register big with every audience.

He declared that, in his opinion, the picture would eclipse all records for comedy productions in New York state. The picture already has been sold for several important territories, and inquiries by mail and telegraph are pouring in from every section of the country, it is said.

Absounds in Comedy

“It absounds in comedy of a new sort,” says Mr. Garsson, “both Eva Novak and Harry Gribbon having given their best efforts along this line and having accomplished something different from any other type of screen comedy. The fun is presented with a background of the most beautiful girls it was possible to assemble. These are presented first as bathing beauties on a California beach, and later as students in a high-class girls’ boarding school. Those who have seen parts of the picture have declared that they are the most bewitching beauties that ever appeared in any production."

“Brass Buttons” Is
First West Comedy In Star’s New Makeup

Billy West, now producing a series of two-reel comedy features for the Redcraft Pictures Corporation, Seventh avenue, New York City, has discarded the baggy trousers, derby hat, cane and oversized shoes that he has used for many years.

Beginning with the first picture completed by his new producing company, he adopts a straight makeup and wears whatever costume most appropriate for the type of character required. This new arrangement opens a much larger field for the selection of comedians.

Mr. West has added Theodore Lorch to his cast. Lorch is an experienced actor, having headed various stock companies and appeared in the support of many picture stars. Other players now with West include Leo White, Bud Ross, Martin and Ethlyn Gibson.

“Brass Buttons” is the title of the first picture made with the new makeup for West and is said to show Mr. West capable of standing on his ability as a comedian.

First National

In Search of a Sinner, with Constance Talmadge.—About as daring as they make them. Never quite overcome. Drew well. Raised admission and got it. Her best for First National.—W. H. Mart, Strand theatre, Grinnell, Ia.

The Beauty Market, with Katherine MacDonald. Showed for this two days to capacity houses, and star is going better every time she makes a picture.—Paul H. Shew, Wonderland theatre, Clinton, Ind.

In Old Kentucky, with Anita Stewart.—A great picture. First National pictures are money getters at this theatre. Never had a better picture with Miss Stewart.—A. H. Schure, Grand theatre, St. Marys, O.—Transient patronage.

Human Desire, with Anita Stewart.—The people who said unkind things about this picture were prejudiced. We found it to be an entirely satisfactory offering. It pleased our patrons, and that is saying something.—Beth Drew Guhl, Pastime theatre, Delavan, Wis.—High class patronage.

Two Weeks, with Constance Talmadge.—Just fine. The best of the three. Didn’t raise its price, but it will stand a raise. Fine comedy-drama that makes them fall all over you.—Jack H. Hooks, Palace theatre, Thomas, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

Heart o’ the Hills, with Mary Pickford.—People liked this better than Daddy Long Legs. Ran it two days to well pleased crowds. Book it and clean up.—A. Mercier, Electric theatre, Perryville, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Thunderbolt, with Katherine MacDonald.—Good star and fine production wasted on a story that doesn’t appeal.—Chas. Born, Elks theatre, Prescott, Ariz.—General patronage.

Heart o’ the Hills, with Mary Pickford.—Excellent picture. Better than The Hoodlum, but not as good as Daddy Long Legs. Satisfied all of my patrons as they came to see Mary.—C. E. Wentsel, Orpheum theatre, Ada, Minn.—Neighborhood patronage.

In Wrong, with Jack Pickford.—Good picture, but no box office attraction. Played with Day’s Pleasure, but couldn’t get them out.—W. H. Creal, Suburban theatre, Omaha, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

In Old Kentucky, with Anita Stewart.—Ran this two days to full house. Book it and boost it. It’s fine. Please all. Will ask return date.—W. E. Pore, Liberty theatre, Gorman, Tex.

IN OLD KENTUCKY, with Anita Stewart.—It’s there, boys, it’s there. Get this one and play it for all you are worth. It will stand up for any claims you care to make for it. Play it for at least two nights in the smaller towns and punch the price and they won’t kick. And listen, boys. Copy the exhibitors’ reports from this magazine in your house organs. It is the best advertising on earth. And don’t be afraid to run in an adverse report occasionally. It proves that you are honest with your patrons. You will win their confidence, and that’s worth money.—J. C. Jenkins, Auditorium theatre, Neligh, Neb.

Shoulder Arms, with Charlie Chaplin.—Went over big. Couldn’t seat them all both evenings. Played two days.—O. Troyer, Lyric theatre, Rugby, N. D.—Small town patronage.

Auction of Souls, with Aurora Mardiganian.—Drew a big house, but very few liked it.—E. M. Kuhns, Gibson theatre, Gibson, N. M.—Mining camp patronage.

The Inferior Sex, with Mildred Harris Chaplin.—A good picture. Went over good for two days at advance prices.—G. M. LeMonnier, Majestic theatre, Liberal, Kans.—Transient patronage.

The Thunderbolt, with Katherine MacDonald.—The best I have had for some time. More favorable comments on this picture than any I have used this season. Good business.—G. F. Rediske, Star theatre, Ryegate, Mont.—Small town patronage.

Heart o’ the Hills, with Mary Pickford.—Patrons say best Mary Pickford yet. Capacity business at double admission.—E. L. Howard, Star theatre, Taboka, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

In Search of a Sinner, with Norma Talmadge.—Went over good. Makes a great picture to run with A Dog’s Life.—Oscar Troyer, Lyric theatre, Rugby, N. D.

Bill Apperson’s Boy, with Jack Pickford.—It filled the house.—J. F. Alker, Motion theatre, Mahon, Wash.

Daddy Long Legs, with Mary Pickford.—Picture is all that is claimed for it. We could not seat the crowd when we ran it. Everybody spoke highly of "BUSTER" COLLLIER AND HIS DIRECTOR William D. Taylor going over the script of Willie Collier, Jr.’s first Paramount Arctuff production. Young Collier has become a regular booster for California and talks like a “native son” about the wonderful climate.

the picture.—C. H. Powers, Auditorium theatre, Dunsmuir, Cal.—General patronage

Back to God's Country, with Nell Shipman.—Very good picture, and a good production because of its novelty.—C. E. Wentzel, Orpheum theatre, Ada, Minn.—Neighborhood patronage

The Greatest Question, a D. W. Griffith production.—A very good production, but not a picture that will draw them all.—E. L. Howard, Star theatre, Tahoka, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage

Thunderbird, with Katherine MacDonald.—Really surprised at this one. A wonderful picture. Great business. Stood 'em to the street. Give us more.—A. H. Sherry, Grand theatre, St. Mary's, O.—Transient patronage

The Beauty Market, with Katherine MacDonald.—High class picture with very attractive star—Bert Drew Gulih, Pastime theatre, Delavan, Wis.—High class patronage

Heart of the Hills, with Mary Pickford.—Good, but can't see that it was as good as Daddy Long Legs or The Hoodlum.—Jack H. Hooks, Palace theatre, Thomas, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage

Mary Regan, with Anita Stewart.—Very good. One of her best. Did not draw.—W. H. Mart, Strand theatre, Grinnell, Ia.—Neighborhood patronage

A Day's Pleasure, with Charlie Chaplin.—Does not amount to much.—L. M. Kuhrs, Gibson theatre, Gibson, N. M.—Miming camp patronage

A Virtuous Vamp, with Constance Talmadge.—One of the best pictures we have run in many a day. Pleased with a full house. They talk about it yet. She is always good.—W. E. Pore, Liberty theatre, Gorman, Tex.—Transient patronage

A Daughter of Two Worlds, with Natalie Wengler.—Pleased a Sunday audience. Star hasn't a very large following here.—Bert Drew Gulih, Pastime theatre, Delavan, Wis.—High class patronage

In Wrong, with Jack Pickford.—Very good. Seemed to please them all. Business good.—Gustine & Roush, Prince theatre, Lewistown, III.—Neighborhood patronage

Heart Strings, with William Farnum.—William Farnum's pictures are fair, but don't get as much money as they should.—Chuck Townsend, Lyceum theatre, Lewrenson, Kans.—General patronage

Checkers, with a special cast.—Excellent picture. Lost money account revival. Will play return date.—Guy O. Fritts, Dixie theatre, Marshall, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage

Checkers, with a special cast.—Fine picture. Went over big, and patrons satisfied.—C. N. Bartow, Opera House, Medora, Ill.—Small town patronage

The Speed Maniac, with Tom Mix.—C. N. Bartow, Opera House. Medora, Ill.—Small town patronage

Sacred Silence, with William Russell.—This would have been a good subject if they had left out the terrible death scene in the last reel between man and wife. This scene alone jars the audience so they will leave dissatisfied, as it is close to the ending.—C. H. Powers, Auditorium theatre, Dunsmuir, Cal.—General patronage

Should a Husband Forgive? with a special cast.—A very good production.—P. J. Geutz Bros., Monroe theatre, Monroe, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage

The Tale of Two Cities, with William Farnum.—Did not draw at all. Fair picture, but lost me money. Liberty theatre, Ranger, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage

The Lone Star Ranger, with William Farnum.—Good picture. Shows up well here. Patrons well pleased. Drew well. Don't be afraid of this one.—C. N. Bartow, Opera House, Medora, Ill.—Small town patronage

A Woman There Was, with Theda Bara.—Short picture, and not much to it. I have small houses on Theda Bara.—Oscar Troyer, Lyric theatre, Rugby, N. D.

Wolves of the Night, with William Farnum.—Great. Believe me, some picture. My first showing of star Farnum calls for more like it.—M. H. Goodrich, Liberty theatre, Marshall, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage

The Wilderness Trail, with Tom Mix. This is some show. You can't go wrong on this one. Star is good. My patrons are so pleased, I can always keep him.—Philbrick & Knoblach, Rex theatre, Allen, Nebr.—Small town patronage

The Feud, with Tom Mix.—A good picture, but certain things need changing—such as rubber tired buggies and rubberoid roofing, and the star had his initials on his shirt. The picture was of the feud which took place during the Civil War.—Bert Norton, Kozy theatre, Eureka, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage

Rough Riding Romance, with Tom Mix.—A knockout. As are most all of Tom Mix's pictures.—W. B. Henderson, Dixie theatre, Ripley, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage

The Adventurer, with William Farnum.—Did not please. Farnum always very popular here, but another picture marked out for—Gustine & Roush, Princess theatre, Lewistown, III.—Neighborhood patronage

Heart of a Lion, with William Farnum.—William Farnum's best if the novel on which it was based, "The Doctor," would have been followed through to the end, the changed ending spoiled the picture for those who had read the book by Con- nor. Drew well.—L. C. Farquhar, Opera House, Guide Rock, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage

Evangeline, with Miriam Cooper.—Put it over big with woman's club and schools. Good picture. See the story.—Oscar Troyer, Lyric theatre, Rugby, N. D.

Evangeline, with Miriam Cooper.—One of the best Farnum pictures. Business would have been big ROUGH RIDING ROMANCE, with Tom Mix.—O. H. Goodrich. Opera House, Piper City, Ill. This gets them all. A great picture. Go the limit on it.—O. H. Goodrich, Opera House, Piper City, Ill.

Hallmark
Going Straight, with Norma Talmadge.—This feature pleased all who saw it. Norma Talmadge draws well for me. Felt that all the parts pleased all so far, and will keep right on using them. Book this and boost it big. You won’t be sorry. It’s a good buy.—Mrs. R. J. Sheek, Majestic theatre, Marmonie, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Breezy Jim, with Crane Wilbur.—It pleased some, but there is something lacking. All all all. It is not bad.—G. N. Armstrong, Y. M. C. A. theatre, Rose Lake, Idaho.—Neighborhood patronage.

Wolves of the Border, with Roy Stewart.—Not as good as some Stewarts, but very satisfying. Stewart also not good, and is well liked here.—G. W. Johnson, Mystic theatre, Marmarth, N. D.

The Flame of the Yukon, with Dorothy Dalton.—Good picture and pull well.—Liberty theatre, Ranger, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Children in the House, with Norma Talmadge.—This is an excellent story and picture one. Pleased all on a Sunday night. Splendid lot of children actors in this feature.—Mrs. R. J. Slack, Majestic theatre, Eau Claire, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Wild Goose Chase, with Hazel Dally.—Good Northern picture. Will please most of them.—G. N. Armstrong.
The Parisian Tigress, with Viola Dana.
—Good. Better than her comedies.—L. M. Kuhns, Gibson theatre, Gibson, N. M.—Mining camp patronage.

In His Brother's Place, with Hale Hamilton. A star—good. His pictures appeal to the young and old alike. Metro always pleases my audience and justly so.—Miss Hella Harris, Liberty theatre, Magnolia, Miss.—General patronage.

Castles in the Air, with May Allison. —A dandy picture. Metro always pleases my patrons. Big business.—A. H. Schurr, Grand theatre, St. Mary's, O.—Transient patronage.

Almost Married, with May Allison. One of the best May Allison pictures I have ever run. It is a good comedy-drama that will please all.—Very good business.—E. L. Howard, Star theatre, Tahoka, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

That's Good, with Hale Hamilton. The star is a good one, but this is not a very dandy vehicle as played with Hamilton. Would not care to book return date.—Harlin Ent. Co., Odeon theatre, Hardin, Mo.—General patronage.

Daring Hearts, with Francis Bushman and Beverly Bayne. —Very good. Full of action from start to finish. It is a war picture. Drew good and pleased the majority.—It is in six reels.—Book, E. J. Degenhardt, Princess theatre, Mendota, III.—Small town patronage.

The Amateur Adventuress, with Emmy Wehlen. —This one will please. The best comedy dramas we have shown to date.—Euraka theatre, Auburn, Nebr.

Fools and Their Money, with Emmy Wehlen. —Good picture. Star well liked here.—L. M. Kuhns, Gibson theatre, Gibson, N. M.—Mining camp patronage.

Peggy Does Her Darnest, with May Allison. Another first rate comedy drama. Good photography. Well staged and fine scenery.—Mrs. E. L. Fote, Lib- erty theatre, Gorman, Tex.—Transient patronage.

Should a Woman Tell? with Alice Lake. —My people liked this. Story not especially strong, but star looks good, and production great.—R. J. Liberty Circuit theatre, Vadier, Wash.—Neighborhood patronage.

Paramount Artcraft

Double Speed, with Wallace Reid. —With Wanda Hawley and Theodore Roberts in the cast, picture was a big hit. Theodore Roberts, the grand old man of the screen, makes a big hit in this.—R. K. Booth, Paramount theatre, Nebraska City, Nebr.

The Make-Believe Wife, with Billie Burke. —Did not do good for me.—J. F. Alker, Malton theatre, Malton, Wash.

Huckleberry Finn, with a special cast. —The picture has convinced me. The idea that Huckleberry Finn was a super-feature must have a very vivid imagination of what makes a super-picture. We think this picture bowed down to five reels would make a fairly good program picture to show for 5 and 10 cents, and the exhibitor to stand at the door and give his patrons a rain check as they pass out. Positively the poorest special we have ever shown. Don't book it. You are surely stung the moment you do.—Majestic theatre, Grand Island, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

Hawthorne of U. S. A., with Wallace Reid. —As Reid is a big favorite here this picture went big. Business big.—Pfeiffer Bros., Opera house, Kenton, O.—General patronage.

The Market of Souls, with Dorothy Dalton. —Good program picture.—L. M. Kuhns, Gibson theatre, Gibson, N. M.—Mining camp patronage.

Secret Service, with Robert Warwick. —This was supposed to be a special, but it failed to be even a good program picture, as it is of the Civil War times, does not please. Our Sunday's business fell away on this subject.—H. Powers, Auditorium theatre, Dunsmuir, Cal.—General patronage.

Sadie Love, with Billie Burke.—The poorest thing Burke ever made. An disappointment to everyone.—Majestic theatre, Grand Island, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Miracle Man, with a special cast. —Best picture we have ever screened. Will be just as good a money getter to ten years from now. Business great.—Pfeiffer Bros., Opera house, Kenton, O.—Neighborhood patronage.

Told in the Hills, with Robert Warwick. —One of the best pictures we have ever had.—L. M. Kuhns, Gibson theatre, Gibson, N. M.—Mining camp patronage.

Black Is White, with Dorothy Dalton. —A well produced, and well acted offering, but a story with little appeal. This star had but two good vehicles the past year.—C. B. Kent, Strand theatre, Red Boiled.—Charles Born, Elks theatre, Prescott, Ariz.—General patronage.

The White Heather, a Maurice Tourneur production.—It was an awful bore to me and the patrons.—S. C. Vale, Pictorial theatre, Dennison, O.—Small town patronage.

The Grim Game, with Houdini. —A boiled down serial. Drew well on Sunday.—W. H. Hart, Strand theatre, Grinnell, la.

L'Apache, with Dorothy Dalton. —Good Fair business.—Will F. Krahm, Lorin theatre, Berkeley, Cal.—Neighborhood patronage.

Double Speed, with Wallace Reid. —Excellent for entertaining purposes. No hope here to beat same star and cast again.—Charles Born, Elks theatre, Prescott, Ariz.—General patronage.

Extravaganza, with Dorothy Dalton. —Fair picture. Fair business.—C. E. Bell, Midway theatre, Mogollon, N. Mex.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Miracle of Love, with a special cast.—Seven reels. It should be five. Very slow and drags all through. Did not go.—G. D. Rogers, Gem theatre, Chickasha, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

Male and Female, a Cecil B. DeMille production.—Drew average for three weeks. Average attendance. Good special.—W. H. Mart, Strand theatre, Grinnell, la.

The Source, with Wallace Reid.—Dandy picture.—L. M. Kuhns, Gibson theatre, Gibson, N. M.—Mining camp patronage.

The Firing Line, with Irene Castle.—Picture too slow. Called a special, but some one made an awful mistake.—S. C. Pictorial theatre, Dennison, O.—Small town patronage.

Believe Me Xanitte, with Wallace Reid.—Very good comedy and will please. Reid is always good drawing card.—G. D. Rogers, Gem theatre, Lyndon, Kans.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Dark Star, with Marion Davies.—Poor.—Jack Nash, Strand theatre, Trinidad, Colo.—Neighborhood patronage.

Law of the North, with Charles Ray.—This gave general satisfaction.—A. C. Klug, Empress theatre, Zumbrota, Minn.—General patronage.

The Vamp, with Enid Bennett. —Excellent comedy-drama and a real good vamp.—Paul & Overton, Lyric theatre, Winchester, III.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Love Burglar, with Ethel Clayton. —Good.—Jack Nash, Strand theatre, Trinidad, Colo.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Life Line, with a special cast.—Lot of action. Good business.—Will F. Krahm, Linden theatre, Berkeley, Cal.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Home Breaker, with Dorothy Dalton.—An excellent picture.—Peters & Johnson, Liberty theatre, Milligan, N. Mex.—Small town patronage.

Viviente, with Vivian Martin.—Only a fair picture.—G. D. Rogers, Gem theatre, Lyndon, Kans.—Small town patronage.

Teeth of the Tiger, with a special cast.—Good mystery picture. Good for some localities.—Will F. Krahm, Lorin theatre, Berkeley, Cal.—Neighborhood patronage.

 Widow by Proxy, with Marguerite Clark.—A very cute little picture. Appealed to ladies especially. Business fairly good.—John Hafer, Princess theatre, Donora, Pa.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Grim Game, with Houdini.—Good stunt picture. Went well with us. Good business.—Will F. Krahn, Lorin theatre, Berkeley, Cal.—Neighborhood patronage.

Male and Female, a Cecil B. DeMille production.—Great. Play up original play for this big business again. Sun Bros., Monroe theatre, Monroe, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Dub, with Wallace Reid.—Fair picture. Big business in this house. Arlington, Ia.—Rural patronage.

Twenty-three and a Half Hours Leave, with Douglas McLean and Doris May.—Went over big as with everything else. Big business at advanced prices.—John Haimer, Princess theatre, Donora, Pa.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Woman In the Suitcase, with Emma Dunn and Fair.—Lost up to Bennett pictures. Fair business.—Will F. Krahn, Lorin theatre, Berkeley, Cal.—Neighborhood patronage.

Widow by Proxy, with Marguerite Clark.—Excellent picture that drew well and pleased everybody.—E. L. Franck, Oasis theatre, Ajo, Ariz.—Neighborhood patronage.

All Wrong, with Bryant Washburn.—A good comedy-drama. Everybody pleased.—Stanley Allan, Pathe theatre, Uniondale, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

Three Green Eyes, with a special cast.—Just the class of picture I would like to see.—F. J. Gruber, Temple theatre, East Jordan, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

Panther

The Cry of the Weak, with Fannie Ward.—A-1 program picture. A striking example of how a little plot is necessary for a five-reeler when cleverly handled. The night photography is interesting and splendid.—L. L. Hyneman, Peninsula theatre, Portland, Ore.—Neighborhood patronage.

Smouldering Embers, with Frank Keenan.—You can look them square in the eye when you tell them this is a good one. Exhibitors who do not use Keenan’s pictures should investigate.—Chuck Townsend, Lyceum theatre, Leavenworth, Kans.—General patronage.

The Gay Old Dog, with John Cumberland.—Nothing to this. Patrons went out. No more for me. Fair business. Comedy held up program.—A. H. Schurr, Grand theatre, St. Mary’s, O.—Transient patronage.

Oh Boy, with June Caprice and Creighton Hagan.—Lots of good comments on this. Lots of good laughs. Good cast.—R. J. Charles, Liberty circuit theatre, Varder, Wash.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Moonshine Trail, with a special cast.—A mighty good program. Though some communities might not like it as there is a good anti-boot sermon in it, it is well directed and has a fine, east, and is a really fine production. We did good business.—H. P. Thompson, Liberty theatre, Pardieville, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

My Husband’s Other Wife, a J. Stuart Blackton production.—These stars are gaining popularity rapidly. Don’t be afraid to book them.—Chuck Townsend, Lyceum theatre, Leavenworth, Kans.—General patronage.

The A. B. C. of Love, with Mae Murray.—Good picture. Pleased all.—E. L. Howard, Star theatre, Tahoka, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Bishop’s Emeralds, with Virginia Pearson.—Very good picture, but they did not like her in Impossible Catherine.—O. Troyer, Lyric theatre, Rugby, N. D.—Small town patronage.

A Woman of Pleasure, with Blanché Sweet.—I have seen several knocks on this picture, and while it is no special I consider it a mighty good entertainment for small town. Some big scenes.—R. J. Charles, Liberty Circuit theatre, Varder, Wash.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Gates of Brass, with Frank Keenan.—A program picture that got many comments from our patrons. All thought it was good. It is a strong, well set-up picture.—H. P. Thompson, Liberty theatre, Pardeeville, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Cupid by Proxy, with Baby Marie Osborne.—Good comedy, but Baby Marie does not seem to laugh as when Sambo plays as side partner.—L. G. Sewing, Crown theatre, Calumet, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Woman of Pleasure, with Blanché Sweet.—Good picture but did not draw. Lost money on it.—W. E. Stepp, Regent theatre, Plesanton, Kans.—General patronage.

A Damself in Distress, with a special cast.—Good picture. Will please.—Family theatre, Portland, N. D.—Neighborhood patronage.

Realart

Judy of Rogue’s Harbor, with Mary Miles Minter.—Fine. Lots of comedy. Sure to please everybody.—C. Oldham, Dixie theatre, McMinnville, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

Soldiers of Fortune, with a special cast.—Great picture, and small business. Title kept them away.—Paul H. Shew, Wonderland theatre, Clinton, Ind.—General patronage.

Nurse Marjorie, with Mary Miles Minter.—“It’s a darling picture.” Full of life and sends them away happy.—Chuck Townsend, Lyceum theatre, Leavenworth, Kans.—General patronage.

Eirstwhile Susan, with Constance Binney.—Realart does not need to worry if they make pictures like this. Drew fine and people like her.—R. C. Wilson, Grand theatre, Staples, Minn.

ESTRWHILE SUSAN, with Constance Binney.—This is a great picture. This star is more than "there now" and in this picture, boys, you see an artist work. It will please any audience. It’s a great picture. Book it.—C. L. Beede, Beede’s theatre, Enfield, N. H.

Mystery of the Yellow Room, with a special cast.—Very good. Sure holds interest up to last minute.—Peter Krauth, Denison theatre, Denison, la.—Neighborhood patronage.

Robertson-Cole

The Broken Butterfly, a Maurice Tourneur production.—A very good picture. Did a big business. It will please any audience.—A. H. Schurr, Grand theatre, St. Mary’s, O.—Transient patronage.

The Bottom of the World, with Sir Ernest Shackleton.—Wonderful photography. Packed them in two nights and one matinee. Co-operated with high school. 35-90.—C. E. Farrell, Colonial theatre, Ellensburg, Wash.—General patronage.

The Open Door, with a special cast.—The poorest picture that I ever ran. Ought to be taken off the market of hurt business for a week.—G. M. LeMonnier, Majestic theatre, Liberal, Kans.—Transient patronage.

Haunting Shadows, with H. B. Warner.—An excellent picture. Even better than the book. Drew well and pleased.—C. F. Hancock, Lyric theatre, Stuart, Fla.—Small town patronage.

Her Purchase Price, with Bessie Barriscale.—This picture is good. Please all.—R. J. Cooper, Opera House, Kirbyville, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

Hoopla, with Billie Rhodes.—A very excellent picture with good moral lesson. Rhodes shows usual ability in depiction. Book it.—Hardin Ent. Co., Odeon theatre, Hardin, Mo.—General patronage.

HARRY T. MOREY, AS AN OLD SEA DOG

There’s plenty of Cape Cod atmosphere to this Vitagraph production, “The Sea Rider”
The Beloved Chester, with Lew Cody.—Good comedy-drama. Lew Cody well liked. Believe he would pull more in heavy drama. Good business.—C. E. Farrell, Colonial theatre, Elberon, Wash.—General patronage.

The Woman Michael Married, with Bessie Barriscale.—This was an extra good program picture. Bessie is a good star at my theatre.—G. M. Lemmonier, Majestic theatre, Liberal Kans.—Tran- sient patronage.

The Tong Man, with Sessue Hayakawa.—Don't fail to book this if your patrons like thrills and good action. It can't be beat.—C. F. Hancock, Lyric theatre, Stuart, Fla.—Small town patronage.

Select

She Loves and Lies, with Norma Talmadge.—Fine business. Anyone ought to clean up with such a star in a picture like this.—Paul H. Shew, Wonderland theatre, Canton, Ind.—General patronage.

Sooner or Later, with Owen Moore.—Picture great. Audience comment best in some time.—H. A. Kempen, Queen theatre, Nixon, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Woman Game, with Elaine Hammerstein.—Elegant settings, but picture was too slow for my patrons. Only a fair picture. Did not draw for me.—E. J. Degenhardt, Princess theatre, Mendota, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Picadilly Jim, with Owen Moore.—This is the poorestSelect picture we have ever run. Padded and action is slow and draygy. Nothing to it.—C. H. Powers, Auditorium theatre, Dunsmuir, Cal.—General patronage.

A Fool and His Money, with Eugene O'Brien.—Just a pleasing picture.—Peter Krauth, Grand theatre, Denison, la.—Neighborhood patronage.

Marie, Ltd., with Alice Brady.—Very poor picture and star. If you run this picture run it with comedy.—Louis Frana, Olympic theatre, Calmar, la.

Cecilia of the Pink Roses, with Marion Davies.—A good picture if they would do away with the priest stuff. There was quite a bit of dissatisfaction owing to this.—G. W. Johnson, Mystic theatre, Marmarth, N. D.

Getting Mary Married, with Marion Davies.—A good comedy-drama, and drew well.—W. B. Henderson, Dixie theatre, Ripley, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

Red Head, with Alice Brady.—A good picture by a good star. Well go well almost any place.—Will C. Perry, Grand theatre, Alvin, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

Picadilly Jim, with Owen Moore.—Not much of a feature. Disappointed in the star.—Majestic theatre, Grand Island, N. D.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Shuttle, with Constance Talmadge.—It's a dandy picture. This star always good for us.—E. D. Luna, Hulbert theatre, Hulbert, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

Border Legion, with Blanché Bates.—Star entirely too old for part played. Very poor and business was very poor.—Whitman & Graffort, Princess theatre, Buchanan, Mich.—General patronage.

The Forbidden City, with Norma Talmadge.—This was liked better than Red Lantern, but no Chinese story goes over very well.—A. N. Mills, Emimence theatre, Eminence, Ky.

Marionettes, with Clara Kimball Young.—Old, but a very good picture if your patrons like the star. Mine don't. Had to cancel her.—Mrs. S. J. Haney, Liberty theatre, Des Moines, N. M.—Small town patronage.

Upstairs and Down, with Olive Thomas.—Did not draw for us, but gave fair satisfaction with those who saw it.—H. H. Bellings, Pleasant Hour theatre, Fine Island, Minn.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Reason Why, with Clara Kimball Young.—Wonderful picture. Held them spellbound. Better than most big films.—C. Oldham, Dixie theatre, M., Minnville, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

Who Cares? with Constance Talmadge.—Not as good as some of Connie's, but it will get by. This is the first Constant Talmadge I was disappointed in.—J. H. Wall, Auditorium theatre, Highland, III.

The Broken Melody, with Eugene O'Brien.—Ran this two days to one of the biggest house records in our house. Everyone pleased, and pleased 100 per cent of the ladies. Eugene sure has the looks. His leading lady is the best under Selznick banner.—Mrs. J. A. Dostal, Ideal theatre, Omaha, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

She Loves and Lies, with Norma Talmadge.—Not up to her three last subjects of First National.—Fred Cosman, Electric theatre, St. Joseph, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

Out Yonder, with Olive Thomas.—Picture fine. Business only fair.—John Hafner, Princess theatre, Donora, Pa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Children of Banishment, with Mitchell Lewis.—Too much faith in this picture. Action not real. Some Fairytale scenes, and good photography, but did not please.—E. D. Luna, Hulbert theatre, Hulbert, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

Cheating Cheaters, with Clara Kimball Young.—Our first picture with Miss Young, and she is starting out like she is going to be a winner. This picture is fine.—A. N. Miles, Emimence theatre, Eminence, Ky.—Small town patronage.

Sooner or Later, with Owen Moore.—Good comedy. Went over goods.—Fred Cosman, Electric theatre, St. Joseph, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

United Artists

Down on the Farm, with a special cast.—A knockout. Book it by all means. The best feature produced yet. What we want is another like it from Mack. So come across.—Guy W. Johnson, Mystic theatre, Marmarth, N. D.

When the Clouds Roll By, with Douglas Fairbanks.—Did not fair as well. Fairbanks won such a reputation in his first production that the mention of his name brings in good crowds, but they are all disappointed. He tries to play the impossible and thereby spoils a good play. Nothing to it.—Will Perry, Grand theatre, Alvin, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

His Majesty, the American, with Douglas Fairbanks.—A good Fairbanks. Pleased most of them. Good business.—R. J. Charters, Liberty Circuit, Vader, Wash.—Neighborhood patronage.

When the Clouds Roll By, with Douglas Fairbanks.—Good picture, but cannot get a crowd to see Fairbanks.—L. M. Kuhns, Gibson theatre, Gibson, N. M.—Mining camp patronage.

Universal

The Prince of Avenue A, with James Corbett.—This picture I can honestly recommend as a fine production. Highly pleased those who came fair and surly won the men and boys by storm. Advertise this as it is good.—Mrs. J. A. Dostal, Ideal theatre, Omaha, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Great Air Robbery, with Orner Locklear.—A fine puller, but a trifle disappointing. Something different than

BELLA HOOKER

Who has the ingenue role of Agnes Gates in Metro's production of "The New Harlethorn," which will be published as "The Saphynt?"
ordinary run of pictures.—N. Foster, Ellatha, Otsego, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

Blind Husbands, with Eric Von Strom-heim.—Truly a wonderful picture, but no money getter for a small town.—Frank Allen, Lion theatre, Byron, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Blind Husbands, with Eric Von Strom-heim.—Blind Husbands is a play that deals with life as it is in many instances, has not to be forgotten, and truly the biggest drawing power of the season. Book this picture everywhere.—E. P. Ilgenfritz, Lyric theatre, Mission Springs, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

Blind Husbands, with Eric Von Strom-heim.—A big picture. Played two days to big satisfied audience. Truly wonderful.—W. E. Pore, Liberty theatre, Gorman, Tex.—Transient patronage.

The Great Air Robbery, with Ormer Locklear.—A dandy picture. Don't be afraid to book this picture.—J. F. Alker, Maple theatre, Eldora, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Great Air Robbery, with Ormer Locklear.—Good picture. Good drawing power. Book it.—Frank Allen, Rose theatre, Byron, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Great Air Robbery, with Ormer Lockyear.—I wish to state that The Great Air Robbery is all that the producers claim it can truthfully play—say that any manager will not go wrong by playing this picture. It turns them away.—E. P. Ilgenfritz, Lyric theatre, Mission Springs, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Right to Happiness, with Dorothy Phillips.—Very good picture. Very good business. Received many favorable comments.—Meyers & Ford, Arcade theatre, La Grande, Oregon.—Small town patronage.

The Heart of Humanity, with Dorothy Phillips.—A very good picture and pleased big audience. Bad roads and weather kept me from making money on it.—E. D. Busch, Beverly Picture theatre, Beverly, Kans.—Small town patronage.

The Right to Happiness, with Dorothy Phillips.—A good picture.—Harry Ho-both, Maxine theatre, Imlay City, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Riders of the Law, with Harry Carey. Good Western picture. We did good business.—Will F. Krahn, Lorin theatre, Beasley, Cal.—Neighborhood patronage.

Common Property, with a special cast.—A very good one. Played it with poor vaudeville, but the picture was exceptionally good, so it made up for the vaudeville failure.—Kenneth Snyder, Pastime theatre, Mapleton, Minn.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Gun Fighting Gentleman, with Harry Carey.—Fine Western with lots of good comedy in it. Drew good first day. Fell off one-half second day. Be afraid to book it. Carey is good, but don't pull for two-day showing.—Wm. Thacher, Royal theatre, Salina, Kans.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Wolf, with Earle Williams.—Pleased majority. Poor business due to bad weather.—L. A. Tomlin, Liberty theatre, Easton, Ill.—Small town patronage.

The Doctor and the Woman, with Mildred Harris Chaplin.—Fine. Lots of splendid remarks. Played with Non-sold Love, a Lyons-Moran comedy. It was good, too.—H. E. Thompson, Temple Hall, Boulder, Mont.—Neighborhood patronage.

Paid in Advance, with Dorothy Phil- lips.—Showed this picture at advanced prices. Big business and best of all, everybody well pleased.—Ed S. Weg- ner, Lyric theatre, Valley Jet, Ia.

The Ace of the Saddles, with Harry Carey.—A good hit. Played to big business.—Simmons & Love, Riddell theatre, Clarksville, Ark.—General patronage.

The Triflers, with Edith Roberts—Pleasing light drama that played to fair business. Star is good, but not a drawing card.—J. E. Stine, Gem theatre, Clinton, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

Temptation, with Carmel Myers—Violet Stanton, one of the dancing girls, appeared in person in classical dances. Picture drew well but did not satisfy.—H. E. Thompson, Temple Hall, Boulder, Mont.—Neighborhood patronage.

Vitagraph

The Fortune Hunter, with Earle Wil- liams.—Did not draw, with the fault all my own, as we were trying to put over a percentage picture and had our bill- boards full. We should have played Fortune Hunter big, as it was a crack- erjack picture worthy of big advertising. Percentage pictures will get you. Look out.—R. R. Booth, Paramount theatre, Nebraska City, Nebr.

The Winchester Woman, with Alice Joyce.—This is not a strong one by any means. If Alice has fans in your town set this. There is a thunder storm that goes fine with effects. Use them and it will help wonderfully.—Harry M. Palmer, Liberty theatre, Washington, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Climbers, with Corinne Griffith.—A good picture. Can't go wrong on this one. Boost it. It's big.—Mrs. E. L. Pore, Liberty theatre, Gorman, Tex.—Transient patronage.

The Prince and Betty, with William Desmond.—Excellent comedy. Plot out of the ordinary, and well conceived. A satire on royalty that will tickle any American audience.—C. L. Symer, Pe- ninsula theatre, Portland, Ore.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Man Who Won, with Harry T. Morey.—An exceptionally good mystery story. It was a pleasant surprise to our patron.—Beth Crew Guhl, Pastime theatre, Delavan, Wis.—High class patronage.

The Midnight Bride, with Gladys Les- lie.—Very good picture and extra good photography. Vitagraph has them all beat on photography.—R. R. Hess, Marion theatre, Edna, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Midnight Bride, with Gladys Les- lie.—Good. This will please them all.—Opera House, Hutton, N. D.—Neigh- borhood patronage.

The Combat, with Anita Stewart.— Fine picture. This star draws good crowd.—Will Perry, Grand theatre, Al- vin, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

Specials

Sly Eye, with a special cast.—Trying to make something out of nothing.—S. C. Vale, Pictorium theatre, Dennison, O.—Small town patronage.

The Confession, with Henry B. Wal- thall.—Two days to big business, and pleased at the top.—Peter Krauth, Deni- son theatre, Dennison, Ia.—Neighborhood patronage.

Mickey, with Mabel Normand.—House wouldn't hold 'em. This picture more than pleases.—Guy O. Fritts, Dixie theatre, Marshall, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Birth of a Race, with a special cast.—Much overrated. Did not make money for us. Won't stand much ad- vance in price.—Pratt & Jackson, Regal theatre, Centerville, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

Custer's Last Fight, with a special cast.—Biggest day since in business.

THE LONG ARM OF MAN-NISTER (Pioneer), with Henry B. Walthall. —I made the great mistake of not properly advertising this picture. Many people said it was the best picture in years. Advertise it all you can. It surely is worth it. Will get the crowd and satisfy. —E. E. Harmon, Opera House, Elgin, Ore.

SERIALS

THE LOST CITY (Warner Bros.), with Juanita Hansen. —There are serials and serials and I have used about 90% of all of them, but in my opinion (including the box office) there is one Lost City. —D. Koken, Century theatre, Chicago, Ill. —General patronage.

THE BLACK SECRET (Pathé), with Pearl White. —More dramatic with "mellor" than other serials we have run, but is constantly picking up patronage. —Fahmney & Elson, Electric theatre, Curtis, Neb. —Neighborhood patronage.

THE BLACK SECRET (Pathé), with Pearl White. —This is a deep and heavy serial, but with Pearl White always pleasing. Have run every one of her serials, and they all made me money. Pearl White always draws me. —L. Beede, Beede's theatre, Enfield, N. H. —Small town patronage.

SMASHING BARRIERS (Vitagraph), with William Duncan. —People dissatisfied. Too many impossible stunts. —O. M. Tingley, Grand theatre, Big Sandy, Mont.—Neighborhood patronage.

THE INVISIBLE HAND (Vitagraph), with Antonio Moreno. —This is a serial in seven episodes. We are now on our eighth and can say it is as good as we have ever run. —Will Flaherty, theatre, Alvin, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

Elmo the Mighty (Universal), with Elmo Lincoln. —A good serial, but cannot get 90% patronage. —Harry Sagon, theatre, Wewa, Ill. —Small town patronage.

BOUND AND GAGGED (Pathé), with a special cast. —This is an extra fine serial. Am on the eighth episode and more pleasing than ever. It's clean and different. —It will please most any audience. —C. L. Beede, Beede's theatre, Enfield, N. H. —Small town patronage.

THE INVISIBLE HAND (Vitagraph), with Antonio Moreno. —On the third episode and going over big. Very thrilling and exciting. —Oldham Oldham theatre, Manchester, Tenn. —Neighborhood patronage.

SHORT SUBJECTS
Petticoats and Pants (Christie), this comedy received so many laughs at our theatre that I want you all to go in and book it. It can be booked singly as it is a special and very good and has a bunch of girls in it. Run it two days if you can and get the 11 x 14 photos. They will get you some extra business. —Chas. H. Ryan, Garfield theatre, Chicago, Ill. —Neighborhood patronage.

Capt. Kidd's Kids (Pathé), with Harold Lloyd. —One hundred per cent comedy. Ran to capacity house and is my best box office attraction. —Mart Cole, Liberty theatre, Rosenberg, Tex. —General patronage.

Moonshine (Paramount), with "Patty" Arquette. —Poorer Arbuckle serial than I ever saw. I guess they all make bad ones once in a while. —Alvin S. Frankel, Jewel theatre, Lafayette, Colo. —Small town patronage.

THE STAR BOARER (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon. —One of the best comedies I have ever shown. —L. A. Hasse, Majestic theatre, Mauston, Wis. —General patronage.

SCHOOL DAYS (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon. —Greatly appreciated by audience. The top notch of the season. —Alcar Café, Chicago, Illinois. —General patronage.

BETWEEN THE ACTS (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon. —Play this as a feature. A positive knockout. Used Semon cut out in lobby, and designated "laugh with Larry." —E. E. Bonham, Bonham theatre, Prairie du Sac, Wis. —Neighborhood patronage.

Pathe Declares Blanche Sweet Is Favorite Actress In 6,000 Houses

Blanche Sweet, featured in "The Deadlier Sex," is declared by Pathé Exchange, Inc., following a compilation of statistics, to be the favorite actress in more than 6,000 theatres in the United States.

Indications are, Pathé announces, that her forthcoming production, "Simple Souls," which will be published on May 22, will play in more playhouses than any of her previous pictures.

Still Booking First Two

It is declared that "A Woman of Pleasure" and "Fighting Cressy," the first two Sweet productions distributed by Pathé, still are booking in great strength in every territory.

"The Deadlier Sex," it is said, will be one of the fastest moving productions on the Pathé schedule, every exhibitor who played the first two pictures having asked for the third one for as early a date as possible.

In the preparation of the Blanche Sweet series it was determined to give the star unlimited time and unlimited scope in production in the making of each picture. It was felt that the great popularity of Blanche Sweet, it is said, would take her to the foremost place on the screen if she were given productions of the right type. To eliminate all chance of poor pictures injuring the star it was decided to observe strictly the right of rejection and to keep from the market any picture which did not meet the rigid requirements of the standard set for her.

Demand for Pictures

The wisdom of the policy adopted at that time is shown, it is declared, in the tremendous demand now manifested for the Blanche Sweet pictures. Her own work and the distinctive merit of the pictures have created a demand which insures the complete success of "Simple Souls" even before its publication date.

"Simple Souls" is from the novel by John Hastings Turner. Miss Sweet is excellent in the role of the English shop girl with a soul so simple that even marrying a duke does not impress her or overburden her with awe. He is just another simple soul to her, and the duke himself is a regular fellow who knows he is a simple soul. But his relatives are sure they have a monopoly on all the blue blood of the world, and thereby hangs the tale.

In a deliciously humorous way the two simple souls confound the aristocrats, who worry about them and about the conventions. The picture is certain to find great favor in this country because of its style and tone.

"Midlanders" Exteriors Are Taken at Rio Vista

Bessie Love and the cast of her first Andrew J. Callaghan production have returned to their Los Angeles studio after a long period devoted to exterior shooting in the Rio Vista country. The demands of "The Midlanders," the Charles Tenney Jackson novel which the star is adapting to the screen, were such that special emphasis was laid on accurate and colorful location work.

Directors Ida May Park and Joseph de Grasse, collaborating in supervision of Miss Love, declare that the exterior scenes made at Rio Vista will give the first production of the star a unique tone in that aspect of the film alone. Although the weather encountered by Miss Love's party was bad to begin with, the determination of the directors to wait for the right opportunity to get this locale for her screen play has resulted in a set of very unusual outdoor scenes.

Norma Talmadge Rests After Finishing Picture

Norma Talmadge's third first National picture, "Yes or No," an adaptation of Arthur Goodrich's play, is being cut and titled. Miss Talmadge has gone to Atlantic City with her sister, Natalie, for a brief rest.

Both sisters will be seen in dual roles in "Yes or No." Norma playing "Minnie Berry," a poor girl, and also "Mrs. Margaret Kane," a wealthy society woman. Natalie will have the two roles of the sister of "Mrs. Berry" and maid to "Mrs. Vane." Lowell Sherman, Gladden James, Rockcliffe Fellowes and Frederick Burton are in the cast.

Warm Winds In South Cause the Exhibitors to Think: "Typhoon Fans"

The recent warm weather throughout the South has convinced theatre owners that it is time to install their cooling apparatus for the coming summer, it is said, and, during the past week, Typhoon Fan Company of New York has closed contracts to equip the following theatres with the Typhoon cooling system:

Return of Lost Film Sought by Film Board

Upon the letterhead of the St. Louis Film Board of Trade and over the signature of D. B. Scherer, secretary of the board, an offer of $25 is made for the arrest and conviction of the party responsible for the disappearance of five reels of film shipped to Mattoon, Ill., March 4, 1920.

The chief of police of Mattoon is said to have traced the film to Neoga, Ill., the chief of police of that place being quoted as reporting, "Up to date I have not been able to locate the film you speak of but I feel quite confident that I can trace them. However, it will take some little time and trouble, but if there is anything in it I would make the effort."

2-Cent Piece Coinage Bill Passed by Senate

The motion picture industry, perhaps more than any other in the United States, is interested in the 2-cent piece coinage bill which has passed the United States Senate. Ever since Congress passed the amusement tax law there has been a demand for the 2-cent piece to facilitate the making of change in the box offices.
NEILAN TO STAR WESLEY BARRY
Original Story by Producer and Reed Heustis and Booth Tarkington's "Penrod" Tales Will Serve As Vehicles for This Well Known Freckle-Faced Youth

Wesley Barry, the freckle-faced youth who has appeared in Neilan-directed pictures, including the producer's latest, "Don't Ever Marry," and "Daddy Long Legs," will be starred by Marshall Neilan in a series of kid stories this year.

The first picture in which Wesley will be featured is an adaptation from an original boy story by Mr. Neilan and Reed Heustis. No title has been selected. Among the subjects in which Wesley will be seen on the screen will be an adaptation of Booth Tarkington's famous "Penrod."

12 Years of Age
Wesley, although 12 years of age, is one of the most popular players in motion pictures. In productions directed by Mr. Neilan he always has attracted great interest among motion picture devotees. He will be remembered particularly for his work in "Don't Ever Marry," Mr. Neilan's second independent publication for First National, "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" and "Daddy Long Legs," with Mary Pickford, and "The Unpardonable Sin," with Blanche Sweet.

For the past year little Barry has been studying for stardom under Mr. Neilan. Aside from detailed lessons affecting his conduct before the camera, Mr. Neilan has provided the boy with daily lessons in riding, boxing, swimming and, in fact, all forms of athletics, besides which the youngster is receiving his general education at home under a private tutor.

Ready for Stardom
"Wesley Barry is now ready for stardom," said Mr. Neilan in discussing the boy's appearance in feature parts. "He has thousands of admirers in all parts of the country and has a daily correspondence with fans that would make some of the older stars green with envy. We have been developing Wesley slowly and carefully and he is now ready to step into the big parts as a star."

To co-direct the initial Wesley Barry story, Marshall Neilan has just engaged Jack McDermott. Mr. McDermott is very well known in the trade, having been a director of Christie comedies and prior to that, with Universal.

"The Silent Avenger"
Duncan's Best Seller
The announcement that as William Duncan is prepared to stage the big thrill of the twelfth episode of "The Silent Avenger" Vitagraph has booked two thousand four hundred contracts with theatres that never before booked a William Duncan serial, and hundreds that never ran a serial of any kind, is regarded as significant. The indications are that the total number of theatre contracts signed for "The Silent Avenger" within the next thirty days will exceed six thousand. It is believed that this is a new high record for any serial.

The change of sentiment on the part of so many exhibitors formerly opposed or indifferent to the serial will have a big effect on the motion picture going public, it is believed, and may eventually lead the episode play up to even a higher plane than it has reached recently.

Harry Morey Working In "The Gauntlet of Greed"
Vitagraph announces that its latest Harry T. Morey feature, "The Sea Rider," will be published in May. In the meantime Mr. Morey and a large company are at work amid picturesque surroundings near Asheville, N. C., on his next picture, "The Gauntlet of Greed."

The Sea Rider, which was completed several weeks ago, is widely different in tone and theme from Mr. Morey's previous productions. It was adapted by Fred Schaefer from a story by Harry Dittmar, Edwin J. Hollywood, who is directing the present subject, was its director.

Expect Sensation
Louis B. Mayer has in preparation for production "The Professional Wife," a story which, when screened, is expected to develop a sensation. Though it is thought the picture will be finished this spring, plans are for fall publication.

Now With Metro
who used to hold the world's record for lachrymose endurance, has an important role in "The New Heir" a new Met screen star vehicle. Cleo's long distance crying has never been equaled either here or abroad— and she sheds real tears too.

Worth their Weight in Laughs

The Gumps

By far the funniest of the Animated Cartoons—

Speaking of Bathing Beauties, there's none of 'em got anything on me. This clean-up stuff is right in my line—there isn't a dry jiffy in any one of my pictures—and I'm the guy that knows. Everybody's talking about a Panic nowadays. They say a Panic is coming sure. They're wrong. The Panic's come already and I'm the PANIC.

What with my pictures in about 50 of the biggest newspapers in the country and my comedies on more and more screens each week, life is getting to be one cyclone after another. I can't stick my nose out these days without drawing a crowd. If there weren't so many guys running for President I might feel tempted to take a hack at it myself.

Not that I'm stuck up—I'm only admitting that than me there is no such other.

In Northern Illinois Only
We heard that Carl Mueller of the Spencer Square theatre, Rock Island, Ill., was southbound for the races at Louisville, Ky. Has he grown much? Have any of the gang seen him return? Rumor has it that Carl's choice must be saving his speed for the next Derby, for up to sun-down the day of the "big romp," the old speed beauty never knew the barrier had dropped.

Harry Weiss, manager of the Superior Screen Service exchange, advises us they have taken over "Neglected Wives," for the Illinois and Indiana territory. See Harry! He is chock full of details on the subject.

With the City fathers suggesting economy on the entertaining expenditure of the City hall by a reduction in the number of band concerts to be held this summer in the several parks, it looks like the ol' wind is sort of blowin' in on the profit side of the ledger of Chicago exhibitors. Get busy men and make that theatre of yours as cozy and cool as possible for the first visit means repeat.

The "big three" are now hovering about Indianapolis, Ind. That is to say, Louis Goldwyn, of Celebrated Players; George Levy, of Unity Photoplays, and Jack Flanagan of — is a mooted question.

J. O. Campbell, for the past several months purveyor par excellence for the local Hodkinson exchange turned in his resignation effective May 15, stepping across the yard to the Mickey Film Corporation. He will mark time with the big states right feature, "The Woman He Chose."

Sidney Goldman, erstwhile manager for the local Hodkinson exchange, left May 16 for an extended vacation. Sid and the charming Mrs. Goldman have the Chalmers' tourer all stocked up with goodies plenteous and will tour northern Wisconsin and Michigan for the next two or three weeks.

Paul De Oto is back again in the ol' Windy City having signed up with the local Pathé franchise exchange. In the prevailing manner Paul is stepping around the Consumers building, film parade begins and ends right here in Chi.

Lee Herz of the Silex Film exchange (Yep, still holding the fort at 229 S. State street), expects to trip eastward for a brief stay in the big city. Must be some more good films lying around there that Lee is anxious to start working out here. The recent motor purchase, Ford coupe, will be kept under lock and key in Lee's desk while absent.

We were quizzed the other day if that great big genial lad, George Boley, was there with the left jabs, feints and counters. Well if he can swing those glove pushers of his anything like the way he used to hit the old line when carrying the pugskin back in those gory football days of the past, our advice would be to weigh matters carefully before going to battle.

Eddie Herz is to shortly forsake the office of the Silex Film exchange and show his sales ability on the road, covering the Illinois territory. With this exchange showing a record of twelve days at Rockford and seven days at Peoria for the popular Jester Comedies, we'll admit the youngster will he kept on his toes most of the time to beat these runs.

You'll forgive us on that ship last week regarding billet of the Argosy Film exchange. For the future the executive quarters will be located at 1356 Belmont avenue, Chicago, and the physical distribution will be handled by Clarence Paffrath of the Independent Film Service, 714 Crilly building. Again said old Waukegan is the loser!

Ralph Ketzerling, who looks after the interests of Jones, Linick & Schaefer, and sees that the sun doesn't set without shining on that firm's name every day, tendered a little luncheon to members of the trade and daily press staffs at Mandarin Inn, Saturday, May 15, following a private showing of "The Love Expert," which is now playing at the Randolph theatre.

Just got a post card flash from director Jack Harlow, who just arrived in sunny California. He writes us from Venice, a la bathing costume, "on the beach at Ocean Park, Cal." After giving the scene a careful scrutiny we'll agree it must be the orchard that gives the cinema its harvest of wondrous bathing peaches.

 Can't Escape George

Nat Wolf tells us the boys have totalled about thirty members for the new American Legion film post now organizing. Come on men, "snap into it," and let's make it 300 by the end of the week. Illinois went over th' top on everything else, so let's go, and run true to form.

Peter J. Schaefer, of the firm of Jones, Linick & Schaefer, submitted to a slight operation at the Presbyterian hospital last Wednesday, May 12. Mr. Schaefer suffered with a slight touch of rheumatism in his left knee following his return from California and had his tonsils removed, upon the advice of his physician, which has entirely relieved him of his rheumatism.

Who asked for "Red?" No, he isn't with Comedianty any more. He has posted his name over the booker's desk at Robertson-Cole something like this: Frank Williams.

Did anybody ever see Banks Winter when he didn't have a corkin' good yarn to tell? Well, he is back in Chicago from Charlotte, N. C., where he was publicizing Universal, with plenty of material about 'em colored boys and Southern hospitality.

Charlie Miller is wearing out sole leather on Chicago cobblestones; these days putting Robertson-Cole's name on theatre programs, etc., Robertson-Cole presents, etc. Charlie once was a star salesman for Universal.

William J. Sweetney, organizer for the Illinois Exhibitors' Alliance, left Chicago on Monday morning for a trip through the state. He expects to be gone a week or ten days.

William D. Burford, Aurora's live-wire exhibitor, who has been on the sick list for several weeks, returned to his Chicago office May 17 and is doing business at the old stand. During his absence the I. E. A. elected his financial secretary of that organization.

Charles Lamb and wife, of Rockford, Ill., returned from a two weeks' trip to New York City on May 17. It was surely a pleasant trip," said Mr. Lamb, although he did admit that he picked up quite a bit of inside info on the film industry.

W. F. Maher boarded the interurban the other day, bid Milwaukee farewell, and landed in Max Levey’s arms at Robertson-Cole’s Chicago branch. He has been assigned to a city territory.

“Steve” Montgomery is following up leads for Robertson-Cole. He is one of the two new members on the sales staff.

Long Term Contract
Signed by George to Direct for Selznick

Burton George has signed a long term contract with Selznick Pictures to direct forthcoming productions. Myron Selznick, in signing Mr. George, said it was the result of the success achieved by the director in his recent Selznick picture,
“The Valley of Doubt.”

Born in Rheims, France, Mr. George was brought to America by its parents when he was not quite three years of age.
At eighteen, he joined the staff of the New York Herald, remaining in newspaper work for the following nine years. Then he joined the old Biograph company, beginning his film career as a director’s assistant. With the completion of “Wilderness Fear,” his second production now in the course of filming in the far north, he will have rounded out a record of forty feature photoplays produced under his direction and, including the one and two-reel features he has made, it will mark his 150th contribution to the screen.

Included in the cast under Mr. George’s direction in “Wilderness Fear” are Hedda Hopper, who plays the leading feminine role, and William B. Davidson, who plays the leading male role, Maurice Costello, Pat Hartigan, Charles Gerard, Betty Hlburn, Harry Parsons and others.

Many Inquiries Received
By Jans Firm Regarding “Madonnas and Men”

The manner in which inquiries regarding “Madonnas and Men” are coming into the home office of Jans Pictures, Inc., indicates the interest that exhibitors are taking in this production now nearing completion, it is said.

The picture is said to be one of the biggest box office attractions this company has ever turned out. Herman F.
Jans, president of Jans Pictures, had definite ideas in view when he contemplated the making of “Madonna and Men,” and these ideas have been carefully carried out in detail.

“Madonnas and Men” contains more than its share of at least two incidents that go into the making of an attraction that makes an appeal to all classes of both sexes, according to the statement of the producers. It is a stupendous sceneshows dens of lions, thrilling chariot races, slave girls, cabarets, chorus girls, exciting drama, thrills, stunts and senvations some ancient and some modern, vice and its consequences. The unusual story carries one from the days of Nero to modern times. Evan rows Fontain, Ray Deane, Anders Randolf, Edmond Lowe, Gustav Von
Seffrutz and Faire Binney are in the cast.

Neilan Claims He Has “Find” in Colleen Moore

Marshall Neilan is of the opinion that he has another “find” in Colleen Mom, the pretty little actress who is appearing opposite Wesley Barry in the first Neilan picture for the youth. Miss Moore has had considerable screen experience, having appeared before the camera in some of the most notable artists of motion pictures.

In Colleen Moore, Mr. Neilan found the exact type he had been seeking for the Wesley Barry picture. After the first scene the director became enthusiastic over the talents of the little newcomer and considered Colleen Moore one of the big possibilities of the future,” said he, in discussing her work.

“He is a natural born artist as little Wesley Barry is.

“Silent Barrier” To Be Ready for Preview Soon

“The Silent Barrier,” first picture by Sir Louis Tracy to be filmed under the Gibraltar banner by Louis Tracy Productions, Inc., knighthood having been conferred on the author by King George of England while the picture was in process of production, will be ready for preview within a few days. The new W. W. Hopkinson publication now is well advanced in the tiling stage.

William Worthington directed the production. He is now on his way to California, where he is to direct Leah Baird’s next picture play. “The Silent Barrier” includes in its cast: Sheldon
Lewis, Gladys Hulett, Florence Dixon,
Donald Cameron, Corinne Barker, Fuller
Mellish and Mathilde Brundage.

JOHN BARRYMORE

in

"Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde"

JOHN BARRYMORE continues to smash records. All over the country his wonderful portrayal of Stevenson's story continues to surpass every previous screen offering.

Here are some recent reports:

"John Barrymore in 'Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde' broke all house records. Barrymore's portrayal is the finest screen acting I have ever seen."
Phil Gleichman, Broadway, Strand, Detroit, Mich.

"John Barrymore in 'Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde' biggest attraction ever played in my house. This is Holy Week, but receipts are two and three hundred a day over anything else."
Moe Kridel, Goodwin, Newark, N. J.

"Requests so numerous and forceful on part of the public I am forced to play John Barrymore on return engagement."
Sid Grauman, Grauman's, Los Angeles

"Just finished three week's capacity on John Barrymore. This picture brought hundreds of new patrons to my house."
W. Dineen, Moirs Theatre, Chicago

"‘VIRGIN OF STAMBOL’ broke all records at the Standard Theatre, Cleveland, today. Although this picture played Loew’s Stillman and Loew’s Mall in this city for one week each I had to stop selling tickets three times and at nine-thirty there was a line of people over a city block long waiting to get in. I was compelled to run till midnight. ‘THE VIRGIN OF STAMBOL’ is the greatest of great features."

CAN THE CAMERA LIE?

The old saying says it can't. But here's a ripping story based on the fact that it can.

Produced by ASTRA
A murder is committed in a motion picture studio. A film turns up, which, when projected, shows the girl star of that studio shooting the murdered man. And because of the fact that the camera was a liar, you have a white-hot fifteen episode serial, with arrests, escapes, chases, imprisonments, plots, villainy and action galore.

COMING SOON
“Every Motion Picture Know

(A History of National Organization Activities as a Guide to those who attend the Cleveland Convention)

Ten years past (at Cleveland) was held the first Conclave of an Infant Industry—ex-bakers, bankers, preachers—what-not?—now Exhibitors, assembled from everywhere, seeking protection and the rewards of organization in forming National League of Motion Picture Exhibitors.

The Motion Picture was a Toy-Art, catering to the many common folk in dark narrow rooms. “Just flickering shadows accompanied by a tinpanny piano and tin-ear player.”

Loudly we ballyhooed the silly silent drama and lowly comedy and the world cam scoffed, laughed, came often—leaving us mighty dollars for our own.

Our vision faintly pierced the future and we beheld the ever-increasing power and popularity of the screen and our duty to preserve its purity so that the Motion Picture might become Man’s Greatest Benefactor.

With high resolve we pledged to stand together in harmony and unity “one for all and all for one,” and to ever uphold a powerful national organization to be full representative of a Great Industry.

Exhibitors, look back over those years!

How have you succeeded? Wonderfully, yes. Despicably, no.

Behold the World’s Fifth Greatest Industry, The Mighty Motion Picture

With unbounded energy and prophetic vision, storeroom shows have grown to wondrous temples of Photoplay Art, outrivaling in beauty comfort and dignity, all Houses to Art or even Heaven. Foolish one-reel playlets gave place to the best of the world’s thought in history, romance, literature, travel or human interest.

We are a mighty circus, church, school, concert, opera—combined in one. The Motion Picture has grown far beyond our most fanciful dreams, while we have allowed our national activities to decay until we are helpless as infants.

Why has the National Exhibitor Organization NOT kept pace with the progress of Motion Picture betterment?

Why can anyone at anytime take a piece of us?

Why may the unfair Producer take our deposits and build theatres and compete with us, his customers?

Why may censorship destroy us, the blue-sky salesman, or any other take our blood or it from us a pound of flesh and we stir not?

Independent Motion Picture

40 Ohio St., Indianapolis, Ind.
Exhibitor In America

THYSELF

Because YOU, Mr. Exhibitor, Are to Blame. You Fail to Organize!

Year after year we convene, Exhibitor Fighting Exhibitor. In four out of nine National conventions we have been split in two by disturbers and bolters. We come and boast and brag of our wonderful local organization in our home town, and waste so much silly-ass bragging time that we have no time for else.

We crown one man Czar—President of all National Activities, and send him to fight our battles with an empty treasury, and charge him to bring to us the golden rewards of organized efforts. Your National officers generally pay their postage bills and if they work not miracles they are traitors.

We cheat ourselves every year on some scheme of selling books or panhandling to support a National Organization.

We'd rather give millions of advance deposits dollars of TRIBUTE than a thousand dollars to an exhibitors organization for DEFENSE.

Your good State or local organization can help you nothing in a National movement, but every local or state is so full of self that we will not follow a leader be he Moses, Mohammed and the Twelve Apostles rolled in one.

Individually you howl, but every year a more despicable contract is forced on you until you are hog-tied. You seem to favor the Producer who can take the biggest slice out of your bankroll and use it to build theatres to compete with you. They make you guarantee and percentage you at the same time. You may be rated at millions but you pay your thin dime before you can get a one-sheet.

Once a year you come to a National Convention and expect to solve all your problems in one swipe. Some shoot craps for three days and wonder why great constructive work is not accomplished. Why say more? Do not these facts get under your hide and bring up your fighting spirit? It should.

IS THERE ANY HOPE? YES. IF YOU EVER ORGANIZE HALF-WAY YOU WILL FIND ALL YOUR TROUBLES EASY TO REMEDY. Organize right and right now.

The Independent Motion Picture Exhibitors organized April 27th on one platform That Producers get out of the theatre business. In two weeks we had the following producers agree to our proposition: American, Pathé, Select, Selznick, First National, Vitagraph, United Artists, Robertson-Cole, Associated Exhibitors, Universal and Big Six. Buy only their pictures! These producers can give us all the best pictures and all we need. Cancel the others until they get out of the theatre business.

We have a great MASS MEETING OF ALL EXHIBITORS OF AMERICA, HOTEL CLEVELAND, CLEVELAND, OHIO, JUNE 8, 9, 10, 11, for a showdown. Join this movement. Come to Cleveland and fight for a new deal. Demand a clean-cut National Exhibitors organization. Run your National organization like any other business. Put in real money. Stop fooling yourself. "Where you put your treasure there is your heart." Hire the best brains to keep you out of trouble. Hire a representative in every distributing zone to guard your interests. Forget self. Forget State. Have a National Vision. Come and stay at the meetings and help us complete a real organization. This is the largest and most effective meeting in our history.

Make your reservation today, Hotel Cleveland, Cleveland, Ohio, or

Frank Rembusch, Chairman SUCCESSFUL EXHIBITORS do not waste time on compliments. When they write in extolling "SEX" in terms that make the dictionary tremble they are thrilled with the joy that is born of an overflow in the box office. These exhibitors just can't help being exuberant. It's human nature.

'99' IS. A PROGRAM-BUILDER

A Program-Builder in the language of the Exhibitor is the kind of picture that lends tone and strength to his whole program. This Kerrigan feature is such a program-builder. It has a brilliant star with an established reputation, an absorbing story that unfolds swiftly and logically, a direction which is eminently capable.

Features MUST Be Program-Builders

THE harbor of Rhodes was celebrated for a monstrous image which straddled both sides of the city. History ranks it as one of the seven wonders of the world, but Time toppled the Colossus and proved it a rank failure. The idea was too ambitious. It tried to cover too much ground.

I'll say it will be the eighth wonder of the world if the interests now planning to dominate both the production and exhibition of pictures succeed in straddling the field.

The Colossus principle isn't sound. Even Standard Oil is too wise to baffle the distributor and if the men who buy features allow the concerns that make them to open theatres in direct competition then human experience is a liar and precedent must go back to college.

What could be softer than to have you spend your good money to build up popularity for my stars in your houses and then leisurely take over all the best paying locations while you obliging exhibitors continued to finance my business until I could take the pick of the country's properties?

If I thought you'd stand for it I could make the Colossus of Rhodes look like a scarf pin, but when I figure what would happen to my enterprises if I butted into yours I don't even want to try it in a dream.

Your good will is my best bet. If the exhibitor isn't a success, I'm a failure.

"The Valley of Doubt"

A story as strong as the rugged, snow-covered mountains where its red-blooded characters live, love, and hate.

Drunken fury against outraged decency in a struggle to the death. The prizes two in number—the love of an heiress whose heart knew no boundary of caste and the honor of a trusting wayward who had been betrayed by a human vulture.

A cast of established screen favorites who have won their way to country-wide popularity through sheer merit.

A MISTAKE
WORTH THOUSANDS TO SHOWMEN

Mistakes are usually expensive, but this one is a money maker. Before we started producing and releasing "COMEDYART" we made a budget covering the expenses for distribution, production, etc. Of course, we based these figures on the gross amount of business that we expected to do with "COMEDYART."

This million-dollar mistake, with the reverse English, that is making money today for several thousand exhibitors is that we greatly underestimated the value exhibitors would immediately place on the "COMEDYART" idea; that is, three snappy, high-class subjects in a two-reel release each week. We underestimated our gross bookings on "COMEDYART" so greatly that, starting with our fourth release, "MOTHER'S ANGEL," we find ourselves able to spend from three to four times as much money on the making of our comedies as we had planned in our budget; that we were able to add four more companies making these comedies; able to add more specialists in title writing, gagmen, artists; where we had planned to use dozens.

The costumes of our "Special" beauties are more daring, more magnificent than any producer ever has used, and each one of them is a new, original creation by the highest price imported modiste west of New York.

And the "Special" Beauty Chorus! Well, we allowed for some expense in this line, but these "Specials" cost five times our original figure and they're surely worth ten times as much to you.

We started walking; now we're running. We started in low speed; now we're in high, hitting on twelve. There is a program of short reel subjects that can compare in quality with the "COMEDYART" releases now available, and to come.

If you have contracted for "COMEDYART," consider yourself lucky; if you've put off getting a contract for this latest winner, there is still time to remedy it. There's a "Special" office near you, and a postcard will bring you your opportunity—the same opportunity that thousands of the wisest, most successful exhibitors in America are cashing in on right today.

"C'mon, Skinny, Run Fast an' Get a Look at Constance Talmadge"

And Caroline Sanborn, the Chicago Daily Tribune critic, goes on to say:

"Did you get out on the wrong side of bed this morning? And have everything happen that you didn't want, and nothing that you did? Never mind! Go to see Constance Talmadge's new picture, 'The Love Expert.' You'll forget you ever had the blues.

"What Constance succeeds in doing will make you sit right up and take notice. And you'll approve of her and her acting. She's decidedly there, with some new French frocks and all her old enthusiasm.

"It is such fun to watch her romp through the six reels, you don't wonder the rest of the cast enjoys itself and does so well.

"And besides all this there are some tricks of the trade and enough clever subtitles to keep you chuckling from the first glimpse to the final fadeout.

"MERRIEST COMEDY OF THE SEASON" By Virginia Dale

"The merriest comedy of the season is at the Randolph. From the workshops of that clever duo, John Emerson and Anita Loos, has come a picture of farcical tendencies, admirably screened and delectably played.

"The cast headed by Constance Talmadge is an excellent one. The star can obtain laughs by the flicker of an eyelash; without effort she can make you want to shake her and buy her an ice cream cone and pay a war tax cheerfully for the privilege of looking at her.

"Quite more clever situations have been supplied the players in this picture than in ten average program attractions. There are a number of very novel touches; the actual slow mounting blush of the lovelorn people not the least of them. There is no better way of being entertained this week than by seeing this picture."—The Chicago Daily Journal.

"EXPERTLY ACTED, SPLENDIDLY HANDLED" By W. K. Hollander

"The Love Expert' is done amusingly. The charming episodes are punctuated with scintillating subtitles of the clever Anita Loos, who, with John Emerson, created the comedy.

"The picture is splendidly handled and expertly acted. It makes for agreeable entertainment."—Chicago Daily News.
CLEVELAND, during the time of the exhibitors' conventions, seems to be holding out a strange fascination for many people who ordinarily could not be dragged to an exhibitors' meeting by a team of wild horses. The solution is an easy one: The independent exhibitors of the country have made it plain during recent weeks that they do not intend that they shall any longer be made footsoldiers of fate. They are now thoroughly awake to the great and growing menace.

ALL the national exhibitors' organizations will be assembled in Cleveland on June 8. A highly desirable development would be the welding of the various groups into a single nation-wide organization, manned by genuine exhibitors and devoted exclusively to the business of safeguarding the interests of independent exhibitors.

* * *

DISASTER will be averted if every exhibitor coming to the conventions takes with him the realization that a powerful group of sinister forces is working desperately to involve the conventions in petty jealousies and disputes in order that the real business of the hour will be side-tracked. The monopolists do not expect to see their plans upset without a desperate fight.

* * *

JUST about the time it was beginning to look as if the side-show business at conventions, in the form of expositions, was a thing of the darkened past, along comes an ambitious young man with an exposition stunt for the Cleveland conventions. No one will quarrel with him in his energetic effort to fatten his purse, but it is nevertheless a fact that the exhibitors going to Cleveland have real business to transact and should not be disturbed with side-show stunts.

THE chairman of the Chicago censorship commission evolved a new method of handling a report. In order that his own ideas on how a report should be written might have full sway he simply locked himself up, wrote the report and then handed it to the newspapers as the findings of the commission. This seems to be a simple and direct method of avoiding argument—providing only it works. In this case it didn't work and the report is being rewritten. In all probability it will have to assume an entirely different form before it is given serious consideration by the city council.

THE fight for independence which is now being waged in Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas has one particularly hopeful aspect with reference to the general situation facing the independent exhibitor. In these three states of the Southwest the forces of monopoly are the strongest of anywhere in the country. If the fight can be waged and won there—and it certainly will be won—then independent exhibitors elsewhere throughout the nation have little to fear.

* * *

DESPITE the fact that the meetings scheduled for Cleveland next week are already assured of large attendance, every exhibitor, regardless of what section of the country he is identified with and of what local or national organization he has been a member, should make a determined effort to add the weight of his presence to the conventions at Cleveland. There is no longer any doubt that the week will stand out as a momentous one in the history of the industry. Have a hand in the great work that is to be accomplished! Every exhibitor in the country will be affected by the results of this meeting. In all probability there will be nothing of greater importance that you will be able to give your time to that week—so be in Cleveland!

Hula Hula Dancers Rare

By PERCY DUBB

(Special Stablergram)

The year's crop of Hula Hula dancers on the Isle of Yap has been hard hit by the grass shortage.

Ordinarily grass grows about three feet high here, but early frosts and hungry cows have almost ruined the available supply.

There is a waist of raw material among the dancers that is appalling and nothing short of a board of censors will stop it. If any more Yaplenders are to be imported into the United States for exploitation purposes, shredded wheat or some other substitute will have to be resorted to and the mills at Niagara Falls have been urged to increase their output.

Nothing in years has hit the motion picture industry such a solar plexus blow. Exhibitors everywhere are clamoring for lobby dancers, but it looks as though they would have to do without this year or use the home-grown product.

Dubb's second article will follow soon.

Here's One From Chas. Ray—

Charles Ray, First National star, tells one on the colored maid at a Hollywood home.

"Lizzie refused to go to work one morning," says Charlie. "She was sitting dreamily on a bench and refused to do a lick of work. Finally we called the doctor in.

"Why don't you get up and go to work?" asks the Doc.

"'Well, they owe me $12 and I ain't going to do a lick of work till they pay me,' Lizzie replies.

"'Well, move over,' says the Doc. 'They owe me $50.'"

Cohen Statement Brings New Hope of Exhibitors Uniteding

Two Organizations Meeting in Cleveland June 8-11
Now Have One Great Cause in Common—Brandt Seeks to Effect Compromise

Announcement by Sydney S. Cohen, chairman of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, that he considers the threatened monopoly of theatres by producers as the great question before the exhibitors assembling in Cleveland June 8, 9, 10 and 11, is generally regarded as paving the way for a national organization of exhibitors which will include all factions.

Despite personal differences of their leaders, the Independent Motion Picture Exhibitors of America and the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America now have one great cause in common—the driving from the exhibitorial field of the producer.

All other questions are to be subordinated. Petty differences, it is believed, can be overcome so that the exhibitors will be able to present a united front against the danger which they believe threatens their very existence.

Prominent exhibitors, who in the past have held aloof from all organizations, have declared their intention of going to Cleveland in an effort to break down all existing suspicions, jealousies and differences and bring into one great body the scores of efficient exhibitor-leaders. who for years have permitted minor disagreements to result in dissension.

Rembusch Defines Attitude In Statement to Exhibitors

Frank J. Rembusch, speaking as the official head of the Independent Motion Picture Exhibitors of America, this week issued the following statement:

“The Independent Motion Picture Exhibitors of America was organized at Chicago, April 27th, into a permanent national exhibitors’ body for the single purpose of insisting that producers get out of the theatre business. We are calling a nation wide meeting of all exhibitors in America to hear the report of our directors at the Cleveland mass meeting opening June 8th, under our auspices, and with our officers in charge.

“The first order of business will be report of the committee which had a conference with producers and we hope and request that every exhibitor in America be present. I have selected Hotel Cleveland for our meeting place, but will change the location if more suitable to all concerned.

“Mr. Black may decide to call a meeting in Cleveland of the old national league for the same week. The more conventions, the better, because it means more exhibitors at Cleveland. I hope that the two national bodies now existing and the newly proposed organization may blend into one association, but if this is not possible, I wish we may agree to work together along the same lines.”

Sydney S. Cohen Emphasizes Danger of Producer Monopoly

Sydney S. Cohen in his most recent statement to the exhibitors lays special stress on the importance of the same question. In part, his appeal is as follows:

“The motion picture theatre owners of the country are keenly alive to the danger threatening them from the producer-exhibitor. They will under no circumstances and by no manoeuvres whatever be diverted from organ-
Cleveland Is Mecca for Entire Picture Industry

William Brandt Offers To Act As An Intermediary

William Brandt, president of the Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce of New York, is one of several men who have volunteered their services in an effort to settle disputed differences between the two organizations.

In a letter to Sig Samuels, secretary of the I. M. P. E. A., and to Saul Bullock, secretary of the M. P. T. O. A., he suggests that the M. P. T. O. A. appoint a committee of seventeen to meet with the executive committee of the I. M. P. E. A. at New York June 3 and 4, in an effort to settle disputed questions so that one and not two conventions will be called to order Tuesday, June 8.

With my policy that this industry should have a 100 per cent national organization, instead of several national exhibitor bodies, declares Brandt.

"With that thought in mind, I consider it a pleasure and an honor to extend an invitation to through your committee to become the guests of the Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce at a luncheon to be held at Hotel Astor on June 4 at 1 p.m. Should you signify your intention to accept this invitation on behalf of your committee, I will be pleased to arrange hotel accommodations."

There is a possibility that his invitation will bring the factions together, as the committee of seventeen of the Independent Motion Picture Exhibitors of America will be in New York June 3 and 4, and many of the leaders of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America had arranged to be in New York on the same dates.

J. D. Williams Urges Harmony in Effort

J. D. Williams, manager of the First National Exhibitors Circuit, Inc., who at the recent Chicago convention pledged his personal aid to the exhibitors in organizing to fight the producer-exhibitor, issued a statement this week warning the exhibitors of the difficulties which face them and urging them to overcome petty differences to accomplish the result they seek.

"On to Cleveland! It is in every issue of the trade journals," the statement opens. "Exhibitors met on a recent Southern border. Producers and distributors are echoing it. Visiting theatre owners, in New York from several territories, talk enthusiastically of the meeting and hope to found a national league of exhibitors, representatives of every section, free from petty policies, nation-wide in scope and determined in its course of defense for individual interests.

"Similar attempts in the past make it a big order to fill, and a great undertaking for the exhibitors whose unusual initiative and business acumen give it an impelling force. It is a purpose beset with dangers and difficulties, surrounded by countless pitfalls, but with possibilities of such magnitude if it succeeds that it compels every exhibitor to support, encourage and counsel that can come to it from any quarter. It is doubly necessary that all independent exhibitors, or any individual theatre owners, passively or intensively interested in the outcome of Cleveland, realize so keenly what rests of mutual confidence, of personal integrity, of individual loyalty and steadfast resistance to mercenary influences, and what it is certain to follow and attack the ambitions of the national league to be solidified at Cleveland as the exhibitors who will be in the forefront of the movement, a national cooperative and defensive structure which was, and is, fundamentally identical to the Pan American unit soon to be created. Their theatre interests were threatened then with dangers equally as great as the independent exhibitors, upon which the Cleveland assembly will unite and act. So they got together and organized First National Exhibitors' Circuit."

Cites Experience of First National

"This is neither a brief nor a plaudit for that cooperative body. Instead, I shall set forth the essential features which have made it succeed as a national unit of exhibitors, knowing that in such a recital of facts heretofore unheeded they may give guidance for the exhibitors who will gather in Ohio for a purpose that is similar."

"First, the exhibitors, who merged their respective desires for relief from oppressive conditions, began with a definite, well established plan, they confined themselves to the big, important phase of the menacing conditions they desired to solve, and applied themselves strictly to determining the best and quickest means for eliminating them."

"When it became known that a number of exhibitors had formed a cooperative organization the majority opposed the idea. It was pointed out that other and more discouraging comments were the tributes paid. The members were asked to reveal inducements and ulterior motives, harbored by one or more of the other members."

"Their experiences will befall the exhibitors selected to administer the affairs of a national league. The solution, for the future, as in the past, is the same. Pay no attention whatever to gossip, rumor or vague insinuations affecting the loyalty, integrity and sincerity of any league, how strong and steadfast such tactics as vehemently as you would attack them if they affected an intimate personal friendship. Be prepared for the most malicious attacks. There are many individuals who will malign anything and everything in which they have no interest and upon which, properly, they have no interest. Stick together as though you were glued during the post-convention epidemic of vicious chatter, and one of the first great periods of doubt and discouragement will be weathered successfully."

Use Care in Naming of All Officers

"Care, discretion and mature consideration should precede the selection of executives for a national league. To them is entrusted the problem of leadership, direction and progress. Once a majority vote has established any of this kind, the only practical and safe policy is for every member to cast his allegiance to one choice and not to waver, whether elected officials, without regard to previous inclinations. First National members have never wavered, and insist, in thorough and unswerving support of the executives they have chosen. Every exhibitor in that cooperative group has been steadfast and unshakable in personal allegiance."

"Even with this unanimous aid, the path of that national exibitory body, as will prove the existence of a national exibitory league, as in other cases, that some one of these myriad links in the national chain may prove vulnerable, and that destructive forces harboring ulterior motives, may break through and strive to create dissention. Then comes the real test of cooperative strength. If the majority membership remains steadfast, refusing to be stampeded into panic, these occasional attacks will become helpful, welding the organization into a more compact and determined unit.

"Questions of policy, differences of opinion, and tendencies to dispute issues will arise in a national league the same as in any other cooperative body. The spirit behind the manner in which these are met, discussed and adjusted will have much to do with harmony and progress.

"A national exibitory organization, no matter what its objectives may be, so long as it is a cooperative body, formed for mutual aid, protection and defense, must have the undivided loyalty and unity, swerving allegiance of its entire membership, and differences in personal opinions and viewpoint on questions before it ever should affect this support."

"On to Cleveland—but with individual exhibitory determination to hurdle all petty differences, to allow nothing to halt action on the big, basic dangers which can be overcome only through organization, to grant office to the most capable, and then to be loyal to them as choice of the majority—thus, every independent exhibitor, for himself and for his fellows, an asset beyond value."

Two More Companies Pledge Their Aid

Two more distributing corporations this week cast their lot with the independent exhibitors—the Reelcraft Pictures Corporation and the Victor Kremer Film Features, Inc. Both issued statements pledging every possible aid to the exhibitors in their fight against producer monopoly of theatres

Go to Cleveland Prepared for Work—

A Communication from HAROLD B. FRANKLIN, Managing Director of Shea's Hippodrome Division, Buffalo, N. Y.

Early in June there will gather in Cleveland a representative body of exhibitors from throughout the country with the object of laying down the machinery for a national organization. The fact that this convention is sponsored by several units whose record is one of achievement gives promise that out of this convention will emerge a national organization of definite power.

Extinction Threatens Exhibitor

The very foundation of the industry, the exhibitor, is threatened with extinction. Surely, if ever there was the necessity for concerted action, that time has arrived. This is no time for evading anything. The issue is clear—on the one hand we have the Famous Players' organization, who openly have acquired theatres in different parts of the country. In the south, we were glad to stand at the Chicago convention, this company, through a subsidiary, has created a situation which makes it impossible for an independent exhibitor to prosper. From coast to coast there are eruptions on this subject. We, who have given support to organizations such as the Famous Players cannot but look with distrust on any move on the part of others to acquire theatres. They have openly challenged every independent exhibitor. Is it to be expected that we will stand idly by and continue to fill their bunkers with the means by which they may build theatres, and eventually prove to be our competitor?

Beware Percentage Booking

Under the guise of percentage we have another angle of a scheme to secure control of your theatre. Not content with the large rentals now being paid, some of the distributors are trying to force percentage booking, knowing that once percentage has been put over, that nothing would prevent them from increasing their percentage, just as they have increased their rental figures. Percentage would be placing a mortgage on your business. It will kill incentive and make of you exhibitors a rubber stamp. Percentage is another name for extortion and bondage.

It is a question of a few producers against almost fifteen thousand exhibitors. The tail is trying to wag the dog.

Sees Need of Leadership

What the exhibitor needs most is leadership—leadership that can clearly define the issues and present a practical plan that would make of the exhibitors of the country a unit. The exhibitors of the independent exhibitors would be the biggest force in the industry.

No distributor, nor clique of distributors, can dominate by the will of the exhibitors. If distributors operate theatres, it is only because exhibitors allow them to—if distributors force percentage, it is because exhibitors permit them to.

Must Get Together Now

Exhibitors must get together and say what they think, with fight behind them. There are enough distributors who do not operate theatres that could furnish any program—and they would make programs of other exhibitors, because any distributor is in your hands, and when they are successful, it is only because you support them. If the exhibitor body of exhibitors would create, for the exhibitor can withstand the loss of revenue that would result. Even Wall Street looks at such propositions because it would be a mighty sick looking statement if the exhibitors would fall together and show their strength against any distributor. But let the exhibitor body of exhibitors, this will be shown at Cleveland—March on to Cleveland. Leave home your boozes, boisterous jealousies. Go to Cleveland prepared for work.

Here is your opportunity to build a solid foundation for the future of your business—one that will withstand all onslaught.
STAR AND PRODUCER FIGHT MONOPOLY

Associated First National Pictures Announces Stand Taken by Units on Question of Theatre Buying by the Producers—All Pledge Aid to Independent Exhibitors

Publication was authorized this week of official statements to Associated First National Pictures, Inc., by several leading independent stars, directors and producers, whose attractions its members exhibit through franchise in their respective theatres, setting forth their educational attitudes toward, and opinions on, the alleged invasion of producer-exhibitors into the theatre field.

These statements, it is said, will be available, in their original form, to the exhibitor Committee of Seventeen appointed when the Patterson mass meeting in Chicago resulted in the formation of the Independent Motion Pictures Exhibitors of America, and to any other official group or body of independent theatre owners desirous of enunciating what producers may be dependent upon for film supply without the danger of subsequent theatre competition from the directing heads of the studio.

Charles Ray

Charles Ray, who recently formed his own independent organization, was one of the first of the individual stars who can properly be classed as a producer, to go on record with the exhibitor members of Associated First National with an emphatic pledge to him open opposition against any combination or unit of stars, directors or producers who contemplate the acquisition of theatres, or who support any organization which can control their output, to the exclusion of the best interests of independent exhibition.

"I do not believe," he declares, "that producer ownership of theatres is healthy for the stars or other production sources it controls, or for the industry at large. Big manufacturing and producing organizations in other industries have learned this through experience. We do not find big clothing manufacturers operating their own retail establishments. Automobile makers do not pretend to maintain dealer agencies of their own creation. The packing interests do not try to operate most markets. Nor do manufacturers of locomotives and cars pretend to own railroad systems. I want to remain a producer, with my ability and sincerity of effort the compelling factor which will induce independent exhibitors to show my productions. If I cannot make pictures good enough for them to book, then I cannot expect them to trust me enough to enable me to make money out of theatres I might buy or rent to create a market for my work."

Katherine MacDonald

The statement from the Katherine MacDonald Production Company, in behalf of Miss MacDonald and officials of the organization, prepared a setback to the industry if producer control of theatres becomes a national reality, concluding:

"Producer ownership of motion picture theatres is essentially unjust to the thousands of exhibitors whose years of support have made possible the splendid photoplays that are now being produced. It is a violation, in principles at least, of an American tradition that no man or group of men shall control the industry. And, finally, it is a blow to the earnest men and women who are giving the best of their ability to the art to keep ahead the advancement of the screen. The really notable contributors to the art have been members of larger organizations, but individuals who have devoted themselves to the perfection of the individuality that has won recognition for them. It is not reasonable or possible to monopolize the organization which combines within itself producing units, distributing exchanges and theatres will, or even can, supply to the individual the encouragement and opportunity so essential to the production of really fine pictures."

"We regard the fundamental idea behind First National Exhibitors' Circuit and the formation of that organization one of the most important milestones in the history of the industry. An association of the leading theatre owners, combined to secure for their theatres the best productions that can be produced and afforded to the artists, both players and producers, the opportunity and incentive to constantly improve their offerings to the public, is certain to guarantee the continued advancement of the screen. Any monopoly, with the 'monopolistic' complacency that comes from the lack of competition, means a definite and infinite setback to the progress of an art that entertains the entire world daily."

Louis B. Mayer

Louis B. Mayer, producer of the Anita Stewart and Mildred Harris Chaplin productions, which are now on exhibition, has plenty to do in keeping productions up to top-notch standards without giving attention to ways of reaping profits which rightly belong to the exhibitor. He declares himself in favor of a "live and let live" policy in his statement, which follows:

"The encroachment of the producer-distributor upon the field of the exhibitor is a danger which should be considered with thoroughness. It means absolute monopolization, and monopolization destroys creative energy, stifles progress and demoralizes generally. It has come into the producing field with the idea of making big productions with a famous star and the best theatre managers. It seems to forget that money obtained can be spent for improvement rather than profit. It is the type of enterprise that would not try to put the independent producer in the right position."

Whitman Bennett

Whitman Bennett characterizes it as "an honor and a privilege" to fight for good art and freedom against the menace of a monopoy. In part his statement follows:

"As the moving picture is now organized, it is unquestionably harmful to independent producers, and would result in the public acquiring the pictures. The public as well as the independent exhibitor is bound to get squeezed in the long run if such a system is developed, for the public, now in a position to demand what it wants, would have to then take what it was given."

"Competition is the life of art, even more than it is the life of trade, and, in spite of all statements to the contrary, the film producing industry includes many men who would rather work speculatively for themselves than to draw salaries from poorly disciplined employees of magnificent financial combines. So long as the producing business remains free, there is no danger; when they are united it is time to fight, and fight to the bitter end."

"It is an honor and a privilege to fight for good art and freedom against such a menace. The independent producer can only live if the independent exhibitor, nor can the independent exhibitor live without the independent producer."

Marshall Neilan

Marshall Neilan declares that the exhibitors are now facing the position in which stars and directors were two years ago, before the wave of open them to be independent. He says in part:

"The theatre-buying epidemic resulting in the producer-owned houses throughout the country has reached a stage where it should offer serious concern for every independent exhibitor in this

Dedicate Studio at Fox Convention

Immense Plant at Fifty-Fifth Street and Tenth Avenue Formally Opened with Impressions Ceremony—Hundreds Participate in Sixth Annual Assembly of Organization

By JAMES BEECROFT

NEW YORK, May 23.—With representatives from all parts of the world numbered, among the thousands present, the new Fox Film Corporation studio and administration building, Fifty-fifth street and Tenth avenue, was officially opened yesterday afternoon with elaborate ceremony.

For the past two weeks, executives, branch managers and field workers of the Fox organization from all parts of the United States and from all over the world have been arriving in New York for the double purpose of attending the dedication of the new studio and administration building and participating in the sixth annual international convention of the company which now extends to every corner of the globe.

Realization of Great Hope

The dedication and the convention represent the realization of the goal for which William Fox and his associates have been striving for years—an efficient, loyal organization circling the globe and a building which would permit the linking up of every department of the organization in proper relation to its neighbors, thus establishing the smoothest possible order of production.

The convention opened yesterday morning at the Hotel Commodore. Winfield R. Sheehan, general manager of the corporation, returned from Europe in time to preside.

The assembly brings together, as all previous conventions, the branch managers and district sales heads from all parts of the United States. For the first time, however, representatives from the firm's offices in all parts of the civilized world are here.

National Leaders Attend

Among the speakers at the dedication of the studio building were Governor Edwards of New Jersey, S. E. Rogers, Rabbi Joseph Silverman, John C. Isley, treasurer of the Fox corporation, Judge Charles L. Guey of the Supreme Court, William Fox and Winfield R. Sheehan.

Mr. Fox likened motion picture unto newspapers on a large scale. He said in part that a newspaper in dedicating its building pledges to devote its columns and energies for the betterment of its readers and mankind in its community. Mr. Fox dedicated his new enterprise to the betterment and advancement of mankind throughout the entire world.

Eightteen years ago, he said, no self-respecting person would enter a motion picture production plant or movie unless he looked twice to see whether he was observed, but today he was pleased to say eighty-six per cent of all invitations to the opening were responded to.

Many Floral Tributes

Floral tributes in gorgeous proportions were on display, presented by the H. C. Minor Lithography Company; William Boch and staff, Emilie Chautard, directors of exchanges and managers, executives and directors of the Fox film studio, Elsie King, department heads of the executive staff, Ben Leo and EXHIBITORS HERALD.

A concert was given in the studio by the Seventy-first Regiment Band from 2:30 to 3:30 o'clock. Motion pictures were made of the crowd in the studio, together with the speakers. An engraved set of resolutions in a large gold frame was presented to Mr. Fox by his employees.

Present at Convention

Those who arrived for the Fox convention from throughout the United States and Canada are as follows: Louis Rosenbluh, New York City; Paul E. Krieger, Washington; G. E. McKean, St. Louis; Lester Sturm, Seattle; Charles Muchman, San Francisco; Clyde A. Walker, Salt Lake City; Leo Burnstein, Pittsburgh; George F. Dembow, Philadelphia; Sidney Meyer, Omaha; B. L. Dudenhofer, New Orleans; M. J. Weisfeld, Minneapolis; B. E. Loper, Los Angeles; E. H. Wachter, Kansas City; C. E. Penrod, Indianapolis; W. C. Barness, Detroit; Joseph Kaliski, Denver; L. E. Harrington, Dallas; William Shapiro, Cleveland; Raphael Knoepfel, Cincinnati; C. W. Eckhardt, Chicago; M. H. Greenwald, Buffalo; H. F. Campbell, Boston; George Allison, Atlanta.

The following dominion branch managers are here: Mitchell Rose, Calgary; William S. Jones, Winnipeg; R. A. Scott, Vancouver; Jos. Lieberman, St. John, N. B.; L. M. Devaney, Toronto; Maurice West, Montreal.

The following district superintendents are present: Vincent J. McCabe, Toronto; Howard J. Sheehan, Los Angeles; E. H. Wachter, Kansas City; George Alliston, Atlanta; Clayton P. Sheehan, Buffalo, and Harry F. Campbell, Boston.

Special Prints Prepared

Special prints have been prepared on forthcoming productions starring William Farnum, Pearl White, Shirley Mason, Tom Mix, Buck Jones and Vivian Rich, and on the first of the vehicles in which Eileen Percy is being starred by William Fox. These will be projected before the convention delegates at the new building, according to the program, and the business of exploitation on these films will be made the subject of discussion.

Announcements of plans for the coming season will be made by Mr. Fox and Mr. Sheehan. These will include the distribution of special productions—some already completed and others still in the making—in both the East and West Coast studios, under the direction of such well-known figures as Richard Stanton, Charles J. Brabin, Hampton Del Ruth, J. Gordon Edwards, Harry Millarde and others.

EXHIBITOR Factions May Become United

exhibitor is going to present an absolutely united front and will administer the arrogant invader a much needed lesson. The independent exhibitor has much more resources than the producer-exhibitor. These resources are not as yet organized but they will be in less than three months.

Continuing, he declares that the independent producers will arise to occasion: provide the exhibitor with the quality of product needed to win his fight, and will prosper with the independent exhibitor.

Rembusch and Cohen In Heated Exchange

Frank J. Rembusch, chairman of the Independent Motion Picture Exhibitors of America, and Sydney S. Cohen, chairman of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners, meanwhile, are engaged in a heated exchange of words as to each other’s sincerity and motives, similar in manner to the recent verbal battle through the press last fall.

The latest word in this exchange comes from Rembusch’s office in Indianapolis.

“It looks like a battle at Cleveland,” he declares. “My prophecy is that the men who want to unite the industry if meeting it three, will never submit to a majority. Last year they bolted the St. Louis convention and ’aid their plans to tear down the league. This New York City committee told the balance of the country to follow them or they would bolt. That was part of their well laid plan.

“There is not one exhibitor in a hundred that knows what it is all about, but the enclosed contract is enlightening. (He enclosed a membership contract of the M. P. T. O. A. of A., Inc.)

The Chicago convention called by Mr. P. P. Selz was a surprise, but they went all out the lobby and belittled it, and got inside and tried to wreck the meeting but failed. They have representation on our committee. They will be the talkers at Cleveland. They have a film proposition that they want endorsed. Their contract speaks for itself. Never have I read such a significant document Read and see if I am right.

“I proposed a national censorship on all pictures by a few men. A means of controlling the industrial field and then what? A straight alliance to go into the film business.”

M. Van Praag Sides With Sydney Cohen

Sydney S. Cohen several days ago issued a communication on the Cleveland convention in which is featured a statement issued by M. Van Praag, secretary of the Kansas State Exhibitor’s Association and a member of the committee of seventeen appointed at the recent Chicago convention.

In it, M. Van Praag declares that Frank Rembusch called his convention at the Hotel Cleveland contrary to the unanimous recommendations of the committee of four delegated to investigate arrangements at Cleveland. He states that the committee advised going into the convention called by Mr. Cohen.

Without mentioning either Rembusch or his convention by name, Cohen then takes a hot stand.

“The intention of the smoke screen art is to create confusion in the minds of the independent exhibitors of the country.

“They are trying to stage a producer-distributor-exhibitor convention at another hotel in the same time as the which the convention of the thirty-two states has been called.”

Cohen’s statement followed an earlier statement in which Rembusch and by Louis F. Illumenthal charging that an effort was being made to belittle the convention of the National Motion Picture Exhibitors of America at Hotel Cleveland and that due was being hatched to “talk it to death” if possible.

Wording of Cohen’s Contract Given

The contract of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners Association of America, Inc., which down the fire on Rembusch and his associates, is as follows:

In order to prevent the common abuse of the screen by objectionable advertising films being shown therein, it is hereby agreed that the undersigned will not exhibit or engage in the exhibiting of the advertising film or paid advertising inserts in pictures on the screen or in the lobby, which have not been reviewed and approved by the Film Supervising Department of the Independent Theatre Owners Association of America.

This agreement is entered into in order to perform the terms of a contract between said Motion Picture Theatre Owners Association of America and Motion Picture Theatre Owners Inc.

The signing of this contract shall act as an acceptance of said contract by which the Motion Picture Theatre Owners Inc. will pay to the Motion Picture Owners Association of America a sum equal to fifty per cent of all money paid to said Motion Picture Theatre Owners Inc. for the exhibiting of the industrial advertising film.

In consideration of the above, the undersigned hereby agree to show for the Motion Picture Theatre Owners Inc. upon the screen of the theatre the undersigned, at least one day each week, as part of the regular program, for a period of two years one reel subjects of De Luxe Educational and Industrial motion pictures furnished by said Motion Picture Theatre Owners Inc. for the exhibition of the industrial advertising film.

The undersigned will sign a form to be provided showing the actual date of exhibition of said industrial films furnished by the Film Supervising Department of said Motion Picture Theatre Owners Inc.

If a sale or lease of this theatre be made, such sale or lease shall be conditioned that the new owner or lessee shall continue the exhibition of said motion pictures for the remainder of the contract period.

Frank Rembusch in commenting upon it declared yesterday, this proposed: To censor all pictures: To control all industrial pictures: To go into the film business.”

N. A. M. P. I. to Seek Exhibitor Members

When the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry assembles at Cleveland June 8 for its annual meeting, it is expected that a drive will be made to obtain the membership of exhibitors.

Under its plan of organization, the National Association awards an exhibitor’s division” but there are very few members. In its fights upon censorship, film taxes, and other laws, the association could have been more active times of exhibitor support and influence.

Little discussion has been heard of officers from the late William Brady, president, it is generally believed, will be prevailed upon to accept the office for another year. Few changes in the list of officers are expected.

Various divisions of the association are holding meetings in New York for the purpose of nominating directors to represent each division on the board of directors.

Orders Police to See That Picture Permits Are Posted in Houses

John J. Garrity, superintendent of police in Chicago, has ordered his command to post the permits for every motion picture theatre in the city has posted at or near the entrance the permits for each. Frank I. Long, screen as provided in Section 1631, of the Chicago code.

The police official declares that since the increase in all the permits for motion pictures, a fine of not less than $50, or more than $100 is the penalty for each day that the permits are not displayed.

According to the code, a permit for every picture or series of pictures shall be posted where patrons of the theatre may read it.

Buy “The Nobleman” For Eugene O’Brien

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK May 25.—An original story by H. I. Van Loan, which is present is titled “The Nobleman,” has been purchased by Selznick Pictures for Eugene O’Brien. Mr. Van Loan has been engaged to prepare the story for the screen. Production will start as soon as preliminary work has been completed.

The success of Mr. Van Loan’s previous stories would indicate that the Selznick production will be a hit. It is a story with a great deal of exhibitor angles. The author has embodied in this story, it is said, a plot and counterplot of unusual interest.

Advertisers Cooperate With Board of Review

Every member of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers is to receive a copy of the pamphlet issued by the National Board of Review entitled, “Motion Pictures Not Guilty—Verdict based on reports from chief probation officers of juvenile courts throughout the United States,” for use in answering charges frequently made that pictures cause juvenile delinquency.

Decision to take this action was reached recently at a meeting of the representatives of the associations, which followed the appointment of Paul Gulick, president of the Associated Advertisers, as a committee to cooperate with the National Board.

Members of the advertisers’ committee are Paul N. Lazarus, chairman; Vivian Moses and Lynde Dening.

The pamphlets to be distributed contain statements by juvenile officers which exonerate motion pictures in the main from entering into the cause of incorrigibility among children. The report contains criticisms of sensational and misleading advertising, which is the purpose of the association to combat.
Endorsed
Cooperative Plan is Receiving the Support of Independent Exhibitors Over the Country

The cooperative plan upon which Associated Exhibitors, Inc., is based is being endorsed by the independent showmen throughout the country.

Associated officials who are in close touch with exhibitorial affairs see in the endorsement of this plan a realization by the independent theatre manager that some definite action is needed to cope with what is declared to be a serious situation affecting the exhibitor.

Interest attaches to such endorsements, it is declared, in that the general trend of thought is to the effect that cooperative organizations conducted on a basically sound and equitable plan will prove weapons powerful enough to swing the balance of control of the situation into the hands of the independent exhibitors.

Associated's stand in regard to advertising on the screen is said to be attracting favorable comment. According to Associated's officers, no picture carrying the Associated trademark will contain even the slightest hint of commercial advertising.

In the words of one of the exhibitor-officers of Associated, the question of advertising in films is much more vital to the exhibitor than is generally believed.

"Exhibitors have been used as tools by producers in scores of ways," said this officer, "and the matter of advertising, while by no means the biggest of these ways, has been one of the most annoying. Producers actually have been stealing the publicity of our screens by injecting commercial advertising in pictures that are supposed to be pure entertainment."

Metro Holding Annual Convention In New York During PresentWeek

Change in Policy, Expansion in Production and New Sales Bonus Plan Among Important Announcements Made to Field Sales Force

NEW YORK, May 25.—With field men and branch managers from all parts of the United States assembled here tonight, the Metro Pictures corporation will open a three day convention at the Hotel Astor tomorrow morning.

RICHARD A. ROWLAND
President of Metro Pictures Corporation, which is holding a convention in New York this week.

Richard A. Rowland, president, William E. Atkinson, general manager, Marcus Loew, who recently became affiliated with the organization, and David Bernstein, treasurer of the Loew organization, are the speakers scheduled for the opening meeting.

Important Questions Are Up

A number of important matters are up for discussion. Considerable time will be devoted to the sales policy of the company for the coming year. President Rowland has made it clear that under no consideration will Metro insist on percentage booking. It will however consent to percentage booking in some cases if the exhibitors ask for it.

Mr. Rowland it is understood will explain in detail Metro's expansion of production activities. He will explain how Metro, adhering to its standards of excellence, will make from 50 to 60 pictures during the coming year as the result of simultaneous operation of two studios, one in the West and one in the East.

Mr. Atkinson will welcome the managers and discuss with them the sales records made during the past few months. The appearance of Mr. Loew and Mr. Bernstein will be for the purpose of introduction to the field forces of the company.

WILLIAM E. ATKINSON
General manager of Metro, who is the principal speaker at the business sessions during the convention this week.

ANN MAY

Will Outline New Policy
Thursday morning, Metro executives will outline in detail the new co-operative booking policy which has been under consideration for several weeks but which has not yet been made public.

In the afternoon, there will be an outing at Glenwood-on-the- Sound, where baseball games, races, boating and bathing will be enjoyed, followed in the evening by a pre-war shore dinner and a dance.

Friday, the final business session will be held at the Astor at 10 o'clock. It will be followed by a luncheon and in the evening a banquet.

First of Second Series of Lloyd Comedies Being Made For Pathe

"High and Dry" Is Initial Publication and According to Rolin Film Company It Is the Best Picture Made By the Star

Harold Lloyd, one of the popular screen comedians whose two-reel subjects are produced by Rolin Film Company for Pathe distribution, has started on his second series of pictures.

The first of these will be "High and Dry," which is claimed by Rolin officials to be the best comedy the star has appeared in.

Among the exhibitors who have booked the new Lloyds are Eaton of the Strand, Bowes of the Capitol, Clemmer of Seattle, Shea of Buffalo, Harris of Pittsburgh, Gustanovic of Cleveland, Moss of New York, Talbot of Denver, Keith of New York, and scores of others who are representative in their territories.

Bookings Increasing

This list is growing daily, it is announced. The thousands of exhibitors who played the first series of Lloyds, which marked among their number such comedies as "Bumping Into Broadway," "Haunted Spooks," "Captain Kid's Kids," "His Royal Slynx," "From Hand to Mouth" and "An Eastern Westerner," will be augmented by other thousands.

Lloyd has reached the stage in his career where his comedies are being featured over other attractions. His definite value as a box office attraction has been established, and exhibitors throughout the country are capitalizing this fact. The reason for this "definite box office value" is set forth in a tribute paid to Lloyd in the following editorial comment appearing in the New York Times recently:

"Those Harold Lloyd comedies—words about them. Spectators have seen 'His Royal Slynx,' 'Haunted Spooks,' and last week 'An Eastern Westerner.' There has been more laughter and better laughter on Broadway because of them than there would have been otherwise. Because they are funny. Everyone must admit that, those who are bored by the usual slap-stick as well as those to whom horse play is the soul of wit.

Satisfies All Classes

"Some parts of them may be a little too full of the rough and tumble stuff to amuse one class of spectators, and some parts may be too subtle to provoke the guffaws of another; but take any one of them and just as soon as it becomes too dally violent to be amusing for some, Mr. Lloyd will do something as witty as absurd, and they will laugh in boisterous relief; and then, just as the comedy is becoming so delicate that others are beginning to wonder what it is all about, Mr. Lloyd will smash something or break his neck, and they will roar in blatant satisfaction. So the house is kept laughing all of the time.

"The Harold Lloyd extravaganzas cannot be called high comedy. They make no appeal to the mind, nor do they express the keen relish with which such subtle and penetrating works as the Booth Tarkington comedies are enjoyed. They do not achieve the acme of comic art, the presenting of a comic aspect of life.

Pictures Have Wit

"They are broad burlesque, low comedy of action with a capital A. But they have wit. That is their distinction from the great mass of boresome slapstickers. Mr. Lloyd, or whoever writes his scenarios, finds clever, unexpected, original things for him to do—stunts irresistibly risible. And Mr. Lloyd is a bright pantomimist. He has tricks of gesture and facial expression that put him out of the class of crude buffoons. Also, he seems to be genuinely merry himself—and this counts for a lot. His popularity is pleasing."

"So thanks for the Harold Lloyd comedies. They make people laugh wholeheartedly, healthily—and most people enjoy laughing that way when they have a chance."

The Times is considered one of the most conservative papers in the country, and this analysis of Lloyd came spontaneously from its motion picture editor, who has watched the progress of Lloyd and noted his following among the patrons of the finest motion picture theatres in New York.

U. S. Starts Drive to Collect Admission Tax

(Washington, May 25.—Commissioneer Williams of the internal revenue department has instructed his collectors to begin a campaign to force payment of admission taxes collected by motion picture houses and theatres. This action follows a report of the treasury department which declares that probably 3,000 playhouses have failed to turn in these taxes.

Mr. Williams ordered prosecutions in every case where investigation showed willful refusal of the theatrical interests to pay the tax. In an campaign against the "ticket scalers" the bureau, Mr. Williams said, will urge the imposition of extreme penalties.

Lillian Gish Is Signed By Frohman Company

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, May 25.—Frohman Amusement Corporation has signed a three-year contract with Lillian Gish. It is announced, under the terms of which the star is not obliged to appear in more than five pictures a year. The agreement provides for an annual salary in excess of $500,000, it is declared.

Honor Winfield Sheehan

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, May 25.—Winfield Sheehan, during his absence in Europe, was made a vice president of the Fox Film Corporation, according to Rogers, legal representative of William Fox, has also been made a vice president.

Hodkinson Says Quality Subjects Will Draw Crowds on Hottest Days Increasing of Sales Force Fifty Per Cent Has Been Practically Completed—Two Promotions In Organization Are Announced

Quality pictures that will draw crowds during the hot summer months are promised the exhibitor by W. W. Hodkinson Corporation. "Sex" is announced as one of the big assets in every exhibitor's summer campaign. The drawing powers of "Sex" have defied successfully the wet and the cold and may be trusted to overcome the handicap of heat, it is said.

Then there is Benjamin B. Hampton's "Riders of the Dawn," which has created considerable gossip on Broadway by the manner in which it sustained a high average of attendance during its recent engagement at the Strand, in spite of very adverse weather conditions.

Another胶片 Picture

Another Louise Glau picture is in the making, called "Love Madness." This production measures up to the high standard set by star and producer in "Sex," it is declared.

The Bosworth picture which is called "Sucko McAllister," and which is produced by J. Parker Read, Jr., shows Bosworth in a character part in which his portrayal is said to be excellent.

Despite the coming of warm weather the Hodkinson selling stall has been increased practically 50 per cent.

Speaking of this enlargement of the selling staff of his organization, Mr. Hodkinson stated: "I have had a rush of applications since my intention of adding to my selling organization became known. There was some excellent material offered from within the industry. Some of these men have been placed. I also received a strikingly large number of applications from outside the ranks of the industry. All of these latter were men who had been connected with the selling forces of prominent and successful national concerns.

"I was glad to avail myself of some of this outside material, which I think is much needed in the industry, not only in the selling organizations, but through all the branches and departments generally. There is no field of human endeavor which should yield out a greater and speedier reward for genuine ability and ambition than the motion picture field of today."

In addition to enlarging the sales force, Mr. Hodkinson has bestowed promotion on two active and successful members of his organization.

W. F. Seymour, who served the Hodkinson organization with success and loyalty in Cleveland and Cincinnati, has been promoted to the office of supervisor with headquarters at Chicago. He succeeds S. J. Goldman.

Promotions Announced

Joseph Bloom, who heretofore has had charge of the Hodkinson interests in Pittsburgh and Western Pennsylvania, will hereafter have charge of territory consisting of Detroit and the surrounding zone, in addition to his present duties.

More promotions in the Hodkinson organization probably will be announced within a short time.

Tucker Will Stay With Mayflower And Settle His Suit Out of Court

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, May 25.—The Mayflower-Tucker suit, which resulted from differences regarding "The Miracle Man" and which has been pending for several months, is to be settled out of court, according to an announcement by Benjamin A. Pepper, recently elected president of Mayflower Photoplay Corporation.

It also is made known that George Loane Tucker will complete his contract with the company. The terms of the settlement were not stated but it is understood the arrangement has been effected as to the distribution of profits on his future productions.

Tucker, according to present plans, will continue to work on the Coast. He will finish the titling and cutting of "Ladies Must Live," his second production under the present contract, and will then arrange plans for four more Mayflower pictures which will complete the contract.

Bill Admitting Minors To Theatres Is Signed

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

ALBANY, N. Y., May 25.—The amendment to the penal code which permits children under 16 years of age to attend places of amusement accompanied by an adult authorized by the parent or guardian, has been signed by Governor Smith following passage by both houses of the legislature.

Exhibitors have contended that adoption of such a measure would result in bettering the conditions that have prevailed under the old law.

Employees are Signing Selznick Testimonial

At the recent convention of branch managers in New York it was decided that every employee of Selznick Enterprises should figure in presenting to his chief, Lewis J. Selznick, an expression of his appreciation of the latter's leadership.

Instead of going into a store and buying a gift, it was decided to present Mr. Selznick with something that money could not buy—a testimonial signed by every member of the organization.

A actual work upon this testimonial of friendship and loyalty was just started with dispatch of sheets of indestructible parchment to the various branch offices across the country. These will be signed by the men and women of the organization.

The sheets of parchment are all of uniform size. The address to Mr. Selznick, which was read at the convention banquet, will be crossed upon similar sheets and when the signatures are completed all will be assembled and signed together in a permanent binding and presented to Mr. Selznick.
Both Thrills And Comedy Presented
In Fox Five-Part Sunshine Special

The five-part Sunshine special which as yet has not been titled by Fox Film Corporation, is more than a "rip-roaring" comedy, according to company officials.

No Western drama is more replete with daredevil stunts than this comedy special, it is said. Hampton Del Ruth, who wrote and directed the picture, is laying special emphasis upon the exciting scenes in which Alta Allen is featured.

Sensationalism Unequaled

The producer's representatives claim that nothing ever has been done by daredevils in pictures to equal the sensational work by the Fox players in these scenes. The action was photographed at Pomona, near Los Angeles and in neighboring territory.

Further cooperation was received from the executives of the Mercury

Company, an air transportation company from which the Fox director obtained the use of several racing planes. One of these planes, which plays the most important part in the big scene, was driven by Lieutenant Thompson, an army flyer. Chester Conklin, famous Sunshine comedian, is the hero who saves Miss Allen from the clutches of Jack Cooper by use of the plane.

Conklin has kidnapped Miss Allen and escaped with her in the cab of a locomotive attached to a four-car train. Conklin goes to the rescue in the airplane and overtakes the train. Then occurs the stunt that will force cold chills up and down the spine, it is said. The Fox folks in Hollywood are all excited over it, and have passed the word to headquarters in New York.

Miss Allen Rescued

Miss Allen, escaping from the locomotive cab, reaches the roof of the train and crawls along from coach to coach. Conklin, from his airplane overhead, discovers her, and his trusty pilot causes the plane to swoop down with a rush over the roof of the car. The rescuer has climbed over the side of the one and is hanging by his feet from the underwork. At a signal from the director the plane dips and Conklin seizes Miss Allen, lifting her from the top of the coach and carrying her upward and away to safety.

Utmost caution was observed in the filming of these scenes. Plans were elaborated by Mr. Del Ruth and his corps of assistants. Two trains were engaged for the work—one being used by the actors appearing in the scene and the other carrying Mr. Del Ruth and his technical and camera staff.

Many difficulties had to be overcome, it is said, before the scene could be taken. With the first attempt the aviator discovered that the speed he was forced to make to dive down over the train made the feat impossible with the locomotive that was being used. It was therefore necessary to return to the yards at Pomona and secure an engine capable of greater speed.

Then a complete rehearsal of the business was necessary to insure the accurate working of signals between the director and the trainmen, the players, the aviator, the cameraman and the assistant directors posted at different points—some on the train, others along the road, and one in the racing airplane.

Hamby's "Red Foam"
To Be Made by Ince
As Selznick Special

Announcement is made that the next Ralph Ince-Selznick special production will be a screen version of William S. Hamby's Saturday Evening Post story, "Red Foam," by Louis B. Mitcough. Montague is writing the continuity for the piece.

This production will follow "Out of the Snows," as an Ince-Selznick special. As soon as necessary preparations are completed, actual production will start on "Red Foam." Selection of the cast is being made meanwhile.

The author's name alone may be used advantageously by exhibitors. This coupled with the popularity already held by Ince productions will make a picture that can be exploited easily.

Walturdaw Will Issue
First National Pictures
In the United Kingdom

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, May 25.—Negotiations have been closed whereby Walturdaw Company, Ltd., will distributes First National productions in the United Kingdom. This contract, which will be effective for two years, represents a financial consideration of more than $2,500,000.

Negotiations were conducted by David P. Howells, Inc., for First National. The arrangement covers distribution rights for England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales.

First National opened negotiations for its United Kingdom distribution some months ago, when Walturdaw Company sent its managing director, Colonel H. A. Browne to the United States. Colonel Browne was in America for two months, and when he left for London some weeks ago an agreement had been reached. It has just been consummated in London.

Geography Made Easy
To Take in Chicago

It's going to be awfully hard to keep young Chicago home from school next year, if the board of education goes through with a plan now under discussion. It is further proposed to teach the youngsters of the windy City their geography lessons by means of motion pictures.

"Seeing is believing," said Dudley Grant Hays, director of school extension, discussing the plan. "We hope by this method that the pupil will get an eye view of what is happening which will not be forgotten."

Censorship Measure
Before Troy Council
Ordinance That Would Affect Picture Advertising Also Is Introduced

(Troy, N. Y., May 25.—Two ordinances relating to motion pictures, one a censorship measure and the other affecting lobby and billboard advertising, were introduced in the city council by Albert H. Hartnett, Jr., president of the law committee. A fine of $150 is provided for a violation of the ordinances.

The censorship ordinance provides that the "commissioner of public safety is hereby empowered and authorized to demand that any picture which has not been passed by the National Board of Review and which is proposed to be shown in the city of Troy, be shown to the commissioner of public safety before the public exhibition thereof."

The other ordinance is in two sections, the first part making it the duty of exhibitors to display only advertising "full enough to describe in general terms the nature and character of the picture or pictures to be shown" and the other section no "sign, picture or other announcement which in any manner misstates or misrepresents the pictures would be permitted."

The second section relates to the kind of advertising used and would prohibit any, picture, billboard or poster of an immoral or indecent nature.

Florence Vidor Will Appear in Ince Cast

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, May 25.—King Vidor and his manager, William Parker, are now in New York for a conference with First National executives. Before leaving Los Angeles, Vidor announced the purchase of "A Successful Calamity." During his absence, Florence Vidor will be featured by Ince in an all-star cast for "Beau Reveal."

Michigan Theatre
Fighting Music Tax

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

DETROIT, Mich., May 25.—Michigan exhibitors are for a finish fight on the music question with the American Society of Authors and Composers. It is reported here that Jerome Remick is now a member of the society.
Expect World-Wide Attendance at Convention of Screen Advertisers

Harry Levey, President of the Organization, Will Make Principal Address at Two-Day Gathering in Indianapolis, June 7 and 8

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

INDIANAPOLIS, May 25.—The convention of the Screen Advertisers’ Association of the World on June 7 and 8, will be attended by persons interested in this method of advertising from all parts of the world. This meeting will be coincident with the gathering of members of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World.

Forceful Program Arranged

Harry Levey, president of the organization who is considered largely responsible for the present development of the industrial and educational motion picture, has arranged a forceful program for the two days.

Great stress will be laid upon the value of the screen as an advertising medium of the best kind. Mr. Levey will make the principal addresses of the sessions.

The convention will be called to order on Monday afternoon, June 7, when the president, who also is manager of the industrial and educational departments of Universal Film Manufacturing Company, will speak on “A Dream Realized.” A general discussion will follow this address. Tim Thrift, advertising manager of the American Multigraph Sales Company, and chairman of the motion picture committee of the National Advertisers Association, will deliver an address on “What I Have Learned About the Motion Picture Medium.”

Leitch to Speak

Another important speaker at the opening session will be John Leitch, author of “Man to Man,” who will speak on “The True Mission of the Motion Picture.”

The Tuesday session will open at 2 o’clock with another address by President Levey on “Guaranteed Circulation with the Motion Picture Medium.” A discussion will follow and this in turn will be followed by an “experience meeting” in which short addresses will be made by advertising managers giving their experiences with the motion picture medium.

The advertising managers who will speak are G. L. Sumner, International Correspondence Schools; W. E. Griffith, Holmes & Edwards Silver Company; J. H. Weddell, Firestone Tire & Rubber Company; Harry Lomb, Snuffin’s & Hancoff & Company; G. U. Radowe, Haines Motor Car Company; L. E. Honeywell, National Acme Company. The meeting will adjourn following the “experience meeting.”

Screencraft Affairs

Are Being Probed by State Labor Bureau

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, May 25.—The State Labor Bureau is investigating the affairs of the late Screencraft Corporation, which suspended work at Culver City recently after four weeks of work.

C. W. Holbrook, special agent of the State Labor Bureau, is quoted in the local papers with saying that labor claims to the amount of $1,000 have been filed against the company.

Complicating the difficulties in which the Screencrafters find themselves, the State Corporation Commission has revoked their by-laws and ordered the corporation to cease operation.

Robert Poole Joins

Harold Bell Wright

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, May 25.—Robert Poole, who has been managing director of the California theatre ever since Samuel Rothapfel went east, has resigned to become associated with the Harold Bell Wright production activities. Bert St. John, former manager of Clune’s Auditorium, has been named his successor.

Edward J. Shalvey Of

V. B. K. Film Company Dies After Operation

Edward J. Shalvey, president of V. B. K. Film Corporation, producers of Paramount-Drew comedies, died last Wednesday at the Post Graduate Hospital in New York. Mr. Shalvey was recovering from a serious operation when he suffered a reaction which resulted in his death.

In the amusement business Mr. Shalvey was acutely identified with Amdee J. Van Beuren. In addition to his extensive operation with V. B. K. Corporation, he was treasurer of AyYeeBee Corporation, producers of Ernest Trues two-reel comedies, secretary of Notlek Amusement Company, and secretary of Van-Kelton Amusement Corporation.

One-Half Interest in

Auditorium, Dayton, O., Purchased by Aschers

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

DAYTON, O., May 25.—Half interest in Auditorium Amusement Company, which owns the Auditorium theater here, has been purchased by Ascher Brothers, Chicago, who control a chain of playhouses.

The Auditorium theatre was completed several months ago at a cost of several hundred thousand dollars, and is recognized as one of the most beautiful motion picture theatres in Ohio.

In a statement issued Friday, Nathan Ascher, head of the Chicago firm, said, “We have purchased a half interest in the Auditorium theatre, which will be known as Ascher’s Auditorium. We will operate it as a motion picture theatre ‘de luxe.’” The Auditorium Amusement Company is capitalized at $50,000. The price paid by the Ascher interests was not announced. The building itself was not involved in the deal.

Ida May Park Heads

Own Producing Unit Formed by Callaghan

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, May 25.—Plans for organization of Ida May Park productions in recognition of the achievements of Miss Park in directing Bessie Love’s “The Midlanders” and “Miss Leeway” directed by Andrew J. Callaghan, head of the Los Angeles company featuring Miss Love.

Miss Park has been engaged, together with Joseph de Grasse, to direct the second film offering of Miss Love. Though her original plans called for the direction of Bessie Love’s in her first big screen adaptation, Mr. Callaghan was so gratified by her unusual work that he now is planning the formation of a Callaghan unit devoted entirely to the work of this distinguished woman director.

The formation of the Ida May Park productions will not interfere with the exclusive arrangement where Miss Park again will act as co-director with Joseph de Grasse in the production of Bessie Love’s second Callaghan play.
NEILAN FOR SATURDAY OPENINGS

Proctor Declares That This Change in Program Schedule Has Resulted in Financial Success at Playhouses Where It Has Been Given a Try-Out

Since the inauguration of long-run engagements at the larger theatres, the policy of giving the initial showing on Sunday has been quite generally followed in the trade. There are instances, however, where exhibitors have dropped this policy, or habit, and have found that week-day openings bring the same financial results as do Sunday openings. Marshall Neilan, though in no wise an exhibitor, keeps in close touch with the affairs of the theatre and in the following article he has discussed the possibilities of beginning an engagement on Saturday.

By Marshall Neilan

In discussing the question of Sunday openings with a number of prominent exhibitors, I am convinced that the time is not far distant when the Sunday opening will cease to be such a fixed policy, especially in the larger cities. I am a producer and do not pretend to be able to give advice in connection with the exhibiting branch of the business. At the same time I have wondered often why the policy of opening week-end motion picture shows on Sundays has remained such a universal practice throughout the country.

Greater Financial Returns

It seems to me that for a week-end, a Saturday opening in many cases should bring greater financial returns than the practice of opening Sundays.

Sunday is usually a big day for every exhibitor. Sunday crowds will break into the theatres without the inducement of showing a new picture. On Saturday, however, the picture patron looks for a film he or she has not seen during the week.

If the previous week an exhibitor had a good attraction, it is quite certain that the patron in question already has seen that film during the week. If, therefore, the exhibitor has a new attraction on Saturday, he has an additional magnet for the patron who already has been to this theatre that week.

Of course, local conditions enter largely into the matter of Sunday openings and, no doubt, in a number of localities it would be folly to do otherwise. Yet there is a question in my mind of the Sunday opening is not a matter of habit more than anything else.

Benefit of Advertising

It seems to me that the exhibitor who has an unusually big attraction for a week would do well to open on Saturday. This would give him a break on "the other fellow's" opening and, give him the greatly desired word-of-mouth advertising from the two capacities audiences he could play to Saturday and Sunday. As a concrete example, the Strand theatre in New York, broke a good record for the week with "The River's End," which opened on Sunday and played to a holiday the following day. The large number of persons who attended the theatre during these two days, it was conceded, spread a lot of word-of-mouth advertising regarding the film, which did much to hang up the record.

Thus, why not have "two holidays" every week by opening Saturday? In New Orleans the Saenger Amusement Company has for some time opened its theatres on Saturday. On the West Coast the I. W. Von Herberg houses also adopted this policy with gratifying results.

First National Members Meet in Detroit, Mich.

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

DETROIT, Mich., May 25—Officials with several members of First National Exhibitors' Circuit conferred at the Hotel Statler here last night. Those present were Robert Lieder, president; J. D. Williams, general manager; Harry Schwalbe, secretary and treasurer; R. H. Clark, S. P. Skouras, Frank Fernandini, Jacob Fabian, H. Safian, R. D. Beggs, J. J. McQuirk, E. V. Richards, Man- dlebaum, Max Speigel, Turner & Dahk- ken, J. B. Clark, Maurice Wolfe, Jules Morschau, Iballan & Katz and Moe Mark.

A Dutch dinner was given to the members by Mrs. Lieder at her new Canadian home near Walkerville. Although it was rumored that matters of importance developed at the meeting at the Statler, Mr. Williams would make no announcement.

Present Grand Opera With Motion Pictures

Experiment In Combination Program Is Conducted by Chicagian

The Auditorium, one of Chicago's largest downtown theatres, and the home of Grand Opera during the winter months, was thrown open as a popular priced light opera and motion picture theatre on May 23.

Andreas Dippel, former director of the Chicago Grand Opera company, conceived the idea of giving both the musically inclined and the motion picture addict the two popular forms of amusement in one performance and how well he succeeded was attested to by thousands who turned out for the opening performance last Sunday.

The operetta for the opening was Franz Lehar's "Gypsy Love" featuring Arthur Albro. This was preceded by an organ solo, overture "Fra Diavolo," "Topics of the Day," and a news reel made up of various film weeklies. Between the acts of "Gypsy Love" a film especially arranged by Mr. Dippel and produced by the Kineto Company of America, showing scenes in Roumania and Hungary, was introduced. The operetta was followed by Clara Kimball Young's latest cinema contribution, "For the Soul of Rafael." The picture and the operetta were both well received.

Joseph V. O'Neil, W. L. McCloud, Peter MacArthur, Harry E. Ragan, Leon Marx and Milan Roder are on Mr. Dippel's executive staff in charge of affairs. Mr. Dippel proposes to erect a $5,000,000 theatre in Chicago to present light opera and motion pictures should his present project receive the proper support and prove successful. He will have a complete change of program each week.
Howells Is President Of Brockliss Company
Garrett Resigns to Devote His Entire Time to Production

David P. Howells has been elected president of J. Frank Brockliss, Inc., and, while the identity of the latter organization will be continued, its business will be amalgamated with the business of Mr. Howells. The former president of the Brockliss company resigned to devote his entire time to production.

J. Frank Brockliss, Inc., controls world rights to the Great Authors Pictures, Inc., productions of which Benjamin B. Hampton is president; to the Louis Joseph Vance productions; to the Artoe and Leah Baird productions adapted from Augustus Thomas' stage successes; to the productions of C. E. Screen Club Exposition in Denver
Is Postponed Until July 1 and 2
Additional Time Needed to Complete Preliminary Work for Convention Which Probably Will Be Biggest Ever Held in Territory

DENVER, May 25.—Plans for the annual exposition of the Rocky Mountain Screen Club have assumed such proportions that the directors of the organization have been compelled to declare the dates of the convention from June 18 and 19, as announced last week, to July 1 and 2.

With the number of exhibitors, exchanges and producing companies who desire to participate in the affair growing daily, Screen Club executives felt the necessity of granting an additional two weeks for preliminary work.

State Officials Cooperate

State and municipal officials, as well as members of industrial associations, have cooperated with the exhibitors in an effort to make this year's exposition out-distance any previous one. It is believed that the large Auditorium will no more than accommodate the crowds.

One of the novel exhibits assured is a complete studio, where scenes will be taken during the two-day activities. A model theatre containing all of the accessories and appointments of a modern house and special exhibits sponsored by exchanges, supply houses and producing companies will be shown.

In several instances, producing units have promised to have stars in Denver for the occasion, and especially for the grand ball.

Big Time Planned

"Never before was such a big, joyous time planned for the moving picture industry and its fans in this territory," says Charles Gillen, secretary. "Big movie stars are coming to Denver for this occasion. In coming companies of New York are lending their assistance to the branch managers in every way possible."

"This is going to be a grand and glorious 'get-together' occasion, for everyone in the film business in this territory and for the public that is interested in the movies. From all indications the big convention and exposition will be something new and novel from the usual programs and the bands plays the last number. We are going to make it so big that both New York and Chicago will have to go some to beat us."

It is estimated now that two-thirds of the exhibitors in this territory will be present. Arrangements to accommodate everyone are being made.

Bill Barring Movement Of Lewd Film Adopted

WASHINGTON, May 25.—The bill prohibiting the transportation of indecent motion pictures has been passed by both houses of congress and will become a law within a short time. The measures amends the penal code by including obscene films among the articles that are not to be transported in interstate commerce.

A fine of not more than $5,000, imprisonment in jail five years, or both, is provided for a punishment for violations of the law prohibiting the bringing into the country or offering to any express company or other common carrier for transmission in interstate commerce any obscene, lewd, or lascivious, or to any motion picture film or any advertisement thereof.

Communications From Readers

To Exhibitors Herald:
With your permission I will try and break into print for the first time in my eleven years in the picture business, and as advance deposits seem to be a popular subject, I will say a few words along that line. Is there any other line of legitimate business that has to pay 25 per cent down at the time of contracting for a line of merchandise and then is compelled to pay the remaining 75 per cent in advance of shipment of that same merchandise? Do the producing companies pay for all their film props and everything that it takes to make a picture before they get it? Judging by the number of law suits against various producing companies, I will say do not. Do they pay for the filming of a picture along with camera men their salaries in advance? They do not. Now we will get to the point. I should say to distributors. I am sure that the film salesmen, bookkeepers, shipping and booking clerks and all other help do not get their salary in advance each Monday morning before starting in on their week's work.

What do you think would really happen if all the help around a film exchange would get together and tell their managers they must have their salary for the entire week in advance each Monday morning before starting to work? I will answer my question by stating that he would first take it as a joke and tell them that they were certainly only too lucky if they could not turn it off that way he would tell them that they were a bunch of boobs and that they were discharged. In conclusion I will state that the exchange men long ago discovered that they could put most anything over on the exhibitor and he would pay for it, and they have and will conduct their business along that line as long as they can get away with it. I should write this. I should write what I think of the advance deposit system and the men that originated it. Uncle Sam would send me to Leavenworth. Respectfully.

William S. Hart Has Declined Stage Offer
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, May 25.—It has just been learned that William S. Hart, Paramount star, has refused an offer of A. H. Woods, theatrical producer, to return to the stage for an engagement of forty weeks at a reported salary of $15,000 a week.

Wood's plans were for the star to continue his screen work while playing in a drama written especially for him. In refusing, Hart indicated that his production plans had reached such proportions that he would be unable to give any time whatever to stage work. The theatrical producer's argument that a stage appearance would increase the star's popularity failed to dampen his determination not to accept.

Lesser Is Completing Kellerman Production
Returns to West Coast After A Long Business Trip
In the East

Sol Lesser is back in Los Angeles after several weeks' absence in the East to attend to final details on his Annette Kellerman production, "What Women Love." As soon as it is completed he will return East, at which time it is expected that the distribution policy on this comedy-drama will be announced.

During his trip East, Mr. Lesser attended the First National convention in Chicago, transacted business in New York, was in Philadelphia at the laying of the cornerstone of the Stanley Theatre, and accompanied the Associated First National executive committee to Dallas, Tex.

School Board Fosters Matinees For Children
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

CINCINNATI, O., May 25.—The Cincinnati board of education, which in the past has been antagonistic toward motion pictures, has reversed its views by approving certain classes of pictures and by fostering children's matinees on Saturdays.

The board has sponsored a Community Moving Picture Council which has been formed by the Federated Mothers Clubs. This organization is presenting Saturday morning performances at the Orpheum theatre, Walnut Hills, a suburb, with plans for extending these shows to other suburbs. Fred Strief, manager of Famous Players-Lasky here, and Andy Hettesheimer of the Orpheum, are cooperating with the council.

Many Inquiries Received

A publicity campaign supervised by Harry Hammond Beall, West Coast representative, and Maurie Meyers, Eastern agent, while Mr. Lesser was in New York, resulted in a flood of inquiries to the home office in Los Angeles relative to the distribution of the picture.

"We are spending nearly a quarter of a million dollars on this production," says Mr. Lesser. "and every cent that we are outlaying will be registered on the screen. The photoplay will be a different sort of production from anything Miss Kellerman has ever done—it will show her not only as a maritime genius, but as a normal, healthy American girl fond of athletics. It is a comedy drama of today, with one of the most melodramatic climaxes ever seen on a screen."

Miss Kellerman is surrounded by a supporting cast headed by Wheeler Oakman, and including Ralph Lewis, Carl Ulman, Walter Long, Gertrude Pedlar and many others.

One of the most unique features of the picture is the under water scenes. By means of A. B. Barringer's new photographic bell he is able to obtain, for the first time, it is declared, clear and sharp water stills. The bell is so constructed that it will work to any depth up to 200 feet, which is the pump capacity. The chamber is supplied with air by a three-cylinder high pressure pump, operated by hand. It is so adjusted that it may be moved about on the bottom just as the camera is moved about a stage.

The camera angle is adapted to the widest angle lens known. A special submarine lens is connected to the water so that it gives a penetration of over 100 feet, and registers an absolutely clear motion picture at that distance.

Four Authors May Form Own Company
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, May 25.—C. Gardner Sullivan, John G. Hawks, John Lynch and Monte Katterjohn have combined to produce their own stories, according to rumor in the film colony. Actual work, it is disclosed, will probably start September 1, when Sullivan returns from Europe and Hawks' contract with Goldwyn Pictures Corporation expires.

Isaac Wolper, who recently resigned as president of Mayflower Photoplays Corporation, is said to be interested financially in the company.
Commission Completing Proposed Censorship Ordinance for Chicago Report Prepared by Chairman Hurley to be Re-written Upon Insistence of Members—Will Go to City Council Early in June

Finishing touches on what promises to be one of the most rigid film censorship measures yet drawn up for passage by any state or municipal government, were applied to the proposed new Chicago censorship ordinance Friday, May 28, by the commission which was appointed to investigate the film situation eighteen months ago.

Amending of the first draft of the proposed ordinance was completed at a meeting held May 21, and at that time a committee of five was appointed to redraft the commission’s report. The committee, which includes Chairman T. D. Hurley, Rev. James B. Heslam, Mrs. Hannah Solomon, Mrs. E. R. McDowell, Rev. W. S. Fleming and Rev. Frederick Siedenburg, will report at the meeting May 28.

Two Last-Minute Changes Are Made

Two changes in the wording of the proposed ordinance were made at the final meeting on this question. The words “at least one woman” was inserted in the paragraph stating the qualifications of the proposed censorship committee of three upon the insistence of women members of the commission. A clause requiring that the censors to label each film with a descriptive adjective was also adopted.

As the proposed ordinance read originally, it provided that of the three members, “one shall be a woman.” Women members of the commission objected to this wording on the contention that it seemed to indicate two of the censors were to be men. They insisted on the insertion of the words “at least one woman.”

Will Label Each Film

The clause labeling each film was suggested by Chairman Hurley and enthusiastically approved by Mrs. McDowell. “If the titles of films tell nothing,” said Mrs. McDowell, “The pictures should be labeled so that the public would know what to expect.”

The following adjectives were suggested for insertion, “scenic, geographic, historical, classic, educational, propagandistic and melodramatic.”

“I would suggest that we also classify the films as excellent, good, fair or poor,” said Rev. Fleming, “This would protect the public in a way.”

There was a chorus of objections, several stating that it would be a dangerous move, as it might defeat the ordinance.

Wants Unanimous Approval

Rev. Fleming earlier in the session had asked that a provision be inserted requiring each film to have the unanimous approval of the censors before being approved for exhibition.

“If two censors favored the passage of a film and the third contended that it should not be shown to children, certainly would not want my daughter to see it,” he declared.

“Let’s not get an ordinance with too many objections to it,” said Chairman Hurley.

Other members of the board joined in opposing the change, who spoke expressed the fear that too radical provisions would defeat the ordinance.

Rev. Fleming then questioned the wisdom of compelling censors to rule on films within five days after being received. Other members of the commission again differed with him, and the five-day clause was retained.

Reject Proposed Standards

Chairman Hurley called up for consideration his proposed amendment to article five of the ordinance, which would provide for the rejection of films whose dominant features came under any one of twenty-six classifications.

Upon questioning, Chairman Hurley stated that the classifications he had listed were the standards by which the Pennsylvania board of censors judged films.

Rev. Siedenburg’s contention was supported by the majority of the commission and the amendment was rejected. Several members reported they had heard the proposed ordinance would be bitterly fought. The possibility of its being submitted to a referendum in the fall was mentioned. None of the commission commented on the desirability of a referendum.

Chairman Hurley again stated that he regarded the censoring of all posters in connection to advertising as a dangerous step, which would arouse opposition to the ordinance.

He advocated limiting the censorship of posters and banners to those placed on theatre buildings only.

“If it is wrong to hang a poster in front of a theatre, it is wrong to post it on Lake Shore drive,” declared Rev. Fleming. This time the majority of those present sided with him, and the clause, calling for censorship of all posters was not disturbed.

“This stamping of the posters is going to mean a great deal of work for the three censors,” suggested Anthony Matre.

Don’t worry about the physical work,” returned Chairman Hurley. “There will be plenty of civil service employees to take care of that.”

Objects to Hurley Report

Mrs. Hannah Solomon made emphatic objection to the report of the commission as drawn up by Chairman Hurley and suggested it be revised before it was sent to the city council.

“I have read the report carefully and it is all on our side,” said Mrs. Solomon. “We only quote those who are for censorship, such as Mr. Tine of the Chicago Tribune. Let’s give the other side some space.”

Judge Hurley said that those who spoke for censorship would be quoted in the record of the proceedings. Mrs. Solomon insisted, however, and the appointment of a committee to redraft the report resulted.

Eight of the seventeen members of the commission were present at the session. When questioned by Rev. Fleming, Chairman Hurley stated that all members of the commission had been notified of the meeting.

Industry Defeats Censorship In Massachusetts After Long Fight

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

BOSTON, MASS., May 25.—Efforts to create censorship in Massachusetts have failed.

The measure which recently was passed by the house of representatives of the state legislature has just been killed by the action of the senate committee on ways and means, which reported unanimously against it.

The action of the committee from the upper house came as a surprise, as proponents of the bill, including 400 societies in the state, had fought hard for passage of the act. After adoption of the measure by the house, Bishop Lawrence, Bishop of Massachusetts, and representatives of the many organizations, had appeared before the senate body seeking passage.

In the interest of the motion picture industry, such men as William A. Brady, Frederick H. Elliott, Gabriel Hess, Arthur Freund, Charles Pettitjohn and S. J. Connolly, all of the National Association, addressed the committee in opposition of the measure.

The fight in this state was the last of six big ones the industry has fought successfully throughout the country.
Star and Producer To Fight Monopoly

country, regardless of the size of his holdings or community. What is taking place in the large cities right now is only the forerunner of what might happen in every town in this country.

"The exhibitor today is facing the same situation as that which confronted the producer two years ago. Independence in the producing field at that time was quite an unknown quantity. All the foremost stars and directors were working for one group. Lesser lights were controlled by other groups. Yet today we find the producer in the position where he can operate independently to an extent never before evidenced in this business.

"This should prove a good example to the exhibitor who is wondering whether or not to remain independent. No longer does one or two organizations control the best product. There are a half dozen different channels from which he can obtain big attractions that will make money for him. This condition in itself should prompt the exhibitor to sit tight and operate his theatre as he sees fit.

"Never before has the motion picture industry offered the exhibitor so many large attractions from different channels as today. To my mind, the business of buying theatres on the part of the large producers likens itself to the entry into the retail field of large wholesalers. First a big store in each large town, then other stores in the most suitable spots in that town, then other stores in other towns, until the best business locations of every city are controlled by the wholesaler, and the retailer is either out of business or does business at a third or fourth rate location—until that location proves profitable, when he is chased to another stand. Producers have won their independence. Exhibitors must do likewise if they wish to realize the best returns on their investment."

Allan Dwan

Maintenance of independence is the only salvation for the exhibitor, according to Allan Dwan. He declares that independence must be maintained if progress is to continue, in his statement:

"If the motion picture industry is to maintain its present rate of progress, everything possible must be done to preserve its independence. For it is upon the basis of independence that the business was founded, and naturally it is upon this same foundation that it must stand.

"The independent exhibitor is now faced with a new problem. He is at work seeking to dominate the industry, to encroach on and even usurp the exhibitor's legitimate field of operation.

"Any movement calculated to seek control of the exhibition field strikes at the very cornerstone of the showman's business."

"The exhibitor's only salvation in this crisis is a steadfast adherence to the policy of independence."

King Vidor

King Vidor asserts that it is time to declare war and "throw off the yoke of the unjust monarch that sought to impose huge rentals and then, with the profits, build opposition "theatres," in a statement telegraphed from Los Angeles Part of it follows:

"The time has come to sever diplomatic relations. Hand the 'trust' film salesman his passports and send him back to the enemy country. It is war to the knife. More subtle propaganda is in circulation now than ever before to hale the exhibitor into a false sense of security. Either he must take his stand with the independent producers, must assert his true Americanism or eventually find himself with an empty, illused theatre on his hands.

"The industry is yet too young for any of us to have forgotten how another trust once held the business in its iron grip and imposed the piratical patent tax. We all remember how motion pictures went from bad to awful while the trust reigned supreme. Then came independent producers who made good pictures and fought valiantly until a victory crowned their battle. But that was an incident compared to the one the exhibitor faces today. The financial powers have scanned the balance sheets and the word has gone forth to syndicate the motion picture business. Ponder this grave problem, Mr. Exhibitor, are you going to work for the trust, or WITH the independent producer. Are you going to be a chattel or a free born American? Sound the tocsin! Draw the sword! On to war!"

More Territory Sold For "Gump" Cartoons

M. J. Mintz, territorial manager for celebrated Players Film Corporation, who recently returned to Chicago from a flying trip through the central west, announces that the Greater Productions Company, Des Moines, la., has secured the rights for Iowa; the Crescent Films Company, Kansas City, the Kansas and western Missouri rights, and United Film Service, St. Louis, Mo., the eastern rights in "Gumps." The cartoons are being exploited throughout the world by Celebrated.

Sidney Smith's cartoons are now appearing in fifty-five newspapers of the country. The creator of the "Gumps" has been literally swamped with suggestions for new animated cartoons of late. One of these letters was from a prominent Chicago attorney, and the idea he submitted has been incorporated into Mr. Smith's latest screen comedy, "Accidents Will Happen."

CALLICOTT'S PROLOGUE CIRCUIT

Great promise, and just a little danger, will be seen by thinking exhibitors in the announcement, reprinted herewith from EXHIBITORS HERALD for May 29, of a prologue circuit on the West Coast by Jack Callcott, managing director of Sol Lesser's Kinema theatre, Los Angeles. It is an event to which every theatre man should give serious consideration.

The formation of such a concern was to be expected. It is a natural outgrowth of existing circumstances and justified by the law of supply and demand. Under proper management it should meet with success.

Mr. Callcott's exploitation and presentation activities at the Kinema stamp him an able showman. His prologues have been successful at the Kinema. It is reasonable to believe that they will be as successful elsewhere.

Only the Pacific Coast is contemplated as the field of Mr. Callcott's endeavors. No better territory could have been chosen for the testing out of the idea.

But other men in other territories will make the same experiment. Altering it to suit conditions and purposes they will launch similar enterprises in various sections of the country.

It is here that the element of danger appears. It may be negligible—but it may be all important.

Idea Economically Sound

The Callcott idea is economically sound. Considering the initial expense of constructing stage settings, writing musical scores, employing and rehearsing talent, there is obviously a great deal of waste connected with the presentation feature that is maintained for a single week or less.

To maintain the organization created, using the same mechanical equipment, for a second week is much less expensive than to create a new one.

Under the system promised each prologue will be organized with a long run in mind. Accordingly, much greater expenditures will be justified in the preparation of the presentation and the result will be a general improvement.

Works No Hardship

With a carefully worked out rental system, no hardship will be worked upon the exhibitor who books his prologue. The man in the small town plays the same pictures that the man in the key city plays, yet does not pay as big rental. He will be able to use the prologue, in its road form, on the same basis.

The element of danger with which thinking exhibitors should concern themselves lies in the possibility of low grade productions being equipped with seemingly lavish prologues by unscrupulous parties and foisted upon the theatre man with the obvious intention.

Such attempts should be expected and guarded against. It is to be hoped that such undesirables have been eliminated from the industry, but it is an easy matter and the way of wisdom to ascertain beforehand the entertainment quality of every production booked in this manner.

Still another important phase of the matter merits a bit of study.

The Vaudeville Angle

Vaudeville and the motion picture cannot be considered as other than competing forces. Vaudeville theatres that use motion pictures as part of their programs almost invariably present them in a haphazard manner, obviously as "filler." The man whose interest in the motion picture is genuine cannot but resent such treatment.

By permitting presentation to overshadow the production presented the theatre man is exposing himself and his business to an unnecessary but serious danger. When people come to the theatre primarily to see the presentation, secondarily out of consideration for the photoplay, a step has been taken which cannot be readily retraced.

Readers of this department will recall the splendid campaign and presentation staged by Mr. Callcott for "Down on The Farm." It was one of the big exploitation events of the month of May.

Callcott Plan Promising

Mr. Callcott's plan is, if we are completely informed, to put on the road only such prologues as he uses at the Kinema. This arrangement is excellent. There can be no objection to such a scheme.

Even if the plan is extended to embrace specially made prologues for every attraction published there is no cause for alarm with a man of Callcott's ability and proven showmanship in charge.

A new development, and a vital one, the circuit prologue must be studied. It can be developed into a great force for good or evil, the manner in which it is handled and the reception accorded it determining. It deserves a thorough trial.
The Tivoli Technique

Frank Costello, manager of Turner & Dahnken's Tivoli Theatre, San Francisco, stages prologues that are later used in all the theatres operated by that concern on the West Coast.

A company of real Hawaiians and a volcano setting were used for "The Idol Dancer."

"The River's End"

The setting used for "The River's End" is shown here-with. At one point in the action the Eskimo hut at the left was lighted from within, another setting showing through, and an actor spoke some of the lines of the play.

This method of "fading in" dialogue speakers is a Costello invention.

A Prominent "Spot"

Turner & Dahnken are holders of the First National Exhibitors Circuit, Inc., franchise in San Francisco and dedicate the exchange windows to advertising each First National Attraction as it is given its premiere at the Tivoli.

The "spot" is located on one of the busiest streets and provides valuable advertising space.
“Sex” Prologue Provides Material For Staging Introductory Feature

Exhibitors and producers should join interests in giving serious consideration to the structural composition of “Sex,” Louise Glau’s J. Parker Read, Jr., production distributed by the W. H. Hodkinson Corporation. Both will profit by the study.

Those who viewed the production in the projection room were forcibly impressed with the prologue, a carefully and lavishly produced film preface in which the theme of the story was vividly set forth. Those who viewed the production at the Kinema theatre, Los Angeles, appreciated even more keenly its merit.

The producer should be given especial credit for his foresight in providing exhibitors with this excellent material for guidance in the preparation of presentation features. It is a practice which should be encouraged.

Persons who saw the picture will identify at once the photograph presented herewith of the Kinema stage during the presentation feature. At first glance it may easily be mistaken for a scene from the picture, so well has the model been followed.

The stage was set to resemble as closely as possible the impressionistic setting used in the film prologue. The dancers were brought on in much the same manner and the screen performance followed out almost in detail.

The box office record for the opening day of the run indicates the value of the Kinema presentation. All opening day records of that institution up to that time being broken.

But the Kinema presentation is less important than the point which it serves to emphasize—that producers would do well to provide a prologue when possible that may be used for presentation purposes by any and all exhibitors.

The uses to which such a prologue may be put are many and varied.

The prologue in “Sex” was closely followed in the presentation at the Kinema theatre, Los Angeles.

Under ideal circumstances it will probably be found most advisable to use such a prologue as a guide, fashioning after it a stage presentation with human players, working into it the best musical arrangement that can be improvised.

In such a case it may be found desirable to dispense with the screen prologue when the picture is exhibited. Repetition seems to promise little.

But it is not always possible to duplicate film prologues effectively. Not all exhibitors are in a position to make the necessary arrangements, and not all theatres will accommodate features of the indicated magnitude.

Under these circumstances the film prologue itself may be used with good effect if properly aided by music, vocal and instrumental, and the interpolation of a dance number, even though but one person takes part in it.

Certainly a film prologue is much better than no prologue at all. And there is no doubt that when a few productions have been published with such introductions incorporated, exhibitors will have evolved a highly satisfactory method of handling them.

To J. Parker Read, Jr., for reintroducing the film prologue at a time when its use has become not only justified but highly desirable, great credit should be given.

Other producers should follow his example. It is safe to say that other producers will follow his example, for good ideas have never gone begging in the producerial department of the industry.

The idea is good. There can be no questioning that statement. It is good... in all cases, whatever the production. Any picture that a producer believes worth making, he must also believe worth exhibiting and exhibiting well. It costs but little more to supply a prologue than to omit it.

Looking at the matter purely from the showman's angle, it is worth while to produce a prologue.

Mr. Read's production is not the first on record wherein a prologue has been attempted. It is the first, however, which has fitted in so well with the exhibitors' scheme of things.

It has been the custom of exhibitors who went deeply into the matter of presentation to work up to the opening scenes of the picture with the best prologue that could be improvised. The method has not worked out well in the majority of cases, due to the nature of many of the productions offered.

Accordingly the "Fade-In" style of presentation was recently contrived, in which the picture was stopped at the scene which promised best results for the presentation director. This was a considerable improvement over the former plan.

Neither system, however, can be compared with the method which it is possible to follow if producers make it the custom to provide a film prologue as a permanent feature.

Exhibitors should encourage producers who show a willingness to cooperate by the surest means—by booking such pictures. The producer who considers the exhibitor to this extent deserves that type of encouragement.

Class Appeal

Exhibitors who seek to attract a certain class of patronage are accustomed to select program material which it is believed will especially please that class. Not all of these are accustomed, however, to directing their advertising to that class by using copy and display in character with the patronage desired. This is an angle which should not be overlooked. It is even more important, because more effective, than the proper selection of pictures.

Georges Carpenter Photos Hold Crowd

The accompanying reproduction of a photograph taken at the corner of State and Quincy Sts., Chicago, give a not altogether just impression of the attention that was drawn to three color portraits of Georges Carpenter during the week of their display in the window of the Owl Drug Co. The photographer pleaded refraction as his excuse for not obtaining a better photograph—which is unimportant.

Georges DeKruijff, exploitation and publicity manager for the Chicago branch of the Robertson-Cole Distributing Corp., states that the manager of the drug store wanted to know how much he owed for the use of the pictures. The attention they drew to his razor display in the same window was worth real money to him.

The Owl window contained the three pictures for a period of one week. During that time scarcely a moment of the day or evening passed without a knot of pedestrians standing in front of the window.

Last Week

School children of Beaumont, Texas, were kept punctual in attendance for a week because they knew that they would be rewarded with tickets to the school children's special matinee of "Anne of Green Gables" at the Tiwoli theatre on Saturday morning.

C. L. Yearsley's "graveyard stunt" broke into the Pathe Weekly.

Two Dr. Jekylls and two Mr. Hydes walked the streets of New Haven, Conn., politely inquiring of pedestrians if they had seen their opposite personalities.

W. W. Kofeldt, Republic exchange manager in Tacoma, Wash., started "The Whirlwind" at the Liberty theatre to big business by getting the support of the American Legion, leading a squad of motorcyclists bearing banners throughout the city.

The Famous Players-Lasky exploitation department in Cincinnali, O., effected a tie-up with twenty-two Warliiter stores in as many cities in connection with "Why Change Your Wife?" in which Victrolas play a prominent part. Thirty drug store windows in St. Louis were obtained for display purposes in connection with the shaving incident with which the picture opens.

The Castle theatre, Chicago, used farm animals in a lobby feature for "Down on the Farm." Details cannot be given because the Castle is located on the corner of State and Madison Sts., "the busiest corner in the world," and promotion was impossible on account of the crowds that blocked the sidewalk.

Frederick Mercy, manager of the Mercy theatre, Yakima, Wash., staged a fashion show in connection with "A Temperamental Wife." The merchant who provided the costumes was so well pleased with results that the feature has been made permanent.

Film tests are being given all who care to take them by Sid Grauman during the run of "Below the Surface," at the Million Dollar theatre, Los Angeles. Two thousand applicants are reported to have appeared for the first try-out.

"Say It with Flowers" was taken literally by M. Robertson, manager of the Princess theatre, Rensselaer, Ind., while showing "The Beauty Market." Copies were not obtainable but he experienced gratifying results by substituting carnations.
“Punch,” that evasive quality that producers strive for in pictures and which is no less desirable in exhibitor advertising, can be obtained in many ways. Each way is important, interesting, and should be carefully considered. One of the best ways that has come to attention recently is by identifying the theatre with the interest which naturally attaches to the 1920 census figures.

The Dixie theatre, Fairmont, W. Va., recently conducted a run of “The Greatest Question,” D. W. Griffith’s first production for the First National Exhibitors Circuit, Inc. It was in connection with this production that the management took advantage of the opportunity mentioned above and worked up interest in the showing by playing upon the natural interest felt by citizens in the population question.

The advertisement reproduced here was greatly reduced through necessity, gives an idea of the manner in which the identification was effected.

Borrowing for the sake of an important appearance, the fact that Charleston, W. Va., was found to be some twelve thousand short of the population previously estimated, much to the disappointment of citizens of Charleston, the management built up interest in the title it was producing, by stating that the population of Fairmont was “The Greatest Question.”

The information obtained was genuinely interesting. It traced the growth of Fairmont from 1826 to 1910, placing the figures in solid looking columns. It then produced similar interesting data regarding the county.

The “punch” came in the concluding word matter—wherein it was stated that the theatre was to run five days each day, seating 1,500 daily and 6,000 during the run.

The result was what might have been expected—that the theatre came very close to capacity for the four days of the engagement.

Appreciating the value of good first impressions, the management of the recently opened Tabor theatre, Denver, Colo., took especial pains to make sure that the populace attached proper importance to the event.

A careful publicity campaign had been conducted. The date of the opening approached. Newspaper advertising came up for consideration.

“The River’s End,” Marshall Neilan’s first National attraction, was the initial production to be exhibited, and the management decided that something more elaborate than the stereotyped style of copy should be used.

The reproductions presented herewith show the manner in which the names of author and producer were identified with not only the picture but the Tabor theatre as well.

In the upright, actual signatures of Marshall Neilan and James Oliver Curwood were reproduced and attached in the position of sponsor. In the page-wide, the products were represented as presenting the attraction.

The whole arrangement of copy, as well as the word content of the remainder of it, was such as to give the impression that both gentlemen had assumed personal responsibility for the satisfaction of patrons who attended the Tabor opening.

No definite statement to that effect was made, but the impression was unmistakable.

The scheme was followed through in the theatre itself, the picture being presented with the best surroundings that could be arranged. The curious crowds that came to examine the latest addition to Denver theatredom came expecting something unusual—and were satisfied.

There is good logic behind an effort such as that made by the Tabor management—an effort to make the best impression possible when starting any project, whether it be the opening of a theatre or the launching of a campaign.

One shoddy poster widely circulated, one hastily newspaper advertisement, whether the fault of the designer or the man who executed it, frequently has been known to have a dire effect upon the whole success of a campaign.

The man you meet for the first time impresses you favorably or unfavorably. It is human to form impressions, and you will not fail to do so. Men who “bear acquaintance” are men unfortunately not blessed with a pleasing first appearance. You “get to know them better.”

But what is true of men is not true of businesses, theatres or advertising campaigns.

The signatures of Marshall Neilan, director, and James Oliver Curwood, author, gave additional strength to this three-column Tabor announcement.

When the Tabor theatre was opened in Denver, Colo., this page-wide spread was used, giving Marshall Neilan as the play’s sponsor.
Ben Day Process Brings Results In High-Lighting Newspaper Ads

Indicative of the steady advance being made by newspaper advertisers in the industry, and highly interesting as opening up new possibilities, is the appearance of theatre displays prepared by the Ben Day process—a process which was unknown to theatre advertising until a few weeks ago.

To dispense with the necessity for dealing in technicalities, we have made up reproductions of some of the more striking advertisements of this type received during the past week. They are reproduced herewith and bespeak the value of this type of advertisement.

The "Deadlier Sex" display, in which Blanche Sweet's likeness is tellingly set forth in the solid upper portion, is probably the best example of the application. In the original three-column width, it dominated by sheer artistic attraction the page on which it appeared.

The value of an attractive star portrait as the attraction center of a display has been spoken of before in this department. When the device is effected as in this case the result is doubly desirable.

The "Inferior Sex" display makes use of the same general plan. It measured four columns in the original and exerted unusual influence. It got the copy a reading—which is the most that can be expected of display.

The more elaborate Strand advertisement discloses the process in its more complicated phase. The expense of this design, four columns in width, was considerable.

Yet the effect justified the outlay. The advertisement was a powerful bid for attendance. Its influence was no doubt felt at the box office.

The publication effect of the Ben Day display needs little comment. The advertisement, "Sex," which was used in the Ben Day process in making up this attractive three-column spread.

The Strand, another A. H. Blank theatre in Omaha, used this elaborate four-column display with good results.

"You don't."

The engraver does it, and makes short work of it. He makes it show in the bill, of course, but this is to be expected.

To adopt the style for everyday use would be an expensive proceeding. Such a course would tend, also, to a dulling of the general effect.

Yet, for the unusual attraction, the picture about which you wish to make special ado and spread an unusual glimmer, the process is excellent.

Producers and distributors supplying cuts to exhibitors should not fail to include in their stock for future productions a number of cuts of this style. They will undoubtedly find a ready demand for them—and they serve best who serve others best.

The three reproductions upon this page are worthy of your critical attention.

Phones 2000 Miles For Producer's Aid

C. D. Hill, the W. W. Hodkinson exchange manager in Des Moines, Ia., telephoned to the J. Parker Reed Jr. headquarters at the Thomas H. Ince studios in Culver City, Cal., the other night to line up an exploitation campaign for his Des Moines and Omaha bookings on "Sex," the newest Louise Olaun-J. Parker Read Jr. special at midnight—a ten o'clock Los Angeles time—"Sex" was on hand with Lawrence Weinigarten, the Read publicity.

In five minutes conversation a newspaper tie-up scheme that utilized the friendly relations built up between Hill and Schlager and the Des Moines Register-Tribune and Capital and the Omaha Bee was framed and a lobby and advertising scheme was planned, while Weinigarten, meanwhile, dashed off on the typewriter a number of special publicity stories that Hill's stenographer took at the other end of the wire.

The nominal cost of the message after midnight, when compared with actual box-office value and the psychological effect of the idea on the exhibitors who booked "Sex" in Hill's territory, was insignificant. Hill took advantage of the unique phone call to get news stories in Des Moines and Omaha papers which further heightened exhibitor interest in "Sex."
"Why Change Your Wife?" was lavishly presented at the Strand theatre, Omaha, Neb., a company of twelve participating in the introduction.

"Why Change Your Wife?" Aided By Musical Comedy Presentation

H. B. Watts, manager of the Strand theatre, Omaha, Neb., working with a company of sixteen players and the Strand's big orchestra, produced what is considered by many the best presentation feature in Omaha theatre history in connection with "Why Change Your Wife?" Cecil B. DeMille's Paramount Artcraft special.

The picture is well suited for presentation purposes. It depicts the glamorous, the glittering and the gay, providing excellent material for the musical director as well as the stage manager. Incidentally, good presentation adds to the effectiveness of the feature.

The performance produced by Mr. Watts was, in fact, a miniature musical comedy. The plot, of course, if plot it could be called, was borrowed from the feature. The music, for the most part, was taken from the musical director's repertoire.

The Strand was formerly devoted to stage productions and a stage of extraordinary dimensions simplified to some extent the work of the director.

An old-fashioned garden was represented in the setting, scenery that might well have served the purpose of the average musical comedy being used. Reproductions of photographs presented herewith give a clear idea of the setting. House lights were lowered, a flood was turned on the orchestra and an overture in which the frivolous and the serious were mingled was given. While this was in progress the stage was completely hidden by the front drop.

At the conclusion of the overture the drop was lifted to disclose a twilight scene in the old-fashioned garden. The orchestra played softly "An Old-Fashioned Garden". Then a spotlight picked up a male singer standing in the center of the stage. His first song was an original number having to do with feminine fashions, past and present. There was humor in it, and the air was a lifting, semi-humorous one which brought out the desired effect.

At its conclusion a young lady in after- noon dress appeared and a duet followed. "An Old-Fashioned Garden," presently rather popular, being the selection and the theme of the prologue.

As they finished two women and two men in golf attire entered and sauntered across the stage.

The next to appear was a mixed quartette, which gave an appropriate number, after which several young ladies in ultra-fashionable garb appeared and went through characteristic steps.

As a finale the entire company sang "An Old-Fashioned Garden," the lights dimmed and the picture was started. It is not to be expected that every exhibitor who plays the production can stage it as lavishly as it was staged at the Strand. In the first place, not all theatres have the stage accommodations to handle a presentation feature of such magnitude. This is a condition which should be remedied.

The man whose theatre is not equipped with facilities for presentation should not be satisfied to say, "I haven't the room for anything of that sort." He should say, at least, "I am going to make room for such features."

Every day that passes sees presentation more firmly established as a part of motion picture exhibition. The man who does not desire to be "left behind" in the march of progress not only should but must provide for it.

A valuable parallel may be seen in the musical history of the motion picture theatre. It was not so long ago that the first organs were installed. A few leaders put them in, and were laughed at by the great body of exhibitors for their pains.

Today there is not a first class theatre in the land that has not a high grade instrument as an essential part of its equipment.

The organ, in the last analysis, like all music, is merely advertising. Its purpose is to build patronage—which is the first and last function of all advertising.

Presentation was first introduced a comparatively short time ago. As is true of all innovations, a few leaders introduced it. Today it would be hard to find an exhibitor who has not at least attempted something along this line—and when he is found he is found lamenting the fact that his theatre could not accommodate such features.

H. B. Watts of the Strand theatre deserves great credit for his remarkable staging of the production. He will prosper and continue to prosper as long as he continues in the manner he has begun. And it will not be long before some exhibitor who has not followed something like the same course will cease to be mentioned among the representative American exhibitors.

"An Old-Fashioned Garden" was the musical number used in the Strand presentation and also provided the setting.
Exhibitors' Reports
Used on Screen Gain Patrons' Confidence

EXHIBITORS HERALD,
Chicago, Ill.

Dear Sirs: The writer took notice of your article, "What the Picture Did for—Jenkins," in the May 29 issue, and wishes to advise that we have for some time made use of the exhibitors' reports in a very similar way, not in a house organ, but with Radio slides, and am pleased to state that the results have been very fine.

This little 210-seat house does not boast a house organ, as the patronage does not warrant the expense, but got the results as stated above nevertheless.

We have been very careful not to use them in connection with any picture we were not absolutely sure would back up the reports, but when we have used them ran a number of slides from reports of different exhibitors.

Often a very favorable report can be found on most any kind of a picture, and if used in connection with such, the results of their use would soon be lost, while our patrons now absolutely depend upon the "tip" the slides give them.

We believe this plan will be well worthwhile by small-town exhibitors that cannot afford a house publication. Small-town exhibitors that do not have a typewriter will find the use of one will greatly enhance the appearance of the slides.

Yours truly,

H. SCHLOMER,

Lobby display used by the Aster theatre, Minneapolis, Minn., to advertise "Pinto," the Mabel Normand starring vehicle for Goldwyn

New Aster Consistent In Lobby Exploitation

The use of the lobby for lobby exploitation by means of special decoration and elaborate display of posters, cutouts and other representation has not yet reached its highest point of development. There are a few consistent workers for better advertising in this direction, but the mass of exhibitors are still backward. It is a matter that should be pressed.

The New Aster theatre, Minneapolis, Minn., is one of the few institutions that consistently and persistently devotes its lobby to the exploitation of current attractions. Incidentally, and as a direct result thereof, the New Aster has attained marked proficiency in this field.

The accompanying reproduction of a photograph taken during the engagement of "Pinto," a recent Mabel Normand production, is a fair example of the New Aster lobbies. It has not been selected as the best of the recent displays. It is representative of the average maintained.

It may or may not be directly due to the lobby phase of the advertising, for the New Aster advertises efficiently in other channels as well, but the theatre is known for its steady patronage, its dependability.

These things are valuable. The theatre that possesses these qualities is the successful theatre. It is significant that most theatres of this type use their lobby intelligently.

Reliability

Manufacturers and distributors of staple articles that have gained national reputations do not underestimate the importance of keeping their products up to a standard.

Advertisers of those products are thus enabled to begin with a solid foundation—reliability.

Exhibitors, though their product is not standardized in the sense that soap, soup or socks may be standardized, have learned that from a given source products of a certain quality may be obtained.

This fact should be thoroughly appreciated when an advertising campaign, of whatever magnitude, is started. It is a well known fact that confidence in the merit of the article advertised is the best assurance of the effectiveness of the advertising.

"Why Change Your Wife?" is splendidly suited to presentation purposes, as is attested by the striking manner in which it was staged at the Strand theatre, Omaha, Neb.
Exploitation Success

"Down On The Farm," Mack Sennett's United Artists comedy feature, promises to be rated as one of the exploitation successes of 1920.

"Courage of Marge O’Doone" Will Play Week at New York’s Capitol

Vitagraph’s Curwood Picture Also Is Booked to Open Several New Theatres Including Pantages in Los Angeles

"The Courage of Marge O’Doone," the Vitagraph adaptation of one of James Oliver Curwood’s best novels, has been booked for a week’s engagement at the Capitol theatre in New York beginning on Sunday, May 30.

This production, for which unusual bookings have been announced, also will be featured in programs of several new theatres, such as the beautiful Pantages in Los Angeles.

President’s Pet Picture

Albert E. Smith, president of Vitagraph, has considered "The Courage of Marge O’Doone" as his pet production. In choosing this smashing Curwood story, he did so because of its pictorial possibilities. His brother, David Smith, was selected to direct it, it is declared, because of his success in handling productions in which wild animals were shown in their native haunts.

Bookings on this special that have been received from all over the United States and Canada have established a Vitagraph record, it is announced. Although the demand for the picture was heavy before completion of it, it is said that during the last ten days the bookings have increased twofold.

New Issue of Press Sheets

An indication of the heavy booking schedule is the announcement that a large, two-color combination press sheet and plan book which was issued several weeks ago is being re-run, as is the lobby display material. It is said that the demand for 24-sheets is evidence that exhibitors are planning intensified exploitation.

Many exhibitors, it is pointed out have asked for and received electrographs of the color plates used in Vitagraph’s trade paper advertising. Some are using these plates just as they are to print special folders for circulating their patrons, while others are using the pictorial part only and are mortising in new type copy.

Press Cooperation

Exhibitors in certain key centers which have newspapers circulating through a large drawing territory are planning a newspaper review for their patrons before the picture is given a public showing in their theatres—a parallel, more or less, to the advance showings in the industry for trade paper reviewers before a film is booked by an exhibitor. They have expressed themselves as confident that this will mean much favorable word-of-mouth advertising before the film is run.

One of the greatest volumes of early bookings on "The Courage of Marge O’Doone" is reported to be coming from the Northwest territory served by Vitagraph’s Seattle exchange and its newly established branch office at Portland. The pre-public showings in this region have resulted in many glowing reviews. The Seattle Times said:

Be Long Remembered

"It is seldom that a motion picture is produced that will leave the impression that James Oliver Curwood’s "The Courage of Marge O’Doone" leaves upon audiences. It is truly a picture in a thousand and one that will long be remembered. The scenic beauty of the landscapes, the cleverness of the players, the intenseness of the director and the introduction of animals in strong roles are some of the things that make The

Major Jack Allen Will Make Own Animal Films

Major Jack Allen, widely known as a producer of animal and outdoor pictures, has cut short his vaudeville tour and is in Los Angeles arranging to make his own pictures for Adventure Films, Inc. "This time I am out for keeps," said the major. "Plenty of producers wanted to back me, but I decided to be independent and rely on my own resources. Now, mind if I have not staked a gold mine or cleaned up on the stock market, but I have saved up a neat little nest egg from my vaudeville tour. On strength of this, I have established my own company to be known as Adventure Films, Inc."
Commission of Three Will Manage Universal Affairs

Plan Carried Out at New York Headquarters After Its Success on West Coast—Will Relieve Laemmle of Handling Details

The commission form of management, similar to the commission form of government which is prevalent in many cities over the country, has been inaugurated by Carl Laemmle to handle the affairs of Universal Film Manufacturing Company.

The producer, in taking this action, was prompted by the success of this method of management at Universal City, where it was installed several weeks ago.

Committee's Word Is Final

The committee, whose word will be final in the general affairs of the company, thereby relieving Mr. Laemmle and R. H. Cochrane, vice-president, of handling routine matters, will be comprised of Abe Stern, treasurer, E. H. Goldstein, secretary to the president, and H. M. Berman, general manager of exchanges.

Under this new system the producer and his chief aide plan to devote more attention to policy and actual production.

The formation of this commission was possible by reason of several important changes just announced in Universal's executive staff. Daniel B. Lederman, formerly assistant to the president, has resigned.

E. H. Goldstein has just been appointed to a newly created executive position—secretary to the president. Among other activities he will assume the duties formerly shouldered by Lederman.

Goldstein Promoted

Goldstein, who is known among exhibitors and other film men as "Mannie," has been general sales manager of Universal for two years. His present promotion is the reward of many years of efficient and valuable service with Universal, with which concern he started as salesman when the company was organized.

He is said to be one of the best known men in the film business. In his work in the Universal sales department he made innumerable trips around the United States studying the problems of the exhibitors at first hand. He is said to know more exhibitors personally than any other film executive in New York.

In making known Goldstein's appointment as his secretary, Mr. Laemmle said he expected his new aide to give his valuable advice in planning for the kind of pictures exhibitors want.

New Purchasing Agent

Another important change in the Universal organization is the appointment of Samuel Sedran as purchasing agent. Sedran also is the head of the Universal supply department. The new appointment consolidates the co-functions of the two positions and is expected to be a far-reaching step towards maximum efficiency. Sedran's appointment follows the recent resignation of the former purchasing agent, Albert Tuchman.

Mr. Laemmle believes that the commission form of management is the only efficient way of handling the affairs of an organization of the magnitude of Universal.

"Trial of the commission form of government for Universal City has convinced me in less than a month that it is the ideal method for handling the many-sided activities of a film company," explained Mr. Laemmle.

Too Big for One

"For years I had difficulty at Universal City. Manager after manager had to give it up. The absolute rule of the vast studio plant was too much for one man. When I established a commission of three there this spring, I must confess that I was skeptical. The three commissioners, Isadore Bernstein, San Von Ronkle and Louis Loeb, assisted by my personal representative, Irving Thalberg, have accomplished wonders, however. Today Universal City is a regular Utopia. Production is at high tide and, what is more important, everyone is contented and enthusiastic.

"Naturally such a state of affairs caused me to consider the same plan for the Universal executive offices. There are too many matters of more or less importance coming up continually for one man to pass upon effectively. That is why I have created this new triumvirate for Universal. It is the biggest step I have taken so far in the reorganization of the company. It is another milestone in my plan to make Universal the most powerful film company in the world—powerful because of its standing with exhibitors, its pictures policies and the general efficiency of its management.

"I have taken many steps toward that goal in the last few months. The first, of course, was the acquisition by R. H. Cochrane and myself of the Universal stock held by P. A. Powers, my former associate. That gave me my power to put my plans for Universal into effect."

Union Of Film Actors Is Planned By Equity

NEW YORK, May 25.—Officials of the Actors' Equity Association plan to invade the motion picture field for the purpose of unionizing the film actors. Members of Equity have granted their officers power to proceed with these organization plans through adoption of a constitutional amendment.
"Big Four" Will Publish One Film a Month After August

Occasional Productions by Independents Also Will Be Added to Distribution Schedule Which Will Be Effective on September 1

Publication of at least one production on the first of every month beginning on September 1, is planned by United Artists Corporation.

In announcing this definite schedule, Hiram Abrams, general manager of the company, said that in addition to issuing productions made by members of the "Big Four," an occasional picture made by an independent producer would be handled as the production warrants.

Stars Promise Steady Distribution

Members of the corporation, Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, David Wark Griffith and Charlie Chaplin, have assured their executives, according to Mr. Abrams, that they will produce with sufficient regularity to assure steady distribution to the theatres.

"I am very much gratified to be able to announce to the exhibitors of the country," says Mr. Abrams, "that Miss Pickford, Mr. Chaplin, Mr. Fairbanks and Mr. Griffith have given me positive assurance that from the first of September on, we will be in a position to release one of their big productions on the first of each month to the theatres of the country.

"Under this arrangement, as far in advance as the exhibitor wishes to work on his bookings, he will always know that the first of every month means a new release from United Artists Corporation. In planning ahead, theatre men will know that by keeping their dates open, they can provide for a minimum of twelve of the most important offerings of the year from United Artists Corporation.

Trips Are Deferred

"I am glad that it was possible for me to induce Miss Pickford and Mr. Fairbanks to defer their trip to Europe in order to avoid the delays that the unsettled communication conditions between this country and Europe would have brought about. "Miss Pickford particularly has long cherished the desire to make some pictures abroad and I know and appreciate the personal sacrifice she is making by postponing the trip, now that her plans have all been made to go to the other side.

"Later on I hope that we will have for release some pictures that she will make abroad, but right now months of delay might occur between the making and the releasing of such pictures and exhibitors all over are asking for more of our product for immediate delivery. Therefore, the plans of Miss Pickford and Mr. Fairbanks have been set aside and they are going to stay hard at work on new productions here in America.

Eight Pictures Published

"Despite the difficulties and handicaps attendant on the launching of an organization such as ours, with unexpired contracts to fulfill on the part of the members of our organization, I feel that we have done very well during the year which will end on August 30. By that time we will have released eight pictures — Douglas Fairbanks in "His Majesty, the American," D. W. Griffith's "Broken Blossoms," Douglas Fairbanks in "When the Clouds Roll By," Mary Pickford in "Pollyanna," Mack Sennett's "Down on the Farm," Doris Keane in "Romance," Douglas Fairbanks in "The Mollycoddle," and Mary Pickford in "Sadie." "During the coming year, with all of our artists engaged on productions for release through this organization, I am confident that we will be able to book exhibitors a steady month-to-month of

NEW YORK — A substantial interest in "Up In Mary's Attic," which is being placed on the independent market by Fine Art Pictures, Inc., has been purchased by L. H. Hiller. This action is taken as further endorsement of the possibilities of this comedy feature. Novak and Harry Grabban are featured in the production. Mr. Hiller says that the picture contains every element of success.

Five-Part Subjects to Be Produced by Fowler

Roger W. Fowler of Fowler Films announced that following the completion of the two-part subject, "Unscrambling Egypt," there will be produced five to seven reels, or more in length. It is understood that his first long subject will be staged in New England this summer. The activity in this policy advocated by Mr. Fowler, who contends that the natural development of character is far more effective than any complicated plots with cold, stock characters.

Four Units Producing "Comedyvart"
Publications For Special Pictures
Month Is Being Spent In Making Each 1,400-Foot Comedy Under the Personal Supervision
Of Director General Lascalle

A campaign of expansion is to be carried on by Specials Pictures Corporation, best known in the short reel field for its "Comedyvart" publication, the 2,000 reel of comedy, scenes and novelties, representing an entire filler program for any theatre. Four companies now are working under the supervision of Director General Ward Lascalle at Special Pictures' studio at Long Beach. Milburn Moranti is the latest director to be added to the staff.

Month on Each Film

In order to keep up the high standard set by the initial issues, President Louis W. Thompson has ordered that four weeks be spent on each 1,400-foot comedy. This makes it necessary to have four companies working in order to produce a comedy for each week's "Comedyvart" publication.

The expansion plans include three publications a week instead of one.

An expedition to make western and northern scenes from Tia Juana, Mexico, to Nome, Alaska, has started out under the joint auspices of Special Pictures Corporation and the Sunset Magazine.

The party includes "Dick" Durrud, the famous outdoor photographer, as chaperon to two young girls, whose activities in the beauty spots in the north and west will be caught by the camera.

Novelists in Party

The party will proceed slowly up the Western Coast, arriving at Seattle on June 10. There Stewart Edward White and Wallace Irwin, two well known novelists and magazine writers, will join the excursion and the party will take the inside passage to Alaska.

Arrangements have been made whereby 1,400 newspapers in all parts of the country will carry stories and photos of the adventures of the expedition.

This will be in addition to the publicity given the excursion by Sunset Magazine, one of the joint promoters of the expedition.

These scenic films will be rushed back to Special Pictures' laboratory in Los Angeles, so that on the hottest summer days the exhibitors can treat their patrons to scenes of Alaskan snows. One scenic will be published each week.

The third publication is being kept secret by President Thompson, but will be announced shortly, he says.

New Exchanges Added

New exchanges have been added in Albany, Milwaukee and Salt Lake City, according to announcement made by H. J. Roberts, general sales manager.

According to Earl Shanks, business manager of the organization, the "Comedyvart" publication now is being shown in more than 5,000 of the 8,000 non-competing theatres in the United States and Canada.

E. H. Silcock, special sales representative, is in New York in the interests of Special Pictures, and he will soon be joined by Sales Manager Roberts. President Thompson plans a trip east in the late summer or early fall.

Credits Press With Aid In Selling Film

Practically All Territory On "The Illiterate Digest" Has Been Sold

Assistance of the trade press in disposing of a greater part of the American, Canadian and European territory on "The Illiterate Digest," by Will Rogers, the Goldwyn star, is praised by Marion H. Kohn, the producer, who is distributing the short subject.

The successful advertising campaign to interest state right buyers has just been concluded by Kohn.

The help we received from the trade paper on both the advertising and on the news pages, placed us in touch with the most desirable of state rights buyers—something utterly impossible in a short space of time," said Kohn. "When I began producing I was from Missouri," but after the returns from the trade paper advertisements Kohn has convinced that the producer and the distributor needs the trade paper as a medium between the exhibitor or buyer and himself.

Picture Breaks Record
Despite Big Competition

Competing against all the natural outdoor attractions at Atlantic City during the first week of warm spring weather this year, Anita Stewart in "In Old Kentucky" drew 47,747 people off the board walk into the Colonial theatre for performances. The Colonial has a heating capacity of 1,700 and the box office attendance figures show that on the week's run the attendance totaled 147 above the seating capacity. The receipts were a little more than $1,500 better than any previous week's receipts in the history of the house.

Two Films of Universal's Star Series Are Finished

Two productions of Universal's new star series have been completed, Anne Cornwall being featured in "The Girl in the Rain," and Frank Mayo in "The Red Lane." This new 1920-21 schedule calls for forty-eight five-part pictures to be made by six stars.

The players featured in the series are Harry Carey, Edith Roberts, Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran, Frank Mayo, Carmel Myers and Anne Cornwall. Three other subjects are under way, Edith Roberts is making "Marama," Harry Carey, "Fightin' Joe," and Lyons and Moran, "La La Lucille."

Alice Howell Completes Sixth Reelcraft Production

Reelcraft Pictures Corporation's star, Alice Howell, under the personal direction of Frederick J. Ireland, vice-president and supervisor of production, has just completed her sixth picture, "Robes and Romance," and will start immediately on the seventh of a series of twenty-six two-reel comedies.

Carl Harthill, manager of the Chicago office of the Reelcraft Pictures Corporation, reports that the bookings on the forthcoming William Franey single reel comedies has passed all expectations and will fill a long felt want of the exhibitors for a 1,000-foot reel of snappy humor of merit.

She was a devotee of wheeling before it came back into fashion. In fact in the days of sailor suits and knee-high skirts, when her family lived on Long Island, the fair Marion made clandestine trips to a nearby beach forbidden by her elders. Miss Davis is no amateur wheelwoman, however, for at Palm Beach last winter she won out in a picked crew of society men, all well known cyclists.

ALBERT GREY, general manager of D. W. Griffith Attractions, has purchased the Rock Cottage at Wild Cliff, New Rochelle, N. Y. Wild Cliff is situated on Echo Bay and Rock Cottage has a commanding view of Long Island sound. It is located about four miles to the south of the Griffith studios.

J. JOSEPH SAMETH has become head of the Forward Films Distributors, Inc. We always maintained that Joe might some day become president.

ERNEST WILLIAMSON, general manager and director general of the Submarine Film Corporation, arrived in New York May 17 from the West Indies. Mr. Williamson expects to return to the south within the next three weeks.

FRED SCHAEFFER, well known on New York's film row, has been combining his varied motion picture experience with literary ability at writing continuity for Vitagraph. A steady flow of product covering a wide range of subjects has been the result. Besides story adaptations for Harry Moeby and Earl Williams he has edited a number of pictures featuring other stars and is titling two serials. A background of technical knowledge gained not only in the studio but in film publicity, advertising and distribution has helped him deliver the goods.

Why not engage Nicky Arnstein to clean up the exhibitors for the producing-theatre owner and use "Bluebeard Watson" to kill off competitors?

HARRY RAPF, A HUMAN DYNAMO

Selznick’s Manager of Production In the West Has Studios Constantly Buzzing With Eastern Companies Often Times Under His Supervision

O’Brien, and scheduled for distribution the third week in June, also was made there. Olive Thomas, the appealing Selznick star, is in California at the present time working on the production, “Jenny,” which, according to present plans, will be ready for the screen in July.

All in all, the position of western production manager of the Selznick organization is no small task, and it requires a human dynamo such as Harry Rapf to carry out the plans of Mr. Selznick to successful completion. At present activities are buzzing under the supervision of Mr. Rapf, it is said.

“The U. P. Trail” by Zane Grey Will Appear Before Public Shortly

“The U. P. Trail,” which is considered one of Zane Grey’s most popular books, has been put into screen form by Benjamin B. Hampton after seven months of work. The distributing arrangements have not as yet been made, but it is expected that it will go before the public shortly. An all-star cast was selected by Hampton and includes Kathryn Williams, Roy Stewart, Marguerite De La Motte, Robert McKim and other well known players.

It is a drama of love and frontier life, primitive mystery and intrigue, based on the building of America’s first transcontinental railroad through the wilderness.

Holubar Casting For His Own Production

Becomes Free Agent When An Agreement Is Reached With Universal

With all legal difficulties concerning his contract with Universal out of the way, a satisfactory adjustment having been made by which he and Dorothy Phillips become free agents, Allen Holubar has started producing on his own account at the Hollywood studios. Al Kaufman, formerly an executive of the Famous Players-Lasky organization, is sponsor for the new Holubar-Phillips feature.

Several weeks were spent on the preparation of the story, upon which Olga Linek Scholl, the well-known screen writer, collaborated with Director Holubar.

The script is complete and at present Holubar is engaging the cast. According to his present contract the players must be selected by Holubar himself. Holubar has organized his own technical staff, which will build a number of elaborate sets.

Holubar refuses to divulge the title or theme of his new story, but declares in human interest and diversity of appeal it will be even stronger than his earlier successes.

A HUMAN dynamo!

For years this metaphor has been applied to men in industry whose tireless energy has enabled them to assume successfully big responsibilities.

Harry Rapf, Western production manager of Selznick Enterprises, has been referred to as a human dynamo. To appreciate the metaphor in this instance it is necessary to give an idea of the activities of this concern on the Coast.

Quality Pictures Made

At the Selznick plant in the West, which is located at Hollywood, many of the quality pictures of Selznick Enterprises are made. It is here that "Just a Wife," the first production of National Picture Theatres, Inc., was produced. This picture, which upon its publication scored success, has in its cast several prominent players, including Kathryn Williams and Roy Stewart.

Being in personal charge of the production work of this picture at the West Coast plant, Mr. Rapf looked after the building of the sets, selecting of the cast and making of the titles.

"Blind Youth," the second subject of National Picture Theatres, also was made there, as well as the third production, "The Invisible Divorce." At the present time the fourth subject for National is being made there under the title of "The Palace of Darkened Windows," Henry Kolker directing.

Sends Players West

Myron Selznick, who is in charge of the production work of Selznick Enterprises, frequently sends a Selznick Pictures company to the West Coast to make a subject. At the present time Owen Moore is there. It was in California that his picture, "The Desperate Hero," scheduled for publication the first week in June, was made.

THE week beginning May 29 and ending June 5 has been designated as Americanization Week and the industry is asked to co-operate to the fullest extent possible in making it a success. Exhibitors particularly should be interested in the request.

In giving the greatest possible impetus to the Americanization movement the exhibitor is doing something more than furthering his own interests—though that alone is sufficient cause for him to enter the work with enthusiasm.

Following the signing of the armistice it was natural that a reaction should set in, that patriotism, long held at high tension, should be permitted to undergo a certain period of laxity. Many who are well versed in the psychology of such matters attribute much of the unrest which is responsible for present economic conditions in great degree to that cause.

Exhibitors will do well to exhibit during the week designated those features and short subjects which will most forcibly stimulate patriotism. If every exhibitor in the United States joins in the work the effect of their concerted effort cannot be other than beneficial to the nation—and to the theatre business.

"PARTNERS OF THE NIGHT" (Goldwyn) has the elements of the popular success. It is Leroy Scott's story minutely and effectively picturized, well produced and dramatically sound. William Davidson, Emmett Corrigan and Pinta Nesbitt are the players to whom have been submitted the leading roles, players chosen with the characters in mind and players who give unusual realism to the whole.

"FORBIDDEN TRAILS" (Fox) marks another step in Buck Jones' advance to popular favor. A western story of not wholly unfamiliar design, it provides ample opportunity for the star's display of talent. Winifred Westover is a satisfactory leading lady and a Fox supporting cast gives uniform assistance.

"NOTHING BUT LIES" (Metro) presents the facially adept Taylor Holmes in a characteristic portrayal. In it the alleged discrepancy between advertising and truth is made the foundation for a loosely constructed series of mildly engaging situations. It should be briskly projected and supported by spirited musical accompaniment. Good short subjects will also aid materially.

"THE HARVEST MOON" (Hodkinson) follows closely the popular play by August Thomas. The virility of Doris Kenyon, the star, and the careful casting of her support are elements that contribute largely to the appeal of the picture. Elaborate settings add to the pleasure of the picture's exhibition, which many will consider the star's best vehicle.

"THE LITTLE CAFE" (Pathe) should be especially valuable as fulfilling the demand for comedies of feature length. It presents Max Linder, the veteran French comedian, to advantage. The incidents are amusing in themselves and strung upon a story thread of more than customary substance. Exploitation possibilities are especially promising.

"THE FORTUNE TELLER" (Robertson-Cole) lacks a certain realism and devotes seemingly unnecessary footage to detail, yet has an appeal to women which should work to its advantage. Marjorie Rambeau is well cast in the leading role and gives creditable account of herself throughout. The theme, mother love, is ever popular, and the title affords advertising material that may be cheaply and effectively utilized.

"BULLET PROOF" (Universal) is a Harry Carey production, which is "enough said" to interest fans who are followers of this star of Western drama. This offering, while not on a par with his previous picture, "Overland Red," is entertaining and has many interesting features. Beautiful rugged scenes are pictured.

"FRIVOLOUS WIVES" (Fidelity) has an all-star cast portraying characters such as are found among the elite. It is a society drama based on intrigue and blackmail. The photography of the picture undoubtedly represents some of the best work that has been done in this phase of production work in some time.

"THE FLAPPER" (Select) should find favor in a majority of playhouses. Olive Thomas is excellent in a vehicle adapted for the screen by Frances Marion, who has included some very clever work in the finished production. Cast, photography and direction are excellent.

"BELOW THE SURFACE" (Paramount Aircraft) with Hobart Bosworth is another worthy addition to Mr. Bosworth's splendid repertoire of screen classics. The picture was directed by Ervin V. Willat, under Thomas H. Ince's supervision, and besides containing some remarkable undersea photography has a consistent story which is well told.

"FOR THE SOUL OF RAFAEL" (Equity) Clara Kimball Young's latest starring vehicle is an exceptionally well knit and interesting romance of the Mexican border country of seventy years ago. Miss Young is surrounded by a very well balanced cast and she gives one of the best performances of her long screen career. Beautiful photography and well written subtitles add to the picture's charm.

THE FLAPPER

Five-part comedy-drama; Select Directed by Allan Crosman
Published in May.

OPINION: An exhibitor's first thought is whether or not a picture will please his patronage. Depending on his astute judgment in the matter of selection is the success of his theatre. Sufficient to say, then, "The Flapper" will please.

Both the director and the author have shown consistency in making the action of the play progressive throughout. This factor is a distinctly important requisite for the minute a picture becomes dull interest is lost and the regaining of an audience's attention is more of a task than retaining its favor. The story is that of Frances Marion, whose screen creations always have smacked of the unique and the original. Her situations are not second hand. She gives the director something tangible with which to work. Add to these desirable qualities a director's sagacity in transcribing the original and invariably the result is satisfactory.

Olive Thomas' personation of "The Flapper" is delightful. Cast with her are players who treat their respective portrayals with skill. Prominent in the cast are Warren Cook, Frances Marion, Robert King, Jr., William P. Carlton, Katherine Johnson, Arthur Housman and Marcia Harris.

The attention given by Selznick to interiors and exteriors is noticeable as usual in this picture. Some very beautiful snow scenes, in which are enacted some of the facetious incidents of the play, have been photographed.

Frances Marion's story is of a young boarding school girl whose mind is filled with ambitions to be worldly wise. She strives against odds to impress those with whom she comes in contact as a sophisticated girl. And thereby results the title, "The Flapper.

SYNOPSIS: "Ginger" King, as she is known to her boarding school companions, desires to impress her family and friends with her sophistication. During her school days she is continually in trouble, being reprimanded daily for her innocent nonsense. While en route home for the Christmas holidays she stops in New York, where an intriguing couple place her in possession of stolen jewels. At her home at Orange Spring, the authorities demand her arrest, but the sheriff's sister arrives on the scene and the many difficulties are cleared and "Ginger" gives up her life of a "Flapper."

THE FORTUNE TELLER
Seven-part drama; Robertson-Cole.
Directed by Albert Capellani.
Published in May.

OPINION: Although lacking realism and losing force through too much attention to minor details to the neglect of the main thread of the story, "The Fortune Teller," an adaptation of the stage play of the same name, carries an appeal to women which few pictures contain.

Marjorie Rambeau is ideally cast in the role of the mother, whose son is torn from her by a suspicious husband and who later guides the boy to success. She stands alone, however. Her supporting cast is painfully insufficient, and through its weakness, throws too heavy a burden on the star.

The major fault is an overdrawing of character parts, which give a stagey atmosphere to the production. The result is that the picture becomes too nearly the old fashioned "movie" rather than the "motion picture production" of today.

The story as developed on the screen is filled with improbabilities, hardly excusable by screen license. In one instance, a woman, who has been "constantly doped" by whiskey for twenty years, regains her beauty and youthfulness in a space of a few brief months and is accepted in the social circle which surrounds the governor of a state. This is the most noticeable of a series of similar circumstances.

Mother love is the theme of the story. Special attention to the music accompaniment is imperative. The name obviously permits of many spectacular exploitation ideas without any great expenditure of money.

SYNOPSIS: Renee Browning finds herself unhappily married to a scientist, her baby being her only comfort. The monotony of her life is broken temporarily when Tony Salviata, a gambler, attempts to commit suicide near the Browning home and is brought in. Mrs. Browning assists in nursing him back to health. Tony attempts to pay attention to her. Browning seeks becomes unreason-able in his anger and jealousy, and drives her from the house, keeping their son. Mrs. Browning becomes a fortune teller with a circus. Tony starts and travels with him twenty years, drinking heavily. Her son, Stephen, grows to young manhood but does not make good at anything because he lacks assertion and receives no sympathy from his father. Fate leads him to Mme. Renee's fortune telling booth. She learns his identity; quits the circus; braces up, and becomes his guiding hand. Stephen is elected to the legislature and marries the governor's daughter.

Taylor Holmes in NOTHING BUT LIES
Five-part comedy; Metro.
Directed by Lawrence Windom.
Published in May.

OPINION: The natural association of ideas, of course, involves "Nothing But the Truth," a former Taylor Holmes vehicle; the natural procedure is comparatively the drawing of conclusions does not favor the present production.

In "Nothing But Lies" the star works earnestly in an enthusiastic and well-intentioned effort to amuse. He is moderately successful and will doubtless make a satisfactory impression if the production is smartly projected and accompanied with snappy music.

Exhibitors who play the picture should so arrange their programs that the feature can be disposed of in forty-five minutes at most. It was drawn out to seventy minutes at its Chicago premiere and did not stand up well under the treatment.

The film is somewhat unique and readily engages the attention. It has to do with the disclosure of an advertising firm's secrets by an over-scrupulous son of one of the partners. The complications which ensue are mildly amusing, but must be submitted in rapid succession to score.

Buck Jones in FORBIDDEN TRAILS
Five-part drama; Fox.
Directed by Scott Dunlap.
Published in May.

OPINION: Buck Jones is materially advanced along his way to popularity as a Fox male star by his work in this, his latest vehicle. It is melodramatic enough, sensational enough, to satisfy the most exacting demand for western drama.

There are incidents and situations in the story which suggest former melodramas of the same locale, but the ensemble is new. In these incidents and emergencies, also, the star works with... a fresh enthusiasm which gives them in unusual degree the semblance of realism. Winifred Westover, as the young lady about whose mine the action centers, portrays with distinction the young girl role assigned her. Stanton Heck, in an uncommonly villainous heavy character, excels the cordial contempt of the other players, and is equal to the tasks assigned them. They serve to reveal the agility and ability of the star admirably.

A train hold-up and a last-minute rescue of the girl, the latter coming at the end of the picture, are the big incidents. They serve to reveal the agility and ability of the star admirably.

A train crossing over the railroad is the arrival of a new star, perhaps with the name of Tom Mix associated, will be found prospective of good results.

SYNOPSIS: Squint, the silent partner in a gold mine and professionally a cowboy, finds his partner dying, the latter having given the该 his daughter, Marion Harlan, with instructions as to her whereabouts in Kansas City. When Taylor arrives at the address he finds the girl gone and returns home. The train is held up and he rescues everyone aboard, capturing the bandits later. He overhears the plot of William Carrington, drunken, and it is not until, following an attempt to take his life on a trumped-up charge of murder, he rescues Marion from Carrington's persecutions that the happy ending is brought about.

Doris Kenyon in

THE HARVEST MOON

Six-part drama; Gibraltar Pictures.

Directed by Wilfred Lytell.

Published by W. W. Hodkinson.

OPINION: Following closely the story of the popular play by Augustus Thomas, Gibraltar Pictures has produced for the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation one of the strongest features offered on the screen for the late Spring and Summer.

The vivacity of the star and careful casting of her support are two of the elements which contribute largely to the appeal of the picture. Dora Fullerton, the character taken by Doris Kenyon, is an impulsive girl with a passion for the stage. The role calls for the best of Miss Kenyon's histrionic ability. Marta will consider it supreme attainment.

The production opens with a prologue, which makes a fitting introduction to the story proper. The action in the prologue is staged in Normandy; the story proper is laid in the United States eighteen years later.

The development of the theme calls for several elaborate settings and a number of exteriors, which are pleasing to the eye.

Wilfred Lytell as Willard Holcomb, George A. Lessey as Jacques Vavin, and Earl Schenck as Professor Fullerton are the principals in the supporting cast, which also includes Peter Lang, Marie Shotwell, Stuart Robson, Grace Barton, Daniel Fennell, Mrs. E. M. Holland and Ellen Olson.

SYNOPSIS: Dora Fullerton, the daughter of Jacques Vivan, a French savior, was married to her mother two years after her divorce from Prof. James Fullerton, an American, is adopted by Prof. Fullerton when her mother dies in Normandy after becoming accidentally separated from her husband. Vivian searches in vain for his wife and daughter. Prof. Fullerton is ignorant of his wife's second marriage. Cornelia Fullerton, the professor's maiden sister, persecutes the girl by overzealously guarding her for fear she will turn out to be "like her mother." Dora, after graduating from college, joins a road show, but leaves it a week later, after meeting Willard Holcomb, a young playwright and actor. Vivian comes to America for a lecture tour, and locates Dora. He refrains from telling her he is her father for fear of ruining her happy belief. Prof. Fullerton, is, but exercises a fatherly interest in her. When Dora decides to star in a play written by Holcomb, her aunt objects to her using the name "Fullerton" and tells her the circumstances of her adoption. Vivian then reveals his secret: Dora marries Holcomb, and the play ends happily for all.

Clara Kimball Young in

FOR THE SOUL OF RAFAEL

Six-part drama; Equity.

Directed by Harry Garson.

Published in June.

OPINION: No more fitting picture than this could have been chosen by Andreas Dippel for the opening attraction at the Auditorium, Chicago's latest addition to the Windy City's cinema amusement. It is undoubtedly one of the best things Miss Young has done in years and will create and warrant unusual exploitation on the part of exhibitors everywhere.

The story, taken from Marah Ellis Ryan's novel of the same name, is a romance of California seventy years ago. Miss Young is cast as Marta Estevan, an aristocratic Spanish girl, who is taken from a convent and weds a dissolute youth to fulfill a vow made to his mother. Bertram Grassby is Rafael Artaega, and he handles the role of the fickle, immoral young Spaniard in a very convincing manner. The role of the American, Keith Bryton, was in very capable hands by J. Frank Glenden acting this part with the proper feeling and restraint. Another role that called for unusual ability was that of El Capitan, splendidly played by Juan de le Cruz. Of the women, Ruth King as Ana Mendez, Paula Merritt as Teresa and Eugenie Besser as Dona Luisa, fill their respective parts as though they were written especially for them.

The screen version of Miss Ryan's book is as fine a piece of work as has graced the silver sheet for some time. It is a well-knit story, each incident following in its natural sequence and the whole blends into a logical, forceful love story that possesses unusual charm. The settings and photography are in keeping with the fine direction and exceptionally strong cast.

SYNOPSIS: Marta has been reared in a convent, but through her faithful nurse she finds that an Indian tribe had adopted her many years before and they bestowed a ring upon her that saves her from all harm. Dona Luisa Artaega, mother of a dissolute youth, Rafael, and Marta's guardian, arranged a marriage between the two, trusting that Marta's influence will cause Rafael to lead a better life. Marta rescues an American, Keith Bryton, from a band of Indians and slips her ring on his finger. She falls in love with Keith as she nurses him through the night, but Rafael's mother sends him away by telling him Marta has entered a convent. Marta is told that Bryton is killed on the trail by Dona Artaega and she exacts a promise from Marta to marry her son. The wedding follows a week of carousing on the part of Rafael. Bryton sells the Artaegas a herd of horses and again meets Marta. Marta finds out the true character of Rafael, and when he is killed by his cousin, El Capitan, the two are reunited.

Max Linder in THE LITTLE CAFE

Five-part comedy; Pathe

Published in June

OPINION: With the exhibitors of country demanding comedies of feature length, "The Little Cafe," starring Max Linder, is certain to receive enthusiastic response from the theatre owners.

It is a well made production, embodying all of the humors which from which it is adapted and in addition adding many laugh provoking incidents only possible on the screen, and through the cleverness of its star, Linder shows to advantage. The interior of the little cafe, where the action centers, gives an unlimited opportunity for comedy—subtle, slapstick, and pantomime. He is of the vigorous type of comedian. There is no jesture, which could add to the various situations, omitted.

Along with the laughs, there is sufficient story and the desire to maintain interest, with just a touch of pathos at the end to round out the entertainment.

Tie-ups with restaurants for exploitation purposes can be easily accomplished. The title and the story admit of originality in advertising.

SYNOPSIS: Max obtains a job in a little cafe as a waiter and is contented. In his childhood, he lived with a rich uncle, who frequently went mountain climbing. During an absence, an old family servant made life miserable for the boy. The uncle disappeared mysteriously, and after enduring the loss of the servant, Max ran away and forgot his past. In the meantime, his uncle was legally proven dead and his attorneys searched for Max to turn the fortune over to him. The old servant located Max and in conspiracy with Max' employer, lured him to some corner of the cafe to continue to wait on table for twenty years or forfeit a large sum of money. Max, now in possession of his inheritance, signed. He was then apprised of his fortune. To save making the forfeit, he continued to wait on table ten years, even the day after his millionaire fortune was known at night. In the end, the employer relented and tore up the contract, and Max married his employer's daughter.

Harley Carey in BULLET-PROOF

Five-part drama; Universal

Directed by Lynn F. Reynolds

Published in May

OPINION: Here is another hour of good entertainment for Harry Carey fans. This time the western drama is replete with heart interest and action, with the star upholding the laurels gained by his past endeavors.

While "Bullet-Proof" will not attain the position held by "Overland Red," which undoubtedly was one of the best of the star's productions, it will be altogether satisfying and will receive the plaudits of those who see it.

It needless to say that upon the work of Carey for his characterizations involve persuasive qualities. There is further evidence, however, of efforts to improve character vehicle. The material, which is noticeable in the choice of the supporting performers. A perusal of the following list will show out this fact: Robert McKim, a clever

All-Star Cast in FRIVOLOUS WIVES

Six-part drama; Fidelity Directed by Joe Maxwell Published in May OPINION: A person cannot view this production without commenting favorably upon the photography. The clearness that has been obtained is remarkable. Rarely is a production found that can boast of such exceptional camera work.

Clear and vivid photography is a decided asset to any production. It makes perception possible with a minimum of eye strain, and this factor is receiving general consideration wherever pictures are made. While clear photography will not make a picture, there is an added value when it is present.

Fidelity has chosen a well known cast for the production. The more prominent members are Vera Sisson, Kathleen Kirkham, Edward Job-on and Frank Newberg. One who has not been so conspicuous in screen circles but whose work is commendatory in this production is Rodallo di Valenti.

"Frivolous Wives" is a drama of blackmail, intrigue and society. Kathleen Kirkham as Mrs. John McMillan is one of the frivoulous wives, frivouls because of her penchant for male suitors and her scheming to gain possession of her elderly husband's fortune.

SYNOPSIS: Mrs. John McMillan, the second wife of John McMillan, millionaire, is overly zealous in her attentions to Count Roberto di San Fracetti. The wife and the count scheme to grab McMillan's fortune and as a means to an end decide that the count shall wed Mary McMillan. In the meanwhile, McMillan has been relieved of several thousand dollars through blackmail. The millionaire finds that the count also is attempting to blackmail him and when he discovers that his daughter is to marry the titled man he intervenes but without results. Finally it is revealed that McMillan had been wrongly accused of murder and had been the victim of notorious dealings. The count flees and it is found that he and Mary had not been legally married. Mary then returns to her first love.

Carey is presented as a bandit in this production, not because of any prefertence to lead such a life, but solely to avenge the death of his father by killing McGuirk. He pays his addresses to the daughter of the leader of the band. He escorts her to a masquerade and there meets a former sweetheart with whom he becomes very attentive. The daughter of the bandit leader becomes enraged and leaves the dance for home. Pierre follows and when he arrives at the cabin he finds that McGuirk has murdered every member of the band and fired the place. Pierre later starts out in search of his former sweetheart, meets Mc-Guirk on the roadway and kills him, and finally is reunited with the girl he loved.

Allied Will Produce for Independent Exchanges

Allied Productions, recently orgaized with offices at 333 Building secuity, New York, will produce only such subjects as will receive a ready market, it is announced by H. M. Owens, general manager, who has just covered the independent exchanges of the country to ascertain their wants.

Pirates will be made from popular newspaper serials now being acquired.
Associated with Mr. Owen are E. S. Bradley, Pittsburgh, Pa., and W. W. Wallace, owner of the well-known Picture Exchange Compayny, which this company is now releasing a series of five-reel Western pictures, two of them now being put on the market.

Issuing Last Lyons-Moran
Short Subject on May 31
The last single reel comedy featuring Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran will be published by Universal on May 31. It will be called “His Friend’s Tip.” This team has made more than 400 short comedy pictures while working for Universal.
The comedians are now making four-reel comedies.

New Series of Christie Comedies
To Be Distributed by Educational

A new series of two-reel Christie comedies has been obtained for distribution by Educational Films Corporation of America.

These short subjects will bear the brand name, New Christie Comedies, with the product already shown continuing to be booked through the exchanges now handling the pictures.

Production of the first two comedies is under way for publication every two weeks after the opening of Educational’s own exchanges on June 20.

Involves Large Sum
The Christie contract, which has just been signed by E. W. Hammons, vice-President and general manager of Educational, and Charles H. Christie, general manager of Christie Film Company, is said to involve the largest sum ever concerned in a two-reel comedy agreement.

According to the agreement, Al Christie will supervise personally all of the productions and actually direct as many as possible. The entire distribution for the United States and Canada is to be in the hands of Educational.

It is probable that Bobby Vernon and Ray Tinch will be the featured players in the first two offerings. Some of those who have appeared recently in Christie comedies are Eddie Barry,
Jimmie Harrison, W. B. Burns, Teddy
Sampson, Vera Steadman, Helen Darling, Charlotte Merriam and Earl Rodney.

Many congratulations have been received from Mr. Hammons on his acquisition of the Christie comedies. “Kiss Me Carolene” will be the first of these, and “A Seaside Siren” is the second production. The settings of both of these pictures are promised as unusually elaborate.

Exhibitor Interest
Associated with Educational in its exchange and participating in the ownership of the individual territorial offices are some prominent exhibitors. While all of the signed contracts have not yet reached the New York office the whole exchange system has been completed. Negotiations are now in progress for Canada and these will be closed within a short time. In England Educational is associated owner of Ideal Film Renting Company, Ltd., which has exchanges all through the British Isles.

Work has been practically completed at the Cliffs of Moher Studios, Port Lee, on “A Knight for a Night,” the second of the “Torchy” comedies produced by Master Films, Inc., and published by Educational. Johnny Hines, the star, is said to surpass his work in the first of the series. Immediately on the completion of this picture work will start on the third.

Prepare Exploitation
On “His Pajama Girl”

C. B. Price Company, Inc., which is marketing Billie Rhodes in “His Pajama Girl” on the state right plan, announces that it is preparing an exceptionally strong line of advertising matter to accompany this production.

“While the picture is adapted to wide exploration,” remarked Mr. Price, “we are preparing an advertising campaign for the exhibitor that will include a wide variety of material. The lithographs will include everything from a one sheet to a twenty-four sheet. Gravure photos for lobby display of the 11x14 and 22x28 type are prepared. Very comprehensive and complete plan of publicity material is being prepared and presented in such a way that the exhibitor will find it all of a most useful nature.”

Paramount Will Open Its
New Albany Office June 7

Al Lichtman, general manager of the department of distribution of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, announces that the company’s new exchange at Albany, N. Y., will be opened on June 7.
The new exchange, which, it is said, will be a model of exchange housing and facilities, will be at 33 Orange street.
Joseph H. Seidleman has been appointed exchange manager.

Gentlemen:

The Power's #6B Cameragraph installed us excellent satisfaction. We had the machine equipped

Our machine has been in constant use, and considering the fact that at least ten different persons handle the machine, our expense for lamps has been very small indeed. We have used six and ninehundred Watt

We use your machine exclusively.

The Greatest Question, a D. W. Griffith production.—This picture certainly was well named. The best picture we have run for many months. It has a moral that is good for anybody. Enough comedy to make your patrons want to see it again. —Watkins & Sons, Savoy theatre, Helena, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

Two Weeks, with Constance Talmadge.—Another National Constance Talmadge picture. Such stars and stories as these are put joy in the picture game. It’s a winner. —Fred McCoy, Liberty theatre, Ft. Scott, Kans.

The Inferior Sex, with Mildred Harris Chaplin.—Our patrons seem to like this one, and we did good business although two houses in three blocks were featuring Mrs. Chaplin at one-half our admission price. —Fred Cosman, Electric theatre, St. Joseph, Mo.

In Old Kentucky, with Anita Stewart.—Best picture I have ever shown. Played it two nights, and the first night was all the advertisement necessary to fill my house the second. For real business, here it is. —W. J. Good, Grand theatre, East Troy, Wis.

The Fighting Shepheardess, with Anita Stewart.—I liked the picture and I believe my patrons did also. It is not a second In Old Kentucky, but it is a good program picture. Story is interesting. Business was good.—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield theatre, Chicago, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Viruous Vamp, with Constance Talmadge.—Even the men who don’t like Constance said it was some picture. They can’t help liking it because it’s a fine picture. —Frank, Jewel theatre, Lafayette, Colo.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Viruous Vamp, with Constance Talmadge.—This is a good picture by a very talented actress, and a picture that will draw good business. —William Noble, Empress theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla.—General patronage.

A Daughter of Two Worlds, with Norma Talmadge.—Got them in on name of star. Picture not as good as some of her Select pictures. —Meyers & Ford, Arcade theatre, La Grande, Ore.—Small town patronage.

The Greatest Question, a D. W. Griffith production.—Griffith should get away from so much cruelty. —S. A. Hayman, Lyric, Grand Island, Nebr.—Transient patronage.

Two Weeks, with Constance Talmadge.—This is a great picture with a rising attractive star. It will go big if properly exploited. —Will C. Perry, Grand theatre, Alvin, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Fighting Shepheardess, with Anita Stewart.—A good picture and it pleased. Anita Stewart has good following here. —Fred McCoy, Liberty theatre, Ft. Scott, Kans.—Neighborhood patronage.

Back to God’s Country, with Nell Shipman.—A good special that is certainly a novelty, but a band concert took the crowd. —Bert Norton, Kozy theatre, Eureka, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Her Kingdom of Dreams, with Anita Stewart.—Picture 100%. Patronage well pleased. Went away smiling. —H. A. Kempen, Queen theatre, Nixon, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Idol Dancer, a D. W. Griffith production.—A picture out of the ordinary, but a very good one. Photography extra good. Patrons well pleased. —William Noble, Empress theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla.—General patronage.

Daddy Long Legs, with Mary Pickford.—This is a great play. —A. E. Bird, Opera House, Arlington, la.—Rural patronage.

In Old Kentucky, with Anita Stewart.—Very good picture, and good business. —B. C. Brown, Star theatre, Viroqua, Wis.

The Hoodlum, with Mary Pickford.—Not as good as Daddy Long Legs, but good. —Edward Lindsey, Lindsey theatre, Industry, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Daughter of Two Worlds, with Norma Talmadge.—This First National picture is the best of Norma Talmadge’s pictures I have ever run. First National has been delivering the goods. Give us more like this one. —Fred McCoy, Liberty theatre, Ft. Scott, Kans.—Neighborhood patronage.

Daddy Long Legs, with Mary Pickford.—Fine picture, and excellent direction. Biggest box office attraction we have ever shown. —C. E. Miller, Gem theatre, Apache, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Midnight Romance, with Anita Stewart.—went big with big business. As good as they make them. Give us more of this kind. —Mrs. E. L. Perry, Liberty theatre, Gorman, Tex.—Transient patronage.

The Greatest Question, a D. W. Griffith production.—We did very poorly with this subject. First of all, Miss Gish is not liked here. Second, Broken Blossoms fell badly in the city. Don’t care for Griffith’s subjects here. —Fred Cosman, Electric theatre, St. Joseph, Mo.

The Thunderbolt, with Katherine McDonald.—Class A picture. Some stars too. First National certainly has the pictures. —Alvin S. Frank, Jewel theatre, Lafayette, Colo.—Neighborhood patronage.

THE INFERIOR SEX, with Mildred Harris Chaplin.—In my opinion the best screen production among my female patronage that has been shown at the Strand in months. They went wild over Mrs. Chaplin and the story suited them exactly. While the men did not see the production as anything to go home over, the women were unanimous in their praise. Many of them summed up both the work of Mr. Chaplin and Mrs. Chaplin herself by the one word “cute.” From the box office viewpoint I found the picture to be fairly good. Any picture the women like is bound to be a winner, as Mr. Husband will be dragged along to see it, regardless as to whether he likes it or not, providing Mrs. Husband thinks it is worth ninety minutes of her time. —M. Conover, Strand theatre, Red Banks, N. J.

GEORGE CHESEBRO
Scene from "Tell Us, Ouija," the latest Hallroom Boys comedy being distributed by Jack and Harry Cohn

The Lure of Ambition, with Theda Bara. — Bara has had her day. She is yet a clever actress before the camera, but she does not draw the people. — Pfeiffer Bros., Opera House, Kenton, O. — Neighborhood patronage.

Broken Commandments, with Gladys Brockwell. — Here is a star that can act, but never gets the chance. Picture fair. — S. C. Vale, Pictorium theatre, Denison, O. — Small town patronage.

The Cyclone, with Tom Mix. — One of the poorest Mix pictures we have ever played. No attention paid to either detail or story. Mix losing ground. — W. H. Creal, Suburban theatre, Omaha, Nebr. — Neighborhood patronage.

The Cyclone, with Tom Mix. — Fair picture, but not the type for Farnum. Costume plays are not favored here. — Majestic theatre, Springfield, O. — Transient patronage.

The Cyclone, with Tom Mix. — This was better than I expected, and it pleased the majority, although Mix has made better. This will pass. — Guy W. Johnson, Mystic theatre, Mamarlin, N. D.

THE SILVER HORSE, with a special cast. — The best Rex Beach picture ever published on the Goldenwyn program. Bill is strong, as it deserves big exploitation. We have been busy all day acknowledging congratulations on this subject. — Harry M. Palmer, Liberty theatre, Washington, Ind.
The City of Comrades, with Tom Moore.—Full of human interest, and a picture that pleased my audience. Tom Moore is a favorite and draws well.—Warwick Co., Vaudeville theatre, Tacoma, Wash.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Misfit Earl, with Louis Bennon.—A dandy comedy. Star's first picture here, and made a hit.—Peter Krauth, Denison theatre, Denison, Ia.—Neighborhood patronage.

Fighting Odds, with Maxine Elliott.—Fair. Last two reels were best.—Lang & Smith, Cobb Opera House, Coffin, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Perfect Lady, with Madge Kennedy.—This comedy-drama is a good one and will please any audience. Miss Kennedy always gets us a good house. She is so good in her acting that she attracts the admiration of all.—Will Perry, The Grand theatre, Alvin, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

Heartsease, with Tom Moore.—Tom Moore is always a safe bet with us. We consider him the real star of the Goldwyn program. This picture will go good anywhere.—C. T. Metcalfe, Opera House, Greenfield, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Alias Jimmy Valentine, with Bert Lytell.—Excellent picture. Won praise from all who saw it. Played with Bell's Hawaiians, splendid cast. Did record breaking business.—Louis Chaires, Majestic theatre and Springfield, O.—Trans. patronage.

The Willow Tree, with Viola Dana.—My patrons did not care for this. Did not hold up for two days.—W. G. Low, Crystal theatre, Burlington, Wis.—General patronage.

Shore Acres, with Alice Lake.—Good picture, but no drawing card out here where very few people know of stage plays.—T. M. Hervey, Unique theatre, El Paso, Tex.—General patronage.

Shore Acres, with Alice Lake.—Great One of the best pictures we have ever run. Nobody will go wrong on booking this picture. We will tell the story. Capacity business.—J. C. Krapp, Temple theatre, San Bernardino, Cal.

Taxi, with Taylor Holmes.—This is one of his best. Taylor very good, but that class of picture doesn't go in my house.—William Thacher, Royal theatre, Salina, Kans.

Untamed, with Roy Stewart.—Roy always 90 per cent good here. He is liked very much.—H. S. Henderson, Family theatre, Eagle Rock, Va.—Small town patronage.

Hodkinson

The Sagebrusher, with Noah Berry.—This picture is dandy but not as good as Northern production. Our audiences said it was the best Western we have ever played. Would advise extra heavy billing on this picture. It will surely get the crowd.—Harry M. Palmer, Liberty theatre, Washington, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

Thunderbolts of Fate, with Anne Luther.—Good.—William Thacher, Royal theatre, Salina, Kans.

Sex, with Louise Glum.—One of my patrons in passing out said, "I would have paid $2.00 to see that picture."
I asked her why and she said because it appealed to her and it was so richly produced and costumed. It's a winner. You can raise your admission prices on it.—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield theatre, Chicago, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

THE WESTERNERS, with a special cast.—A knockout. Wear your old clothes; you'll ruin your good ones because you can't sit still. Packed full of good stuff. Book it.—Tim Roberts, White Way theatre, Mansfield, O.

But this Fox Sun Beam beauty is taking no chances on being caught. Note the lantern.

Stronger Than Destiny with Nazimova. Not up to the standard of Nazimova pictures. She usually plays to capacity, but not on this one.—W. E. Bowman, Rex theatre, Olympia, Wash.—General patronage.

Please Get Married, with Viola Dana.—Producers should guard against stumpy stories. They don't help us with ministerial unions.—A. Hayman, Lyda theatre, Grand Island, Neb.—Trans. patronage.

The Uplifters, with May Allison.—What's the matter with you fellows? My patrons liked this very much, and they are as hard to please as any.—S. J. Haney, Liberty theatre, Des Moines, Ia.—Small town patronage.

Alias Jimmy Valentine, with Bert Lytell.—Good picture, and did fair business.—Lytell no drawing power here.—T. M. Hervey, Unique theatre, El Paso, Tex.—General patronage.

The Heart of a Child, with Nazimova.—Very good. Many did not like it: as well as The Brat. Business good.—W. E. Bowman, Rex theatre, Olympia, Wash.—General patronage.

Paramount Artcraft

Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde, with John Barrymore.—A wonderful production. Barrymore's work a revelation. Good business.—Samuel Trinz, Covent Garden theatre, Chicago, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Miracle Man, with a special cast.—Lost heavy money on this account of too high admission. Picture is good.—C. A. Henneke, Columbus theatre, Columbus, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.
Don't Change Your Husband, a Cecil B. DeMille production. A wonderful picture. Acting perfect. Did not draw as well as anticipated.—Landis & Crane, Princess theatre, Monticello, la.—Small town patronage.

False Faces, with Henry B. Walthall. — A great picture of its kind, but a little too much war in it for my patrons. War pictures interest me here—J. F. Allred, Lyric theatre, Pryor, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Misleading Widow, with Billie Burke. — Done good work. Pleased nearly everyone.—L. M. Kuhns, Gibson theatre, Gibson, N. M.—Mining camp patronage.

The Miracle of Love, with Lucy Cotton.—Quite remarkable for length and absence of entertaining qualities. Rated as Special, which it is for housecleaning purposes.—Charles Born, Elks theatre, Prescott, Ariz.—General patronage.

Pathé

Other Men's Shoes, an Edgar Lewis production.—An honest to goodness good, clean picture. More than pleased.—T. M. Williams, Kiwanis theatre, Durant, Okla.—General patronage.

Other Men's Shoes, an Edgar Lewis production.—An excellent picture that failed to draw as it should, but all who saw it were very much pleased.—Bert Norton, Kozy theatre, Eureka, 11.—Neighborhood patronage.

The A. B. C. of Love, with Mae Murray.—Fairly good picture. Drew good crowd. New star here—C. A. Hennecke, Columbus theatre, Columbus, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

Oh Boy, with June Caprice and Creighton Hale.—This picture went over with advanced admissions balanced with a Semion comedy.—L. A. Hase, Majestic theatre, Mauston, Wis.—Small town patronage.

A Damsel in Distress, with June Caprice and Creighton Hale.—Light entertainment, and a good made picture.—R. J. Charles, Liberty Circuit theatre, Vadour, Wash.—Neighborhood patronage.

Common Clay, with Fannie Ward.—Excellent ward performance. Second day double first days business.—T. M. Danidgne, Queen theatre, Durant, Okla.—General patronage.

Oh Boy, with June Caprice and Creighton Hale.—This picture is good as expected, but drew a fairly good crowd. Don't go too high on this one.—C. A. Hennecke, Columbus theatre, Columbus, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Thirteenth Chair, with a special cast.—A good mystery play that will go where they like this class. Our people did not understand the plot. Personally I think it good, and should go well in a larger place.—H. F. Thompson, Liberty theatre, Pardeeville, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Fighting Cressy, with Blanche Sweet. Good Western picture. Drew average business.—T. M. Hervey, Unique theatre, El Paso, Tex.—General patronage.

Republic

T'Other Dear Chaster, with Louise Huff.—I consider this above the average program picture. Patrons all pleased. Good business.—S. B. Brock, Electric theatre, Hagerman, N. M.—Neighborhood patronage.

Hit or Miss, with Carlyle Blackwell.—Don't see why people don't like this picture. It went over big here, although not a late release.—M. H. Goodrich, Opera House, Pinner City, 11.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Oakdale Affair, with Evelyn Grec- ley, starring, photography, titles, star, all good. Gave general satisfaction.—I. E. Runyan, Iris theatre, Hutchinson, Kans.

The Love Net, with Madge Evans.—This is another fine picture. Madge is at her best, and the picture gave universal satisfaction.—S. B. Brock, Electric theatre, Hagerman, N. M.—Neighborhood patronage.

When Bearcat Went Dry, with a special cast.—Only an ordinary program picture. Don't raise your prices.—J. T. Flaherty, Oaklawn theatre, Danville, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Robertson-Cole

The Gray Wolf's Ghost, with H. B. Warner. This picture surprised me. My patrons enjoyed it. Second night could not take care of the crowds.—W. E. Connell, Dream theatre, Hoquiam, Wash.—Downtown patronage.

The Beloved Cheater, with Lew Cody.—Good picture, but not the sort that Robertson-Cole claim.—T. M. Her- vey, Unique theatre, El Paso, Tex.—General patronage.

The Open Door, with a special cast—Good picture, holds interest.—Peter Krauth, Denison Opera House, Denison, la.—Neighborhood patronage.

Poor Relations, with ZaSu Pitts. Here's the kind for me. She's certainly pleased for me.—S. I. Haney, Liberty theatre, Des Moines, N. M.—Small town patronage.

The Beloved Cheater, with Lew Cody.—I advertised star as the he vam and my theatre was packed. Cody is well liked.—W. E. Conner, Dream theatre, Hoquiam, Wash.—Downtown patronage.

The Brand of Lopez, with Sessue Hayakawa.—Many favorable comments on this picture.—H. H. Wilson, Crystal theatre, Chicago, Ill.—Neighborhood business.

Select

His Wife's Money, with Eugene O'Brien.—This is indeed a production up to the standard. A big actor with good support and fine plot. Book it and advertise big then see agreeable results.—Will C. Perry, Grand theatre, Alvin, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

Ungentleman and Down, with Olive Thomas.—One of the best. Why don't they make this kind all the time. People just as interested this as they were the previous.—W. T. Hayes, Dreamland theatre, Providence, Ky.—Neighborhood patronage.

YOUTHFUL FOLLY, with Olive Thomas.—Star getting better in each succeeding production. This picture will give a laugh you can hear with your office door closed (if you have one). Good title and the type of pictures that kids and some old folks like.—Charles H. Ryan, Gar- field theatre, 2844 Madison St., Chicago, Ill.
Youthful Folly, with Olive Thomas.—Every Selznick picture gets better and if you don't play them it's all your fault. —H. R. Liggett, National theatre, McRae, Ga.

Sooner or Later, with Owen Moore.—Got by, but not much to it. Could have been better. —Star new here, but drew good. —R. R. Hess, Marion theatre, Edna, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

Experimental Marriage, with Constance Talmadge.—A good picture, but not quite as good as some of her others. —Bert Norton, Kowz theatre, Eureka, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The New Moon, with Norma Talmadge.—This is a war picture, and people do not want war pictures any more. —Opera House, Hatton, N. D.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Great Air Robbery, with Ormer Locklear.—A fine longer, but a trifle disappointing. Something different than ordinary run of pictures. —N. Foster, Elite theatre, Otsego, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

Burnt Wings, with Frank Mayo.—Good picture. Photography is great, but we cannot see where they get the title. —C. E. Miller, Gem theatre, Papcke, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

Leo, with Ora Carew.—One good picture, but not good for children. Ran a Century comedy with it, Weakest Hearts and Wild Lions, which went big. Business off, weather bad.—William Thacher, Royal theatre, Salina, Kans.

His Divorced Wife, with Monroe Salisbury.—Not up to the Salisbury standard. Ran Sennett comedy, Salome vs. Shenandoah, with it to good business.—Meyers & Ford, Star theatre, La Grande, Ore.—Small town patronage.

The Great Air Robbery, with Ormer Locklear.—Did not come up to expectations. Some pretty good thrills in it.—Alvin S. Frank, Jewel theatre, Lafayette, Colo.—Neighborhood patronage.

Vitagraph

The Sporting Duchess, with Alice Joyce.—A good star and a good story put this picture out and pleased the biggest part of my audience. Good business two days.—Fred McCoy, Liberty theatre, Ft. Scott, Kans.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Golden Shower, with Gladys Leslie.—Very good program picture. Vitagraph pictures do not draw for me.—L. A. Tomlin, Liberty theatre, Easton, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Pegeen, with Bessie Love.—Good picture and will take. Bessie Love does her good work in this as Mary Pickford in her little girl acts.—Will C. Perry, Grand theatre, Alvin, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Sporting Duchess, with Alice Joyce.—Excellent picture. Joyce at her best. Pleased at 20 and 40 cents admission.—T. M. Danidge, Queen theatre, Durant, Okla.—General patronage.

A Girl at Bay, with Corinne Griffith.—Played this picture two nights to good business. Went over fine. Our audiences like this star. —Warwick Co., Vaudette theatre, Tacoma, Wash.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Sporting Duchess, with Alice Joyce.—Although we had bad break with weather, business good.—H. M. Aaron, Crystal theatre, Chicago, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Fortune Hunter, with Earle Williams.—Best comedy drama of the year. Capacity business.—T. M. Danidge, Queen theatre, Durant, Okla.—General patronage.

Specials

Custer’s Last Fight, with a special cast.—Very good attraction. Indians put this picture over in fine shape. Book this one. You can't lose. —Walter E. Johnson, Parkway theatre, 111 Michigan Ave., Chicago, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Long Arm of the Manor, with Henry B. Walthall.—Very good. Everybody well pleased. Did good business three days.—Louis Chakeres, Majestic theatre, Springfield, O.—Transient patronage.

Mickey, with Mabel Normand.—Picture fine. Cleaned up on this one. Raise your admission as the picture will hold up.—C. A. Hennecke, Columbus theatre, Columbus, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

Once to Every Man, with Jack Serrill.—100 per cent box office attraction. Will repeat.—W. J. Wood, Grand theatre, East Troy, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Eyes of Youth, with Clara Kimball Young.—First class production. None better.—Frank Allen, Rose theatre, Byron, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Shepherd of the Hills, with a special cast.—I prefer a plain program picture to this. They say it gets the money. It sure did not for us.—A. H. Schurr, Grand theatre, St. Marys, O.—Transient patronage.

United Artists

Down on the Farm, a Mack Sennett production.—Shown just two weeks after its publication date and is absolutely the best five reel comedy that has ever been made. The dog is almost human and the comedy is clean and entertaining. Got advanced prices.—R. Ross Riley, Wigwam theatre, Oberlin, Kans.

Pollyanna, with Mary Pickford.—A good picture, and gave good satisfaction. Big business to raised prices.—R. R. Hess, Marion theatre, Edna, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

Pollyanna, with Mary Pickford.—Beautiful story well done. It will get you heart interest. It is clean.—L. W. Charles, Grand theatre, Chetek, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Pollyanna, with Mary Pickford.—Very good. Best Pickford we ever ran. Raise your admission on this one, and clean up. It pleased at C. A. Hennecke, Columbus, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

When the Clouds Roll By, with Douglas Fairbanks.—Did not please one half as well as His Majesty, The American. Poor business but on account of very bad weather.—S. J. Haney, Liberty theatre, Moines, N. M.—Small town patronage.

When the Clouds Roll By, with Douglas Fairbanks.—Good picture made good business here. —J. K. Nation, Dixie theatre, Wallis, Tex.—Small town patronage.

The Great Air Robbery, with Ormer Locklear.—Very good for a change. People enjoy the thrills in this picture. Book it. It will get the money.—R. W. Ralston, Colonial theatre, Tracy, Minn.—General patronage.

As a gardener Shirley Mason would make a good milliner. Even the dog laughs at her efforts in "Love’s Harvest" her latest Fox picture.

Remarks ....................................................

The Moon Riders (Universal) with a special cast—Here is a cracking good Western serial, brother exhibitor. It is full of punch from the very start, and it is somewhat different from the usual. If your audiences are strong on Western stuff get this before your competitor beats you to it. —Harry M. Palmer, Liberty theatre, Washington, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Invisible Hand (Vitagraph) with Antonio Moreno.—Each episode on the increase in business. A serial of fast action. —T. M. Handicke, Queen theatre, Durant, Okla.—General patronage.

Lightning Bryce (Arrow), with Jack Hoxie and Ann Little.—This is a dandy business good, but dropped on episode Six. For all it cannot hold up. Too much of the same stuff. Can't recommend it. —R. H. Hess, Marion theatre, Edna, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Lost City (Warner Bros.) with Juanita Hansen.—Good.—H. E. Wessels, Howard theatre, Chicago, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Inexlicable Hand (Vitagraph), with Antonio Moreno.—Each episode on the increase in business. —T. M. Handicke, Queen theatre, Durant, Okla.—General patronage.

Bound and Gagged (Pathé) with George B. Seitz. —We failed on this serial. It does not contain enough ex-citement for my fans. Everything is obvious in it, and comedy in a serial does not seem to go well here. —A. N. Mills, Emancipation theatre, Eminence, Ky.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Lost City (Warner Bros.) with Juanita Hansen.—Biggest money maker from my point as an exhibitor ever offered. A thriller. —H. M. Aaron, Crystal theatre, Chicago, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Trained by Three (Pathé), with Stuart Holmes. —A poor attempt to get out of the beaten track of other serials, if one may judge by first two chapters. Plot rather far-fetched, what there is of it. Don't promise too much on this serial. —Harry M. Palmer, Liberty theatre, Washington, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

Bound and Gagged (Pathé), with a special cast. —Not enough pep, just ordinary. —Grand theatre, Chetek, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Bound and Gagged (Pathé), with a special cast. —A dandy serial. Lots of comedy. If you get them out for the first chapter you will have them for ten weeks. —Crane & Landis, Crane theatre, Monticello, Ia.—Small town patronage.

The Invisible Hand (Vitagraph) with Antonio Moreno.—One of the best drawing serials we have ever had.—Wm. Call, Kenmore theatre, Moroni, Utah.—Small town patronage.

The Lost City (Warner), with Juanita Hansen.—Casino theatre first run house. First serial in four years. Went over with a bang. Exhibitors will make no mistake in booking this one.—Ray M. Harding, Casino theatre, Des Moines, Iowa.

The Silent Avenger (Vitagraph), with William Duncan.—Looks like it will be a winner. Duncan goes strong with our audiences. Plot well worked up in first episode. Action gets intense towards end of first chapter. —Harry M. Palmer, Liberty theatre, Washington, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

Hand to Mouth (Pathé), with Harold Lloyd.—Good comedy. Best I ever played. You cannot go wrong on this one. —C. A. Hester, Liberty theatre, Columbus, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

Oh Doctor (Paramount), with Roscoe Arbuckle.—Fatty has made better comedies. He had better stick to slapstick. —Alvin S. Frank, Jewel theatre, Lafayette, Colo.—Neighborhood patronage.

Captian Kidd's Kids (Pathé), with Harold Lloyd.—They don't know Lloyd. Expect to do Chaplin business on the remaining two serials. —E. L. Dennen, Princess theatre, Mendota, III.—Small town patronage.

Hand to Mouth (Pathé), with Harold Lloyd. —The Lloyd comedies are getting better. Harold does quite a number of good stunts in this. If you play Lloyd with a good feature you can easily get increased admissions. Crowd and patrons will be satisfied. —Harry M. Palmer, Liberty theatre, Washington, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

Serials

Smashing Barriers, (Vitagraph) with William Duncan. —Simply went wild over this serial. Each Vitagraph serial is getting better. Be sure and book them.—C. O. Edland, Oldham, Okla.—Oldham, Manchester, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

Smashing Barriers (Vitagraph), with William Duncan. —Went good up to about ninth episode, then fell off to beat the hand. He was much alike to other serials. Have run three of them. I am off of them. —William Thacher, Royal theatre, Salina, Kan.

Hand to Mouth (Pathé), with Harold Lloyd.—Good comedy. Best I ever played. You cannot go wrong on this one.—C. A. Hester, Liberty theatre, Columbus, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

Oh Doctor (Paramount), with Roscoe Arbuckle.—Fatty has made better comedies. He had better stick to slapstick. —Alvin S. Frank, Jewel theatre, Lafayette, Colo.—Neighborhood patronage.

Captian Kidd's Kids (Pathé), with Harold Lloyd.—They don't know Lloyd. Expect to do Chaplin business on the remaining two serials. —E. L. Dennen, Princess theatre, Mendota, III.—Small town patronage.

Hand to Mouth (Pathé), with Harold Lloyd. —The Lloyd comedies are getting better. Harold does quite a number of good stunts in this. If you play Lloyd with a good feature you can easily get increased admissions. Crowd and patrons will be satisfied. —Harry M. Palmer, Liberty theatre, Washington, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

With the Detroit Filmmen

By Harry E. Nichols

Memories of the old sawdust and tan-bark days were vividly brought to the writer's mind while talking to our old friend, Clyde W. Wixom, of circus fame. Old timers will remember the Wixom Brothers' trained animal show that played the one-day stands. Clyde is now manager of the Adams theatre, one of the new downtown Kunsky Theatres Enterprises' houses and the exploitation stunts that Manager Wixom is putting over are the talk of the city.

M. HABER has resigned as manager of Triangle exchange and will take up the duties of branch manager of the local Educational Film Corporation exchange.

VICTOR KREMER was a recent visitor in Detroit and spilled the news that Shorty Hamilton has advised his signature to a three year contract to make two-reel pictures for Mr. Kremer at San Diego, Cal.

R. B. QUINE, formerly manager of the Realart Exchange at San Francisco, pines for the Golden Gate city. R. B. stated the bunch in Detroit were the best fellows in the world to work with but the climate was N. G., as he hasn't been without an ache or a pain since he left sunny California and the local doctors have put an awful dent in his bankroll.

W. B. SPERRY, who controls the destiny of the Independent Master Films Corporation Exchange, states that the bookings on the Chaplin short subjects are cleaning up in his territory.

There is plenty of activity around the United Theatre Equipment Company's office these days. E. H. FORBES reports the signing of complete equipment contracts for the Regent at Flint, Mich., a Butterfield Circuit house, and the Bijou at Jackson, Mich. Also the Alma Theatres Company of Alma, Mich., a new house opened last Saturday, has a writing capacity of one thousand, which was entirely equipped by this supply company.

H. N. NELSON, president of the Nelson Productions, Inc., states that fifty theatres in Michigan are using their company's product. Mr. Nelson did not deny the rumor that he contemplates opening a studio in Los Angeles in the near future.

C. P. SHEFFER, district manager of the Fox branches in this territory, stopped over at the local branch for a few days before returning to his home in Buffalo. C. P. just returned from a trip to Dallas, Texas.

One of Michigan's leading exhibitors was seen in the office of Bob Lucas this week, his face wreathed in smiles, telling Bob the glad news that "Down on the Farm" is breaking records at the Gladmer theatre at Lansing. Yes, it was C. E. Cady himself and he told us about the nine-piece "rube" band that played in front of the theatre at every performance.

J. C. FISHERMAN, manager of the local Standard Film Service Booth, reports that "The Lost City" will have its premier showing in the Bijou at Jackson and is the first serial that ever played in this house. Additional bookings are the Garden, Battle Creek, and the Strand at Toledo for a full week's run. Contracts are starting to sour in for this serial from the following big five: R. J. ROWEN, WILIAM BAKER, WILLIAM FLEMION, E. C. CHAPMAN and H. VAN BUISKE.

E. W. HENNESSY and E. W. MOROS have purchased the rights for the six-part feature, "Child For Sale," for Michigan, to be released June 1. Also the Norma Talma, reissue "Captive Mary Carstairs.

THOMAS E. MAXWELL, manager of the Michigan Motion Picture Supply Company, has made the following theatre installations: Warren and Cohen Theatre Company have placed new Simplex machines in the Rex Theatre and Zemon and Wetzmans placed new Simplex machines in the Lynwood and Salle Theatres.

Jerome Remick Music Publishers of Detroit, Mich., have joined the Society of American Authors and Composers. The writer officially confirmed this by making a special trip to New York City.

Rosalie Ashton Doing Continuity For Spitz

Rosalie Ashton, continuity writer and playwright, is writing a special production for E. W. Spitz, which will be sold on the state right market after completion. She also is gathering material for several other subjects to be produced by Mr. Spitz at his studios in New York.

Miss Ashton has prepared scripts for several of the leading film producers, namely, American, Lasky, Goldwyn and Vitagraph.

"The Evil Eye" To Be Exploited With Song

A new song, "The Evil Eye," has been published for Hallmark Pictures Corporation, to be used in exploiting the Benny Leonard serial bearing the same title. The composition is becoming popular throughout the country, according to all indications.

Mix and the "Gov."

Hon. Simon Hamburger, governor of Utah, joins Tom Mix, the Fatty, star, a visit at the Hollywood studios.

Elks Give Luncheon To Eric Von Stroheim

Eric Von Stroheim, the Universal director-star, who came to Chicago as Carl Laemmle's personal representative to pass upon the young ladies who have entered the Elks beauty contest, and who are to be given an opportunity to appear in Universal films, was tendered a luncheon at the Elks Club May 23.

At the luncheon the announcement was made of Mr. Von Stroheim's engagement to Miss Valerie Germanprez, who appeared opposite him in "Blind Husbands." The wedding day has been fixed for June 14. Following the luncheon William L. Synek, exalted ruler of Chicago Elks, presented Miss Germanprez with a bouquet of American Beauty roses and the happy couple were congratulated by Chief of Police J. J. Gar- cia, Ashton Stevens, dramatic critic of the Herald and Examiner, Harry M. Berman, general manager of Universal exchanges and the hundred luncheon guests.

Miss Germanprez is an American girl, born in Detroit of French parents. She has appeared in several Universal films and she met Mr. Von Stroheim about eight months ago in Universal City.

I. Berstein Indorses The Ever-Ready Reel

I. Berstein, general manager at Universal City, has expressed the opinion that the Ever-Ready Reel, which eliminates the8 revolving of films, and which is manufactured by the Every-Ready Reel Company of Denver, "is one of the best labor saving and film saving things of the day."

"Let me endorse that wonderful Ever-Ready Reel that I saw in Chicago," says Mr. Berstein, "I have no doubt in my mind that when the reel is put on the market, it will save thousands of dollars to the industry.

CLAIRE KIMBALL Young appeared as a witness in court in the suit of Charles E. Whittaker, a scenario writer, against Harry L. Garson, a producer. He alleged that Garson read his scripts, returned them and then used his ideas. He won $300 by decision of the court. Miss Young testified for Garson.

Rex Ingram, who directed "Shore Acres" has been delayed with the usual offers made to a director at the completion of a successful picture. He will remain, however, at Metro, where big things are in store for him.

Miss MAURIE BANKS, widely heralded in Los Angeles as an "oil queen" has filed suit against BANNEY SHERRY for $5500 automobile which she, alleges, she loaned to the player and which he has not returned.

SUSIE HAYAKAWA recently announced that he will build a studio to cost $300,000, added that he has purchased three stories for $125,000 and then flipped a limited for the other Broadway before the film colony could find out what it's all about.

Allan Sears, widely known leading man, is said to be contemplating his own producing. He will use a north-country locale for his first independent picture.

The American Society of Cinematographers, an organization of "Ace" cameramen, has supplied two studios with executives in the last week. Roy H. KLAPPKE, one of the number, has been made photographic and laboratory chief at Metro while L. Lyman BRINGERT has been made camerman-inchief for Albert A. Kaufman Productions. Both are prominent in the work of the American Society of Cinematographers, of which Philip Rosen, the Universal director, is president.

Alexander Pantages, the vaudeville magnate, has announced that he will produce pictures for his own circuit, which will put him well up toward the front as a producer with a good outlet.

Dwight Cleveland, Jesse D. Hampton scenario chief, is back at his desk after five weeks in New York. Changing from overflow to white flannels Mr. Cleveland will circulate around the lot and watch the progress made on the portfolio of stories which he purchased for Robert Thornby and Henry King specials.

Albert Cappelain has been engaged to direct Marion Davies in "The Inside of the Cup," to be filmed from Winston Churchill's novel.

The first release of the newly formed Ida May Park Productions will be "The Red Potage" from the famous English novel of that name.

Abraham Lehre, vice president of Goldwyn, is on his way to New York. He will spend most of his time in the home office. At the end of two weeks he will return to the west coast studios.

Monroe Salisbury is packing his camping kit for a location trip to the north country where the Monroe Salisbury Players will film the most important scenes of "The Barbarian." Monroe Salisbury is said to have a particularly Salishan role in his first independently produced screen story.

Rex Ingram is being complimented for his masterful handling of "Shore Acres" which is playing to capacity at the California theatre. The film version of the old stage classic is said to adhere closely to the original presentation and is regarded as one of Metro's biggest box-office bets.

Hope Loring, executive in charge of serials and western dramas at Universal City, has received the following telegram from Eddy Polo, who is in New York: "The Vanishing Daggar" heralded as greatest exploit ever handled by a woman. Am getting preliminary stuff for new circus serial and want you to do the continuity."

Miss Loring accompanied the Polo company to Europe where most of the episodes of "The Vanishing Daggar" were filmed. Upon her return to Universal City she was placed in command of the entire serial, western drama and short reel feature departments.

Ten weeks to prepare a story and ten weeks to film it. That is the new schedule upon which Allen Holubar is working on his first independently produced feature. Dorothy Phillips, who left Universal with the famous director, is to be starred under his direction in the forthcoming Holubar productions. Olga Linnek Scholl, who collaborated with Holubar on Miss Phillips previous scripts, is working with him in the preparation of the new story.

Harlan Tucker has been engaged by Thomas H. Ince for an important role in Enid Bennett's forthcoming picture "I Wonder If—" Mr. Tucker has only recently returned from the Orient where he played a leading role in Henry McRae's company.

Johnny Jones, star of the "Edgar" stories, the new Booth Tarkington series written for the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, although only twelve years of age, has had no little experience both in pictures and legitimate. Born in Beloit, Wis., Johnny was taken to New York where he made his stage debut when he was only six months old with Sheridan Keene. He played "Little Johnny" in "The Barrier" and appeared in child parts in "Salomy Jane" and "The Shepherd of the Hills." He began his picture work at the age of eight with Lubin in Philadelphia, having appeared in "Walls of Jericho," "Shepherd of the Hills" and in many Constance Talmadge pictures. Johnny was selected from hundreds of boy applicants for the part of "Edgar."

Bert Lytell, the latest of the screen luminaries to "take his pen in hand," Lytell is writing a play in which he will star on Broadway next season. It was recently announced that he would return to the speaking stage for a time, to be presented by Maxwell Karger, director-general of Metro.

Philip Rosen, whose first picture, "The Road to Divorce" established him as one of the most brilliant among the young directors, has been selected by Universal to direct Edith Roberts in her forthcoming picture, "Out of the Clear Sky." Before he became a director Rosen was a cameraman and is now president of the exclusive American Society of Cinematographers.

Alice Lake's new Screen Classics picture will be called "The Misfit Wife." The picture is an adaptation by A. P. Younger and Lois Zellner of Julie Herne's play, "The Outsider." Edwin Mortimer is directing.

AMERICANIZATION WEEK MAY 29
William A. Brady Asks Industry to Cooperate With Committee Headed by Franklin K. Lane In Movement to Reaffirm Principles of America

FRANKLIN K. LANE, chairman of the Americanization committee, has designated the week of May 29 to June 5 as Americanization Week, which will be devoted to the reaffirmation of the principles upon which the government of the United States was founded.

Supplementing Mr. Lane's announcement is a request from William A. Brady, president of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, asking the industry as a whole to cooperate with the committee in the observance of the week.

Book Americanization Pictures
The National Association will make special effort to have theatres throughout the country book pictures dealing with Americanization during the week. Cooperation will be forthcoming from every branch of the industry, with publicity, advertising and exploitation departments already busy.

Mr. Lane has compiled a list of epi- grammatic utterances of famous Americans, and he has asked that these be thrown on the screen at every performance, following this phrase:

This is AMERICANIZATION WEEK
Keep your flags flying until June 5

The sayings of American personages, from which slides and trailers may be made, follow:

When every man feels that he is a participator in the government of affairs he will let the heart be torn out of his body sooner than his power be wrested from him.—Thomas Jefferson.

The true prosperity and greatness of a nation is to be found in the elevation and education of its laborers.—Ulysses S. Grant.

The Constitution of the United States is the most wonderful work ever struck off at a given time by the brain and purpose of man.—Gladstone.

Let us have faith that right makes might; and in that faith, to the end, let us do our duty as we understand it.—Abraham Lincoln.

We here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain—that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of Freedom—and that Government of the People, by the People and for the People shall not perish from the earth.—Lincoln.

Laws made by common consent must not be trampled upon by individuals.—Jef ferson.

While the laws shall be obeyed, all will be safe.—Jefferson.

The will of the people is the only legitimate foundation of any government.—Jefferson.

Let it be remembered that the Constitution of the United States is not unalterable.—Daniel Webster.

The people have wisely provided in the Constitution itself a proper, suitable mode and tribunal for settling questions of Constitutional law.—Webster.

The principle of free government adheres in American soil. It is embedded in it—immovable as its mountains.—Webster.

Education is the true corrective of abuses of power.—Thomas Jefferson.

If a nation expects to be ignorant and free, in a state of civilization, it expects what never was and never will be. No other sure foundation can be devised for the preservation of freedom and happiness than education.—Jefferson.

Above all things, I hope the education of the common people will be attended to; convinced of their good sense, we may rely with the most security for the preservation of a due degree of liberty.—Thomas Jefferson.

In concluding, Mr. Lane said: "Here is an opportunity to show to congress that the motion picture industry is really cooperating in the spirit of the joint resolution of both houses here up for: "If it is resolved, That it is the sense of the joint committee on education of the senate and house that the motion picture industry of the United States be requested to do all that is within its power to uphold and strengthen the spirit of Americanism within our people." "Please tell your production department to do it."

Canadian Distributors Convene At Toronto Executives Are Elected At First Annual Meeting Of Organization
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)
TORONTO, CANADA, May 23.—The first annual meeting of the Canadian Moving Picture Distributors Association, held in the St. Charles Hotel, Toronto which took the form of a banquet, was attended by representatives of the following companies: Monarch Film Co. Ltd., Famous Players Film Service, Ltd., Famous-Excelsior Film Service, Ltd., Fox Film Corporation, Ltd., Vitagraph, Inc. Select Pictures Corporation, Ltd., Regal Films, Ltd., Exhibitors Distributing Corporation, Ltd., Canadian Universal Film Co., Ltd. Specialty Film Import, Ltd., Davis Amusement Enterprises, Canadian Exhibitors Exchange.

Clair Hague, general manager, Canadian Universal Film Company, was re-elected president and J. McCabe, general manager of Fox Film Corporation for Canada, was elected vice president; J. O'Laughlin, general manager Pathé for Canada, was elected secretary-treasurer, while Mr. Phil Kaufman and L. Rosenfeld were elected directors.

A report of the activities of the past year was read and made a creditable showing for the organization. Matters of concern affecting the motion picture industry in Canada were handled successfully, it was shown, and steps were taken during the year to further place the industry in the position to which it is entitled.

The association is affiliated with the Toronto Board of Trade and it is understood that within the near future there is to be a department devoted exclusively to motion picture enterprises.
National Film Starts Production Of “Son of Tarzan” for Howells

Weeks Spent in Preparing for Serial Adaptation Of the Fourth of Edgar Rice Burroughs Widely Read Stories

After weeks of preparation, actual production work has begun on “The Son of Tarzan.” National Film Corporation of America is making a serial adaptation of this Edgar Rice Burroughs novel for David P. Howells.

Harry M. Rubey, president of National, is personally supervising production, with Harry Revier, director of the pictures, handling the megaphone. The author will be on the lot to assist.

Roy Somervelle was engaged to write the script. With Mr. Burroughs he worked for months on the scenario until it was approved finally by the author.

Fourth of Series

“The Son of Tarzan” is the fourth of the series of celebrated “Tarzan” stories. “Tarzan of the Ape” and “The Romance of Tarzan,” both from the studios of National Film Corporation, proved successful both as dramatic productions and as box office winners.

The third film, “Return of Tarzan,” has been completed and is now being published with a big publicity campaign. The policy of making the “Tarzan” stories into features was dropped in this instance, because “The Son of Tarzan” seemed to offer big possibilities as a serial.

The story deals with the experiences of the youthful son of “Tarzan of the Apes,” who runs away from London, hired by his stepfather, to live in the jungle. He encounters, early in his career, a white girl who has been held captive by a band of Arabs. Piloted by a friendly ape, they go through a succession of adventures which is thrilling.

Arranges for Prologue

To provide for a clear conception of the picture by the motion picture audience, which has not seen the first of the “Tarzan” series, Director Revier has arranged for a pictorial prologue which will tell the story of “Tarzan” and his romance. In order that this idea might be carried out, it was necessary to obtain two sets of players, one cast to enact the roles of the previous stories and one to play the story of “The Son of Tarzan.”

There has been assembled at the National studios a large and varied collection of jungle animals. Studio zoos and private menageries of the Pacific coast have been depleted of their apes, monkeys, lions, tigers, elephants and other jungle beasts to provide atmosphere and action for the picture, it is said.

Director Revier has arranged for every elephant west of the Rocky Mountains for one of his scenes, it is declared, and has planned a spectacular jungle scene for picturization during the visit to Los Angeles of a large circus in order that he might utilize the circus menageries.

Jungle Scenes

The sea scenes will rival the jungle scenes for action, it is said. A complete fleet of craft, steam and sailing vessels, has been assembled near Los Angeles for the ocean and deck scenes. One ship has been rebuilt to conform to Mediterranean sea lines, and two vessels have been bought that they may be utilized during the filming of one of the big scenes.

Great preparations are being made for filming the night scenes. Mr. Rubey has hired the best technical talent available, it is announced, to make this feature of the serial realistic and thrilling. Some of the night scenes have been started, principally jungle scenes, but the biggest of the night scenes, the burning of the ship at sea, will not be undertaken for some weeks.

K. C. Searle is playing the title role. Other members of the cast include P. Dempsey Tabler, who will impersonate Tarzan; DeSacia Saville, Carla Schram, May Gracita and Kathleen May.

Production of “The Son of Tarzan” will proceed rapidly now that it has started. The prologue and the first episode have been completed and it is expected that the first few episodes will be ready for screening within the next month. It is planned to have the picture completed and ready for publication before fall.

“It is the intention to make “The Son of Tarzan” into a serial of fifteen episodes of two reels each,” said Mr. Howells, “but it will be longer than that if more length is necessary to tell the story, and it will be less than 30,000 feet if the story can be well told in less footage.”

“Illiterate Digest” Is Booked By N. Y. Strand

Will Rogers’ “Illiterate Digest,” which is being produced by Marion H. Kohn Productions, has been booked by the Strand theatre in New York, according to Joe Brandt, eastern representative of the company. This is the first showing of the novelty in the metropolis.

Who will appear in the title role of “The Son of Tarzan” now being produced by National Film Corporation for distribution by David P. Howells.

The sale of most of the state right territory for the “Illiterate Digest” was recently announced. It was misstated that the New York and Northern New Jersey territory had been sold to the Alexander Film Exchanges. It is understood that the rights for this territory have been allotted to the New York Independent Master Films Company, who will distribute it in this area.
Fielding Completes "Woman's Man"
For Arrow Company to State Right

Romaine Fielding has completed a five-reel production, "Woman's Man." This picture will be distributed by Arrow Film Corporation on the state right market. "Woman's Man" is the first picture that Fielding has made for some time and it is a picture that it is said will go over in a big way on the independent market.

Fielding is supported by Velvet Beban and a cast of players including William Tooker, Julia Hurley, Emile LaCross, Violet Malone, Jack Dillon and others.

Punch in Climax

The story opens up in the West and the action moves swiftly into New York City. It is said that the story is intensely interesting, with a punch that culminates in a head-on collision between two fast-moving trains.

It is seldom that the independent state rights exchanges have an opportunity to obtain a big special production without it first having been peddled to the large distributing organizations.

Fielding announces that "Woman's Man" was made specially for the independent exchanges and that he had no other thought than to distribute this special through Arrow Film Corporation.

Exploitation Possibilities

"I believe that in 'Woman's Man,'" states Fielding, "the independent exchanges will find a picture that they can exploit in a big way and book into the best houses in their respective territories. I made this picture for this purpose. I have tried to give the independent exchanges a picture that they could put over in a big way and yet one that will not cost them a pile of money. I intend to make several more productions for the independent exchanges."

Romaine Fielding, it will be recalled, at one time was one of the popular screen stars before the public. He has won several popularity contests and is yet known to thousands of fans. A number of years ago Mr. Fielding was leading man in the Lubin Company, and later became director for Lubin. He has made over 200 photoplays in which he has appeared as the star.

Two Sign Companies
Purchased By Doyle
Advertising Campaign To Be Directed From Concern's Chicago Offices

With the purchase of Enterprise Sign Company, Inc. and Charles C. Pyle Company, J. J. Doyle of Chicago has acquired patent rights to the theatre signs manufactured by both companies and is preparing for a vigorous campaign to acquaint exhibitors throughout the country with the merit of his products.

Mr. Doyle has opened headquarters in the Tacoma Building, 5 North LaSalle street, Chicago, and from there will direct his campaign.

The signs are decorative and effective, calling attention to the pictures being shown in large letters, which are easily read. The frames are made for two or three lines of wording. The letters are of baked porcelain mounted on pressed steel. With ordinary care, it is declared, they can be used for ten years.

The signs are changeable.

Prints of "Suds" Being Made for Distribution

"Suds," Mary Pickford's latest United Artists' production, is complete and in the hands of the printer, it is announced. This production is credited by all who have seen it as being the best picture that Miss Pickford has ever done. It is said to be unique in story and characterizations.

Hiram Abram of United Artists announces that this production will be published on June 27.

"Oh Girls" Is First
"Buddy" Post Comedy

The first of the "Buddy" Post Capitol Comedies being produced by National Film Corporation, to be distributed by Goldwyn, has been completed at the Coast studios of the National Corporation. Mark Goldsine, who is directing the giant comedian, has selected "Oh Girls" as the title for the first release. This title has been accepted by the officials of the company.

A fast-moving story is promised in "Oh Girls" that introduces Helen Howard as the principal player in support of "Buddy." Miss Howard has already achieved something of a screen reputation and was chosen as the ideal partner for "Buddy." Other members of the organization surrounding the star were selected with a view to assembling a well-balanced company who will present humorous stories of a refined type.

"A Broadway Cowboy" to Be Distributed by Pathé

"A Broadway Cowboy," featuring William Desmond, has been taken over for distribution by Pathé Exchange, Inc. In Desmond's long career he never has had a more refreshing, invigorating play, it is said.

The production was made by Jesse D. Hampton from the popular story, "The Man From Make Believe," written by Byron Morgan. Desmond's leading woman is Betty Francisco. Thomas Delmar, J. P. Lockney, Paddy McGuire, Clark Comstock and Evelyn Selbie are others who help in furnishing the amusement.

FRANK ZAMBRENO, Pres.
207 SOUTH WABASH AVE.

CHICAGO, ILL.
C. W. Hall, owner of the Grand Opera House, Centralia, Ill., spent a few hours in Chicago May 21. Sort of comparing the Loop exchanges with the bee-hives of St. Louis. "Yes," C. W., says, "just at the present time St. Louis has it all over Chi for heat!"

FRANK T. PAUL has been slated to open a new cinema palace at Carlinville, Ill., to be known as "The Marble." Gosh, Frank, that's a pretty hard title to deal a palace that again' to run rollicksome comedies now and then, especially those tender offerings all peppered up with them there mermaids that hail from sunny California.

One of our noted contribs files the following: Abe WALLERSTEIN of Wallerstein Bros., Michigan City, Ind., was a city visitor May 12. Yep, Abe is one hundred per cent exhibitor. Natives about here always report thusly when the man reported is so well known. About the only thing Abe hasn't been able to get control of out in Michigan City, are the waves from Lake Michigan and the gusts of wind that cause 'em.

J. H. CLAUGHTER, who sold his Dreamland theatre, Galena, Ill., about three years ago was a visitor in our midst the other day. In fact every trip he makes to Chicago means a wee chat with the boys in the New York Film business, just for old time's sake. Atta boy. We'll be serving thee films again soon. Once in, always in.

Harry WISS of Superior Screen Service was seen the other day doing a flock of dashes and speed spurs to make the flyer Indianapolis bound. Yes he caught the choo-choo okay, but listen Harry, the motor races do not come off until May 30. Oh, that's it. More exhibs begging you to permit them to sign the dotted line.

J. R. KRATZ, Monticello, Ill., announces that W. C. MARTIN has been appointed manager of the new Princess theatre and under present arrangements the will likely be ready to open about June 1.

Hello Al! How's the boy? Great—just this minute stepped off the Broadway limited. How about taking lunch with me, Al? Love to old top, but can't spare the time. Got to get the Century back to New York. No wonder Al ROSENTHAL came from the firm of Rosenthal & Saperstein but whilst its great to travel and see the world.

MAURICUS LESS, one of the well known film notables of Indiana, left Terre Haute May 13 for a brief visit to Chicago. All dolled up in the very latest tailored creation known as the "hipless model." It is rather a conservative style when some members how high "gas" is being peddled and exhibisher four at a gathering one pint means zero.

STEVE BENIS has taken over the management of the G. V. House, Lincoln, Ill. With the popular Steve now in charge, Lincoln is sure due for some real reel entertainment.

Among the well known Illinois exhibitors caught visiting the various exchanges the past week were: WALTER G. SPOOR, Academy theatre, Waukegan; B. A. WORMOLD, Marquette theatre, Milwaukee; Leon MURRAY, Majestic theatre, Spring Valley, and Harry GRAMP, West theatre, Galesburg.

We understand another big realty deal has been closed this week. The famous Andy Gump of Filmland is about to erect an imposing castle among the highbrows of the fashionable Rogers Park district at 1160 North Shore Avenue. When completed its rumored it will knock those Louis IV heels of Min's pedals.

The Celebrated quartet, consisting of "Dawning Dave" DUBIN, Simon CIGARBO GREYER, VINCENTE DE LORENZO and I. JOHN NOT MIN's, are busy rehearsing that well known Hibernian yodel, "Eilt Eilt." Tickets on sale at Spaldings. Line forms at the right.

With those tropical zepphins now playing havoc about the Windy City, local film circles were given the summer shock supreme upon gazng at that marvelous Panama headgear that Joe FRIEDMAN, president of Celebrated Players Film Corp. has been donning the past few days. Just like him. Always ahead of the procession.

We overheard some interesting chatter the other day with regard to Tom MITCHELL of the local hallmark office. No, can't do it, we'd rather have the dean of 'em all speak for himself. At that Tom with his vast following of exhibitors in these parts should have a walk away with the proposition.

WILLIAM ORR, who sold his interests in the Argosy Film exchange several months ago is back in the grand old business again, having opened an exchange at 535 South Dearborn Street, to be known as the Theatre Film & Supply Company. Mr. Orr will specialize on features, besides carrying a large assortment of four, three and two reel subjects and single reel comedies, and a full line of projecting machines and supplies. Incidentally, Bill during his prolonged absence from film circles must have been soaking around that of fountain of youth that Ponce de Leon brought us with back in the good days of America's colonial times. The mirror has him registered about twenty years younger.

That trip that the veteran and bon vivant, AL NORMAL gave Chicago a few weeks ago must have got under Al's cuticle for we hear he is now covering the Illinois territory for the local Comedyart exchange. With his following in these parts, Illinois should prove one hundred per cent Comedyart adherents.

That mustachio contest raging about the local office of Pathé is beginning to show faint efforts of realization. We refer to pals FRANK and ARCHIE SPENCER, with Archie having the edge with a beard of several silken shreds of a slightly blonde hue to his credit.

Everyone in the Consumers building had important business to transact on the fifteenth floor, Saturday afternoon, when Harry Rice who whispers that the judges in the Elks-Universal beauty contest would pass upon fifty of the contestants. And say, were they there? A couple dozen of them were assembled in the projection room to await their turn to go before the judges and it looked like recess time at a Ziegfeld Follies show, Chief of Police Garrity, who is one of the judges, says he's glad his hair is sparse and short for it looks like a hard summer for the judges.

Telegraph Instrument Overcomes Chicago Fire Ordinance Problem

MAX LEVEY, Chicago manager for Robertson-Cole, knows all about "key cities" and keys. He is an old timer with a telegraph instrument and whenever an exhibitor wants any information as to booking dates, etc., he gets him the dope pronto from his booker, "Red" Williams, another dot, and dash expert. Max thought there was much too much time lost with a loop.

Oswald, the trained gold fish which makes its home in a "Hinky Dink" schooner on Mr. Levy's desk, is also learning the Morse code, and signals the boss by flapping his tail against the side of the glass. Whenever he gets a wireless message that N. Y. officials or promising exhibitors are about to pay the Chicago branch a visit.

$100 Bonuses Are to Be Given in Universal Drive

Another melon is beginning to ripen in Universal’s garden. It is guaranteed to be worth its weight in gold, with every slice valued at $100.

The leading salesmen in each of the exchanges participating in the spring sales contest will help in dewetting this melon, as each will be given slices—$100—as a bonus. The melon before being cut will be worth $3,000.

The story of the melon has just been told by H. M. Berman, general manager of exchanges. This industry, he says, has a tendency to reward new features of the Universal’s $7,000 sales contest. The $7,000 will be distributed among the Universal offices making the best sales records during the spring and early summer. The new offer raises the total to be distributed to $10,000.

The Criterion Opportunity To Do It
Just Like They Do In Pictures

Miss Adelaide Miller, cashier of the Criterion theatre, 1220 Sedgwick street, Chicago, has watched the composed heroes of pictures go about their business of saving lives unperturbed.

At a matinee recently she grasped the opportunity to put to actual practice one of the thrilling scenes that probably has recalled to her mind when heavy smoke began pouring from the street into the lobby and on into the auditorium.

Fearing that the smoke from an adjacent building which was burning might cause a panic in the theatre, she walked coolly to the front of the house after having had the ushers open the exits and announced that there was a fire nearby and that those in the audience who felt alarmed might leave quietly through the open doors.

Although a majority of those present were women, she marshaled them safely to the street while the pianist played a spirited march.

X No. 24
Everybody knows that "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" is the best picture Mary Pickford ever made.

But there weren't so many theatres or so many - theatre-goers when it was released.

Those who saw it then, want to see it again. Those who never saw it, want to see it now.

New prints and a complete new line of accessories ready...

ANNOUNCING REALART'S NEWEST STAR

BEBE DANIELS

IN GRACE LOVELL BRYAN'S AMAZING STORY

"YOU NEVER CAN TELL!"

Particulars within)
Here's Our Prediction:

BEBE DANIELS

will place her past successes in the “also ran” class as a star in
"YOU NEVER CAN TELL"

This is the first photoplay she ever has appeared in, which was chosen with her sparkling, vivacious and colorful type of acting only in mind.

Miss Daniels attained success in:
"MALE and FEMALE"
"EVERYWOMAN"
"THE DANCIN' FOOT"
"WHY CHANGE YOUR WIFE?"

But you will like her even better in
"You Never Can Tell"

because it is 100 percent. Bebe Daniels, accentuating her own delicious, inimitable style.
YOU NEVER CAN TELL"
By GRACE LOVELL BRYAN

An amalgamation of two great recent SATURDAY EVENING POST story successes — "You Never Can Tell" and "Class."

In line with Realart’s policy of thoroughness we had to try the two for one.

BE BE DANIELS

Production. In all that goes to make a fine picture, Realart can safely say to exhibitors:

"MORE than your Money’s Worth!"

THE FIRST DANIELS SUBJECT

gives this "bit of the mystic Orient slumbering within a lovely New World personality" — as Miss Daniels has been described — at her creative best, in a part that will win legions of new admirers.
She's the Good Little Bad Girl and she'll be wicked and saintly and horrid 'n everything for your audiences, in her own

"The Greatest Love Story Ever Told"
Triumphs At Its Initial
New York Presentation

"'Romance' is one of the finest examples of screen entertainment seen in New York in many months. Doris Keane gave a performance which might well serve as an object lesson for most of our 'movie' stars. The reality of her 'Rita Cavallini' has seldom been seen on the screen."

—New York World.

"Miss Doris Keane charmed a large audience yesterday by her impersonation of Mme. Cavallini . . . She is at her best in this picture and her work is as effective on the screen as it was on the stage. 'The unfolding of the story kept the audience at a high pitch throughout.'"—New York Evening Telegram.

"Miss Keane's acting on the screen has lost none of its charm."
—New York Evening Post.

"'Romance' is uncommonly interesting."—New York Times.

"Miss Keane makes a lovely Marguerita Cavallini, just as she did on the stage and as the love story unwound itself, one could easily understand why the stage production had been so great a success."—New York Tribune.

"The screen version shows that Miss Keane has indeed gained in power to stir the emotions . . . Her work is beautifully shaded."
—New York Sun-Herald.

"Doris Keane in the role that she played over a thousand times in England and many times in this country, in Edward Sheldon's 'Romance', repeated on the screen at the Strand yesterday, the triumph that she achieved in this charming play on the legitimate stage."—New York Evening Sun.

SUNSET-BURRUD-SCENIC-SERIAL

50% Story + 50% Scenic Splendor — 100% Entertainment

Special Pictures Corporation offers you 700 feet of entertainment each week. A scenic serial of the sports and dangers encountered by two unchaperoned American girls touring the wildest, grandest part of the earth—The Rocky Mountains from Mexico to Alaska. Directed by a master—Dick Burrud—(he's packed over every inch of this country) with the co-operation of Scenic Specialists of Sunset Magazine (500,000 readers) and the U. S. Department of Interior, National Park Service. Tinted and toned, the "Sunset-Burrud-Scenic-Serial" will ease the nervous strain of your tired city dwellers—and your box-office will profit as a natural result.

First release July 4th. Each week thereafter

SWAT the camel companies. Don’t let them nose into your field. Remember what happened to the tailor who didn’t hit soon enough. Get a club and the best club in this case is a clubbing of exhibitor interests. Combine to keep the producer in his place or you’ll find him in yours.

If I thought you’d continue showing my pictures while I slowly bought up competitive locations I might try to get away with it, too. But because my dollar sense is common sense—and because common sense history and the bankruptcy courts swear that nobody ever successfully played both ends against the middle—I’ll take the advice of Fair and Square and defend your opportunities to better extend mine.

Various Czars, Kaisers, Sultans and Princes who never took much stock in the live and let live doctrine assure me that the grab-all game isn’t what it’s cracked up to be.

You have all heard eloquent declarations from certain publications in this field about their devotion to the exhibitors' best interests—

You have all heard their pleas for your favor on the grounds that they are fighting your battles—

You have all heard their assertions of freedom from entangling alliances; that they are committed to a policy of fair play for the exhibitor; that they bow only to the will of the exhibitor-reader.

You have heard all these things: Remember them now, and as you carefully note the attitude of each publication in this, the greatest crisis facing exhibitors since the dawn of the industry—you will discover for yourself what trade paper and what trade paper alone remains faithful to its trust.

TO THE INDUSTRY:

EXHIBITORS HERALD, in fulfillment of its mission as the Independent Film Trade Paper, believes that the time has arrived when a frank, impartial and direct statement must be made on the great issues facing the industry.

This publication, through careful and comprehensive investigation, has unearthed facts proving that a machine is now being built within the industry with which it is planned to shackle the independent exhibitor and producer in the grip of monopoly, reducing them to abject commercial slavery or driving them from the business which is now their means of livelihood.

An effort is being made to sacrifice the welfare of the independent exhibitor and producer on the altar of personal ambitions, which has been kindled with impossible dreams of world dominance in film matters.

The exhibitor has been buffeted with threats and brow-beats.

He has been told to deal with the embryonic trust—or face a cut-throat competition.

He has been told how many days per week he must give his theatre over to those seeking monopoly.

He has been tricked into selling his theatre in whole or in part on the threat that Wall Street millions will put him out of business if he fails to sign on the dotted line according to instructions.

His organizations have been gutted with treachery, perpetrated through the unholy fear that a real organization among exhibitors would protect the individual theatreman who has been made the prey of the spoilers.

This rotten business has gone on month by month until now conditions call for a real show-down.

Either the principles of fairness and decency in this business must triumph or it will be dealt a blow that will take years to recover from.

Recent events disclose that certain factors in the industry have been aroused to a degree of action, but as yet the movements of the monopolists and spoilers have been so hidden that it has been difficult to create a sentiment sufficiently strong and determined to put a stop to practices that are gnawing at the vitals of the industry.

EXHIBITORS HERALD, mindful of its greater duties to the industry, stands for the right principles of commercial relations and against every vicious and iniquitous movement, wheresoever it may originate.

In furtherance of this we commence this week a series of articles which will bring into the open the individuals and groups who are plotting covertly to wrest independence from the industry and reduce all who are not within the chosen circle to the rank of glorified clerks, to do the bidding of the little tin czars who are drunk with the prosperity the industry has thrust upon them.

MARTIN J. QUIGLEY
The great question is:

Shall the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation be permitted to continue its practice of serving the exhibitor with one hand and competing with him with the other?

Despite the fact that Adolph Zukor has seen fit to laugh at publicly and belittle the efforts of independent exhibitors to maintain their commercial independence, we are inclined to the belief that the Lasky organization will cease present practices or they will feel the sting of the wrath of the exhibitors of America.

Future of Independent Exhibitor in Balance

The issues involved in this question are of overwhelming importance:

The future of the independent exhibitor is at stake.

The future of the independent producer is menaced.

The prosperity of the entire industry is imperiled through the introduction of methods tending to effect a monopoly, place the direction of the screens of America in the hands of a group of men unqualified for a responsibility that might mean a despotic sway over the lives and opinions of millions of Americans.

If this motion picture bureaucracy which is aimed at is achieved the independent producer no less than the independent exhibitor would be made to conform with the dictates of the over-lords in what he produces and in what price he asks for his product, or he would be driven from the industry.

The Wall Street allies of Famous Players-Lasky are not unmindful of the commercial and political potentialities of the screen and their influence upon the commercial code under which that company is operating is now very obvious.

This group has reached into this industry through the Famous Players company and are endeavoring to tie in the grip of monopoly this business which can continue its artistic advance and commercial prosperity only on a basis of freedom and independence.

Five Year Contract First Step Toward Monopoly

The Famous Players-Lasky Corporation originally set out to dominate this business through the means of a five year non-cancellable contract in which exhibitors in violation of every precedent and rule of common sense in the industry were asked to burden down their theatres for five years with a product whose merits they had not the slightest means of determining.

As the record shows, this ambitious effort of Mr. Zukor failed miserably; exhibitor-customers of Famous Players repudiated the plan so emphatically that it was soon dropped.

Following this we find Zukor and his associates working on a booking plan which would delegate to the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation the authority to book all pictures for a period of five years for theatres which succumbed to the plan. The exhibitor who had been led into this trap was not to be permitted an avenue of escape. According to the scheme of the contract which was then entertained the exhibitor was to be tied up without chance of recourse for five years.

Obstacles gathered so rapidly in the path of putting this into effect that it was also abandoned.

Zukor Turns His Steps Toward Wall Street

Then Zukor, still dreaming of dominating the industry, went to Wall Street and painted an alluring picture to his new allies:

It was pointed out that with theatres added to the producing and distributing machinery of Famous Players-Lasky the coveted goal of dominating the industry would be within reach. Zukor then succeeded in borrowing from Wall Street $10,000,000 in the form of a preferred stock issue on the company which had been built on the proceeds of exhibitors' rentals.
The earlier movements of the Lasky corporation in the theatre field were shrouded in great secrecy—a rather interesting side-light on their own opinions of the legitimacy of their scheme. At first blanket denials were issued in response to every inquiry. Later when they were caught red-handed in the business of grabbing theatres they came forward with assertions that they were merely seeking to obtain a showing for their pictures in places where they were locked out.

Gradually it became apparent that they had been nursing a gigantic plan to dominate the industry and were listening to the advice of Wall Street operators who are generally credited with being well-versed in the business of stifling competition and bull-dozing the independent operator.

Willard C. Patterson in Effort to Stop Raid

Disorganization among exhibitors has permitted this plan to go on practically unhampered for some time. The first concrete effort to block this rape of the industry was launched by Willard C. Patterson of Atlanta, Ga., who called a meeting in Chicago in April to consider the plight of the independent exhibitor.

The response to Patterson's call is now an eloquent page in the history of exhibitors' activities. Upon short notice several hundred exhibitors gathered in Chicago and pledged themselves to fight the menace to the last ditch. The meeting, together with the resolutions passed, was the cause of very grave concern to the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation—despite the attitude of feigned levity which they assumed toward the protest of the independent exhibitors.

During the weeks intervening between the Chicago and the Cleveland conventions, officers of the Lasky organization plunged into a frenzied effort to block and side-track the work started by the independent exhibitors in Chicago. They awakened to the import of the resolutions passed, which conveyed both in letter and spirit the fact that Famous Players-Lasky must desist from its theatre grabbing activities or suffer a serious impairment of its American market. Recent developments have given them a chance to ponder over the plight they would be in if they were left to exhibit their pictures in the houses they own or control and were locked out of that great number of theatres which are today and will continue to be operated independently.

Attempt to Disorganize Exhibitors' Forces

Despite their desire to laugh at the movement for independence among exhibitors their better judgment eventually compelled them to realize they faced a grave situation. Being expert in political maneuvering—they have taken it upon themselves to inject every possible type of dissension into the Cleveland convention with a view of forestalling the main business of the convention: Crushing this movement tending toward monopoly. Through their subterranean machinations they have endeavored to pit the Alfred S. Black group against the Sydney L. Cohen group and both of these groups against the association of independent exhibitors formed in Chicago.

'Although feigning to laugh at the Cleveland conventions, Zukor in his customary adroit manner, set out to create some apparently valid reason to be present with his cohorts to block in so far as possible what the conventions might do to entrench the position of the independent exhibitor. He succeeded in putting over his scheme, which, however, will fool no one. Giving the executive committee of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry the rush act at a specially called meeting he succeeded in jamming through a resolution to hold the annual meeting of the National Association at Cleveland concurrently with the exhibitors' conventions.

There are many indications that the Zukor crowd has seen evidences of the gathering storm for many months. In February Zukor gave an oral statement to the trade press which was in reality a plea of defense. With apparently little consideration for the intelligence of the persons he was seeking to impress he declared his entire object in entering the theatre business was to aid the exhibitor who wanted to expand his business.

Zukor Denies Wall Street Dominates Corporation

Also, in this statement Zukor went to considerable length in an effort to disprove the assertion that Wall Street was actually in control of the company. He declared that H. D. H. Connick, chairman of the finance committee, had simply been given a job by him because he was a bright young fellow who wanted to break into the film business. Zukor failed to mention that Connick is there as head of the committee appointed by Wall Street to remain in control of the company until three-fourths of the $10,000,000 preferred stock issue is retired.

It may also be noted that there are indications that the financial interests behind Famous Players have begun to realize the dangers of the Zukor plan to dominate the motion picture business. Gossip in Wall Street now has it that the underwriters of the preferred stock issue on Famous Players have been disappointed in the attitude of the general public. Only about sixty per cent of the issue has been sold, the remaining forty per cent being still on the hands of the underwriters, according to reports. The preferred issue was put out at about par and has gradually sagged until it is now selling in the early eighties.

The common stock of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation early last fall, before the theatre grabbing activities of the company became known, sold for about $130 a share. Since then it has been frequently quoted under $70 a share.
In citing these facts concerning the securities of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation there is no attempt to level criticism at the financial soundness of the enterprise, but merely to indicate that despite the fact that it is a profit-making company and an important factor in the industry, many are apprehensive regarding its future if present policies and ambitions are persisted in.

Hidden Advertising Shows Contempt of Exhibitor

In passing it is pointed out that one graphic indication that Famous Players-Lasky has assured itself of the utter gullibility of the exhibitor—which assurance has led it into a multitude of objectionable practices—is to be found in the matter of advertising surreptitiously injected into entertainment subjects. This practice has assumed such proportions that the disgust of the motion picture public has been frequently noted. In Famous Players productions during the past year almost every variety of nationally advertised products have been deliberately injected into entertainment subjects. And notwithstanding the fact that the advertising is actually given by the exhibitor upon his screen, the producer collects the entire tribute. In a recent DeMille subject nearly a dozen presumably paid advertisements were noted and no portion of the amount collected was credited to decreased rentals or to compensate exhibitors for their services in exhibiting the advertisements.

The situation we are now facing is this:

The forces of the industry which are opposed to the monopolistic tendencies and ambitions of Famous Players-Lasky must be drawn up for a finish fight.

Until the time of the Chicago session of the independent exhibitors the Lasky organization was running things pretty much to suit themselves. The movement launched in Chicago was the first real obstacle put in their path.

Whether they will now be driven from their plans of straddling the industry from studio to theatre depends on the determination of the exhibitors of the nation to protect what is their own and what they should be allowed to enjoy without interference from an organization that must have their support to exist.

Are Exhibitors Looked Upon as Cattle?

The Famous Players policy throughout especially during recent months, seems to be actuated with the notion that the exhibitors of America are like a lot of cattle that can be herded here or there at the pleasure of a coterie seeking to drain tribute from every branch of the business.

The fact that the exhibitors have been disorganized as regards a compact, national organization has been an encouragement to perpetrate any sort of scheme upon them in the confident hope that they would stand like dumb oxen to be slaughtered in their own box offices.

Our confidence in the essential manhood of the exhibitors of America and in the eventual triumph of the right principles of commerce over grabbing, bulldozing and brow-beating tactics convinces us that the day of rejoicing in the offices of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation over the conquest of the film business is not going to materialize.

We believe that the exhibitors assembled in Cleveland are going to insist upon their rights or they are going to acknowledge before the industry that Famous Players-Lasky is an enemy to be battled with every legitimate method.

No detailed exposition is necessary from us as to what will probably be the tactics of the Zukor group at the Cleveland conventions. It is very obvious from their record and from the serious plight they are now in that every effort will be exerted and no expense spared to disrupt the proceedings.

One Big Issue Facing Exhibitors' Convention

A violent effort will be made to have injected for consideration subsidiary issues with a view of preventing action on the great question:

Whether the Famous Players-Lasky corporation is to be permitted to continue its policy which is now interpreted in many quarters to mean simply that exhibitors whose properties are wanted must either accede to the terms that are offered or face a deadly competition.

This discussion of the plans and methods of the Zukor organization is undertaken by this publication because conditions have reached such a critical stage that it devolves upon us in fulfillment of our duty to the exhibitors of America and the industry at large to raise our voice in an unmistakable note of protest.

And this we do with full confidence that the fundamental American principle of the right to run one's own business free from despotic interference will triumph and, regardless of how desperate the conflict may be, the American motion picture theatre must remain a free and independent institution.

The Second Article of This Series Will Appear in the Next Issue of EXHIBITORS HERALD
E. M. ASHER, personal representative of Mark Sennett, passed through Chicago on Monday, May 31, en route to New York. Mr. Asher brought on to the Rothacker laboratory a print of Mack Sennett's latest feature production, "Married Life," which he describes as being "not a war picture." This production is to be issued by the First National.

ALFRED A. COHN of Los Angeles is in New York on a business trip. Mr. Cohn was formerly western manager for Photoplay Magazine and is now supplying literary material for a number of producers on the West Coast.

JOHN SINGERLOO, owner of the Lyric theatre at Oklahoma City, who went to Greece for his honeymoon after marrying last fall, is expected to return early this month. He will spend two weeks in New York before going to his home.

BEN BLUMENTHAL, president and general manager of the Export and Import Film Corporation, has sailed for Europe in the interests of the new Jans Pictures special "Madonnas and Men."

HARRY F. LOTZ, realtor at Pittsburgh, and Henry E. Wilkinson, Buffalo, have exchanged posts.

Tom Bourke, for several years connected with Chicago's largest daily newspapers, has been appointed general publicity representative for Ascher Brothers, owners of a large string of theatres in the Central West.

HARRY LEVY, manager of the Educational and Industrial department of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, is at Indianapolis preparing for the convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, June 6-10.

C. A. MEADE, sales manager of C. B. Price, Inc., is on a trip through the Middle West stopping at Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland, Milwaukee and Pittsburgh. At the various centers, he will screen "His Pajama Girl."

MISS ROSE SEFTON, formerly of the W. H. Productions exploitation department, has been engaged by Murray W. Garson, president of Fine Art Pictures, Inc. to supervise all exploitation and publicity for "Up in Mary's Attic."

MARSHALL NEILAN has received an invitation from Miss E. S. Ayres in behalf of the Cinema Composers of the Columbia University, to address that body some evening during his visit to New York in August before he sails for London.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry J. Nolan of Denver, the former First National franchise holder for that territory, announce the arrival of the "newest star"—Mary Jane Nolan.

ROBERT F. RODEN, assistant to John C. Brownell, Universal's scenario chief, has resigned to devote his time to the writing of original stories, continuity and reconstruction work.

SIEGEL BRESLER, personal representative of J. Parker Read, Jr., will leave Los Angeles on a second tour of the United States within a few weeks, in the interests of Read production.

SYLVIA DREAMS, who played the title role in "Athletic" for Mayhew, is suffering from a nervous collapse, according to word received from Los Angeles. She will go to the mountains to recuperate and then return to New York for a short visit.

HARRY D. BALEY, originator of the "Silly Host" animated cartoons for Paramount Magazine, has receiving congratulations on the birth of his second son, Donald Styles Baley.

JACK EATON, managing director of the New York Strand, has resigned, effective this month. He will return to the producing field.

LEONICE PERRET, who has been producing pictures in France, is expected to arrive in the United States June 15.

LOUIS B. MAYER is expected to arrive in New York for a long stay July 1. It is possible that he will go to Europe in the late summer on business.

JESSE L. LASKY, first vice-president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, has sailed for Europe on the Adriatic.

FRANK A. LACY, who manages the Majestic theatre, at Portland, Ore.—one of Jensen & Von Herberg houses—paid Exhibitors Herald office a visit, May 25.

THE RITCHEY poster has a genuine advertising value—as much as it is possible to get into a poster. The degree of it is as yet unmeasured, for the auditorium has not yet been built that will hold all the people that RITCHEY posters will sell tickets to.

Re-Takes of the News

By J. R. M.

All set for the big show down.

Looks like a history-making session.

Ballyhooing and side-shows are a thing of the past.

Have Money in the Bank—

It's a safe bet the Cleveland hotelmen won't support a censor bill that will legislate nims out of business after counting up their receipts next week.

Oberholtzer Is Out—

Pennsylvania, it is rumored, is going to substitute Wood for concrete in the make-up of its censor board.

Too Much for the Swedes—

Who says pictures haven't a good influence? In Cosmopolitan for May, Frank R. Adams says when they raised the price of picture shows from fifteen to twenty cents in Whitehall, Mich., it drove a lot of people back to prayer-meetings.

Hand-Played Oratory—

Tad, the creator of "Indoor Sports," when interviewed regarding the coming Cleveland pow-wow, muttered, cryptically, "You tell 'em, Izzy, my hands are cold."

Ain't No Such Animal—

If there is a salesman in these dear old United States that hasn't attended a convention in New York this spring, he's a rarity.

How About It, Pete?—

Colleen Moore has been "discovered" again. This time by Pete Smith, who writes pieces for the papers for Marsh Neilan. Pat Downing, the Christie h.a., says this makes the fourth time Colleen has been discovered. Col. Schig was first, D. W. Griffith next and then Al Christie, and she can be found any day on the New York lot if anybody else wants to be a Columbus out on the west coast.

Hard on the Bald Heads—

But speaking of Colleen Moore, didja know she has started a "No Hats for Summer" Club in Los Angeles? Yep, and if her director doesn't stop her, she'll have everybody doing it.
Shipman Is Backed by Citizens of Winnipeg in Producing Conor Tale

WINNIPEG, MAN., June 1. — The board of trade and leading citizens have signed contracts with Ernest Shipman, president of Dominion Films, which controls the screen rights to Ralph Connor stories, whereby unlimited backing is pledged in producing "The Foreigner," a story of Winnipeg.

Mayor Grey, outstanding figure in the big strike, will assist Connor in story construction. Mr. Shipman has left for New York, where he will organize a producing unit. The picture will be distributed through First National Exhibitors Circuit.

Harry Sherman's Plan

Appeals to Exchanges

Reports from various centers throughout the continent indicate that the plan of the Sherman Pictures Corporation, headed by Harry A. Sherman, is making rapid progress and that exchanges in the major film territories have purchased Sherman franchises.

According to the Sherman plan, announcements several weeks ago, pictures will be produced for independent exchanges according to a plan developed by Mr. Sherman which has been favorably received in many quarters.

Mr. Sherman will be present at the Cleveland conventions.

All-Star Film Cast to Appear in Stage Drama

LOS ANGELES, June 1. — "Arizona," Augustus Thomas' famous drama, is scheduled to be staged by an all-star cast of screen stars at Clune's Auditorium on June 3, 4 and 5, for the benefit of the American Legion. Clara Kimball Young will have the leading feminine role, and Hobart Bosworth has the leading male part.

Other stars who will be in the cast are Sessue Hayakawa, Dustin Farnum, Gloria Swanson, Theodore Roberts, Besie Harisco and Milton Sills. An elaborate production will be given the play, it is announced.

Oklahoma Exhibitors Are Freed of Charge

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA. June 2. — All of the cases brought against exhibitors of Fair City for operating their theatres on Sundays have been dismissed in the district court on the motion of County Attorney S. H. Braught on the ground that the evidence being insufficent. J. S. Murray, manager of the Murray theatre, and Manager Lane of the Mission theatre, and their employees were arrested last winter.

Nugent J. Flynn Is Leaving for Europe

Nugent J. Flynn of Richards and Flynn, Kansas City, is going abroad this week for an extended trip through Europe. During his absence, a probe was held about Mr. Flynn's plans; he is contemplating making a comprehensive investigation of motion picture conditions in the important film centers in England and the Continent.

Four Conventions Will Open At Cleveland Tuesday June 8

Three Exhibitor Organizations and National Association Prepare for Greatest Gathering in History of Motion Picture Industry

With scores of prominent exhibitors and producers from the Far West already aboard train, the tremendous movement towards Cleveland has started.

Saturday, Sunday and Monday will see hundreds more on the way from all parts of the United States. Special trains and special coaches will be brought in to the Ohio metropolis Monday afternoon.

Biggest Gathering in Industry's History

Without question, Cleveland is to witness the greatest assemblage of exhibitors, distributors and producers in the history of the motion picture industry. No reliable basis for estimating the attendance is available, but hotel reservations and brief announcements of secretaries give positive assurance that all previous records will be eclipsed.

Unless plans are altered by compromise at the last minute, four conventions will be opened the morning of Tuesday, June 8. Exhibitors will be divided between three of these meetings in response to calls of the executives of the Independent Motion Picture Exhibitors of America, the Motion Picture Exhibitors of America, and the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America.

The distributors, producers, accessory dealers and other branches of the industry are answering the call to convention of William A. Brady, president of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry.

Hope of Harmony Is Increasing Daily

Despite violent exchanges of words between leaders of the three exhibitors' organizations, it is generally believed that the proposed merger of the leagues is certain to be accomplished and that harmony in exhibitor ranks is nearer attainment than at any time in the last two years.

"Sparring for advantage" is the phrase aptly applied to the series of announcements which have glutted the mails during the last three weeks.

Both Frank J. Rembusch and Sydney S. Cohen, the two central figures in the pre-convention controversy, are agreed on their being one big question for the exhibitors to face—the peril of producer domination of the theatres.

They disagree on organization methods and the question of collection of dues. Each is determined that the exhibitors he represents will have a "voice" in the convention. Both have declared themselves against "politics" and "steam roller tactics."

Willard Patterson For One Big Organization

Willard C. Patterson, who became an important figure in the industry nationally when he assembled five hundred exhibitors in Chicago, April 26 to fight producer domination of the theatres, has added his weight to the growing demand for one big organization.

"Independent exhibitors need men of the executive ability of both Cohen and Rembusch," he declared in a statement of his attitude at Cleveland. "For the good of the cause, they should get together. There are too many problems to split now. Let's build up one big organization along the lines of honesty of purpose."

Patterson has never before been actively identified with a national exhibitor organization, and he is believed to express the sentiment of the rank and file of the theatre owners. It is very possible that he will take the lead in a movement to "compel" the leaders to get together if they do not take action themselves before the conventions open.

Will "Smoke Out" All Producers

June 3 and 4, the committee of seventeen of the Independent Motion Picture Exhibitors of America will assemble in New York City to insist upon answers from all producing companies which have not replied to questions as to their intentions of entering the exhibitor field.

At that time, it is possible that overtures between the leaders of the Independent Motion Picture Exhibitors of America and the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America will be made with a view of a compromise before the exhibitors assemble at Cleveland.

William Brandt, president of the Theatre Owners’ Chamber of Commerce of New York City, has invited the leaders of both organizations to meet at a dinner which he will sponsor June 3 or 4.

Many other prominent theatre men have made similar offers. If nothing is accomplished before, it is probable that the question will be thrashed out at Cleveland on the eve of the conventions, June 7.

M. P. E. A. Is Called for Convention

The long expected decision to transfer the convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors of America from Chicago to Cleveland so that it would take place simultaneously with the conventions of the two other exhibitor organizations was made May 25 by Alfred S. Black, president.

“Tolay I delayed taking action on the urgent request that we transfer the convention to Cleveland, but after careful consideration, I believe that the best interests of the exhibitors of the United States demand that exhibitors from all over the country meet in Cleveland,” he stated in making his call.

“Disregarding the personal interests of any one set of men, it is better to have a thrashing out of many problems in one city and at one time than with divided attendance at different places,” the Motion Picture Exhibitors of America stands for a fair deal for each and every exhibitor of the United States and will continue to refuse to have the exhibiting end of the business put in jeopardy by any individual men who will try to further their own personal interests at the expense of the many,”

Cohen Is Angered at Accessory Exhibition

Sydney S. Cohen, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, is thoroughly angered at the attempt by several private individuals to take advantage of the great gathering of exhibitors at Cleveland to promote an old-fashioned exhibition of picture machines and accessories.

Declaring that the exhibition is not backed by any exhibitor organization and that the profits of it are intended for individuals and not for an exhibitor organization, Cohen sent out the following notice to producers and accessory dealers:

“Please be advised that the M. P. T. O. A. about to meet in convention at the Hotel Winton, Cleveland, has no interest in or connection with an affair advertised in the National Independent Motion Picture Machines and Accessory Show for the same days and in the same hall as the M. P. T. O. A. The serious nature of the problems which confront the exhibitors of the country today will make it impossible for the states who are sending their representatives to do other than to concentrate their every effort on same. There will be no time for showdowns of any kind or description, and as most of the space at exhibitions of this kind is sold on the pretext of the goodwill of the exhibiting body and sometimes with the intention that exhibitor organizations are promoting same and benefiting financially, we want you to know our attitude, so that you may not be misguided in purchasing space under an illusion to the contrary. This is to the organized exhibitors of America.”

Rembusch Offers Idea for Compromise

In his latest communication in regard to the coming convention, Frank J. Rembusch, chairman of the Independent Motion Picture Exhibitors of America, suggests a plan upon which he believes all three organizations can be satisfied and all of the exhibitors welded into one great league.

I suggest that each organization be given one day and all go as one body to all three meetings and on the last day of the convention eliminate the three and hold a convention for permanent organization,” he declares.

“The Independents want one day to report on their movement to force all problems to a solution and the Old League, after ten years of service, is entitled to consideration,” Rembusch continues.

“I believe that the independents and unless he improves rapidly will be unable to attend the national conventions.

“Stay with the meeting and abide by the majority,” is his plea.

Wires Committee to Remain Steady

At the same time, Rembusch issued an appeal to the seventeen members of the I.M.P. E. A. to remain steady and insist upon their separate organization until assured of fair treatment from any other convention they decided to enter.

“Steady,” declared his wire. “Everything is alright. I am only smoking them a bit to remind you to walk into their meeting will ruin us and that is just what they want. Remember the whispering around the lobby and the efforts to destroy the Chicago convention.

“Van Praag is partner with Cohen and so is Lustig. I still insist that the first day mass meeting be turned over to the Independents and their report. Please write and insist that you vote for your baby and I will save it for you if you stand by me as I stood by you in Chicago. You can trade now but if you take the Independents into their meeting, you will murder your movement.

“Two weeks ago, I knew who they had for their chairman and they would control the convention and let your movement die. I want them punished that they do not have the majority rule. Stay with your ship. I am accomplishing everything that is necessary to make a successful convention in Cleveland. Believe me you to be advised tell you it is better to go in divided and come away united than to go in united and walk out.”

M. P. T. O. A. Complete Convention Plans

In the meantime, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, of which Sydney S. Cohen is chairman, has completed arrangements for the opening of its convention at Hotel Winton.

During the week, a statement was issued by H. H. Lustig, W. J. Simm and Sam Bullock, the convention committee on arrangements, in which they thanked Frank J. Rembusch or any officer of the Independent Motion Picture Exhibitors of America for the arrangements that they offered every possible service in arranging for the accommodation of delegates.

Chairman Cohen has appointed the following registration and arrangements for the M. P. T. O. A. convention:

ALBANY—George Roberts, president, Tri-City Exhibitors League.

BUFFALO—J. Fisher, president, Buffalo Managers Assn.

PHILADELPHIA—C. Fish, president, Philadelphia Exhibitors League.

PITTSBURGH—E. Smith, president, American Exhibitors Assn. of Pennsylvania.

CLEVELAND—Henry Lustig, president, Cleveland Motion Picture Exch. Assn.

CINCINNATI—Dr. Alexander secretary, Miami Valley Exhibitors League.

ST. LOUIS—Joseph Mogler, president, Motion Picture Exhibitors League of St. Louis.

KANSAS CITY—M. Van Prang, secretary.

DENVER—H. E. Hays, president, Denver Motion Picture Assn.

OKLAHOMA CITY—Ralph Talbot, president, Oklahoma Exhibitors League.

DENVER—W. A. Gernhardt, secretary, Colorado Motion Picture Theatre Owners Assn.

OMAHA—Harry R. McCarron, secretary, Nebraska Motion Picture Theatre Owners Assn.

WILKES-BARRE—Paul Langheinrich, secretary, Motion Picture Exhibitors Association of Wis-consin.

MINNEAPOLIS—W. A. Stedjes, president, United Theatrical Protective League.

SEATTLE—Dr. H. S. Clemer, Spokane, Wash.

DALLAS—E. T. Peter, president, Texas Exhibitor Circuit.

ATLANTA—W. C. Patterson, president, Southern Exhibitors Assn.

NEW JERSEY—J. T. Collin, Rutherford, N. J.

NEW YORK—Samuel L. Benjamin, secretary, Motion Picture Exhibitors League, State of New York.

Committee members are expected to arrive in Cleveland in sufficient time to handle preliminary details.

National Association Nominates Directors

The various divisions of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, which opens its convention at Cleveland June 5, met in New York during the past week and nominated complete slate for the directorate.

Forty-two directors are to be selected. Nominations for the various divisions are as follows:

General Division—Fred J. Beecroft.

Although it is probable that William A. Brady will be given no chance to decline re-election to the presidency of the association, there has been some gossip of Lewis J. Selznick, William Fox, Richard A. Rowland and Paul Brune as possible successors.

Gore Brothers Will Build Big Playhouse On Site of Burbank

The Four Conventions

Independent Motion Picture Exhibitors of America at Hotel Cleveland—Temporary organization of this association was effected at Chicago, April 26 and 27, in response to a call sent out by Willard C. Patterson, of Atlanta, Ga. Frank J. Rembusch, of Indiana, is temporary chairman and Sig Samuels, of Atlanta, temporary secretary. Convention called for June 8 to 11 at Cleveland.

Motion Picture Exhibitors of America, Inc., at Hotel Cleveland—Permanent organization of this association was effected at St. Louis in June, 1919, as a merger of the M. P. E. L. of A. and the A. E. A. The convention, originally called for Chicago, June 28, was transferred to Cleveland, for June 8 to 11. Alfred S. Black, of Massachusetts, is president and Frank J. Rembusch, of Indiana, executive secretary.

Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, at Hotel Winton—Temporary organization was effected by exhibitors from thirty-two states early in 1920, with sixteen regional organizations affiliated. Cleveland convention, June 8 to 11, called to complete organization. Sydney S. Cohen, of New York, is temporary chairman and Sam Bullock, of Ohio, temporary secretary.

National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, at Hotel Cleveland—Fourth annual convention called at Cleveland, opening June 8. Organization includes all branches of industry. William A. Brady, of New York, is president and Frederick H. Elliott, of New York, executive secretary.

Independence or—Disaster!
Full Representation at Cleveland Planned By Associated Exhibitors

One hundred per cent representation of its exhibitor membership at the Cleveland conventions next week is the present outlook for Associated Exhibitors, Inc.

That Associated intends to fight with and for independent exhibitors who are battling against the producer-exhibitor is indicated in the fact that Associated will hold not only a meeting of the board of directors, but also will have convened other members and officers from almost every point in the United States.

Virtually every franchise holder in Associated has given assurance of attendance and all have pledged themselves to the platform of a fight to a finish against the producer-exhibitor, it is announced. Some of those who intend to be on hand are Harry Crandall, Dennis Harris, Samuel Harding, Harold B. Franklin, H. H. Wellenbrink, Hugo Lambach, Harry M. Lubliner, James Q. Clemmer, I. Libson and many others.

Advices received in New York from F. C. Quimby, general manager, who recently arrived in Los Angeles from New York and who expects also to attend the conventions, are to the effect that never before in the history of the industry have exhibitors been so aroused over the situation as they are now. Mr. Quimby had the opportunity of feeling out the sentiment of showmen in many cities, and, according to his analysis, showmen, big and small, have come to the full realization of what they are up against.

Independent exhibitors seem to realize fully that definite constructive action must be taken at once. Mr. Quimby advises, adding that from what he has been able to learn it seems as if every exhibitor who possibly can make the trip to Cleveland will be on hand.

The attitude of independent exhibitors varies slightly in territories where there are purely local conditions to be considered. Mr. Quimby learned, but on the vital and important issues they are standing solidly together. The consensus of belief is to the effect that for any real progress to be made politics must be wiped out; each individual must be ready to carry on organization work in a spirit of true and deep cooperation. Individuals must work for the common good and not for purely personal gains.

May Form Two Bodies

The majority of the independents believe that the convention may result in the formation of two national bodies—one organization composed of exhibitors who are not purely independent and which will take up questions concerning all exhibitors, regardless of any producer affiliations; the other association composed entirely of independents, its single purpose being to combat the efforts of producers to gobble theatres.

The latter will be the stronger organization, it is believed. This is indicated by the earnestness of spirit and the zeal of those actively engaged in missionary work. The depth of spirit reflected at the Chicago meeting in April is only a slight sign of the intensity of feeling which since has been aroused, it appears, and the cry throughout the ranks of independents today is “On to Cleveland”.

Independent Exchange Men Perfect Their Organization

Federated Film Exchanges of America Complete Work Started in Chicago in March—Seek Capable Executive as Manager

Permanent organization of Federated Film Exchanges of America, Inc., was effected at a series of meetings last week at the Astor Hotel in New York of state right buyers representing every territory in the United States.

The avowed purpose of the organization, which was formed temporarily in Chicago in March, is to buy collectively the negatives of productions ranging in length from one reel to long feature subjects. Federated is incorporated in the state of Delaware for $100,000.

Executives Seeking Capable Manager

At present executives are combing the motion picture field for a competent man to fill the position of manager. While every member was reticent as to the name of the man being considered, it was rumored that a former president of a large producing company in all probability would be assigned the task of supervising Federated's activities.

The election of officers at the Chicago meetings was ratified at the sessions in New York during the week of May 24. Permanent officials are:

President—J. L. Friedman, Celebrated Players Film Corporation, Chicago.

Vice-President—J. E. Pearce, Pearce Films, New Orleans, La.

Secretary—D. J. Chatkin, Consolidated Film Exchange, San Francisco.

Treasurer—Samuel V. Grand, Federation Film Corporation, Boston.

The board of directors includes, besides the officials just named, the following ex-changers:

Harry Charnas, Standard Film Service Company, Cleveland, O.

A. G. Whyte, Empire State Film Corporation, New York.

B. Anderson, Masterpiece Film Attractions, Philadelphia.

When asked regarding the appointment of a manager, Mr. Friedman would commit himself no further than to state that "members have gone on record as saying that the biggest man in motion pictures is none too big for them."

Friedman Explains Purpose

In explaining the purposes of the organization, Mr. Friedman said:

"The independent exchange men have worked under the greatest kind of difficulties for a great number of years. The average producer will advertise a picture only until he has disposed of his territorial rights, and the minute he has closed his last territory he ceases to continue advertising.

"The consequent results of this situation is that the publicity that a certain picture has received and the advertising that has been done is wasted absolutely in so far as any one particular exchange is concerned.

"It has been impossible for the independent exchange men throughout the country to release a certain picture at the corners. The resulting from the fact that the buy of one independent exchange man may be very much greater than that of another, forcing one state right man to hold a film several months before releasing it.

"It is the purpose of the new organization in doing their buying to arrange to release the same as all program companies are doing at the present time."

System Has Big Advantages

"Another disadvantage the independent exchange man has subjected to himself is the fact that the producer of the picture has been uncertain as to whether he could dispose of all of his territory. Because of this he has added a large percentage to his asking price in order to be able to make a profit."

"The new organization will buy negatives and therefore its members will be able to get their product for a great deal less money. One of the great difficulties that the new organization faced was the seeming impossibility of agreeing on a policy toward subjects and economics of purchase. Quite a few of the members were strong adherents of having short-reel subjects only, while others favored the longer pictures. It was quickly found, leaving every member imbued with the idea that Federated should be one of the biggest powers in motion pictures."

According to Mr. Friedman, whose efforts are responsible for the organization of Federated, several contracts for subjects already have been placed. He declares that within another thirty days activity will be in "full blast."

Comprises Seventeen Members

Federated members and their respective territories are: A. G. Whyte, Empire State Film Corporation, New York City; Chicago; and New Jersey; Samuel V. Grand, Federation Film Corporation, Boston, Mass.; New England States; Amsterdam, Masterpiece Film Attractions, Philadelphia; Eastern Pennsylvania; Southern New Jersey; H. L. Lane, Quality Film Service, Pittsburgh, Western Pennsylvania, and West Virginia; J. E. Pearce, Pearce Films, New Orleans, Louisiana; Mississippi, North and South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama and Tennessee; Harry Charnas, Standard Film Service Company, Cleveland, Michigan, Ohio and Kentucky; Abe Dresner, Exhibitors' Film Exchange, Washington, D. C.; Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and District of Columbia.

R. D. Lewis, R. D. Lewis Film Company, Oklahoma City, Texas; Oklahoma and Arkansas; and R. Thayer, Merit Film Corporation, Minneapolis, Minnesota, and North and South Dakota; Ralph Wettstein, Mid-West Distributing Company, Milwaukee, Wisconsin; Sam Werner, United Film Service, St. Louis, Eastern Missouri; Al Kahn, Crescent Film Company, Kansas City, Kansas, and Western Missouri; H. E. Kyler, Supreme Photographs, Denver, Colorado, New Mexico, Virginia; Utah and Idaho; J. J. Allen, Allen Brothers, Toronto, Canada, all of Canada; M. J. Frisch, A. H. Blank Enterprises, Des Moines, Iowa, and Nebraska; D. J. Chatkin, Consolidated Film Exchange, San Francisco and Los Angeles, California, Nevada and Arizona, and J. L. Friedman, Celebrated Players Film Corporation, Chicago, Illinois and Indiana.

Fairbanks Pay Visit to Chicago on Honeymoon

Mr. and Mrs. Fairbanks—Doug, and Mary—were in Chicago on May 31, en route to New York—their deferred honeymoon trip. According to the bride, they are going to New York to buy stories and to tend to other business.

The couple spent a busy two hours with the Windy City's photographers and admirers surrounded them at every opportunity. As they left the hotel this morning, Miss Fairbanks, compelled to autograph her way through the waiting room.

“The Son of Tarzan” to Be Consistently Constructed Picture in Serial Form

Jungle Scenes Are in Course of Production at National Film Studios in West for Distribution by Howells

“The Son of Tarzan” will represent a departure in serial production, according to David P. Howells, who will control the world rights on the picture being made by National Film Corporation of America at its West Coast studio.

This story of the jungle by Edgar Rice Burroughs is now in course of production under the direction of Harry Revier.

“It is to be no mad jungle of blood and thunder, nor a series of unrelated incidents intended to be mystifying, but it will be a consistently constructed dramatic production from a story which has proved itself intensely popular with the public and which is one of a series which have met with unusual success on the screen,” according to Mr. Howells.

The company has offered Mr. Revier unlimited resources with orders to make the serial a par in every detail, with special productions, it is said. It is being filmed on the same elaborate scale which distinguished previous Tarzan pictures.

Burroughs' previous works, “Tarzan of the Apes,” and the “Romance of Tarzan” both of which were filmed as features by National, and “The Return of Tarzan,” which also is a five-reel feature directed by Revier and now is creating a sensation in New York, all have "cored highly with the public.

Changes Made in Cast

Revier, with Jean Temple, casting director, spent a long time in gathering together a cast capable of meeting the requirements of “The Son of Tarzan.” Innumerable changes had to be made before the company had its proper quota of talent.

The cast represents the four corners of the globe. Among those selected are Karla Schramm, who is a Scandinavian; Mae Giraci, of Italy; Eugene Burr, Howard Johnstone and H. W. Kearn, all of New Zealand, and a carefully selected quota of male and female talent drawn from all parts of the world with which the story deals and conversant with the life and mannerisms of their respective peoples.

Gordon Griffith, who is playing the part of the young son of Tarzan, was one of the stars in “Huckleberry Finn.” He also played the juvenile lead in “Tarzan of the Apes.” K. C. Searle, who is playing the title role, has been spending the last two months on the desert to harden and accustom himself to the life he will lead in the serial. His body has been sunburned a dark brown and he is said to present a perfect type for the role he will play.

Director Revier has insisted that every member of the cast follow the same course of training as did Searle, with the result that he has a thoroughly trained company of screen talent capable of performing any manner of stunt required. In the midst of all sorts of chances, He has reduced his plans to schedule and, allowing for the accidents which will the filmman, a big serial of this calibre, expects the picturization to go on uninterruptedly from now on.

“Combine and Keep Producer in Place”

Selznick Again Cautions the Exhibitor to Watch Out

For His Interests

Lewis J. Selznick’s latest advice to independent exhibitors is “combine to keep the producer in his place or you’ll find him in yours.”

On an insert in the trade journals he warns theatre men not to let the producer “nose into the picture.” Mr. Selznick calls the producers who are acquiring theatres throughout the country “Swat the camel companies.” “Remember what happened to the tailor who didn’t hit soon enough,” says Mr. Selznick to exhibitors. “A club and the best club in this case is a clubbing of exhibitor interests. Combine to keep the producer in his place or you’ll find him in yours.”

“If I thought,” continues Mr. Selznick, “that you’d continue showing my pictures while I slowly bought out competitive locations I might try to get away with it, too. But because my dollar sense is common sense—and because common sense history and the trumpery courts swear that nobody ever successfully played both ends against the middle—I’ll take the advice of Fair and Square and defend your opportunities to better extend mine.”

Mr. Selznick then reveals the known fact that cars, kaisers and sulks never took much stock in the live and let live doctrine, and through them he feels assured that the grab-all game isn’t what it’s cracked up to be.

Masterfilms to Double Efforts During Summer

Victor Kremer, president of New York Independent Masterfilms, Inc., announces that the efforts of his sales staff will be doubled during the summer months. The president is of the opinion that all that is necessary for box office success during the hot weather is harder work.

Mr. Kremer announces that he has purchased a big production for early publication. It is being unopened titled. In addition, he says additional short subjects will be published.

Independence or—Disaster!
1,122 Sub-Franchise Grants Are Made by First National

Executive Committee Considers More Than 2,000 Additional Recommendations for Awards to Exhibitors Over Country

Since the inauguration of the sub-franchise plan by Associated First National Pictures, Inc., thirty days ago, 1,122 applications have been granted and more than 2,000 recommendations for additional awards are now in the hands of the executive committee.

This result, it is said, exceeds the quota fixed by Associated First National officials at the Chicago convention of members and exchange managers, by more than 100 per cent. The executive committee, composed of Officers of Boston, Moe Mark of New York, and H. O. Schwab, secretary-treasurer of Associated First National, is expected to pass finally on all pending applications for sub-franchise grants before the middle of June.

Official Action Is Delayed

Delay in official action by this committee resulted from the determination of company officials to make a ten-day trip to Dallas, Tex., in response to requests from a committee representing independent exhibitors in Texas, Oklahoma, and Arkansas, that some plan be formulated whereby the sub-franchise plan could be made immediately available in that territory as a proposition separate from the previous First National affiliation there. This trip delayed the work of the executive committee in deciding on applications from all territories.

Important first run theatres in every territory have filed requests for sub-franchises and the great majority of these have been granted and issued. The total number of sub-franchises authorized to date includes a membership extension, on the new plan, to every theatre owned and operated by the original members of First National who signed the agreements for the Associated First National proposition in Atlantic City last January.

An interesting feature of the awarding has been the group applications from several territories where First National exchange managers called conventions of independent exhibitors to discuss the plan in all its details immediately after the Chicago meeting.

A resume of the records to date shows that sub-franchise awards have been made by the executive committee to forty-three theatres now under construction and planned for openings in September, October and November. In every instance of this kind the exhibitor applicant has requested the franchise for the new theatre because of the increased seating capacity and greater facilities in places which are classified as "only one theatre" localities.

Houses Now Closed

In more than 100 localities, it is announced, the franchises already granted will not become operative until early in the fall because of theatres closed for repairs, general alterations and enlarged capacities.

A peculiar and unexpected phase of the sub-franchise plan in relation to the so-called "one-man-town" situation, wherein one exhibitor owns the only theatre, is that First National branch managers, in many such instances, have received applications from independent exhibitors in nearby cities and towns for sub-franchise grants in the "one-man-town" should the exhibitor controlling the situation fail, for any reason, to seek a membership.

In every such case investigation at the behest of the executive committee has shown that the applicants are independent exhibitors with an ambition to extend their present theatre holdings by acquiring new properties, through construction, in places which are classified as "only one theatre" localities.

Cohen and Rembusch Repudiate Exposition

The exposition of motion picture machines and accessories to be held in Cleveland simultaneously with the exhibitor conventions has drawn the fire of both the exhibitor organizations.

"I beg to advise that the insinuation I am connected with the exposition being put on at Cleveland is an unhurting just as many more from the same source," declares Frank J. Rembusch, chairman of the M. P. T. O. A. "I have been against all of these money making schemes to carry on a national organization."

"Officers of the M. P. T. O. A. desire to make it very plain that they have no connection with or interest in an exposition advertised for the same days as the convention," is the statement issued by Sydney S. Cohen. "Any person who solicits space for such an exposition on the pretense of acting on behalf of or for the benefit of organized exhibitors has no authority for them to do so."

Faversham Working On Second Selznick Film

William Faversham has started production on his second picture for Selznick Pictures, following publication of his first vehicle, "The Man Who Lost Himself." The second subject is "The Sin That Was His," which Hobart Henley is directing.

Hodkinson Says Exhibitors Must Pool Interests to Save Their Businesses

Independent exhibitors in the near future will be crowded to the wall and forced to go out of business unless they pool their interests and make intelligent use of their combined buying power, according to a statement made to the EXHIBITORS HERALD by W. W. Hodkinson, president of W. W. Hodkinson Corporation.

"For some time past," says Mr. Hodkinson, "I have noticed considerable confusion in exhibiting ranks amounting to an almost panicky feeling. I confess that in attempting to acquire experience with all sorts of conditions in our industry, the exhibitor always has been a problem to me. His power to keep the producer out of the exhibiting field is clear. Indeed, the strength of his position is not doubted by anybody, but he seems more or less incapable of concerted action. The buying power of the industry is in his hands, and if he only knew how to exert it, he could do the industry a lot of good and at the same time effectively and permanently protect his own investment.

Owns No Theatres

"In the last three years I have succeeded in building up an organization founded on a conception of justice both to the producer and to the exhibitor. As you know, the Hodkinson organization owns no theatres and has no intention of going into the exhibiting field. We do not produce any pictures.

"Many of the evils which the exhibitor is compelled to fight today at a cost both to his purse and to his peace of mind arise from the fact that so many producers are distributing their own product. This means all sorts of machine-made pictures, generally of an inferior quality, which are forced upon the exhibitor and upon the public. I have always believed that the interest of the producer must be severed from the interests of the distributor.

"The relations between producer and exhibitor, which ought to be based on principles of equity and fair dealing, at present remind one of a dog-eat-dog policy.

Producer Overloaded

"The producer has taken a preposterous load on his shoulders. The elements of this load consist of waste, incompetence, over-capitalization and poor judgment. He is unable, even with the heaviest rentals, to get enough money from the exhibitor to enable him to carry this load. This is the reason he is reaching out for the profits of the exhibitor by trying to take his investment away from him.

"I invite the exhibitors of the country to look into the mechanism I have built up for them to use, if they see fit. Its object, among other things, is to secure a dependable supply of high quality pictures and to keep the exhibitor free from producer domination. Backed by the buying power of any considerable group of exhibitors, this mechanism means many benefits to the exhibitors. It secures their absolute independence. It will enable them to get the best pictures in the market on favorable terms and ahead of any competition.

I may liken the system under which I am operating and which accounted for the initial success of Paramount pictures to a process of winnowing—separating the chaff from the wheat. My plan operates as impartially and as automatically as a machine. Under its workings the consensus of exhibitors' reports on the commercial value of pictures is taken as the basis of judging the standing of the producer.

Richards and Flynn Organize to Produce Jack Gardner Westerns

Former Essanay Star Will Return to the Screen After the Termination of His Present Vaudeville Contract in August

William Flynn of Richards and Flynn, Kansas City, has announced the formation of a producing company to make a series of twelve Western plays featuring Jack Gardner.

Although having been absent from the screen for some time Jack Gardner has a big following among the motion picture public, created during his association with Essanay, where he starred in a number of special productions which were among the most successful published by George K. Spoor. "The Gift of Gab" will be remembered as one of the most successful of the period.

Gardner has had a wide experience on the stage, having played important parts in various types of theatrical entertainment. He has been a headliner in vaudeville during the present season and has appeared in the principal cities throughout the United States.

Gardner's vaudeville engagements terminate for the season about August 1, in Los Angeles. At that time the new producing company will be prepared to commence production immediately on the first picture of the series.

No announcement has been made as to the vehicles which will be employed for Gardner's return to the screen, but it is understood that each of the twelve pictures will be based upon a well-known play or novel and that considerable material of this kind already has been purchased by William Flynn.

Operate Chain of Houses

Richards and Flynn are among the best-known and most successful exchange operators in the country, being the First National franchise holders in Kansas City and operators of an important chain of theatres in that section. Their exchange is an important link in the First National distributing organization and handles, in addition, a number of important productions issued on the state right basis.

From their present position and experience in the industry, the fact that Richards and Flynn are identified with the Gardner producing company will carry considerable weight with exhibitors throughout the country.

Start Preliminary Work

Preliminary work in organizing the producing unit has been commenced. According to present plans, an independent studio in Los Angeles will be leased and preparations will be carried forward rapidly in order that everything may be in readiness to commence camera work upon Gardner's arrival in Los Angeles. Executive direction of the work will be handled by Mr. Flynn in Kansas City.

Mr. Flynn states that several distributing channels are under consideration but as yet no proposition has been accepted.

Von Stroheim Returns

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, June 2—Eric Von Stroheim has returned from New York with a new contract and will start at once on "Foolish Wives," a sequel to "Blind Husbands," for Universal.

"Splendid Hazard" To Be Published In June

The screen version of Harold MacGrath's "A Splendid Hazard," an Allan Dwan production in which Henry B. Walthall heads the cast, will be published through First National Exhibitors' Circuit early in June.

The cast includes Rosemary Theby, Norman Kerry, Ann Forrest, Hardee Kirkland, Thomas Jefferson, Philo McCullough, Jiquel Lano and Joseph Dowling. Walthall enacts the part of Karl Breitman, descendant of Napoleon Bonaparte, who pursues his dream of a throne and the restoration of monarchy in France.

Illinois and Indiana Are Sold On Capital Pictures

Capital Film Company has just disposed of the state's rights for Illinois and Indiana on a new play based on the oil craze throughout the Southwest, "Witch's Gold," to Harry Weiss, president of Superior Screen Service of Chicago.

The new play introduces to the screen Davide, a new star, who is supported by an all-star cast of favorite players, including Edward Coxen, Gene Gauntier, Charles Mailes, Spottiswood Atken, Augustus Phillips and Teddy.

Manager Sheehan Enthusiastic Over Fox Activities in Foreign Countries

Studies the General Conditions Pertinent to the Industry While Visiting in England, France, Germany and Italy

After making a thorough study of conditions relative to the motion picture industry in several countries in Europe, Winfield R. Sheehan, general manager of Fox Film Corporation, has returned to the New York offices with enthusiastic reports regarding Fox activities abroad.

Manager Sheehan's trip covered branch offices of the company in England, France, Germany, Austria, Czechoslovakia, Italy and Belgium.

Eager for Pictures

With regard to the Fox productions, Mr. Sheehan reports that throughout those territories which recently have been opened to films following a long period under war conditions, the exhibitors are looking forward with eager interest to Fox films. This, he says, is the feeling generally in the foreign markets, and all European branches of the organization have made great strides in contracting with exhibitors for pictures now listed for publication.

During Mr. Sheehan's stay in London the new offices of Fox Film Corporation, at 13 Berners Street, were opened officially with ceremonies at which Justin Huntly McCarthy, author of the world-famous story, "If I Were King," presided. Many notables were present at a luncheon in the directors' room of the Fox building. It is a beautiful structure and required but little remodeling to adapt it to the service of the Fox branch organization.

Opens Two Plants

Manager Sheehan opened in England and France new Fox branch offices for the production of Fox films in those countries. These two branch plants will enable the European offices of the firm to supply prints on a far bigger scale than hitherto. Also, they will supply for America Fox films made in France with French companies.

The opening of these two plants, according to Mr. Sheehan, meets the demand of European exhibitors for more Fox prints, and the output which is steadily forging to the forefront position among screen entertainments. The conditions as noted by the general manager of the Fox company are the most favorable yet recorded for this concern's European trade.

Fox Film Corporation now maintains a branch office in almost every leading city in the world, with distributing facilities ample to meet any pressure for years to come.

Await Sunshine Special

In London, which city registers the pulse of the motion picture fans of Great Britain and Ireland, Mr. Sheehan found that the English exhibitors are anxiously awaiting the arrival of the Fox Sunshine special comedy which soon will be issued. This big five-reel Sunshine has a market ready and waiting for it in Europe, judging from the enthusiasm evinced by the theatremen who use the regular two-reel Sunshines as fast as they can obtain them. To date this brand of film fun is apparently as popular abroad as it is at home.

No announcement is yet forthcoming from the Fox office of next season's plans, or the names of new stars or plays which may have arrived with General Manager Sheehan. It is expected, however, that such an announcement will be issued soon.

Muriel Ostrich to Make Comedies for Arrow Film

Muriel Ostrich will make a series of twelve comedies for Arrow Film Corporation, under the direction of Arvid Gilstrom, according to W. E. Shallenberger, president of Arrow.

The first two comedies are "Petty Sets the Pace" and "Love Birds." The following territory has been sold: New York, Northern New Jersey, Southern New Jersey, Ohio, Kentucky and Michigan; Oklahoma, Texas and Arkansas; New England, Eastern Pennsylvania, Western Pennsylvania, Virginia, Indiana and Illinois.

In Indiana and Illinois

Silee Film Exchange, Chicago, has purchased the rights for Wisconsin and Illinois on the feature picture of the sensational automobile race at Indianapolis on May 31.

Charles Ray Signs to Use Rothacker Prints

Young Producer Praises the Very Efficient Laboratory Work of Concern

Negotiations have been concluded between Charles Ray and Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company of Chicago whereby the producer's First National productions will be printed at the Rothacker laboratories. In this connection Mr. Ray said:

"It is a distinctly pleasant to conclude negotiations with the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company whereby my forthcoming productions for First National release are to have the benefits of the expert laboratory facilities which have made Rothacker prints such a well-known name in the trade.

"To me it seems that the final results of the combined efforts of all of us in the studio are reflected in what the screen shows, and if our work is to get the maximum of benefit through portrayal via the film, we must insure our productions in the tremendously important detail of printing.

"The vital importance of this step in the business of making photoplays can scarcely be overestimated. By the previous work of the Rothacker plant we know that we can safely depend upon every minute of photoplays value showing up on the film. In our initial production, 'Fortyfive Minutes from Broadway,' we are standing squarely behind the faith of the exhibitor body of the country that this picture will come up to the highest expectations in every detail. It is reassuring to know that on the score of printing, too, that there is an agreement with Rothacker prints, 'Fortyfive Minutes from Broadway' is aiming for 100 per cent perfection."
H. B. Warner to Make Six Pictures A Year for Distribution By Pathe

Works of Noted Authors in America and in Europe Have Been Acquired By Jesse Hampton as Vehicles for the Star

H. B. Warner, one of the prominent stars of both the stage and the screen, is to be featured in several productions annually by terms of an agreement just entered into between Jesse D. Hampton, under whose management Warner has been appearing, and Paul Brunet, vice-president and general manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc.

The contract limits the number of productions to six a year, and each will be distributed through Pathe. Rights to the works of several noted authors have been obtained as vehicles for the series. Work has started on the first picture.

The signing of Warner places three Jesse D. Hampton stars under the Pathe banner. Already Mr. Hampton has purchased several exceptionally high-class stories, and among the celebrated authors on both sides of the Atlantic whose works will be adapted are William J. Locke, John Galsworthy, Jerome K. Jerome, H. F. Hopkins, Smith, F. Anstey, Robert Hichens, John Hastings Turner, Kenneth B. Clarke, Bret Harte, Frank H. Spearman, and Marah Ellis Ryan.

Will Go Abroad

Howard E. Morton, New York representative of Mr. Hampton, will go to Europe this summer to confer with authors under contract and to arrange for additional material for the Hampton stars and special productions.

Further details of the plans for Warner, under his new distribution arrangement with Pathe, will be announced later. The story of the initial publication is said to be the most appealing story yet allotted Warner, and, according to Mr. Hampton, should develop into the greatest picture Warner ever has made.

Following his retirement from the cast of "Sleeping Partners," in which he played nearly a year in New York, Mr. Warner immediately entered into picture production under Mr. Hampton's direction. In the early days of Triangle, Mr. Warner made several great pictures which established him as a star of the first magnitude.

Buys Literary Works

While his conference with Mr. Brunet was the principal reason that took Mr. Hampton East, the producer spent some of his time purchasing new literary material for his stars. He has also had several conferences with Mr. Morton, in charge of the Pathe offices in the Long Acre building, Mr. Hampton expressed satisfaction over the success of the recent productions from his studios and registered his belief that his forthcoming pictures would eclipse their predecessors in popularity and box-office results.

Our new studios at Hollywood are now in full swing and are completely equipped with every modern facility for the production this summer and fall of a notable series of high-class pictures," says the producer.

Demand Increasing

"The rapidly increasing demand for Blanche Sweet pictures more than justifies our faith in the ability of this gifted star to surpass all her previous screen achievements. Another of our releases through Pathe will be William Desmond's "Broadway Cowboy," from a story by Byron Morgan."

Another important feature of our plans is a series of Henry King and Robert Thornby productions. These big special productions will combine with recognized directorial ability the literary genius of several authors and will be interpreted by all-star casts.

The first of these, 'Half a Chance,' from the successful novel by Frederick Iqham, is now being filmed in Los Angeles and San Francisco under the direction of Robert Thornby.

Wolper Confirms New Activity in Production

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, June 2—Isaac Wolper, former president of Mayflower Plays Corporation, has officially confirmed the story printed in Exhibitors Herald that he was interested in the new C. Gardner Sullivan producing company. Mr. Wolper will be vice-president and supervising director. Messmore Kendall, Mr. Wolper and Mr. Sullivan form the board of directors.

Caulfield Supervises

Harry P. Caulfield, production manager for Sol Lesser, is supervising the finishing touches on the late Katherine Gender, formerly of the Outlet Pictures, as the title writer; Reed Housits, Vincent Bryan, prominent song writer, and Edward McPherson, former motion picture editor for Mary Pickford, will collaborate in editing the picture. Nellie Walker will do the art titles.

Callaghan Is Going Abroad to Produce

Bessie Love Follows Shortly To Make Dickens' "Old Curiosity Shop"

Andrew J. Callaghan, head of Andrew J. Callaghan Productions, which is featuring Bessie Love, sailed June 1 on the American liner St. Paul for England, where he will make preparations for producing Charles Dickens' "Old Curiosity Shop." Miss Love, who will star in the production, will follow shortly.

Al Rogell, special representative of the company, arrived in New York prior to the sailing date with the first print of "The Midlanders," from the Charles Tenney Jackson novel, and an expensive production under the direction of Ida May Park and Joseph De Grasse, in the belief that with this equipment, different from anything she has previously had, Bessie Love will demonstrate her true value as a dramatic actress of rare ability and charm and a box-office asset of widespread popularity.

It is not yet decided where Miss Love will stay for England. After making the necessary arrangements, Mr. Callaghan will return to this country. He expects then to send a company abroad to make that quaint picturesque play in the colorful locale in which the original novel transpires.

Lascalle to Spend Twelve Weeks in Producing Each "Comedyart" Issue

A new policy of spending twelve weeks on the production of each "Comedyart" publication Special Pictures Corporation has been announced by Ward Lascalle, director general of that organization.

The new policy will effect a co-ordination of the efforts of scenario editor, director, cameraman, film editor and subtitle writer, so that each 1,400-foot comedy turned out as the principal unit of the "Comedyart" production will be as near perfect as possible in every detail.

The new policy has been heartily endorsed by Louis W. Thompson, president of Special Pictures, and H. J. Roberts, general sales manager. The executives are arranging their distribution schedule so that this innovation in comedy making can be carried out to the fullest extent.

Four Companies Working

Four companies now are making 1,400-foot comedies. Extensive remodeling of the Balboa studio at Long Beach has been effected in order to facilitate the making of the Special Pictures short-reel fun features.

Milburn Moranti heads one producing unit; Charles Ditz, a former Rolin director, a second unit; George Cooper, formerly with Taylor Holmes productions and Vitagraph comedies, the third; while the fourth producing unit is being personally directed by Director General Lascalle.

Star Being Featured

Among the better known comedians who are being featured by Special Pictures are Joe Bonner, Vitagraph player and well known English stage comedian; Max Ascher, former associate of Kolb and Dill and other comedy stars; Sandy Roth, formerly with the Ziegfeld Follies and Gus Edwards' Reviews on the Orpheum time, and Tex Henson, "the cowboy mirthmaker." Hazel Powell, Alma Lucille and Peggy Weightman are among the beauties who act as feminine foils to the funmakers.

Lascalle has reorganized his producing staff to include George Larson, chief cinematographer; Joe Moranti, technical director; George Gorton, transportation and location superintendent; Lucille McGowan, modiste, and G. Gillette, studio auditor.

"Friends and Enemies" is the title of the latest "Comedyart" picture.

Mrs. Sidney Drew Ilas
Compared Fourth Film

Mrs. Sidney Drew has completed the fourth of her series of two-reelers for Pathé distribution, in the Essanay studio at Chicago. "The Unconventional Maida Greenwood," is the title of the successor to "The Emotional Miss VAughn," which was published by Pathé on May 30.

John Cumberland, who is starred in the series, has closed his theatrical season in Chicago and has returned to New York to begin the production of the fifth of the Julian Street stories. "The Emotional Miss Vaughan" will bring Mrs. Drew back to the screen in the title role of this comedy, the best of her series to date.

Wait Council Decision
On Exchange Building
$50,000 Bond Is Deposited With National Body by
The Promoters

Whether construction work is to proceed immediately on a building to house Chicago film exchanges depends on the decision to be rendered on June 8 by the city council relative to an extension of the effective date of the ordinance prohibiting the handling of films within the loop.

All preparatory matters have been taken care of by the promoters and the various companies affected. A $50,000 bond has been deposited with the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry by the interests back of the project. Between fifteen and twenty companies have signed their leases and turned over one month's rent. Eight or ten other organizations have expressed a desire to take space in the building.

Although it is not known what action the council will take, those close to the situation believe that it will be favor- able to the film interests in view of the good faith shown by the promoters and exchange companies.

As soon as the city authorities extend the date on which the ordinance becomes effective, if such be the case, ground will be broken about the industrial side of June for the erection of a building at Clark and Kinzie streets which will cost approximately $1,500,000.

Among the companies who have signed leases are Celebrated Players Film Corporation, Hallmark, Selznick Enterprises, Metro, Universal, Masterpiece and Superior Screen Service.

Territory Is Selling on Re-Issued Neilan Picture

Exclusive Features, Inc., announces that many territories have been sold on the revival of Marshall Neilan's "The Country That God Forgot." This picture is being offered on the state rights market. In the cast of the picture are Tom Santschi, famous for his work in "The Spoilers," and now starring Goldwyn productions; Mary Charleson, George Fawcett, Charles Gerrard and Victoria Forde.

The territories already sold include Texas and Arkansas to Specialty Film Company of Dallas; Oklahoma to Tucker Brothers of Oklahoma City; the Southern states, Florida, Alabama, Tennessee, Georgia, North and South Carolina to K. & R. Film Company of Atlanta, and Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia to the Dual Film Corporation of Pittsburgh, Pa.

New York Governor in "Evolution of Travel"

In producing the Universal educational feature, "The Evolution of Travel," Harry Levey, manager of the industrial and educational department of Universal Film Manufacturing Company, had the camera trained on the De Witt Clinton, the first train that ever entered New York, and Governor Smith of New York, who made the trip from Albany especially to appear in the picture.
Franklin Closes With Kaufman to Produce Four Features Annually

First Picture Will Be Under Way by June 21, With Advance Preparations Now Being Made—Title of Production Not Announced

A deal has been closed between Sidney Franklin and Albert A. Kaufman whereby the director will make four specials annually under the banner of Sidney Franklin Productions.

The initial picture under this arrangement will be started on June 21. Although preparatory work is now under way, no title of the first picture has been announced. Announcement of the distribution plans is being deferred for the present.

Produced in the West

The first production will be staged at the studio in the West which is occupied by Mr. Kaufman in conjunction with Marshall Neilan. Here Mr. Franklin will have his individual producing unit.

Sidney Franklin is one of the newest directors to reach the front ranks in this branch of the industry. His career has been eventful and he has been compelled to overcome many obstacles, but his originality and his distinctive creative powers have won him a place in his field.

The director became affiliated with the industry several years ago, after many unsuccessful attempts, as extra man in a Hobart Bosworth picture. Later he succeeded in getting Mr. Bosworth to give him a job as assistant cameraman at $10 a week. For two years he worked with Bosworth and then with his brother, Chester, and $400 of their own money produced a children's feature. This picture made a hit and the Franklin boys become established as directors.

Directed Norma Talmadge

As director for Norma Talmadge, Sidney really found himself. Later Mary Pickford wired him and he directed two pictures for her. Recently he formed his own company and arranged with Mayflower to make two pictures, the first of which is "Athalie." The Kaufman-Franklin deal is expected to result in some big pictures. Big stories staged by Mr. Franklin with popular motion picture artists and produced under modern environments are the chief ingredients for Sidney Franklin Productions, according to the announcement, and some interesting news is promised from this source in the near future.

Seek Foreign Rights on "Hope Diamond Mystery"

Kosnik Films, Inc., reports that great interest is being manifested in England, Canada and India regarding the production of the "Hope Diamond Mystery" serial written by May Yohe, formerly Lady Francis Hope. May Yohe toured these countries in musical comedy and there are also some spectacular episodes laid in India. Several offers for the foreign rights to the serial from the above-named countries have been received.

Locklear Will Make Productions for Fox

(Special to Exhibitor Herald)

LOS ANGELES, June 2.—Lieutenant Ormer L. Locklear, the aviator, has been signed by William Fox to make aerial features. It is said that the noted birdman will be called upon to exceed his previous records as a stunt flyer. Kirby Shellaby is the star's personal manager.
Mr. Kohn declares that he wants exhibitors to understand, however, that Realart, in producing this type of play, will not tolerate salacious and unclean productions.

"We have never had for this type of picture," he says, "and we do not mean to begin it now. Our eyes are fixed ahead and we can promise exhibitors something that we are confident will strike a new note of popularity."

Is the Fifth Star

Miss Daniels is the fifth star under the Realart banner. In promoting her, Mr. Kohn declares that Realart feels that the right person has been selected to portray the type of character desired.

The addition of Bebe Daniels means a step forward in motion picture production," says Mr. Kohn, "one that will not be fully appreciated until her first picture is seen. We might have obtained the services of an established star to carry out this new idea we have, but such a course would only have allowed an approximation of what we had in mind.

"Changes come swiftly, especially in motion pictures, where the public taste is continually shifting. We have needed and marked one particular movement and have prepared ourselves to anticipate a new demand. The old vampire star has her day, but now, without a struggle and not without leaving her mark on the public taste.

Star Well Qualified

"There is not a star in motion pictures who could have qualified to play in this new type of production as does Miss Daniels. Of course, Miss Daniels has never done precisely this sort of thing before, but her record shows her possibilities. Under the direction and handling which Realart can and will give her, she is bound to meet this promise and that quickly. Here is youth, beauty and ability and with the ideals and strength of the Realart organization behind her. Bebe Daniels will quickly come one of the country's most distinguished and distinctive screen artists."

Bebe Daniels was born in Dallas, Tex., nineteen years ago. She is a descendant of relatives of the Spanish Empress Josephine, and this royal blood flows in the veins of the charming young actress who has achieved stardom as the result of her talent, beauty and close application to her work.

Miss Daniels' grandmother came from Castile, the ancient and historic city of Spain. Miss Daniels' mother is pure Spanish also, but came from South America, while her father is Scotch. Her maternal great grandfather was governor of Colombia and her grandfather was the American consul at Buenos Aires for a number of years.

On Stage at Four

At the age of four she was doing one-night stands with a repertory company playing Shakespeare's dramas. She played with the Belasco stock company in San Francisco at an early age, appearing in child roles, and was starred in "The Prince Chap." Her screen career began at the age of eight in child parts for Selig. Later she played with Nyx, Vitagraph and Rolin-Pathe.

Cecil B. DeMille saw her in comedy roles and selected her immediately for leading parts in his special productions. Miss Daniels played the part of Miss O'Doone in "O'Doone," was Miss Kohn, the story "The Admirable Crichton," and also had the part of "Vice" in the Paramount production, "Everywoman."

She has a featured role in Cecil DeMille's picture "Why Change Your Wife?" which is at present scoring one of the biggest successes of the hour throughout the country. Almost simultaneously, she is appearing as Wallace Reid's leading woman in "The Dancin' Fool."

Dwan Believes Better Results Are Obtained By Working at Night

Allan Dwan has reversed the working schedule on his sixth and last production under the Mayflower banner. Instead of working during the day, production activities began buzzing around the Boston studio on the Coast at 7 o'clock each evening.

The advantages in this reversal, says the producer, are better dramatic qualities, because of quietness in the studio and more feeling in all of the parts, because of psychological reasons. Night influences efficiency.

In staging a hospital scene, the producer was aided in detail work by his brother, Dr. Leo J. Dwan of Chicago.

In the cast are Mary Thurman, Niles Welch, Joseph Dowling, Eugene Besser, Jack Campeau and George Hackthorn.

Cinema Post of Legion Now Headed by Aitken

Rayman K. Aitken was elected commander of the American Legion, Cinema Post 491, at a meeting at the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company studio, Chicago. Edmund A. Bertram was chosen adjutant and George Kilgore sergeant at arms.

It is designated that the regular meeting nights would be on the first and third Fridays of each month. Commander Aitken asks that all Chicago veterans connected with the motion picture industry would be present at the meetings at the Rothacker studio. An intensive membership campaign will be opened soon with a dance at the studio.

Next Vitagraph Special To be "Trumpet Island"

The next special which Vitagraph will publish following James Oliver Curwood's "The Trumpet of the Swan" and "Marge O'Doone" will be "Trumpet Island," according to Albert E. Smith, president. Final scenes are being taken along the Hudson river. The special cast includes Marguerite De La Motte.
Putting the "Art" in Realart

This looks like a case for the S. P. C. A., what with the thermometer down to freezing, it isn't much fun dancing on the green sward, with only a piece of cheese cloth for an overcoat. But Director Donald Crisp, who is directing scenes for "Miss Hobbs," doesn't mind it. Note the fur-lined gloves. Helen Jerome Eddy, Wanda Hawley and Julianne Johnson are the young ladies.

Walter Hiers, the fat fellow who has an important role in Wanda Hawley's first Realart production, "Miss Hobbs," doesn't believe in signs. Not when his pipe is drawing good.

BEBE DANIELS
Realart's latest acquisition makes the fifth star signed by that company. Miss Daniels possesses youth, beauty and the ability to act and will undoubtedly soon rank among the foremost screen artists of this country.
Kent Buys "Up In Mary's Attic" to Open His New Exchange at Denver

Willis Kent, head of Quality Pictures Company, Denver, made a special trip to New York to purchase rights to "Up in Mary's Attic," the five-reel comedy produced by Fine Arts Pictures, Inc., Murray W. Garsson, president. He never had seen the picture, it is said, but was attracted by advertisements in the trade press. Before he left he dictated this unsolicited statement and mailed it to Charles F. Scherwin, general sales manager for Fine Arts:

"To open my new exchange in Denver, I realized that I should have one big headline—picture that everyone would have to see. Therefore, when I saw the announcements of 'Up in Mary's Attic' I came to New York to look the picture over on my own chance that it might be what I wanted.

Is Great Money Getter!

"Since seeing parts of it I want to say that this production is not only far better than I hoped or dreamed, but in my opinion will be the greatest money getter ever released. It has everything—delicious comedy minus the slapstick; a dandy story with a heart interest that is irresistible; the most gorgeous bunch of girls ever assembled, and the sweetest, most appealing star in pictures. It is the comedy supreme—the finest blending of laughter and tears, smiles and heart throbs, ever achieved on the screen. And that is what the dear old public loves.

"No one can see 'Up in Mary's Attic' without being moved, and moved deeply. I consider this has been the most profitable trip I ever made to New York, because it has made me owner of the perfect picture."

Paid High Price

Mr. Kent is said to have paid one of the highest prices ever paid for the rights to the Mountain States—Colorado, Utah, New Mexico and Wyoming. His enthusiasm and keen criticism of the picture caused Mr. Garsson, president of Fine Arts, to make this statement:

"What Mr. Kent has said about 'Up in Mary's Attic' merely confirms our faith in this production. We have announced that we have one of the cleverest and most original features of the year, and Mr. Kent's unsolicited letter upon the subject does much to convince us all the more that we have the one best bet of the year."

Selznick Making Second Serial, "Branded Four"

The second serial which Selznick Enterprises will distribute, "The Branded Four," is now in production, according to Sam E. Morris, vice-president and general manager of Select Pictures. Ben Wilson and Neva Gerber are co-starring in the picture. Announcement of the first publication will be made shortly.

"The Branded Four," said Mr. Morris, "will contain novelities and innovations of a startling character. While I am not ready to divulge any of the high spots of the serial, or the structure upon which it is built, I commit myself to the statement that this serial picture will prove to be a bonanza in picturedom for exhibitors."

Several Salesmen Added To American Film Force

Additional salesmen have been added to the Chicago office of American Film Company, Inc., and to the St. Louis territory. E. P. Pickler and Ed Mordue are in the Chicago offices, while W. P. Bernfeld and C. W. Delong have taken up their duties in the Missouri district. J. M. Hayden is in Denver for the company, while George W. Hinton and G. W. Gavin are said to be keeping things moving in Kansas City. A. B. Carpenter is in the Dallas office; J. E. Armgardt at the Buffalo exchange, and J. R. Keitz in Salt Lake City.

Press Agents Seek Repeal of Dry Law

Plan Organization to Combat Prohibition on Platform Of Personal Liberty

Organization for the avowed purpose of aiding in the repeal of the eighteenth amendment and of supporting for the presidency of their choice a prominent man in public life—probably Governor Edwards of New Jersey—who has openly advocated repeal of the prohibition law, is to be launched by the press agents of the country.

A meeting of the publicity writers was held recently in panel discussion at the Capitol theatre, with Atwell of the Capitol theatre as chairman. A motion by Vivian Moses that a committee be appointed to take definite action in opposition to prohibition was adopted.

In an address, Atwell announced the purposes of the meeting. He said:

"That for the preservation of their own jobs it was imperative that they organize to combat prohibition on a platform of personal liberty.

"That as self-respecting citizens it was their duty to legally destroy, if possible, any infringement of their constitutional liberties and rights.

"That the country was threatened with a state of nauseating mollycoddism by narrow-minded fanatics, and that it was their duty as trumpeters of the people to warn them against blue-nosed fanatics.

"That in order to insure the success of their stand against the eighteenth amendment and its attendant threatening results against amusement institutions as a whole, it is essential to focus upon some prominent public man who has avowed openly his stand for personal liberty and the legal abolition of the eighteenth amendment.

A resolution was adopted providing for semi-weekly meetings until the national political conventions are over.

Character Will Publish Soon "Isle of Destiny"

Character Pictures Corporation announces that its first special, "The Isle of Destiny," which features Paul Gilmore, will be published. Production has been under way on this feature for months, it is announced.

Prominent in the cast besides Mr. Gilmore, who has been featured in Metro, Triangle and Pathe pictures, are Hazel Hudson, Frank Williams, Helen Pierce and John Wedges.

Titled "Tit for Tat"

The new Hallroom Boys comedy, which will be published shortly, has been titled "Tit for Tat." The setting of the picture was completed by Harry Williams, director, while he was en route from the Coast to New York to confer with Jack Cohn, head of the production unit.

May Feature Novelty

Jack Cohn, producer of "Screen Snapshots," which will picture the life of various stars, declares that reports indicate that many exhibitors are planning to feature the subject, which will be featured every other week. Eight stars will be featured in each issue of the picture, which will be state righted.

Real Adventures Are Experienced by The Cast in "Cynthia-of-the-Minute"

Adventures of a real nature were experienced by the players in the cast of "Cynthia-of-the-Minute," the Gibraltar picture in which Leah Baird is featured. The star declares that in no previous picture has she taken so many risks in order to accomplish realism.

The picture is a version of Louis Joseph Vance's widely read novel of the great outdoors. In this connection it is said that the picture has been made practically to the exclusion of interior settings, four of the six parts having been shot on shipboard.

No Drawingroom Picture

This W. W. Hodkinson publication has little to do with drawingroom scandal, but is replete with intrigue and rapid action.

The attempt of a band of sea brigands to scuttle a ship in which the heroine has become interested through her association with the titled woman owning it, and her thwarting of the plan through her knowledge of wireless telegraphy suggest something of the sort of play this is. It is impossible, however, to convey by witnessing the picture, a correct notion of the dramatic interest maintained throughout the six parts, it is said.

Miss Baird regards it as one of the strongest film stories Mr. Vance ever wrote, and this opinion is shared by Director Perry Vekroff.

Image of a Man Drowns

The story came close to drowning, it is said, when swept against the anchor chain of the S. S. Carolinian outside sampa, Miss Baird was swimming to the rescue of Hugh Thompson, her leading man. Miss Baird was actually in great danger of drowning and was rescued with the utmost difficulty by Thompson and other seamen of her company, it is declared.

Some of the scenes are excellent fighting scenes, it is said, with fifty men engaged in an attack on the defenders of the ship. In one of these scenes which was filmed on the main cabin stairway of the liner Kron Prinz Wilhelm, Burr McIntosh as the "Big Red Man" puts up an amazing fight against odds, which probably will be regarded as a fighting screen classic, it is declared.

Makes Long Swim

Miss Baird's long swim from ship to shore, in which she actually covered a mile of rough water before her feet hit the shingle, is noteworthy.

Besides McIntosh and Thompson, the cast assembled by Arthur F. Beck, who supervised Miss Baird includes Alexander Gaden, Mathilde Brundage, John Webb Dillon, Wallace Widdicombe and William Welch.

Lesser and Gore Form Company to Distribute Films For Educational

Sol Lesser and Gore Brothers have organized Educational Film Exchange of Southern California for the distribution in Southern California and Arizona of the two-part subjects of Educational Film Corporation of America.

Dave Bershon, general manager of the Los Angeles First National exchange, will supervise distribution.

Cinema-Opera at $1 Fails to Get Crowd

Chicago Impresario Planning Combination Show at $2 a Ticket

Andreas Dippel, Chicago impresario who inaugurated the cinema-opera program at the Auditorium recently, has closed the show, the first week convincing him that the people whose pocketbooks are suited to the $1 admission price do not care for the mixed entertainment.

The impresario has announced, however, that if he is successful in obtaining additional financial backing he will open again, but the admission price this time will be $2. Referring to his first failure, Mr. Dippel said:

"Ah, it is terrible to think that the common people whom I wanted to help by giving them good music at an extraordinary popular price did not respond. It was a civic enterprise, practically: I weep. I cry. They do not want it. They prefer jazz music and the cheap picture houses.

"Next week I will open again. It will be a grand success. The place will be packed. The price shall be doubled and the people will like it better."

Authors' Friendly Attitude Means
Step Forward, Says Albert Smith

Vitagraph President Declares That Company Will Continue Production Activities at Its Studios in Brooklyn

The increasing interest shown by famous authors in motion pictures offers a promising future to the industry in the opinion of Albert E. Smith, president of Vitagraph.

"They are learning to write action and not merely words," he declares, adding that this factor with their friendly attidude is the best step forward in the industry during the past year.

Authors Alter Attitude

Authors of the greatest art and skill have now discovered that 1,000 words of description can be duplicated in a few seconds on the screen, he says, and also that characters must be doing something all the while in front of these beautiful backgrounds. A description of the heroine's eyes and hair may take up a considerable section of a piece of printed fiction, but on the screen the spectators will know in one second whether she is beautiful or not.

In speaking of the activities of Vitagraph, Mr. Smith dispelled the report that the company would cease production activities at its Brooklyn studios.
The report, he said, by the acquisition of ten additional acres of ground in Los Angeles. Purchase of this property was made necessary, he said, in order that the ten units operating there might achieve the maximum of production.

The companies which will continue active in the east are those headed by Alice Joyce, Corinne Griffith and Harry
T. Morcy.

While on the coast Mr. Smith completed "Hidden Dangers," a new serial, in collaboration with Cleveland Moffett, famous fiction writer. Joe Ryan and Jean Paige are in the leading roles.

Mr. Smith's plans for Vitagraph include the production of specials from books by well-known authors for publication at regular intervals. Director
David Smith, now is preparing another
James Oliver Curwood story for the screen.

Another special adapted from "Trumpet Island," by Gouverneur Morris, is being completed at the Hollywood studios under the direction of Tom Terriss. Marguerite De La Motte and Wallace MacDonald head the all-star cast. Earle Williams will continue to make his features in Los Angeles under the direction of Chester Bennett.

Production Schedule Fixed

With W. S. Smith, manager of western Vitagraph, President Smith worked out a production schedule for 1920, which in addition to specials will keep three serials in the course of production. A. E.
Smith and Cleveland Moffett supervised the editing of the final episodes of "The Silent Avenuer," William Duncan's current serial, while in the west, and also started work on "The Veiled Mystery," for another month before returning east to continue writing with Mr. Smith at the latter's summer headquarters in Oyster Bay.

Larry Senion will continue to produce his special comedies at the western studios. An unlimited production cost has been awarded him by Mr. Smith.

Germenprez, Erich Von Stroheim's

director recently.

Early Trade Showing
On Jans Film Planned

Rolfe Cutting and Assembling
"Madonnas and Men" for Publication Soon

A trade showing of "Madonnas and Men," the special produced by Jans Pictures, Inc., will be held within a week or ten days. B. A. Rolfe now is cutting and assembling the production, which Jans officials hold will be one of the big box office attractions of this year.

In the opinion of company officials, this feature has the qualities to encourage summer attendance, and in this respect should make a strong appeal to exhibitors.

The story adapted was written by Carey Wilson and Edmond Goulding.
Violette Clark did the continuity. Attention is called to the art work in the sub-titles, these having been modeled from clay.

"Madonnas and Men," according to Jans executives, is not only different in theme and production, but also is novel in the manner of presentation.

It is claimed that an enormous sum was expended in making this picture, and at no time was production rushed.

ger of the theater.
Selznick Enterprises to Produce All Pictures in East After July 1
Change Is Being Made As a Means of Furthering Efficiency—Two Companies Now Are Working on West Coast

Effective on July 1, Selznick Enterprises will produce all its pictures at the eastern studios in the Bronx and at Fort Lee, N. J.

Only two companies now are working on the western coast, where Harry Rapf is studio manager. Production there is expected to be completed by July 1, so that the units can be transferred east.

The decision to transfer all production activities east is the result, it is said, of carefully worked out plans by executives whereby a further degree of efficiency and co-ordination can be incorporated in the routine of production.

Acquire Another Studio

Heretofore it has been customary to make productions for Selznick, Select, National Picture Theatres, Inc., and Republic Distributing Corporation in both the eastern and western studios, necessitating the transfer of whole companies from one coast to the other at frequent intervals.

Although Lewis J. Selznick has studios both in the Bronx and Fort Lee, they were not of sufficient size to accommodate the various producing units. However, with the acquisition of the Solax studio and with the rearrangement of the producing schedule, it is predicted that not alone will the space be sufficient to care for all of the producing companies, but that through the closer alliance of these units, much better work will be executed.

Working on the coast now are the Owen Moore company and the Olive Thomas company, which is filming "Jenny." The fourth production, following "The Invincible Divorce," for National Picture Theatres, Inc., also is being produced at the west coast.

Players Are Assembled

The decision of Mr. Selznick to bring all his producing units together is taken as further indication that the Selznick organization is a prime mover in the interests of efficiency, cooperation and better pictures.

As recently announced, the stock company to appear in support of Selznick stock is being assembled by Myron Selznick at Fort Lee. The newest member to be signed is Warren Cook, who has appeared in support of practically every star of note and before he began his photoplay career was on the stage under the management of Charles Frohman, Henry W. Savage, William A. Brady and others. He appeared recently in the Olive Thomas picture, "The Flapper," and in the William Faversham film, "The Man Who Lost Himself.

With all production work being done in the east, it is believed that the various organizations under the Selznick banner will have been brought to the highest state of efficiency and cooperation possible. Previous announcements have intimated that this has been Mr. Selznick's desire for some time.

In an announcement this week, Myron Selznick said: "It does not require any great amount of insight concerning mo-

Wants the Name of Cameraman on Film Society Claims It Will Urge Photographer to Do Better Work

Put the name of the cameraman on the screen.

That is the slogan that is carrying the American Society of Cinematographers into a national campaign of education to prove to theatre owners that the name of the cameraman is valuable to the screen.

Philip Rosen, president of the Society, is communicating with every exhibitor in the country.

"The name of a cinematographer on the screen puts him under obligation to do good work," said Rosen. "If the producer does not use the cameraman's name he is opening the gates for indifferent, slip-shod photography. If the exhibitor cuts off the cameraman's name he is using the soft pedal on one of the best advertising angles that any picture has."

Rosen has been responsible largely for the privilege accorded producers of using the crest of the society upon films photographed by a member.

The society is composed of sixty-one ace cameramen, who were invited to membership following several pictures of unusual photographic merit. Rosen directs Universal features.

Fire Destroys Interior of Imp at Benton, Ark.

BENTON, Ark.—Fire of incendiary origin destroyed the interior of the Imp theatre here. Miss Alice Wooten, owner of the house, placed her loss at $4,500, while the building was damaged to the extent of $4,000.

Stecher-Caddock Film Goes Big in Nebraska

The Stecher-Caddock picture, taken at Madison Square Garden in New York during the championship wrestling match, is playing to capacity houses in Nebraska and Iowa, according to Ernie Holmes of Ernie Holmes Master Production Company, Omaha, who controls the rights on the film for the two states.

Holmes also controls "Neglected Wives," featuring Ann Luther, in his territory. The exchangeman says that present bookings indicate that this production will meet with success.

Matty Roubert Engaged By Reelcraft
To Star in Series of Short Subjects

The seventh series of short subjects to be produced by Reelcraft Pictures Corporation will star Matty Roubert, a 12-year-old leading man. These two-reel features will not be so-called "kod" pictures, declares R. C. Cropper, president of Reelcraft, but will be "features in every sense of the word from the preparation of the story right on through the cast, direction, production and everything."

To Be Big Series
This addition to the Reelcraft program will be the biggest series of the kind ever undertaken by an independent producing company for distribution by independent exchanges, declares Mr. Cropper.

"The stories will concern the adventures of boys and girls, in other words, the days of youth," says the president. "Reelcraft maintains that this is a field of universal appeal. Men and women are only boys and girls grown up. Is there anyone who does not remember the days of their youth? Back at the old home town. The good old days, with the annual visit of the one-ring circus, when every youngster in town was down at the station to watch the circus unload."

"Ask any gray-haired boy if he really likes his first sweetheart, at the old red school house, and listen to him tell about the tack he put on teacher's chair; how they used to play hookey to swim at the old swimming hole or go fishin' in the creek. There is a world of material in those happy days of youth with a universal appeal."

Matty Roubert
Matty Roubert, the young actor selected as the star for this series, is well suited for this series, it is said, and has a world of experience for his age, beginning at the age of 2 with the Virginia Company in the three-reel production of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." He has played boy parts with numerous leading producing companies such as Pathé; Vitagraph, Edison and Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

Matty is just past 12 and a regular, red-blooded, American boy, studying under the direction of a private tutor. He likes pictures and his particular preference is for a blond-haired leading lady who must not be over 12 years of age.

The productions will be in charge of William L. Roubert, the father of Matty, who also will direct the pictures, and at the present time is assembling his staff and cast for the pictures, which will be produced at Fort Lee, New Jersey.

To Publish Monthly
Reelcraft has planned to publish the productions at the rate of one a month, allowing four weeks for each picture, giving the producing unit ample time to complete a series of pictures suitable for presentation in every theatre in America.

Distribution will be through the Reelcraft and allied exchanges throughout the United States. There will be a complete line of advertising accessories, paper, slide, and other items. The date for the first publication will be early in the fall.

2,000-Seat Playhouse to Be Built by J. G. Rhode KENOSHA, WIS.—A $300,000 motion picture theatre, with a seating capacity of 2,000, is to be erected here by Joseph G. Rhode. Plans for the structure have been received.

Character Work in Mary Pickford's "Suds" Declared to be Exceptional
Character work in Mary Pickford's forthcoming United Artists production, "Suds," has been declared to be exceptional. This factor, it is said, has enabled Miss Pickford to carry out the atmosphere of the picture, which is laid in London, in its minutest detail.

Prominent in support of the star is Mme. Rose Dione, for a long time one of the leading members of Sarah Bernhardt's company in Paris and who since the outbreak of the war has appeared in French dramas at the French theatre in New York and more recently went to California to appear in the silent art.

Austin Principal Lead
Mme. Dione's screen debut was in "The Secret Garden" and recently she appeared in "TheLuck of the Irish." As yet she is unable to speak fluent English, which makes her especially suitable for the role of the excitable French propieteress of the hand laundries in the slums of London, where Mary, as Amanda Affleck, is the slavey.

The principal one of the minor roles of the shirt upon which this story is founded, is Albert Austin, an English comedian of note, who for the past four years has been prominent in all of Charlie Chaplin's productions, and was loaned by the comedian to Miss Pickford for this production.

Harold Goodwin, who scored such a success in support of Miss Pickford in "The Heart of the Hills," also is seen in "Suds" as Benjamin Pillsbury Jones, master of transportation for the laundry, his conversation being that of the dilapidated old nag, Lavender, attached to the wagon in which the laundry is delivered about the Soho district of London.

English Actress in Cast
"Audrey Montgomery, the clever English actress who has played in a number of eastern productions, but who more recently has appeared at the Little Theatre in Los Angeles, has a splendid part as one of the girls in the laundry who is rather skeptical of Amanda's aristocratic lineage. Miss Montgomery, being a fluent linguist, also acts as interpreter for Mme. Dione.

One of the principal members of the organization who is new to the film world is Lavender, the woe-hegennag which pulls the laundry wagon. Lavender was selected from some 200 applicants for the position, being the most dilapidated specimen of horse flesh ever seen around the set.

The scenario of "Suds" was adapted from Charles Frohman's production of Frederick Fenn and Richard Pryes' play, "Op o' the Bowl," in which Maude Adams scored a triumph. The production was made under the direction of Jack Dillon.

Van Loan Now Adapting Norma Talmadge Vehicle
H. H. Van Loan, free lance scenario writer, has been engaged to adapt "Curi-osity," H. Austin Adams's stage play, which will be used as a vehicle for Norma Talmadge.

Sennett Declares That Spurious Bathing Girl Act Show In St. Louis
It has been brought to the attention of Mack Sennett that an unauthorized and spurious production of Mack Sennett Bathing Girls took place at St. Louis recently.

Exhibitors are warned to beware of any such company appearing as Mack Sennett Bathing Girls, unless a written authorization to do so is presented over the signature of Mack Sennett, showing him actually to be the producer. Mr. Sennett has announced that he will prosecute anyone falsely using his name in connection with any Bathing Girl acts.

Before booking any girl acts in which the name of Mack Sennett is used, exhibitors are urged to communicate with the producer at his address, 1712 Alessandro street, Los Angeles. At the present time no Bathing Girl act from Mr. Sennett's studios is appearing anywhere in the United States.

New Lloyd Series Booked By the Brookland Strand
The second series of $100,000 Harold Lloyd comedies, which Pathe Exchange, Inc., is distributing, has been booked by the Strand theatre in Brooklyn. The first publication of the new series is "Horse Play Dry." The big American theatre at Denver also is on the list of recent bookings.
Enthusiastic approval of Benjamin B. Hampton's "Riders of the Dawn," which W. W. Hodkinson is distributing, is given by exhibitors of the country, according to reports to the home office from Hodkinson branches.

This production is an adaptation of Zane Grey's "The Desert of Wheat." Among the larger exhibitors who have booked the writer-supervised piece for immediate screening are Tom Moore of Washington, D. C.; James Q. Clemmer of Seattle and James Beatty, who has first-run houses at San Jose and Fresno.

According to the home office, the successful premiere of the picture at the Mark Strand, New York, prompted Mr. Moore to shelf another production so that he might open with "Riders of the Dawn" at his Strand theatre on May 30, instead of June 6.

Mr. Beatty's Liberty theatres at Fresno and San Jose will give "Riders of the Dawn" a week's day and date engagement that will be inaugurated with a powerful promotion campaign, it is said. Mr. Clemmer promises a campaign that will equal in power his promotion of R. B. Hampton's "The Westerners." The Seattle showman already planning a sixteen-column newspaper advertising spread.

Booked by Others
Among the other prominent first-run houses where "Riders of the Dawn" has been booked for engagements in June and early July are: A. K. Pay's Colonial, Stone Fox, S. D.; the Tudor, Atlanta, Ga.; Fox's Washington, Detroit, Mich.; the Knickerbocker, Columbus, O.; the Colonial, Aberdeen, S. D.; the Rex, Racine, Wis.; the Signal, Chattanooga, Tenn.; the Liberty, Springfield, O.; the Temple, Fort Wayne, Ind.; the Rialto, Newport News, Va.; the Luna, Lido, Marion, Ind.; the Jewel, Beaumont, Tex.; the Virgiman, Charleston, W. Va.; the Rev. Wheeling, W. Va.

A distinguished cast, selected by Hampton and Grey, is one of the many things "Riders of the Dawn" has to recommend it to the picture-loving public. The roster including Roy Stewart, Claire Adams, Robert McKim, Violet Schram, Joseph J. Dowling, Marc Robbins, Frank Brownlee, Frederic Starr and Marie Messenger, Hugh Ryan Conway, director of "Lombardi, Ltd." and a score of other cinema successes, supervised production of "Riders of the Dawn," wonderful photography being supplied by Harry Balfejo, the noted Spanish cinematographer.

Preparing Fannie Hurst Story for Cosmopolitan
Fannie Hurst's "Just Around the Corner" is being sceneized for production by Cosmopolitan Productions. Frank Borzage, who directed "Humoresque," which also was from the pen of Miss Hurst, will handle the megaphone of "Just Around the Corner."

Jewel Carmen Returns
Jewel Carmen has returned to the screen after an absence of a year, and will star in four Roland West productions annually. One of the West pictures now is in course of filming at the Esquire studio.

Myron Selznick, president of Selznick pictures, enjoys a grape juice highball with Zena Keefe and Eugene O'Brien between scenes.

Princess at Rushville Is Opened After Remodeling
RUSHVILLE, IND.—Walter F. Easley has opened his Princess theatre again, following a complete remodeling of the interior. The seating capacity has been increased to 1,000. New decorations and appointments make the playhouse one of the most modern and beautiful in this section, it is said.
ZUKOR LISTS FALL PUBLICATIONS

Statement by Famous Players-Lasky President
Gives Exhibitors an Estimate of What Company Has to Offer Them Beginning With September

Adolph Zukor, president of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, has issued a statement listing the productions which will be published by the organization for three months beginning with September.

"It always has been my custom at this time of the year," says the statement, "to make a statement regarding the place and policy of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation for the season to come. I have endeavored to place before exhibitors facts upon which they could base a fair estimate as to what our organization had to offer them, and I have striven to make clear to them the reasons why they could depend upon Famous Players-Lasky Corporation as a dependable source of supply of quality pictures in quantity. The list of productions follows."

SEPTEMBER

George Fitzmaurice's production, "The Right to Love," with Mae Murray and David Powell.

Elise Ferguson in Mrs. Humphrey Ward's "Lady Rose's Daughter."

Thomas Meighan in the famous story, "Civilian Clothes."

Dorothy Dalton in Sir James M. Barrie's story, "Half an Hour."

"Humoresque," Cosmopolitan's production of Fannie Hurst's story.

Dorothy Gish in "Little Miss Rebellious."

Wallace Reid in "What's Your Hurry?"

OCTOBER

Cecil B. DeMille's "Something to Think About."

"A Full House," from the famous farce, with Bryant Washburn.

Ethel Clayton in "The City Sparrow."

"Held by the Enemy," from William Gilbert's famous stage play.

NOVEMBER

George Fitzmaurice's production, "Idols of Clay," with Mae Murray and David Powell.

Ethel Clayton in "Rozanne O'Zanne."

Wallace Reid in "The Charm School," from a Saturday Evening Post story by Alice Duer Miller.

"Burglar Proof," a comedy featuring Bryant Washburn.

Billie Burke in Clyde Fitch's play, "The Frisky Mrs. Johnson."

German Raider Film Is Acquired By Unity

"Frivolous Wives" Is Ready For Distribution to Outlying Houses

An especially timely subject, "German Raider Moewe," has been acquired for Illinois and Indiana by Unity Photoplays Company of Chicago. An intensive exploitation campaign is being arranged on this naval war feature to aid exhibitors in its presentation. It will be displayed in two reels.

"Frivolous Wives," which is controlled by Unity in Illinois and Indiana, has just completed a week's run at both the Barbee and Star theatres in Chicago and now is ready to occupy outlying houses.

The "German Raider Moewe" is especially timely now in view of the fact that Decoration Day has just passed. Americanization Week is being observed and the anniversaries of the famous battles in the world war are being celebrated.

The feature is a descriptive portrayal of the famous German raider which sank thousands of tons of shipping off the west coast of the United States and in other parts of the ocean. The Americanization committee, headed by Franklin K. Lane, has requested exhibitors to screen subjects of this nature, not only during Americanization week, but throughout the year.

The activities of these German raiders always have been of interest to the people of this country. For that reason the subject should enliven any program at any time.

Robert Raphael Handles Read Publicity In Orient

J. Parker Read, Jr., producer of Louise Glum and Hobart Bosworth productions, has assigned Robert Raphael, a Los Angeles business man, to handle the organization's publicity in the Orient. Of late the Japanese have shown a marked tendency toward pictures, it is said, and many fan publications have sprung up.

Mr. Raphael will visit all the prominent Japanese newspapers, including Monthly Kinema Review, Nippon Hashi, Kinema Record, Hango and many others. He expects to be gone nearly a year. He will return by way of England and will repeat his duties in London.

Griever Gets Territory

On Norma Talmadge Film

Si Griever of Security Pictures, Chicago, has acquired the Illinois and Indiana rights on "Captivating Mary Carstairs," the five-part production which National Film Corporation of America re-issued on June 1, from Joe Brandt, director general of National.

A long list of sold territory on this picture was announced recently. The picture was adapted for the screen from Henry Sydnor Harrison's famous novel of the same name. Bruce Mitchell directed. It has been re-edited and retitled and new posters and advertising matter prepared.
American Will Issue
Three Specials Soon
All-Star Casts Appearing in Productions Which Are to Be Published Soon

American Film Company, Inc., has three specials for early publication. All-star casts were selected for these productions.

The third special, "Whispering Smith," by Frank H. Spearman, has a cast headed by Charles Clary and Irene Rich. Kathleen O'Connor and Billy Elmer are included in the cast.

S. S. Hutchison, president of American, contends in his selection of casts that the personality of all of the players should be in accord with the author's own conception of his characters. Coronavirus costs, R. R. Nehls, general manager, has been at the coast studios with the directors making a study of the personal equation in each case.

Hodkinson Article Deals With Present Conditions
In the Picture Industry

W. W. Hodkinson has published for free distribution to exhibitors a pamphlet which he calls "An Appeal to Common Sense." The pamphlet deals with present conditions in the industry. Mr. Hodkinson contends that many of the evils which now beset theatre owners arise from the fact that the same financial interests control producing and distribution.

Mr. Hodkinson says that under the system now followed by producer-distributors, the picture failures are charged as a debit against the exhibitor, thereby saddling on him the cost of unforecast profits. An independent distributing agency forcing the producer to bear the cost of failures on his own shoulders is one of the remedies proposed by Mr. Hodkinson.

"I hope," said Mr. Hodkinson, "that exhibitors will read the booklet, for it embodies the observations and experiences of many years together with the sincere desire to help the exhibitor out of his present difficulties."

"Screen Snapshots" Will Have N. Y. Showing Soon

Jack Cohn, producer of "Screen Snapshots," the novelty which portrays the lives of various stars, announces that the first and second issues are ready for publication. The New York premiere will be given soon, he says, at one of the four big Broadway houses. The feature is being state righted.

Hiers in "So Long Letty"

At Christie has arranged with Famous Players-Lasky Corporation whereby Walter Hiers, the comedian, will have a prominent role in "So Long Letty." Colleen Moore also has a big part in the picture.

J. H. Kunsky Planning One
Of Largest Theatres in U. S.

Leases Ground in Detroit on Which He Will Erect Ten-Story Building Including Playhouse With Seating Capacity of 4,250

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

DETOUR, MICH., June 1.—One of the largest motion picture theatres in the United States is to be built here by John H. Kunsky on the site bounded by Broadway, Madison avenue and Withrell and John R streets, which he has just leased. It will be known as the Capitol.

In the ceiling of the auditorium will be a magnificent dome, under which will be a beautiful lighting fixture. Soft color effects will predominate in the decorations. The waiting rooms, the promenades and the grand staircase will surpass anything in this part of the country, it is said.

A large lobby will extend the entire length of the auditorium, with wide marble staircases at each end. Opening off these stairways will be the promenade and mezzanine floor. Arrangement will be made so that music from the auditorium can filter through the rooms opening from the mezzanine.

The stage will be of such proportions as to permit an engagement of the largest theatrical attraction and grand opera. The lighting system of the house will be controlled by a large dimmer system on the stage.

This will be the third theatre on Grand Circus park controlled by Mr. Kunsky and his associate, George W. Trendle.

Path to Distribute Five Short Westerns Beginning on July 11

Pathé Exchange, Inc., will distribute a series of five two-part westerns, known as the "Young Buffalo Series," beginning with the week of July 11. They will be published at the rate of one a week. Young Buffalo of stage note has the leading role in the dramas. In private life he is Howard Yale Drew.

Particular stress has been laid by Pathé on the pictures locations, the breezy atmosphere and the hero who rides hard and shoots straight.

William Addison Lathrop wrote the stories for the series, while George Ridgewell directed. The pictures were made in the Canadian Northwest.

Will Rogers Is Assigned to Report Republican Meeting

Will Rogers, the comedian, has a new job.

A nationally known news service has engaged the screen and stage star to cover the Republican convention in Chicago and the Democratic gathering at San Francisco.

Rogers has been given carte blanche and will tell the story as he sees it in his inimitable style, giving to the nation the humorous angle of these two big political meetings.

MISREPRESENTATION

Because Chicago is the second largest city in the United States, and because smaller municipalities are prone to imitation, a certain peculiar interest attaches to the suggestion made by the Rev. Dr. W. S. Fleming, member of the Moving Picture Censorship Commission of Chicago, at a recent meeting.

"I would like to censor the theatres' newspaper advertising, too," said Rev. Fleming, after drastic censoring of other forms of theatre advertising had been recommended and approved, "but I know that it is impossible on account of the so-called freedom of the press." Other members of the commission agreed with him both on wanting to censor the advertising and that such a step would be impossible.

In itself, and in its immediate application, the utterance is more amusing than important. As indicative of the trend of thought among censorship advocates, however, it is significant.

The only foundation upon which the most radical could conceivably base a demand for censorship of advertising is misrepresentation—a fault of which theatre advertising is singularly free.

In no other class of advertising, perhaps, is the product dealt with so well suited to the advertiser's purpose. In no other industry is it possible to write more attractive advertisements without departure from facts—yet in no other field is it possible, did the inclination exist, to misrepresent more easily.

Great credit is due the exhibitors of the nation for keeping within the bounds of truth in their advertising. The practice they have made a custom should be maintained, that the theatre man may not have imposed upon him restrictions which will seriously hamper him in one of the most important phases of his business.

Danger Is Slight

The immediate danger of advertising censorship being instituted is comparatively slight. The "so-called" freedom of the press referred to is undoubtedly sufficient protection. To overcome it changes would have to be made in the Constitution of the United States.

But protection from any source should not be welcomed. The very fact of protection cannot be construed as other than an indication of weakness—and there is and should be no weakness in the armor of the theatre advertising.

Early in the history of the motion picture there were certain instances of misrepresentation. The "baby days" of any industry show records of faltering footsteps, and the motion picture industry is not an exception in this department.

Improvement Was Rapid

But the mistakes of early exhibitors were not of lasting consequence. "Fly-by-night" showmen, making their stand in opera houses and town halls, abused their advertising privileges and left town before the certain result could work its effect. That the result was no less certain is attested, however, by the early death of this type of film entertainment.

The pioneers who opened "motion picture shows" in store rooms re-modeled for the purpose quickly found that misrepresentation was not a profitable enterprise. They found that the patron drawn by untruthful advertising did not return as frequently as expected, if at all.

The showman began then, a decade ago, to tell the truth in his advertising. He realized that he was not a "one time" salesman, but, by the very enduring nature of his business, a "repeater" who must make a satisfactory sales showing every day, every week, and every month.

Standard Quickly Raised

With the rapid rise in quality of motion pictures produced, the exhibitor had no difficulty in improving his advertising in keeping. The gap between the "novelty" and quality stages was so quickly bridged that no hardship was worked upon the man who had to stimulate interest in the motion picture during the interim.

The early showman was, in most instances, recruited from other than theatrical fields. In a new atmosphere, one entirely foreign to that with which he had been familiar, it was his business to develop a technique for the successful advertising of his wares. Present-day advertising as a whole, the result of the pioneer's endeavors, show that he succeeded admirably.

Present Average High

The present day average in the theatre advertising is high. Clippings from all parts of the country, from metropolis and village, show a uniformity of purpose and principle that merits high praise for the entire exhibitorial body.

Misrepresentation is practically non-existent, and with good reason. The results of its occasional use are sure and swift in operation. The perpetrator seldom remains in business long enough to repeat the offense.

Exhibitors deserve great credit for the excellent showing they have made in keeping clear of the taint. It will be a sorry state of affairs indeed if meddlers are permitted to saddle them with an unwarranted and unjustifiable censorship.
Graphic Miniatures Overcome Paper Shortage Difficulties

Without doubt the most serious problem which the exhibitor advertiser is immediately called upon to solve is that presented by the paper shortage which continues unrelieved and daily brings news of publications compelled to limit their size and place restrictions upon both news and advertising space. It is a difficulty which practically every theatre man has experienced or will experience unless unexpected relief is promptly forthcoming.

It is a genuine problem. A great number of men have evolved and developed to high efficiency a style of advertising with which the public has been familiarized and which brings good results. By use of an established system of varying size and layout they have taught their readers to read a double meaning into their advertisements.

Forced to improvise on short notice a new system to conform to the limitations imposed, these exhibitors are hard pressed for a satisfactory substitute.

Of especial interest, therefore, to exhibitors who have been cramped in their operations, are the one and two-column advertisements recently used by Edward L. Hyman, manager of the Mark Strand theatre, Brooklyn, N. Y. They are among the best of their class that have been printed.

Consisting for the most part of hand lettering, they have high visibility and striking power of no mean weight. They stand out from the page of solid advertisements on which they appear with exceptional brilliancy.

In the “Yellow Typhoon” displays, particularly, may be seen the effect which it is possible to gain without use of great space.

Here an illustration of sufficient body to get results has been introduced without sacrifice of more than a minimum of space. It is logically placed and shares attention, yet does not detract from the word matter. In the single-column display advertisements the same picture the idea has been duplicated with as good results.

A little less complicated, and therefore more readily adaptable, is the style of the “Love Expert” advertisements.

In this case the word matter carries the burden of the work, a simple little illustration being thrown in to give balance and add to the attractiveness of the whole.

Taken as a group, the advertisements reproduced point the way for advertisers hit by the paper shortage.

The method they illustrate is a simple one and one that many theatre men will doubtless adopt. It can be used with little expense and with a little care may be quickly worked into a satisfactory substitute for the established method abandoned.

Though an artist should be employed to get best results from the device, it is not inconceivable that the exhibitor with a knack for designing can prepare his own drawings in a manner that will dispense with this necessity. Lettering is the chief ingredient, and it is not difficult to procure good lettering at a reasonable figure.

The engraver must come in for consideration, of course, but that also is a matter of little moment, as the price of cuts the necessary size is not prohibitive.

A two column display which shows the method by which Edward Hyman overcomes the handicap imposed upon advertisers by the paper shortage.
Exterior Exploitation

J. H. Mayer, director of publicity for the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, personally supervised the introduction of "The Virgin of Stamboul" in Cincinnati, O.

Especially stress was laid upon exterior exploitation. At the left may be seen an unusual application of the "sandwich man" method. Setting up his camouflaged sign board on busy corners he drew a great deal of attention.

A tallyho in which musicians and singers were driven through the streets with excellent effect may be seen at the bottom of this page.

Why Cooperation Wins

Edward Aylward, manager of the Grand Opera House, where the picture had its premiere, worked in close harmony with the Universal exploitation force throughout the run.

At the right is shown the lobby of the theatre as it was decorated for the engagement.

Cooperation began when H. H. Van Loan wrote "The Virgin of Stamboul," an exploitation picture. Tod Browning cooperated by staging scenes that warrant big publicity measures, and Mr. Mayer, working with Mr. Aylward, brought it to successful consummation.
Last Week

Harry Reichenbach put over another big one. K. C. Ann and his patrons came in for a "non's shade" or publicity in the New York daily prints and a photo of the incident was printed on the front page of the Chicago Herald-Examiner.

N. A. Benson, manager of the Stadium Theatre, Pittsburg, Pa., darkened the theatre for one minute after each showing of "The Love Experts" to permit sweethearts in the theatre one kiss—and advertised the fact. It is said that certain young men attended the theatre four different evenings—bringing a different girl each time.

Fifty silver dollars were placed in a sate in the lobby of the Sun Theatre, Omaha, with a placard on the outside offering the money to anyone who would open the door. "Alas! Jimmy Valentine" was the attraction being shown, and the results were as expected.

Harry Scott, manager of the First National Exchange at Detroit, Mich., booked the Royal Hawaiian Trio and Princess Kawa, "Champion Huia Huia Dancer of Honolulu," solid for three months. The act will be furnished with "The Idol Dancer" at slight additional cost due to the length of the engagement.

Snow shoes, Hindu's sandals, army shoes, moccasins, foot wear of every description, displayed in the lobby of the Met theatre, Grand Forks, N. D., drew big crowds to the showing of "Other Men's Shoes," Edgar Lewis' Pathe production.

An innovation in the form of an epilogue, used just before the final fade-out of "Why Change Your Wife?" proved highly successful at the Kings theatre, St. Louis, Mo.

The "Sex-O-Gram" campaign formulated by Sig Schlager and F. B. Warren for the exploitation of "Sex," the J. Parker Read Jr. production starring Louise Glaum and distributed by the W. W. Hodkinson Corp., was officially launched. A reward of $8,000 in prizes is offered for an acceptable sequel to the play.

Winnipeg street cars were the cause of considerable concern for a week, carrying signs which read simply, "She Danced." At the end of that time citizens were informed in newspaper smashes that "she" was "The Idol Dancer" and did, and would continue to, at the Allen theatre.

"Good Spirits Show

Is Chambers Novelty"

A novel program was offered its patrons by the Palace theatre at Wichita, Kans., recently under the title of "The Good Spirits Show." With Bryant Washburn in "The Six Best Cellars" as the feature and "In the Sweet Dry and Dry" as a comedy, the management arranged to have the entire bill smacked of those good old days before July 1, 1919, when national aridity settled over the land.

The curtain rose on the interior of a European top-room. Large casks labelled "Whisky," "Wine," "Gin," "Port," "Rum," etc., are seen in the background. A dandy, slightly the worse for having looked on the cheering cup, is seated at a table. In his rich, deep voice he sings "Down Deep in the Cellar." At the conclusion of his song, a pretty Swiss barmaid enters, and, after refusing to serve him anything more to drink, gives him very appropriate advice through the singing of "Absinthe Frappe," the song hit from "It Happened in Norland."

At this juncture a male quartette, garbed as students, rush on the stage and immediately launch into the famous stanzas from "The Prince of Pilsen." The second chorus is sung as a sextette, the barmaid and dandy joining in. Suddenly the stage is thrown into darkness, lightening flashes and when the lights return the cask labels have been replaced with such titles as "Hair Tonic," "Jamaica Ginger," "Lemon Extract," "Bay Rum," etc.

As a finale, the sextette saunters across the stage singing "Alcoholic Blues." Several comedy features were woven into the little prologue, the whole of which was arranged by Reichenbach, organist-in-chief of the Palace theatre.

The novelty consumed eleven minutes and served as a most appropriate introduction to the pictures which followed. The musical program throughout the entire show ran to the bibliographical and the news weekly was made up of scenes and events which bore directly or indirectly on prohibition.

All the principals used in the prologue were local talent and the cost of the novelty was held at a minimum.

Standees

A bill has been introduced into Congress advocating legislation which will prohibit the sale of standing room within the theatre in the District of Columbia.

Exhibitors should not be deeply concerned over the matter. Drive exhibitors do not permit patrons to stand for any considerable period of time. There are several good reasons the patron who must stand in the aisle is very likely to be embarrassed. Embarrassment leads to anger. Anger leads—everybody knows where.

It is not pleasant to stand in line awaiting admission to the theatre. It is less pleasant to be sold a ticket without comment, only to learn that one must stand in the aisle for two or three reels.

Legislation to prohibit this should be unnecessary. Legislation of any sort is bad for the industry. Exhibitors who object the industry to danger of it are the type that deserve consideration.

Screen Ads

It is impossible to reduce screen advertising below a certain self-established minimum. Coming attractions, institutional events and certain matters of local and national interest cannot be wholly eliminated from the screen.

But they can be, and should be, given a minimum of time. They should not be, as they often are, dragged out interminably and over a long period of days or weeks.

When it is essential that such an event be advertised, and it often is essential, the least that the exhibitor can do, and should do out of consideration for his patrons, is to change the copy of slide or trailer as often as he changes feature attractions.

There is no other way of eliminating the annoyance such advertisements occasion—and it is vitally important that such annoyances be eliminated.

A striking exhibitorial triumph that holds a particularly strong significance for showmen interested in building up public faith and interests in their enterprises and arousing public sympathy of the strongest agencies in a city, has just been completed by C. S. Jenson, member of the Jenson & Von Herberg firm, which holds the First National Exhibitors’ Circuit franchise for the Seattle territory.

Jenson's undertaking was inspired in the cause of celebrating the first birthday of his baby boy, Von Claud. The chain of successful incidents that followed in the course of the celebration linked together with far more force than any exploitation campaign ever launched in Portland.

And the strongest point of general exhibitor interest is the fact that Mr. Jenson's idea can be applied in almost any vicinity by any exhibitor who has a small son or daughter or who might decide to give the neighbors a celebration in honor of the children of some prominent citizen, such as the mayor, or governor, or very prominent merchant.

The trend of the affair can be best understood by the following index of incidents:

Seven hundred orphan children of Portland helped celebrate the birthday of Master Von Claud at the Columbia theatre, Portland.

The Portland Ad Club publicized the event to such an extent that a train of automobiles was recruited for taking the children to and from the theatre.

The Knights of Columbus got behind the event in a body.

The Portland Drama League, which had previously gone on record as being undeniably opposed to motion pictures as a form of recreation for children, endorsed the affair and presented a fifteen-minute playlet.

One hundred of the most prominent local society women acted as a reception committee to receive the children and aided the staff of nurses in taking care of them.

Almost a thousand boxes of animal crackers and sticks of striped red and white candy and various toys were given to the children.

More than 150 business men of Portland, forming the commercial backbone of the city, forsook their work to be present at the entire showing. An innovation in the form of a Saturday morning matinee with an admission price of 6 cents for all school children was established by Mr. Jenson.

The case with which exhibitors may apply the idea is shown by the fact that business men's clubs, various civic agencies such as the Kiwanis, Ad Club and other bodies may be led to cooperate.

The souvenirs and candy which is essential to an affair of this kind can usually be provided by local department stores. Newspapers, without exception, find in such an event a source of human interest articles.

In the case of Mr. Jenson, every child's home in the city received a personal invitation.

Due to an epidemic of measles which kept the entire personnel of several of the institutions in quarantine, the attendance at the birthday party was curtailed to a certain degree. But more than 700 children were present. Ten homes were represented, including wee kiddies who sat with no discomfort three in a seat to the girls who occupied with much dignity and glory the loges. One entire section was occupied by boys ranging from eight to fifteen years of age, while the opposite contained the smallest tots of the institution.

The entire city of Portland cooperated with Mr. Jenson in making the party a success. The Portland Ad Club accepted the responsibility of taking the children to the theatre and back again to their homes. After 100 automobiles were enlisted in this organization an appeal for help was sent to the Knights of Columbus, who volunteered to transport the kiddies in Catholic homes, and the Rotary Club, which assumed a share of the remaining institutions. The youngsters arrived in various types of vehicles including huge drays and great Pierce Arrows. The time of the party was set for 10 o'clock, but as early as

Campaign of Concealment Brings Record Crowds to Penn Theatre

Despite the fact that the word "impossible" is generally considered as non-existent where exploitation is concerned, that word would doubtless have been the comment of every American exhibitor had it been suggested to him that he could break all previous records by use of a campaign in which the name of the theatre was not even mentioned. Yet service of the newsboys of the city. Prizes were offered for the boys who could sell the most papers and short lines from "Down On the Farm" the loudest. In this the newspapers cooperated with gratifying results.

The name of the theatre was not announced even when page smashers announced the attraction and described it in detail. The public was left to find it of its own accord—and find it did. They found it in such numbers that previous records were broken on the opening day of the run before word of mouth advertising had a chance to circulate.

The idea is applicable to any city or town. It is also adaptable, with slight changes, to pictures of many types. It is worthy of adaptation—for the results were big results.

Turnips, onions, eggplants, celery, potatoes, cabbage, spinach, apples, asparagus, cucumbers, lettuce, cider, eggs, buttermilk, butter, milk and seeds were products of the farm legitimately labeled. Hats, tobacco, shirts, phonographs, overalls, automobiles, shoes and hardware were products also advertised as "from down on the farm." The device excited curiosity, and curiosity is a powerful agent.

Colonial Ad Appeal Due to Workmanship

One man in the world is only one man. And no one man is entirely independent. Robinson Crusoe is supposed to have been a civilization to himself—but that was in fiction. And even he didn't have a great deal of comfort.

The advertising exhibitor will do well to keep a realization of his enforced dependence upon others fresh in mind. It is an important part of this business.

The artist and the printer, perhaps, rank first in their importance to the advertiser. These are the men to whom he entrusts his work, the men who must put them into final shape and whose work determines their effectiveness or futility.

And both should be willing and should have an interest in the exhibitor's welfare.

To Charles R. Roediger, who manages the Jensen and Von Herberg advertising for Tacoma, Wash., exhibitors, may look for an example. His advertisements are unquestionable evidence that both artist and printer are "with him" throughout every step of production.

He started in the grocery stores. Here he planted cards, eleven by fourteen inches, printed in red and black, bearing the names of different products displayed and adding the information that they were "direct from down on the farm." Several reproductions of those cards are presented herewith.

He also provided the stores with six-pound paper bags upon which were printed scenes from the picture. But even here the name of the theatre was not given. The bags were used by the merchants for a week preceding the opening of the run.

Paper stands throughout the city were widely covered with twenty-four sheets, sixes and threes, upon none of which was permitted to appear the name of the theatre.

One of the most important features of the campaign was the pressing into A characteristic Roediger layout, used for the Colonial theatre, Tacoma, Wash.

THE HERALD  June 12, 1920
"The Idol Dancer" at
John H. Kunsky's
Madison Theatre
Detroit, Michigan

Howard O. Pierce directs a staff of twenty-five technical men in preparing presentation and exploitation features. Accompanying views show the results.
A simply constructed lobby decoration used by the Liberty theatre, Electra, Tex. It is kept in stock for similar future productions.

Makes Lobby Features Serve Double Purpose

There are two kinds of economy—genuine and foolhardy. The exploitation man should have nothing to do with the latter variety.

He has been criticized frequently, however, on just that score by businessmen who have been unable to see the wisdom of putting big sums of money into lobby displays for pictures that run a week or less. Many times there has been just ground for the criticism.

The manager of the Liberty theatre, Electra, Tex., is not one of those who should be thus classified, however, as his method, set forth in a recent communication, testifies.

Here is genuine economy. Expense is not spared to make the theatre, inside and outside, as attractive as possible when each production is staged. The above photograph shows the lobby decoration that was used for "Broken Blossoms," not a lavish setting for a metropolitan playhouse, perhaps, but unusual for a city the size of Electra.

But when the engagement is done the Electra front is not discarded. It is carefully dismantled and placed in the store room for use, with sufficient alterations to give it distinction, when another play of similar type is exhibited at a future date.

This is genuine economy.

Production runs along sufficiently similar lines that it will often be found practicable to use stored fronts, and presentation sets as well, with entirely satisfactory results.

If the Liberty method is followed over a long period a mass of material will be accumulated which can be drawn upon for practically any purpose. The idea is worthy of adoption. Space devoted to the purpose will be found highly productive.

Simplicity Keynote In Strand Feature

The exhibitor who dismisses the thought of presentation with the first calculation of the expense involved is ill advised. He is not a good, or at least a thorough, business man—hence not a good exhibitor.

The expense is the natural but not the proper angle to be given first consideration. It is because of this that the surface thinker frequently fails to attach proper importance to the subject.

The results should be first taken into account. There are none that will deny that a picture properly presented is better than a picture haphazardly projected upon a white sheet. The day for that sort of argument is past.

A little further delving into the matter, a consideration of the trend of events, discloses the certainty that the theatre that does not go in for presentation features is not long going to remain prosperous. Competition will win out on merit—for there is no denying the merit of that sort of exhibition.

There is no necessity, however, for the theatre man who is not properly situated to stage lavish features to go deeply into debt to put them on.

A feature that was attractive, served its purpose well, yet cost comparatively little, was staged at the Strand theatre, Fort Wayne, Ind., when "The Fall of Babylon" was being exhibited. A single dancer was employed, and a stage setting that can be duplicated at moderate expense was used as the background.

There are few theatres in America that cannot afford a feature of this sort. There are fewer, if any, that cannot afford a substitute of, to them, as great value.

It is natural to think of the biggest prologues that have been staged when the word "presentation" is uttered. It's a big sounding word.

A sober second thought is always profitable.

At Cleveland

The wise exhibitor attending the conventions at Cleveland, O., will not miss the obvious opportunity to gain valuable news publicity for himself and his theatre during the period of his absence.

A letter will inform the local editorial force of the ends for which the exhibitor is striving. In every case, they will be ends that have to do with the betterment of theatre conditions, hence the betterment of motion picture entertainment.

A daily telegram to the home paper will be given prominence that can be had in no other way.

The expense of such a measure will be found insignificant in view of the effect gained.

A Babylonian setting, with a dancer in interpretive dances, were used as an introductory feature when "The Fall Of Babylon" was shown at the Strand theatre, Fort Wayne, Ind.
Personal Endorsement Effective In Producing Box Office Results

The exhibitorial endorsement, the effectiveness of which is unquestioned, has appeared with remarkable frequency in connection with "Why Change Your Wife?" Cecil B. DeMille's Paramount Artcraft special. The occurrence is one that should be heartily approved by all interested in good advertising.

The obvious conclusion seems to be that exhibitors have unusual confidence in this particular production. It may be that the endorsement was one of the features most strongly recommended by the exploitation representatives of the distributing organization, but that is unimportant.

The important fact is that exhibitors are using their signatures beneath statements of the picture's merit. There should be more of this sort of advertising. It is doubtful if exhibitors realize just what merit there is in the idea, else it is reasonable to presume that they would not have waited for a certain picture to move them to its use.

The exhibitor today is something more than a mere citizen. He is a business man and, if he conducts his business in high-class manner, one of the most important business men in the community.

He is the recipient of the public's confidence. To him is entrusted the very important matter of providing the most popular, and therefore most important, public amusement.

If he has conducted his theatre and has even been legitimate, and he would not be in business if he had not, his word means a great deal in amusement matters.

His promise has weight. When he promises his patronage that the picture he has to show them is a great picture, when he uses superlatives in his description of it, he is assured of business. Everybody wants to see the really good pictures. When he states out one and calls it "the best," he need feel not the slightest doubt as to the patronage he is to enjoy during its run.

But it is not always necessary to say "the best." It is perfectly logical to believe that an exhibitor who went at the matter carefully and sincerely could develop his personal messages to his patrons to such an extent that his description of his pictures, his promises for each and every one of them, would be all the advertising absolutely necessary.

The one danger of such a course lies in the possibility of occasionally dis-appointing with a production of which he did not know the merit.

With exchanges managed as they are managed today, there is little excuse for this except in the case of the exhibitor in the isolated cities. And even he, who usually runs pictures some weeks after publication date, should have little difficulty in making sure of the quality of his product before he advertises.

Reproductions of advertisements recently used in behalf of "Why Change Your Wife" will be found upon this page. They are selected from a number that have come to attention. They show the work that is being done.
WITH the discussion of weighty matters concerning vitally the great inter-relationships of the industry at its present intensity, it is natural that exhibitors should attach for a period relatively minor importance to the "small news" of the day.

The review of a current screen publication, at all times an essential document, should not be summarily dismissed nor hastily scanned in the press of big issues.

Many successful exhibitors and chain theatre executives almost without exception keep carefully indexed files of reviews and descriptive data upon every picture produced. The wisdom of such a course is reflected in their success.

"THE PRINCE CHARMING" (Paramount Artcraft) is taken from the stage play by Edward Peple and is a fine offering. It is an excellent choice as Thomas Meighan’s first starring vehicle and has been excellently directed by William DeMille. Edna Lee does excellent work in support. There is much promise for the future in the composition, a finished product which gave complete satisfaction at its Chicago premiere.

"THE WONDER MAN" (Robertson-Cole) seems destined for success. The initial starring vehicle for Georges Carpentier, it reveals unexpectedly a genuine talent possessed by the ring idol. His bearing is excellent, his camera presence that of a veteran, and the production promises much from the box office standpoint. It should be backed by extensive exploitation, which is thoroughly justified.

"THE DEADLINE" (Fox) reveals the George Walsh of "The Beast" and other early dramatic productions at his sturdy, robust best. A drama of Kentucky mountain folk, of feuds and "moonshine," it has nothing of the comic in it. The change will be found welcome in many quarters and the star makes the most of his opportunities.

"THE DEVIL’S PASS KEY" (Universal) is a worthy successor to "Blind Husbands." Eric Von Stroheim’s first directorial effort. It is a story of Paris, told with a wealth of detail and careful direction that makes the whole stand out as a unique piece of work. A capable cast chosen with a view to their fitness for the particular parts assigned them gives the picture a finished appearance.

"PARIS GREEN" (Paramount Artcraft) is Charles Ray’s latest vehicle. The play lacks dramatic strength and depends for much of its humor upon a doughboy’s poorly translated French. The cast includes Ann May, Bert Woodruff, Gertrude Claire, Donald McDonald, Otto Hoffman, Ida Lewis, and Norris Johnson, and was directed by Jerome Storm from a story by Julien Josephson. Colorful photography is an outstanding feature of the production.

"THE SEA RIDER" (Vitagraph) presents thoroughly masculine Harry Morey in an out-and-out drama of the sea which should please generally. Free of sickly sentimentalism, strong in its simplicity, it is representative of the best type of screen material.

"DOLLARS AND SENSE" (Goldwyn) gives Madge Kennedy a chance to portray a more serious role than she has been accustomed to, although at the same time the picture is not without its humorous and amusing incidents. The picture is adapted from the story by Octave Roy Cohen, a writer of popular tales.

"ROMANCE" (United Artists) brings to the screen a play of unusual merit and a star whose work on the stage placed her at the top. The screen version of the drama in which Doris Keane won laurels both in this country and abroad is no less compelling than the original. It is different and most certainly is the answer to the cry that has gone up from time to time, “Give us better pictures.”

"PASSING BY" (Pathé) is the adaptation of a notable stage success in which Charles Stuart Blackton, son of J. Stuart Blackton “runs away” with the picture. The little fellow shares honors with Herbert Rawlinson, the star. It is well produced, the exteriors representing London streets being especially well done.

"THE SILVER HORSE" (Goldwyn) is a Rex Beach production which ranks among the strongest box office attractions of the current season. It is a story of the Far North with many dramatic situations and a strong appeal to all types of audiences. It permits elaborative exploitation campaigns and should be advertised strongly.
HERBERT RAWLINSON in PASSERS BY
Six-part drama; Pathé.
Directed by J. Stuart Blackton.
Published June 20.

OPINION: Charles Stuart Blackton, the little son of J. Stuart Blackton, divides honors with Herbert Rawlinson in the screen adaptation of the popular stage play, "Passers By," which has father is publishing through the Pathé

Success of the picture depends in an extraordinary degree on the acting of this talented and handsome little fellow.
Responding to his father's direction, the boy gives to the picture a touch of pathos and humaneness which goes straight to the heart. His is an exceptional performance.

"The story of "Passers By" is not a new one—lovers separated by misunderstanding, kept apart for years by letters being intercepted by a meddlesome woman, and in the end being reunited. In this instance the locale is England.
The settings are impressive, unusual character being reflected in the exteriors.
Tom Lewis, Dick Lee and W. J. Ferguson, cast in minor roles, furnish excel-lessly. Lella Valentine, Ellen Cassity and Pauline Coffyn are well cast in the heavier supporting roles.

SYMPHONY by Margaret Summers, a governess in the home of Lady Hurley, disappears when she realizes she is about to become a mother. She is prevented from committing suicide by Nifty, a cabman, and given a home by him. Peter Waverton, step-brother of Lady Hurley, who is in love with the governess, searches vainly for her without knowing the reason of her disappearance. When Margaret finally decides to correspond with him, her letters are intercepted by Lady Hurley and destroyed. Six years elapse. In the meanwhile Waverton has fallen in love with Beatrice Dainton, a ward of his step-sister. During a heavy fog Margaret takes refuge in a doorway and is found by Waverton. He learns for the first time of his having a son, and, on seeing the boy, is infatuated with him.
Beatrice learns the truth, releases
Waverton from their engagement, and Waverton and Margaret are married.

MARGE KENNEDY in DOLLARS AND SENSE
Five-part comedy-drama; Goldwyn.
Directed by Harry Beaumont.
Published in May.

OPINION: Octavus Roy Cohen, a recognized writer of amusing bits of fiction, is responsible for this Marge Ken-dy vehicle. The original story, titled
"Two Cents Worth of Humanity," was published in The Saturday Evening Post. It was an enjoyable piece of work, both in theme and in dialogue.
Although the back of the story was a thought worth consideration.

From the story angle, then, "Dollars and Sense" should fulfill expectations.
It is not a tensely dramatic nor on the other hand is it entirely facetious in treatment. Both phases of screen-expression are touched upon sufficiently to satisfy.
The star's characterizations in pre-vous pictures have found general favor, her mannerisms are pleasingly inviting. "Dollars and Sense" is a Marge Kennedy type of vehicle, which permits a play on her style of acting.
The action of the play tends to become slow at times, but not to the extent to diminish interest. With exploitation possibilities prevalent, it should be an easy task to screen this picture to good houses.

Commendable in their support of the star are Kenneth Harlan, her leading man, Willard Louis, Florence Deshon and Richard Tucker. Accurate backgrounds add color to the production.

SYMPHONY: Hazel, a chorus girl, is left in financial straits by a sudden closing of the show. With her room rent due and with but 2 cents in her pocketbook, she seeks other employment. Tired and footsore, she enters a bakery to buy bake buns with her last 2 cents, telling the young and handsome owner that they are for her dog. But he sees through her veil of pride and gives her fresh buns, and in each he places a dollar.
Finding the dollars, she returns and finds that the baker, David, is somewhat of a philanthropist. She tells him that he needs a manager and she is employed.
Overburdened with work, David becomes sick and is taken to the hospital.
He, too, is without funds. A broker by the name of Stanhope, however, tells Hazel he will pay the bills if she in return will do something for him.
Although she believes that there are ulterior motives back of his generosity, she promises in order to save David, with whom she is in love. She goes to Stanhope's apartment and there she finds David, and Stanhope has arranged for their marriage.

DORIS KEANE in ROMANCE
Seven-part drama; United Artists.
Directed by Chet Withey.
Published in May.

OPINION: Edward Sheldon's drama of love and tragedy has been brought to the screen with all its fineness, its charm and the other qualities that made it the successful stage production that it was.
Not only have the producers adhered closely to the original play, but they have gone still further and selected for the lead Doris Keane, who played with such finesse the character of Mme. Marguerita Cavallini and won laurels both in this country and abroad.
"Romance" is a picture that everybody will want to see. It is a story of the nineteenth century, a short prologue and epilogue containing the only modern atmosphere of the piece. The fact that the costumes of the early period are worn in no wise detracts from the interest but serves rather to accentuate the existence of romanticism in the nineteenth and preceding centuries.

Miss Keane's portrayal is excellent.
Although this is her first screen endeavor, the impressive work she does gives her a foothold in pictures. Having played in the stage production for several years has had a telling effect on the star's work in the picture. Her acting is finished and compelling.

The story itself is very out of the ordiinary and decidedly different from the half of themes that are adapted. This fact, coupled with the ingenious work of the star, who is supported by a praiseworthy cast, makes "Romance" one of the outstanding pictures of the year.
From time to time a cry goes up for better pictures. Just recently a group of artists organized for this expressed purpose. "Romance," it seems, should meet with their approbation.

Other members of the cast cannot be forgotten, nor with a less creditable cast the picture could not be as graciously applauded. Those in the cast are Basil Sydney, who played the male lead; Norman Trevor, Betty Ross Clark, Amilia Summerville, A. J. Herbert, Gilda Varesi, June Ellen Terry, Arthur Rankin and Vangie Valentine.

SYNOPSIS: Marguerita Cavallini, a noted opera singer and an intimate of Cornelius Van Tyul, is singing in New York. Thomas Armstrong, a rector, becomes infatuated with her, and she in turn falls in love with him. Forgetting his clerical work, he visits her often, both in her dressing room and in her apartment. He tells her of his principles of right and wrong. Because of her sophistication and her past relations with Van Tyul, who is a deacon in Armstrong's church, she feels that she must abandon her love for him. Van Tyul, realizing that Armstrong's relations with the opera singer are a detriment to his church work, tells him of the diva's past. Angry, Armstrong goes to her apartment on the day that she is to sail for Europe, but the madam's expressed love for him reaches his heart and he bids her farewell and returns to his parish, having experienced romance.

George Walsh in
THE DEADLINE

Five-part drama; Fox. Directed by Dell Henderson. Published in May.

SYNOPSIS: A Kentucky feud story with a "moonshine" background will disappoint pleasantly most of George Walsh's followers. The picture is a distinct departure from style—a departure that will do the star and exhibitors who play his pictures good.

A recent contribution to "What the Picture Did for Me" asked that George Walsh be put back in stories like "The Beast," one of the early "five reelers" upon which the standing of the Fox product was built up. Sufficient time has not elapsed for the suggestion to be acted upon, but the result is the same.

The return of Walsh to this style of play is well advised. In it he is relieved of the necessity of comedy relief and is at his athletic best. His fighting ability is unquestioned, and in this production he administers to John Hopkins a beating, the like of which is seldom seen on screen or in the ring.

The story deals with a feud, but contains several episodes and unique situations which give it freshness. It contains action in such quantity as to keep the entire cast busily engaged, and here and there a bit of humor that will have proper effect.

The "moonshine" angle is probably the best one to play up in advertising. It will be well to confine it with a statement to the effect that Walsh returns to the style of "The Beast." The results should be instantly satisfactory.

SYNOPSIS: Clay Boone, leader of the Boones in feud with the Harlans, is loved and is loved by Mollie in their feud related to the Harlans. When his father is killed from ambush he declares open warfare and the battle is stopped by authorizing the Harlans and Boone to send one representative to the Harlan clan. When his trial is called hall bills shoot up the court room and all right-wing in his little sister is killed by a stray horseman bullet and he resolves never to again carry a gun. Mollie interprets this as cowardice and dismisses him. Then he goes for aid when Buck Gomery, another Harlan ally, attempts familiarities with Julia Weston, a city girl, bringing her to his cabin. Clay comes to her rescue fights off the Harlans with his fists, and brings about their arrest. Mollie then changes her opinion of him and the happy ending follows.

Charles Ray in PARIS GREEN

SYNOPSIS: A picture is no stronger than its story, and one wonders after viewing "Paris Green," if Julien Josephson, who supplied Mr. Ray with such splendid rural classics as "The Busker," "The Egg Czar of Wallap," and "Lightning," has written itself out. The present vehicle does not possess the all-around appeal of his former successes, and the usual Ray comedy touches will not stir anyone into mad gales of mirth. The comedy is principally confined to the subtitles, which consist of an American doughboy's poor French translated into English.

It is the story of a hashbrowen American soldier who, after spending one hour in Paris, returns to his home in New Jersey. Here he is followed by a French girl who has escaped from kidnappers in New York and takes up her home with his parents. An advertisement brings her uncle to the farm, also the kidnappers. There is a regular Mack Sennett comedy chase scene and all is over. The picture shows painstaking care in its photography. The rural atmosphere is reproduced with remarkable clarity.

Ray's name will be sufficient to draw most people to your theatre, but do not promise too much for the story. However, you should make it plain that it is not a war story, though Ray does appear in the uniform of an overseas soldier in the first reel.

SYNOPSIS: Corporal Luther Green, familiarly known as "Paris Green," has one hour to see Paris before sailing for home. At lunch he meets Nixon a French girl who is planning a visit to his address. Luther finds upon his return to Quigley Corners, N. J., that his farm girl, who had visited him in Paris, goes to Quigley Corners, the only address she has. Luther takes her back to the farm and advertises in the papers. Nixon's uncle arrives in response to the advertisement at about the same time a pair of crooks do. They have failed to kidnap Nixon in New York but are successful in the country, and she is rescued by Luther after a hard ride on his horse, when he catches up with the fleeing automobile.

Tom Mix in
THE TERROR

Five-part drama; Fox. Directed by Jacques Jaccard. Published in May.

SYNOPSIS: Perhaps the most convincing praise that can be given the deserving production which is Tom Mix's latest vehicle is that set down by two first-run exhibitors in the current issue of this periodical, "What the Picture Did for Me" department. Crisp, practical appraisal, they carry the stamp of authority.

The Tom Mix picture is one of the established values in the picture market. Individual, distinctive, it may be depended upon to perform satisfactorily that very essential function—the appeasing of the popular taste for melodrama. From no source does this type of product issue with more gratifying regularity.

In the present instance the robust star is cast as a deputy United States marshal to whom is assigned the business of trailing and effecting the capture of a gang of gold bandits. His duty takes him to sleepy Sonora, a western town as yet not dominated by law and order, and into the presence of Phyllis Harlan, a young lady likewise portrayed by Francesca Billington, a deputy sheriff, who becomes his when his work is done.

In the discharge of his assignment he performs many of the well-known Mix stunts and several that have never been done before by him nor any of his kind.

The whole is five reels of highly interesting, well-made picture that there is no better program material available.

SYNOPSIS: "No Limit" Carson, deputy U. S. marshal, arrives in Sonora, a little Western city, to locate the men who have staged several successful gold robberies. His suspicions are aroused by one Harlan, brother of Phyllis Harlan, to whom Carson is drawn at once. But he is convinced that Harlan is only the tool of the real leaders and he presses his point by permitting himself to be held up, escaping with the treasure. A dance hall prima donna, her evil employer and a crooked sheriff figure in the complications, which are disentangled to the satisfaction of all in a rousing finish.

EXHIBITORS HERALD

Georges Carpentier in
THE WONDER MAN

Six-part comedy-drama; Robertson-Cole.Directed by John G. Adolff.Published in May.

OPINION: Throughout the country there are exhibitors looking for the kind of attraction which will fill their houses to capacity and deliver satisfaction. "The Wonder Man" fills the need, and, if only by word-of-mouth advertising, offers an opportunity to "cash in" exceptional profit, for the reason of its general appeal. The star is a handsome, debonair, athletic type, equally admired by men and women, the kind which makes girls develop an "ideal." He can wear clothes, he can act, and he can fight. Showmen, therefore, will find what they are looking for in the initial photoplay starring Georges Carpentier, who, if a heralded pugilist, must have been born an actor.

Among our popular leading men there are few who can command more attention or general admiration from a standpoint of being as at home in a part as he is in the ring. The last reel satisfies the curiosity of those wishing to see how he wins a fight, and in previous scenes he runs a fair race with men who have spent years in reaching the pinnacle of stardom.

The plot, if a trifle weak holds the interest throughout, with the assistance of a capable cast under the direction of John G. Adolff. Mr. Carpentier has turned out a picture with an amateur star, a discouraging story, and overcome the difficulties by footage which will reflect to the last print his ability as a director. The photoplay, good on the whole, is at times a bit hard in contrasts, but the interiors of club rooms, offices and gymnasiums, to drawing rooms, boudoirs and swimming pools, are well lighted and deserve favorable comment. The actors do several unusually well done long shots.

Here is a film with such possibilities for exploitation as will gratify the most enterprising exhibitor. He can go the limit in representing his attraction as something different in the way of positive entertainment, and have near of disappointing his patrons. SYNOPSIS: The story is based upon greed of an already prosperous man affiliated with international connections in contracts to supply the French government. He endeavors to increase his wealth at the expense of the war-ridden country by trifling with the figures in the contracts signed by foreign representatives. Mystery evolves by the presence of a young Frenchman who has been accepted socially and mingling with the elite, but with no credentials, obviously, but his pleasing personality and honest frankness. He meets and becomes involved in an affection for the daughter of a rich clubman and financier, who has been minus himself, the courted papers. There is a mysterious murder, and, in endeavoring to explain his theory of how it was done, the young Frenchman turns upon himself. Situations add to the evidence against him. In the meantime, at the club, he enters into a friendship with the real spirit, who takes unfair advantage of the unprepared visitor, who accepts defeat in battle and takes.selfishly, but without an embarrassing situation in the girl's home, he is duty bound to avoid further encounter, which brings about an estrangement between the girl and the sincere lover before the boxing tournament in her father's club, in which the Frenchman is to match his skill with his already declared enemy. Odds are decidedly against the hero, and he is making only half a fight, when a note from "the girl" bolsters his courage and, after having let his opponent wear himself out for several rounds, the lightweight enters the ring with a determination to win "for her" and does it. The "fight scene," of course, is most predominant of any, and supplies the thrill expected by those who know Carpentier better as a French pugilist than as a screen actor.

There is the usual happy ending, with an unusual sense of gratification stirred by the enthusiasm of the fight, the real villains brought to justice, and the young hero proven of worthy identity.

Harry Morey in THE SEA RIDER

Five-part drama; Vitagraph. Directed by E. L. Hollywood. Published in May.

OPINION: Harry Morey, one of the thoroughly impressive masculine screen stars, gives an up-and-coming, convincing and genuinely dramatic portrayal of the character after which this, his latest vehicle, is named. The composition is a reliable piece of entertainment—sure to give satisfaction.

The picture is a typical Vitagraph product, well but not overemphasized, made veracious, but in no instance stilted.

It tells the story of a seaman's love, his cruel disillusionment and eventual salvation. The ending is "happy," but sternly so. There is no false sentiment anywhere in its make-up.

Elise Calhoun, as the hero's erring sweetheart, does well with the work in hand. Her characterization elicits a curious combination of sympathy and pity that is not the least of the forces contributing to the play's effectiveness.

Theatre men do well to exhibit pictures of the type. The screen has all too little of the sturdier drama—and all too much of its antithesis. "The Sea Rider" is dependable program material of the sort producers should emphasize.

SYNOPSIS: When Captain Holcomb dies, returning from a voyage, Stephen Hardy, his best friend and suitor for the favor of Bess Holcomb, his daughter, promises to care for the girl when he leaves an orphan. He builds a home for himself and Bess, who promises to marry him, then goes to sea in place of his brother, who stays behind, feigning illness. Returning, he is greeted with his sweetheart's confession involving Tom Hardy, his brother. He forces Tom to marry Bess, gives them the home he has built, then sails away as captain of his own vessel. Years later, an embarrassed brute of a man, he anchors in New York harbor. Here he says "The Girl," an unfortunate, from suicide, only to learn after they have gone to sea that Tom, whom he has also taken aboard, was also her betrayer. They fight, a lamp is thrown, the ship burns, and all but Tom escape. Stephen and "The Girl" find a certain grim happiness together.

Rex Beach's
THE SILVER HORSE

Seven-part drama; Goldwyn. Directed by Frank Lloyd. Published in May.

OPINION: Spectacular, virile and well produced, "The Silver Horse" is one of the best box office attractions offered to exhibitors during the present season.

From almost every angle it makes an appeal to the true showman. Being of a type that will interest metropolitan and rural audiences alike, the production lends itself readily to every form of exploitation, inspiring both elaborate lobby displays and stage presentation.

More than any one factor contributing
EXHIBITORS HERALD

June 12, 1920

to its desirability, perhaps, is its fitness as a builder of house prestige. It is a production that should be featured and one that should be given a longer-than-ordinary run.

The story is told in the imitable style of its author, and the pictorial version shows the results of Mr. Beach's personal supervision. It is a tale of the North country, with its rugged characters and its lawlessness. Mannikin is portrayed vividly, both at his best and at his worst.

The locale of the story necessitates many beautiful settings, and a decided touch of realism has been given to such scenes.

A production such as "The Silver Horde" is further proof of the contention that 'the story is the thing.' An original and unique theme is the strongest foundation upon which to build a production. Such a story gives a director big things to work with, and in turn calls for the display of his utmost ability in achieving the greatest results.

The special cast includes Myrtle Stod-man, Robert McKim, R. D. Maclean, Hector Sarno, Bull Durham, M. B.
Flynn, Neola Mae, Frederick Stanton, Carl Gerard, Curtis Cook-y, Betty Blythe and Murdock MacQuarrie.

SYNOPSIS: - Boyd Emerson, an East-erner who has drifted to Alaska with the hope of making his fortune so that he may return to New York and marry the daughter of a millionaire, encounters no success until he meets Cherry Malotte and George Bolt. The latter two are preparing to fight Marsh, who seeks to monopolize the canning industry. Boyd sees his opportunity to make his fortune and offers his aid. He returns to New York to get financial support from his sweetheart's father, but finds that he is backing Marsh. One of his brother clubmen, however, offers to finance part of the project and Cherry succeeds in getting a Seattle banker to aid. Though the cannery is built, Boyd and his associates, are continually threatened by Marsh's men. After several nights and other oppositions, they win over Lord Marsh and his sweetheart's father, but instead of returning to New York, he marries Cherry.

THE DEVIL'S PASS KEY
Seven-part drama; Universal.
Directed by Eric Von Stroheim.
Published in June.

OPINION: From the standpoint of photodramatic power "The Devil's Pass
Key" compares favorably with "Blind
Husbands," Eric Von Stroheim's first Universal feature. It is a story of Paris and discloses a phase of Parisian life that does not come under the gaze of the ordinary; continental traveler.

Baroness de Meyer's story, from which the photoplay was made, does not contain a theme that is entirely new, but Von Stroheim has so deftly handled the ordinary plot and worked the familiar triangular situation up to such a dramatic climax that its shortcomings are forgotten.

It is typically foreign in atmosphere, and the Universal director has given strict attention to details. He has sucsessfully transferred to the screen the life of the Boulevards, of the sidewalk cats, the French modistes' shops and the theatres. Von Stroheim is not a Frenchman, but he evidently knows Paris.

In choosing his cast the Universal actor-director also used discretion. Sam de Grasse as the playwright, Una Trevelyn as his wife, and Clyde Fillmore, who portrays the American soldier,
Captain Strong, are all fine types. Others in the cast are Leo White, Maude
George, Mac Bush, Ruth King and Jack Mathois.

"The Devil's Pass Key" should be booked by the exhibitor who believes in injecting variety into his weekly show bills, though it is not a picture that will have an especial appeal for the young.
A novelty is introduced in tinting the candle flames of the many candles used, and the settings are very artistic.

SYNOPSIS: Warren Goodwright, an American writer living in Paris, has a beautiful but extravagant wife. When her bills for jewelry get beyond her means, she appeals to Min. Malet, her modiste, for aid. The latter suggests that she borrow money from a rich young man whom she will introduce.
She meets Captain Strong, an American soldier, but when she finds the Situation demanded involves her honor, she refuses the loan. Min. Malet, enraged at her ingratitude, passes the transaction, attempts to trap Good-wright in a blackmailing scheme. The papers print the spiteful bit of scandal which provokes Goodwright to make written use for the story for the plot of a play and it meets with success. Paris is thrown into a panic over the affair and Goodwright threatens the life of Captain Strong. The latter convinces him, however, that his wife is innocent and all ends happily.

Thomas Meighan in
THE PRINCE CHAP
Five-part drama; Paramount Artcraft.
Directed by William deMille.
Published in June.

OPINION: - The Prince Chap" is one of the most entertaining, clean-cut and thoroughly delightful little comedy-dramas it has been our good fortune to see in any a day. It is Tom Meighan's first starring vehicle, and if Paramount can follow through with others of as high class as this one they need have no fear of Meighan not delivering.

The picture was given a opening attraction at Orchestra Hall, Chicago to start off the summer season, and the management is to be congratulated upon such a splendid choice. It pleased mightily the vast crowds that filled the theatre on the opening day.

Taken from Edward Peple's popular play, the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation has given it everything in the way of production—superb sets, fine lighting effects and a wonderful cast. William C. deMille's direction shows the work of a master hand. His careful attention to details makes 'The Prince Chap' stand apart among other pictures of the sea-on. Add to this Mr. Meighan's fine acting and the splendid support of Lil
Lois Casson Ferguson, Charles Ogle,
Kathlyn Williams, Ana Forest, Deache
Jackson, May Giracci, Bertie Johns,
Florence Hart, Theodore Kosloff, Agne
McCare and Clarence Geldart and you have a very finished product.

The exploitation possibilities of "Th Prince Chap" are many. Taken from stage play already widely known it will be an easy matter to get considerable publicity on it. Advertise it as Thomas Meighan's first starring vehicle which will practically an all-star cast in his support. It is a picture that will appeal strongly to women and children.

SYNOPSIS: - Will Peyton, an artist occupying poor quarters in the Londo
Latin quarter with his man servant
Robertson, is prevailed upon by a poor artist's model to take her child and kee it upon her death. Peyton raise Claudia as if she was his own daughter in his own home. Claudia is adored in the situation when Claudini refers to Peyton as "papa" breaks her engagement. There is a lay-off for a time Peyton has become prosperous and Claudia has grown to womanhood. Th Earl of Huntington, a fellow artist and friend of Peyton's, falls in love with Claudia and asks for her hand. She o fuses him. Alice, now a widow, return to renew her friendship, but Peyton love for her is dead. He loves o Claudia and he finds his love r iprocated.

One of the many humorous scenes from "By Golly," Mack Sennett's latest comedy, featuring Charles Murray (Paramount Artcraft).

Tom Ealand, who books the only first-run open spots in Detroit, broke up the Pathe and Universal ball game last Saturday afternoon. Tom drove past the ball lot in the Universal car "Cait" and when the teams lined up, Tom, there was a mad dash for contracts.

"Sex" may be racy but you should see Joe Bloom's new Paige car!

Joe Horowitz screened "Ashes of Love" to a select gathering of exhibitors in the film building the other afternoon. Some weird person was heard to exclaim: "Some shot-gun opera!" Which goes to show some people don't know a good picture when they see it.

Robert Lieber, when seen at the Statler Hotel during the meeting of First National members in this city last week, was busy forming a new corporation to exploit an invention that he has recently acquired. A. Salsolsky will be treasurer and R. H. Clark will have charge of sales. A theatre was reported to have been sold near Mack Sentett ordering one of Lieber's services for his little dog, "Teddy."

"Dutch" dinners may come and go but the one that John Kunsky gave the visiting First National members at his home near Walkerville, Canada, the other night will live forever. He said that his guests, upon visiting the cellar, nearly expired when the huge vault doors swung open and the eyes of the weary travelers fell upon his "oasis." In unison the parched lips croaked: "John, what's the combination?"

Albert M. Graham, who travels the key cities of Michigan for the Robertson-Cole local exchange, returned from a very successful trip last week and reports that the Georges Carpentier feature is booking heavy.

Wesley D. Ward heads the following line-up as manager of the Big U forces at the local exchange: Herbert Fower, Van Davis, E. R. Cleaver, A. M. Elliott, Don Dickerson, Jules Levy and Jack Coomb are the boys pushing the time-clock.

Detroit exchanges and exhibitors are not afraid of unfair censorship while Royal A. Baker is on the job. Mr. Baker is also a successful screenwriter and a scenario and his latest novel, as yet untitled, will go to press very soon.

"Jake" Sullivan, the "Butterfly Man" of Detroit film circles, pitched for the local Pathé nine on May 22, but there must have been something wrong with the old workman Universal's team connected with the ball very frequently.

Jack Graham, formerly with Pathe at the Pittsburgh office, came "clean" from Pittsburgh to join the local Hodkinson forces at Alice-Ross. Jack, besides being some sort of hustler, is also the Babe Ruth of the local film baseball colony.

Joe Bloom of the local Hodkinson Exchange, advises that the Detroit office has broken all former records for the country in the bookings of "Sex." Six prints are now working out of this office.

R. T. McIver, formerly in charge of the poster service at the local Paramount exchange, has been appointed assistant manager of the De Luxe theatre, one of Detroit's beautiful independent houses.

Zemon-Wettman Company have opened their new $500,000 Linwood-LaSalle theatre. The seating capacity of this house is 1,600 and the appointments and decorations rank it as one of the leading suburban theatres in the city of Detroit. N. D. Thompson is the manager of the house, the policy of which is a daily change of program. A Hope-Jones organ supplies the music.

Jack Schreiber, manager of the Blackstone, left last week for an auto trip to South Haven, Benton Harbor and Chicago. We wonder if Ben Cohen of the Colonial caught Jack at South Haven?

The Gomont News, which is handled by the Metropolitan Motion Picture Company of Detroit, M. J. Caplan, manager, has the following camera staff: F. J. Wheeler, Alfred Jacquemus and Harry R. Hiller.

Tom H. Ealand, general manager of the Miller Theatre Circuit, reports that the Mills Theatre has been entirely renovated and redecorated and a new set of scenery installed. Tom sends his regards to the Saxe crowd at Milwaukee.

George W. Teendle, Howard O. Pierce and Harry Scott were seen coming home Tuesday morning via the Allendale Ferry at 5 a.m. It must have been some party!

F. W. Gerhardt, business manager of the Michigan Exhibitors Association, has been busy all week arranging reservations on the steamer that leaves here June 7 for Cleveland. From all accounts, there will be at least 100 Detroit exhibitors making the trip.

J. O. Kent, manager of the local Select and Republic offices, just returned from a trip through the key cities of Michigan. Mr. Kent reports that he has closed first-run on "The Man Who Found Himself" in all the key towns. This feature will have its premier at the Strand, Flint, Mich.

Our old friend Larry L. Hayes is still keeping up the reputation that made him famous with Hyman in Chicago. Larry is now with Minter's local exchange and to see him around Orchestra Hall telling the crowds where the line forms to see "The Fall of Babylon" would make Harry Schonstatt green with envy.

C. A. Meade, secretary of the C. B. Price Company, stopped over in Detroit this week and gave several screenings of "His Pajama Girl."
Volplaning Around N’Yawk

With J. B.

Arthur MacHugh after spending seventeen weeks on the road as press agent for "Tumble In" has now tumbled back to B. N. Mess.

Bennie Zeidman, formerly of Louis B. Mayer Productions, has been in town for a week. Bennie is closing matters for his new producing company and expects to be here for a month.

St. Greifer of Chicago has been in town stopping at the Astor.

Jack Eaton, managing director of the Strand theatre, will leave the Strand, June 1, to enter the producing field.

F. W. Thring of J. C. Williamson, Ltd., Australia, is in New York looking over the New York theatres getting ideas for his new theatres to be erected in Sydney and Melbourne.

Jay Rescher returned from the Bahama Islands last week where he has been doing the camera work on the latest underwater picture.

Elise Ferguson left this week for Japan. She will be gone about three months visiting all the countries of Asia and Europe.

Are Warner left this week for a hurried trip to the coast. Upon his return about June 26 he will immediately leave for London.

Ben Bleinenthal, president of Export and Import Film Company, left Saturday for Europe. He plans on visiting the principal film cities during his stay of five or six weeks.

Lyle Warrenston, who is filling an engagement with International in a character role, although having arranged to return to California, has been approached to direct a picture in the east and may remain in our midst some months longer. Her son, Gilbert Warrenston, formerly camera man for Mary Pickford productions, will govern his activities according to the decision of the actress-directress of international note.

Jesse Arnold, recently seen in "The Dark Mirror," directed by Charles Giblyn, and starring Dorothy Dalton, spent several days last week visiting on Long Island and at Fort Lee, where players whom she has not seen since her return from Australia, are, in the cases of films in production.

Emile Chayton, who recently signed for twenty-six pictures for Fox, the first to be "The Thief," has been all the greater part of the week and unable to be at the 53rd street studio.

Alma Francis, while negotiating for screen engagements soon to be announced, spends her time waiting for developments by continuing her dancing lessons and voice culture. Miss Francis believes in more than screen versatility.

Robert Harron Will Become Metro Star
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, June 2.—Another member of the Griffith Players is to become a star in his own right. Robert Harron has just signed to make four special productions annually for Metro Pictures Corporation.

Original Film Drama Burlesqued by Aywon Comedy Company in Florida Making Series of Short Productions

A five-part travesty on a well-known photo drama is being made by Aywon Film Corporation. According to Nathan Hirsh, president of the company, the original picture will be burlesqued scene for scene, with the finished production presenting a decided novelty.

Members of the Joy Comedy Company are in Florida completing a series of two-reel comedies for publication by Aywon on the state right market.

In preparing for the screen burlesque, Mr. Hirsh laid his plans very carefully. He engaged a director who was skilled in the art of travesty, and each of the players was selected with care.

Mr. Hirsh reports that the joy comedies, starring Charlie Joy and the Miami beauties, are making a name for themselves. Practically all state right territory has now been sold and the first four of the short subjects have arrived at the offices of Aywon in New York where at private showings they have been heartily received and gained high praise.

$250,000 Improvements

Planned by J. C. Quinn

EL PASO, TEX.—James C. Quinn will soon commence the work of remodeling his Rialto theatre at Texas and Campbell streets. An expenditure of $250,000 will be made in decorations and new appointments for the house.

The seating capacity of the house will be increased to 1,000. Mr. Quinn's plans call for rest and smoking rooms and children's playrooms.
First National

The Love Expert, with Constance Talmadge.—Here's a knockout. The best she has made. New and novel. Went after it strong, getting 33c admission. Will play to one-third of population of Grinnell.—W. H. Mart, Strand theatre, Grinnell, Ia.—College town patronage.

The River's End, a Marshall Neilan production.—A wonderful picture to wonderful business.—B. W. Bickert, Majestic theatre, Boise, Idaho.—Transient patronage.

A Virtuous Vamp, with Constance Talmadge.—Great. One of the very best. Could have been better at the box office.—W. H. Creal, Suburban theatre, Omaha, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

The River's End, a Marshall Neilan production.—A wonderful business.—B. W. Bickert, Majestic theatre, Nampa, Idaho.—Transient patronage.

Two Weeks, with Constance Talmadge.—Book it. Pleased 99 per cent of my patrons. Constance a favorite here.—K. A. Bott, Grand theatre, Carlin, N. D.—Small town patronage.

The Fighting Shepherds, with Anita Stewart.—Very good. Not Anita's best, but she is a big drawing card herself regardless of the picture or its playing.—Mrs. J. A. Dostal, Ideal theatre, Omaha, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

In Search of a Sinner, with Constance Talmadge.—Everyone that spoke said they enjoyed this picture more than any Miss Talmadge has ever appeared in.—E. A. R. & Linden theatre, Chicago, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Inferior Sex, with Mildred Harris Chaplin.—This picture was good, but drew us very little business.—John H. Ashton, Columbia theatre, Provo, Utah.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Woman Gives, with Norma Talmadge.—Second day bigger than first. Star delightful in a well-constructed story that grips.—J. C. Bennett, Princess theatre, Whiting, Ind.

The Family Honor, a King Vidor production.—This is a dandy picture and pleased everyone.—Peter Krauth, Denison theatre, Denison, la.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Daughter of Two Worlds, with Norma Talmadge.—Great, but did not draw very well.—S. J. Osika, Burley theatre, Burley, Idaho.—General patronage.

Polly of the Storm Country, with Mildred Harris Chaplin.—Very enjoyable.

BACK TO GOD'S COUNTRY, with Nell Shipman.—Your advertising possibilities are unlimited on this one. Go the limit. Raise your prices, and if you don't hang out the "S. O. S. sign you had better lock the door and hang up the key and move to the country, for you are no showman.—L. C. Parquhar, Opera House, Guide Rock, Neb.

Good business.—Rose theatre, Chicago, Ill.—General patronage.

The River's End, a Marshall Neilan production.—Scenario writers, directors and actors all should see this master-piece. Exhibitors will do well to play it.—J. C. Bennett, Princess theatre, Whiting, Ind.

Heart o' the Hills, with Mary Pickford.—Good picture and business.—William Noble, Empress theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla.—General patronage.

In Wrong, with Jack Pickford.—Pleased a Sunday audience. The best picture of the three.—Meyers & Ford's Arcade theatre, La Grande, Ore.—Small town patronage.

The Inferior Sex, with Mildred Harris Chaplin.—Business bad. Mildred Harris Chaplin generally a sure bet. Can't understand why picture did not go over. Possibly improper advertising. Picture good.—J. P. Woodward, Ut theatre, Garfield, Utah.—Neighborhood patronage.

Heart o' the Hills, with Mary Pickford.—Not so good as The Hoodlum or Daddy Long Legs, but not so bad.—J. J. Grimm, Chicketers theatre, Wilber, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Hoodlum, with Mary Pickford.—This picture will please any audience. You won't go wrong in booking it. Six reels of the best comedy there is.—Watkins & Sons, Savoy theatre, Helena, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

Back to God's Country, with Nell Shipman.—A wonderful picture. They all talk about it. Get it and boost it.—George D. Rogers, Gem theatre, Lyndon, Kans.—Small town patronage.

Her Kingdom of Dreams, with Anita Stewart.—Suitable for high class patronage. One of the exceptional.—Mr. Carroll, Royal theatre, Fullerton, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Daughter of Two Worlds, with Norma Talmadge.—A wonderful picture. Certainly made a hit with our patrons. Norma was just one. All cast good.—Fred Paulick, Paulick theatre, Muscoda, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The River's End, a Marshall Neilan production.—Business good, but not as well as expected. No fault of picture. One of Curwood's best, and a credit to First National. Every town this did not turn out in full. Seldom play a repeat, but will attempt this as a winner.—J. P. Woodward, Ut theatre, Garfield, Utah.—Neighborhood patronage.

Her Kingdom of Dreams, with Anita Stewart.—A very good picture to fair business. Heard many good comments on this one.—Mr. Carroll, Royal theatre, Fullerton, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Virtuous Vamp, with Constance Talmadge.—Very good business. Please them all. First National has the best stuff on the market.—Louis Frana, Olympic theatre, Calais, la.

The Hoodlum, with Mary Pickford.—Very good.—S. J. Osika, Burley theatre, Burley, Idaho.—General patronage.

Her Kingdom of Dreams, with Anita Stewart.—Gave excellent satisfaction. Anita Stewart is a great favorite in this locality. The First National specials are always appreciated here.—W. J. Wood, Garfield theatre, East Troy, Wis.

Heart o' the Hills, with Mary Pickford.—One of Mary's best. Pleased our patrons as well as Daddy Long Legs. We ran two repeat dates and have booked for another.—W. E. Pore, Liberty theatre, Gorman, Tex.—Transient patronage.
Fox

The Terror, with Tom Mix.—The best one Mix has made yet. Full of good stunts.—William Haight, Orpheum theatre, Livingston, Mont.—Neighborhood patronage.

Her Elephant Man, with Shirley Mason.—A good program picture. Star good. This picture is nothing to rave about. As a whole a lot more was expected from all advance notices.—L. G. Sewang, Crown theatre, Calumet, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

Molly and I, with Shirley Mason.—Book this one, and expect it like a special.—Henry Hastert, Elite theatre, Lemars, Ia.

The Cyclone, with Tom Mix.—Sure a thriller. If your patronage wants action, book and boost.—J. J. Grinn, Chickens theatre, Wilber, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Adventurer, with William Farnum.—A good picture, but too much costume stuff. Not what people like with Farnum.—William Haight, Orpheum theatre, Livingston, Mont.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Wilderness Trail, with Tom Mix.—Story good. Northern scenes most beautiful. Big business.—O. E. Chrisney, Liberty theatre, Chisnay, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

Checkers, with a special cast.—A picture, but no drawing power. Lost money on it.—R. R. Hess, Marion theatre, Edna, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Orphan, with William Farnum.—Very good. Patrons very much pleased. Business very good both nights.—J. M. Kentpton, E. A. R. & Linden theatre, Chicago, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Daredevil, with Tom Mix.—A sure fast one. Tom Mix gets the business and his western stuff is what counts. It's the only thing for him.—William Haight, Orpheum theatre, Livingston, Mont.

Evangeline, with Marion Cooper.—When the exhibitor quits booking these sort of pictures, then they will quit making them.—R. T.ペット, Petrieum theatre, Dennison, O.—Small town patronage.

Salome, with Theda Bara.—A big, prying drama, i.e. the Bible story of Salome. Theda Bara at her best. It will make you money if you have not run it.—R. R. Riley, Wijswam theatre, Oberlin, Kan.

The Sneak, with Gladys Brockwell.—The story quite different from lots. Everybody liked it. The star is good in all her plays. Business was bad, but on account of the weather, not the picture.—O. E. Chrisney, Liberty theatre, Chrisney, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

Wings of Morning, with William Farnum.—Always good. One of Farnum's best.—J. J. Grinn, Chickens theatre, Wilber, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Terror, with Tom Mix.—A regular record breaker. Mix at his best. Capacity business.—Alcazar theatre, Chicago, Ill.—General patronage.

Goldwyn

Water, Water, Everywhere, with Will Rogers.—Not quite up to Jubilee, but this boy makes 'em like him. If you haven't played Rogers, do so. He will surprise you, and you box office.—C. C. Bennett, Princess theatre, Whiting, Ind.

Lord and Lady Alyl, with Tom Moore.—A good picture, which generally satisfied.—H. V. Friedrich, Majestic theatre, Sheboygan, Wis.—Downtown patronage.

The Fear Woman, with Pauline Frederick.—This is a good picture. Takes well here.—H. F. Held, Queen theatre, Nordheim, Tex.

Leave It to Susan, with Madge Kennedy.—This is a very good program picture. It is plenty of action and many amusing situations. It ought to please any class of audience.—E. J. Degenhardt, Princess theatre, Mendota, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Strictly Confidential, with Madge Kennedy.—A good comedy.—H. V. Friedrich, Majestic theatre, Sheboygan, Wis.—Downtown patronage.

Go West, Young Man, with Tom Moore.—Very fine comedy-drama, and put over well by the star with good support.—Will Perry, Grand theatre, Alvin, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

Oh, Johnny, with Louis Bunnison.—Good picture and pleased.—Peter Krauth, Denison theatre, Denison, Ia.—Neighborhood patronage.

Hodkinson

The Dream Cheater, with J. Warren Kerrigan.—Good clean picture. Pleased most of audience. Ran with Bringing Up Father comedy, Father's Close Shave. The two combined will get the money.—B. L. Hubbard, Hub theatre, Bishop, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

Desert Gold, with E. K. Lincoln.—Best Zane Grey story ever pictured. Broke record for admissions this year. Good for any kind of audience.—C. B. McDonald, Liberty theatre, St. Louis, Mo.—Transient patronage.

$30,000, with Kerrigan.—Jack has a following all his own which is steadily increasing. Not a big picture, but it truly did please. Big business for the one day. No exhibitor need be afraid of Kerrigan.—Mrs. J. A. Dostal, Ideal theatre, Omaha, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Sagebrushe, with a special cast.—Very good picture, but don't raise your price too high. I had to charge 52c to get by with it, and it surely wasn't worth that.—William Haight, Orpheum theatre, Livingston, Mont.

The Sagebrusher, with a special cast.—Ran it two days to big business. Hodkinson putting out fine pictures.—E. N. Collins, Liberty theatre, Electra, Tex.—Small town patronage.

Metro

Dangerous to Men, with Viola Dana.—A good comedy, but the story has suffered much in translation from stage to screen. Hardly recognizable as "Elia Comes to Stay."—H. V. Friedrich, Majestic theatre, Sheboygan, Wis.—Downtown patronage.

Please Get Married, with Viola Dana.—This picture pleased 99 per cent. Not as good as Fair and Warner, but very good.—J. W. Bascom, Pastime theatre, Sisston, Cal.

Fair and Warner, with May Allison.—Book it. Sure is a knockout. You send A MODERN SALOME, with Hope Hampton.—They still fall for a prize contest like eggs from a tall basket. Link up with Metro's $3,000 essay competition and watch them come.—T. C. Shipley, Essaness theatre, Rushville, Nebr.
them away talking about—R. A. Botts.
Grand theatre, Carrington, N. D.—Small town patronage.
Fair and Warmer, with May Allison.—
Good drawing card. Please all.—E. N. Collins. Liberty theatre, Electra, Tex.—Small town patronage.
Loving Harold, with Bert Lytell.—
Funny why they waste this star's talent on this kind of story. My people did not stay through it.—C. Oldham, Dixie theatre, McMinville, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.
Fair and Warmer, with May Allison.—
Great. Can't be beat.—T. J. Kempeks. Liberty theatre, Crete, Neb.—Small town patronage.
Hit the High Spots, with Bert Lytell.—
Lytell always pleases me for his company back him up with excellent productions.—Sidney H. Hymen. Liberty theatre, Des Moines, N. M.—Small town patronage.
The PARISIAN TIGRESS, with Viola Dana.—
Nothing but the Truth, with Taylor Holmes.—
Looked for this to be good, but was disappointed.—C. Oldham, Dixie theatre, McMinville, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.
The Red Lantern, with Nazimova.—
A big picture, but did not please as much here as her others, for it was Oriental, and besides she did not get a chance to show her dancing ability.—R. Ross, Riley, Wigwam theatre, Oberlin, Kans.—Small town patronage.
PARAMOUNT ARCAEFT
The Copperhead, with Lionel Barrymore.—
ON WITH THE DANCE, with Mae Murray.—
No better than a lot of program pictures. Couldn't see the wonderful part of it at all. Drew only average business.—W. H. Mart, Strand theatre, Grinnell, la.—College town patronage.
Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde, with John Barrymore.—Good picture. Wonderful acting, but story not what my people like.—L. C. Gates. Temple theatre, Kingfisher, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.
EASY TO GET, with Marguerite Clark.—
OH, YOU WOMEN, with Ernest Truex and Louise Hurst.—Had to play this on account of being dog tied by contract. Better pay for it and not play it, is my advice.—O. C. Oldham, Dixie theatre, McMinville, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.
WANTED, a Husband, with Billie Burke.—
Nearly as bad as 'Sadie Love.' She draws good, but won't continue to unless given better stories.—W. H. Mart, Strand theatre, Sandusky, Mich.
THE GIRL WHO CAME BACK, with Ethel Clayton.—Fine picture. Everyone likes Ethel Clayton.—L. M. Kuhns, Gibson theatre, Gibson, N. M.—Mining camp patronage.
LET'S ELope, with Marguerite Clark.—
Very extra. These pictures are better than any other.—C. Oldham, Dixie theatre, McMinville, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.
EVERYBODY wants, with a special cast—
This is a gorgeous production. Appeals to high class audiences only. Business not up to expectations.—John Hainer, Princess theatre, Donora, Pa.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Teeth of the Tiger, with a special cast.—A good picture that did not draw.—W. H. Mart, Strand theatre, Grinnell, la.—College town patronage.

SOMETHING TO DO, with Bryant Washburn.—
Extra good. Business.—E. E. Belden, Midway theatre, Mogollon, N. M.—Neighborhood patronage.

PATE
OTHER MEN'S SHOES, an Edgar Lewis production.—A powerful picture. You can't go wrong by booking it.—E. E. Hodgeson. Roxy theatre, Kahoka, Mo.—Small town patronage.

THE FALSE CODE, with Frank Keenan.—
Keenan has a following of his own, and as usual we played to nice business. The picture is very good.—C. J. O'Neill. Shullsburg Amusement Co., Shullsburg, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

FIGHTING CRESSY, with Blanche Sweet.—
Fairly good. Well-made picture, but seems to draw a little for a Bret Harte story. Characters great.—R. J. Charles, Liberty Circuit, Vicksburg, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

THE A. B. C OF LOVE, with Mae Murray.—
Fine picture. Please everyone.—F. J. Kozuch, Dixie theatre, Wallis, Tex.—Small town patronage.

OTHER MEN'S SHOES, an Edgar Lewis production.—A wonderful picture. Equal to 'The Miracle Man, but no drawing power.—T. J. Kempeks, Lyric theatre, Crete, Neb.—Small town patronage.

GATES OF BRASS, with Frank Keenan.—

Oh, Boy, with June Caprice and Creighton Hale.—Good comedy picture. Fairly good. Good advance in press. Go to it.—F. J. Kozuch, Dixie theatre, Wallis, Tex.—Small town patronage.

OTHER MEN'S SHOES, an Edgar Lewis production.—Good picture for everyday program. Nothing special about it. Did not business on this one.—William Naught. Orpheum theatre, Livingston, Mont.

REALART
THE DEEP PURPLE, with a special cast. Excellent crook play. Record-breaking business.—Boston theatre, Chicago, Ill.—General patronage.

SINNERS, with Alice Brady.—Not much. Did not draw.—E. N. Collins. Liberty theatre, Electra, Tex.—Small town patronage.

ERSTWHILE SUSAN, with Constance Binney.—This pleased them all. 100 per cent picture. Good, clean, entertaining. Book it and boost it.—H. W. Bascomb. Pastime theatre, Sisson, Cal.

JUDY OF ROGUE'S HARBOR, with Mary Miles Minter.—Another Minter success. You can't go wrong on Minter pictures.—R. Ross Riley, Wigwam theatre, Oberlin, Kans.—Small town patronage.

THE STOLEN KISS, with Constance Binney.—I have been stung more by Realart than all other companies together. Please lay off this one especially. —W. T. Hayes. Dreamland theatre. Providence, Ky.—Neighborhood patronage.

THE LUCK OF THE IRISH, an Allan Dwan production.—Wonderful picture. Sunday opening excellent. Big advance sale to the Short Ridge High School.—Harry Kock, Ohio theatre. Indianapolis, Ind.—Downtown patronage.

THE STOLEN KISS, with Constance Binney.—As usual, this picture upholds Realart's prestige. Miss Binney as captivating as ever.—C. T. Metcalf. Opera House, Greenfield, Ill.—Small town patronage.

THE FEAR MARKET, with Alice Brady.—Good picture. Star draws well here.—J. T. Williams, Cozy theatre, Chocotah, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

ROBERTSON-COLE
THE WOMAN MICHAEL MARRIED, with Bessie Barricale.—Excellent picture and pleased 100 per cent of our people.—Schonlau & Abraham, S. & A. theatre.

TALKING IT OVER WITH THE CHIEF

Wilda Bennet, musical comedy prima donna, who will make her screen debut in "Love, Honor and Obey" the S-L production being distributed by Metro, discussing Eugene Walser's play with Maxwell Rager, Metro's director general and Richard A. Rowland president of Metro Pictures Corporation.
POOR RELATIONS, with ZaSu Pitts.—I do not count my personal appreciation so much as that of my patrons. On their appreciation our standards must be built if we wish to remain a permanent institution. You can well believe the happy hour we procured “Poor Relations” on our opening bill. It won the approval of packed houses. Not a single line of this was heard by the writer or any employe of the house. Instead, many people went to the theatre to see how well pleased they were with the picture on the first program of the New Strand. More than that, many told me they would come again. And handsakes like that, you know, are worth more than tangible gold or silver. Harry J. Wendorf, New Strand theatre, Fresno, Cal.

Houston, Minn.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Man’s Country, with Alma Rubens.—Good entertainment and pleased.—J. L. Perry, Bijou theatre, Kingfisher, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

Hearts Asleep, with Bessie Barriscale.—All her productions are good. She appears to have women and children because of the type of her characterizations. Absolutely clean, all of them.—T. C. Shipley, Essaness theatre, Rushville, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Haunted Shadows, with H. B. Warner.—Personally liked it and pleased majority. Warner fine actor.—C. Oldham, Dixie theatre, McMinnville, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Prodigal Liar, with William Desmond.—Not up to Desmond’s standard.—Schonlu & Abraham, S. & A. theatre, Houston, Minn.—Neighborhood patronage.

Select
Sooner or Later, with Owen Moore.—A good everyday picture. Will satisfy, as it is a nice clean little story.—William Haines, Oakdale theatre, Livingston, Mont.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Country Cousin, with Elaine Ham- merner.—People were well pleased, and the star, although new here, went very fine.—J. W. McComb, McComb, Minn.—Neighborhood patronage.

Sooner or Later, with Owen Moore.—Very good, and enjoyed by all. Business only fair, as Owen Moore is not popular.—John Hafner, Princess theatre, Donora, Pa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Out Yonder, with Olive Thomas.—Just a fair picture. It will not please 40 per cent.—Louis Frana, Olympic theatre, Calumet, Ia.

The Country Cousin, with Elaine Ham- merner.—Poor picture. Same old stuff that hurts any theatre. Pleases very few.—J. W. Barcomb, Pastime theatre, Sitting, Calon.

Children of Banishment, with Mitchell Lewis.—Not much to this. Did not please.—C. E. Wentsel, Orpheum theatre, Ada, Minn.—Neighborhood patronage.

She Loves and Lies, with Norma Tal- madge.—Story not very strong, but it was in good style. Was liked very much and got more business than any previous Tal madge picture.—John Hafner, Princess theatre, Donora, Pa.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Heart of Weton, with Norma Talmadge.—Good picture. Norma always pleases for me.—Sadie L. Haney, Liberty theatre, Des Moines, N. M.—Small town patronage.

Her Great Chance, with Alice Brady.—Imagine, silly, and nonsense, with a profusion of poor English. Have as a rule had fine pictures from the Select, and this was just well in line with other productions.—Warwick Co., Vaudette theatre, Tacoma, Wash.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Honeymoon, with Constance Tal- madge. Miss Tal madge certainly is an artist. Never ran a sorry picture of hers. This one was a dandy.—E. D. Luhs, Full House, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

Upstairs and Down, with Olive Thomas.—A fairly good picture of a light nature, with a good artistic Most of the comedy is in the titles Good business with a Harold Lloyd comedy for advertisement.—Farquhar, Opera House, Guide Rock, Nebra.—Neighborhood patronage.

Getting Mary Married, with Marion Davies.—Excellent comedy-drama, and pleased majority of patrons.—C. E. Wentsel, Orpheum theatre, Ada, Minn.—Neighborhood patronage.

Life’s Greatest Problem, with Mitchell Lewis.—Sold out everything over the Select is my best liked program.—C. Oldham, Ohlom theatre, Manchester, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

The World to Live In, with Alice Brady.—The best Brady picture yet.—Opera House, Hatton, N. D.—Neighborhood patronage.

The New Moon, with Norma Tal- madge.—An elaborate Chinese picture that drew a small house.—Hert Norton, Kozy theatre, Eureka, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Youthful Folly, with Olive Thomas.—This is a very good picture. Star is very good, and the settings are up to the Selznick standard.—C. Oldham, McComb, Minn.—Neighborhood patronage.

SELECT

United Pictures Theatres

Women Men Forget, with Mollie King.—This picture will touch the heart strings. It is a story of a mother spurred by her husband for a woman of shame. One of my best pictures. It was generally brought tears to his eyes. Production is first class and setting lavish. It has a box office title, and it is a clean picture. Mostly for adult patrons.—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield theatre, Chicago, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Man’s Fight, with Dustin Farnum.—Just a fair picture. Not enough punch for a western picture.—G. M. LeMon- nier, Majestic theatre, Liberal, Kans.—Transient patronage.

The Light of Western Stars, with Dus- tin Farnum.—Pleased very much. An excellent western.—S. I. Haney Liberty theatre, Des Moines, N. M.—Small town patronage.

A Man’s Fight, with Dustin Farnum.—This is a dandy. We showed it to a small but well pleased crowd. This picture can be classed as a special and boosted to the sky.—A. C. Mercier, Electric theatre, Perryville, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

Universal

Blind Husbands, with Eric Von Stro- heim.—Good picture. We got 25 and 50 cent admissions for this special. Raise your rates for this. We should have had a reel of good comedy to go with it.—Watkins & Sons, Savoy theatre, Helena, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

Under Suspicion, with Ora Carew.—One of the best cross dramas we have played this year. Universal makes some good ones.—H. L. Liggett, National theatre, McCall, Ga.

The Talk of the Town, with Dorothy Phillips.—Fine picture that holds suspense to last.—F. J. Kozuch, Dixie theatre, Walls, Tex.—Small town patronage.

Blind Husbands, with Eric Von Stro- heim.—Did good business. Pleased 75 per cent.—N. Foster, Elite theatre, Og- ugo, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

Riders of Vengeance, with Harry Care- y.—Fine Western. Full of action. Carey always makes our records.—John C. Becker, Rex theatre, Des Moines, la.—Neighborhood patronage.

Loot, with Ora Carew.—A splendid 6- cent picture. Wonderfully clear photograph. You will not regret looking at it. Drew fine.—Warwick Co., Vaudette theatre, Tacoma, Wash.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Right to Happiness, with Doro- thy Phillips.—This is an eight reel production, and a wonderful picture. Had good crowd with raise in admission.—Ettel H. Huber, Opera House, Camp Point, Ill.—Small town patronage.

The Phantom Melody, with Monroe Salby.—These Salby pictures do pleases my patrons like other Uni- versal pictures. Lost money on this one.—E. Dwight, Beverly Picture theatre, Beverly, Kans.—Small town patronage.

Her Five Foot Highness, with Edith Roberts.—A good average program pic- ture. Star is not known to our patrons.—Preston Bros., Crescent theatre, Aud- ubon, la.—Neighborhood patronage.

Marked Men, with Harry Carey.—One of Carey’s best. Book it. Carey draws good for me.—O. D. Howell, Forrest theatre, Portsmouth, O.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Ace of the Saddle, with Harry Carey.—Good Western. Universal has some good pictures, but they are hard for me to get.—Jack H. Hooks, Palace theatre, Thomas, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

Bonnie, Bonnie, Lassie, with Mary MacLaren.—Good, but did not do much with it. Title against picture.—J. F. Aker, Malton theatre, Malton, Wash.

Pretty Smooth, with Priscilla Dean.—Fair story. Nothing extra except the star and she gets by with it.—Guy W. Johnson, Mystic theatre, Marmarth, N. D.

The Fight for Love, with Harry Carey. —With us all Carey pictures mean S. R. O. and this one was no exception.—R. Ross Riley, Wigwam theatre, Oberlin, Kans.—Small town patronage.

The Sleeping Lion, with Monroe Salibury. —Very good Salisbury picture. Better than any ran so far.—Gerald Lowe, Cozy theatre, Wichita, Kans.—Small town patronage.

Marked Men, with Harry Carey. —A good picture. Harry Carey is a winner.—Meyers & Ford, Star theatre, La Grande, Ore.—Small town patronage.

The Brute Breaker, with Frank Mayo. —Picture At. Held them all to the last foot. Good fight scenes. Very good photography.—R. W. Ralston, Colonial theatre, Tracy, Minn.—General patronage.

Bonnie, Bonnie, Lassie, with Mary MacLaren. —The best picture she has made to date. Fits the star and gets laughs.—R. R. Ross Riley, Wigwam theatre, Oberlin, Kans.—Small town patronage.

Marked Men, with Harry Carey. —Five reels of good classy pictures. This is one of Carey’s best. The lightning and storm effects in this picture will make your audience grasp their seats.—Watkins & Sons, Savoy theatre, Helena, Mont.—Neighborhood patronage.

Borrowed Clothes, with Mildred Harris Chaplin. —Went over in good shape. Story fair, but star weak in my opinion, but that is not Harry Black. Supporting cast good.—H. F. Thompson, Liberty theatre, Pardeeville, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Rouge and Riches, with Mary MacLaren. —Picture fair. Star no good for my house.—C. D. Howland, Forrest theatre, Portsmouth, O.—Neighborhood patronage.

Marked Men, with Harry Carey. —Don’t let anybody stop you from getting this show. One of the best series. Absolutely the best. Carey we ever played.—J. F. Alker, Mahon theatre, Matron, Wash.

The Sporting Duchess, with Alice Joyce. —A first rate production. Worth putting over big. It will back up all you say.—J. C. Bennett, Princess theatre, Whiting, Ind.

The Birth of a Soul, with Harry T. Morey. —Good picture, but name makes a poor drawing card.—R. R. Hess, Majestic, Edna, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Garter Girl, with Corinne Griffith. —Story of stage life and life in a saloon. Quite a good picture, and the title is alluring. It is an O. Henry story. Good supporting cast. It has grips.—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield theatre, Chicago, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Wreck, with Anita Stewart. —Absolutely good. Some of the clothes worn must have come over in the Mayflower. Cannot get good results from Vita.—R. W. Ralston, Colonial theatre, Tracy, Minn.—General patronage.

Cupid Forecloses, with Bessie Love. Good picture. It’s cheaper for an exhibitor to book good pictures than poor ones at any price.—C. W. Griffin, De Luxe theatre, Bristow, Okla.—General patronage.

The Climbers, with Corrine Griffith. —Good. Out of the ordinary.—A. D. Luedike, Columbia theatre, Kenosha, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Man Who Won, with Harry Morey. —Very good program picture. Morey is good.—W. E. Anderson, Rex theatre, Diller, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Vengeance of Durand, with Alice Joyce. —A dandy picture.—Harry Hoebth, Maxine theatre, Imlay City, Mich.—Small town patronage.

The Gamblers, with Harry Morey. —A first class picture. It holds the interest throughout. Plenty of action and suspense.—E. E. Bonham, Bonham theatre, Prairie du Sac, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Fortune Hunter, with Earl Williams. —A very good picture, but did not draw for some reason. Was advertised big, too. Not worth a raise in admission, which I had to do to get by.—William Haight, Orpheum theatre, Livingston, Mont.—Neighborhood patronage.

Slaves of Pride, with Alice Joyce. —Good picture. Drew and pleased my audience, but some scenes too dark.—B. L. Hubbard, Hub theatre, Bishop, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Garter Girl, with Corinne Griffith. —The best work of this star. Truly wonderfully directed. Sorry for exhibitor that cannot get this. Pictures of this type keep people loving the pictures. Good business for one day.—Mrs. J. A. Dowal, Ideal theatre, Omaha, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

A pathetic moment from “Humoresque,” the Cosmopolitan production, starring Alma Rubens, distributed by Famous Players-Lasky.

—Custer’s Last Fight played my house with Chief Buffalo Bear and Squaw to a very big business. The Indians visiting school draws the business.—W. M. Bloom, Royal theatre, Chicago, Ill.—Transient patronage.

Love Without Question, with Olive Tell. —Quite a bit different from the ordinary run of pictures. A good story, but after all is said and done it seems a little too improbable.—H. V. Friedrich, Majestic theatre, Sheboygan, Wis.—Downtown patronage.

Custer’s Last Fight, with a special cast. —Picture played my house to big business. Buffalo Bear Indians have very clever Indian act that pleased all.—H. L. Learner, Grand theatre, Argo, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Woman He Chose, with a special cast. —Held them out for two weeks on this production.—Ziegfield theatre, Chicago, Ill.—Transient patronage.

The Forbidden Woman, with Clara Kimball Young. —Better liked than Eyes of Youth. Splendid exterior scenes.—H. V. Friedrich, Majestic theatre, Sheboygan, Wis.—Downtown patronage.

PEP AND ACTION. BUSINESS GOOD.—D. C. Feegles, Rex, Fort Worth, Tex.— Neighborhood patronage.

The Great Gamble (Vitagraph), with Charles Hutchison—Have shown nine episodes and going over bigger right along. Plenty of thrills and action.—R. A. Booth, Bijou, Carrington, N. D.—Small town patronage.

Dare devil Jack (Pathé), with Jack Dempsey.—Very poor serial, with the most unfair finish in the world. Have run ten episodes and all the interesting parts could easily be put in one.—Henry Hastier, Elite theater, Lemars, Ia.

The Black Secret (Pathé), with Pearl White.—Good serial. Star very popular here, but too much Illu stuff to suit all classes from a business standpoint. Have done him here.—I. J. Tension, Star theater, Sandusky, Mich.—Small town patronage.

The Lost City (Warner Bros.), with Juanita Hansen.—Have shown first four episodes and each has broken all records for similar days with other serials.—Max Jesselson, Halsted theater, Chicago, Ill.—General patronage.

The Black Secret (Pathé), with Pearl White.—On eighth episode. Going great. It is a very popular serial.—Pratt & Jackson, Royal theater, Center ville, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

Lightning Bryce (Arrow), with Ann Little and Jack Hoxie.—Very very good. Full of action can recommend it and show a Kansas matinee for ladies and children. Biggest serial ever. Draws children as well as elders.—Harry Crawford, Marlowe theater, Chicago, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Lion Man (Universal), with Kathleen O'Connor.—Only fair. Plot of this one is identical to that of Elmo the Mighty, The Great Radium Mystery and other Universal serials. Good hours.—John G. Becker, Rex, Des Moines, Ia.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Midnight Man (Universal), with James J. Corbett.—We have run four episodes of this serial and the people seem to enjoy it. It has a better drawing power than Elmo the Mighty.—Mercier, Electric theater, Perryville, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

Screaming Shadows (Halmark), with Ren Wilson.—Fair business first episode. Not so good on following ones.—Present sixth.—H. M. Aaron, Crystal theater, Chicago, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Invisible Hand (Vitagraph), with Antonio Moreno.—This serial stacks up well with the average continued stories. Has plenty of action. Contains no mysterious characters. We have trusted it and our patrons liked it.—Chas. H. Ryan, Garfield theater, 2844 Madison st., Chicago, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Man of Might (Vitagraph), with William Duncan.—Played the third episode and Duncan certainly pleases our patrons. Have no hesitancy in recommending this serial.—Harry E. Odeon theater, Hardin, Mo.—General patronage.

The Black Secret (Pathé), with Pearl White.—On the eighth episode and am doing good. Getting better every episode.—P. C. Azara, Happy Hour theater, Cresson, Pa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Lightning Bryce (Arrow), with Ann Little and Jack Hoxie.—Pulling Monday's receipts away above my average business. On seventh episode. Each one better than the last.—R. Sola Colonial theater, Chicago, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Great Gamble (Pathé), with a special cast.—A very good serial. It holds the people, and is worth boosting.—A. C. Blesner, Electric theater, Perryville, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Midnight Man (Universal), with James Corbett.—Have shown four episodes. A winner. Jun's personality proved a valuable box office attraction and kept the coming irrespective of weather. Held up throughout.—L. L. Sturmy, Peninsula theater, Portland, Ore.—Neighborhood patronage.

Smashing Barriers (Vitagraph), with William Duncan.—Have run six episodes and boosted it, and try to find some one that does not like it. If you haven't run Duncan's serial, tie into one, and just from this you have fifteen specials.—Jack H. Hooks, Palace theater, Thomas, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

Bound and Gagged (Pathé), with George B. Seitz.—Just closed this to good business. A different serial and right length.—R. J. Charles, Liberty Circuit theater, Yoder, Wash.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Invisible Hand (Vitagraph), with Antonio Moreno.—Holding up. The same crowd on each episode. It's a good serial and has done a fine piece of business. Lots of pep.—Chas. Blaine, Yale theater, Henryetta, Okla.—General patronage.

The Red Glove (Universal), with Marie Wallace.—Am running this two episodes at a time and is going over good.—H. R. Axline, Scope theater, Wenona, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Short Subjects

From Hand to Mouth (Pathé), with Harold Lloyd.—Very good. One continuous laugh. Lloyd big card here.—Played with Metro's Some Bride and was a very good show all through.—Rex theater, Aurora, Minn.—Small town patronage.

Petticoats and Pants (Christie), with a special cast.—A humdinger. If you like to hear 'em roar, play this one with E. Bennett, Princess theater, Whiting, Ind.

Jigs in Society (Christie), with a special cast.—Drew well, but did not give satisfaction.—E. N. Collins, Liberty theater, Electra, Tex.—Small town patronage.

Haunted Spooks (Pathé), with Harold Lloyd.—My first Lloyd comedy and went over big. Patrons asking for more of them.—R. A. Bots, Grand theater, Carrington, N. D.—Small town patronage.

The Fly Cop (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—Went big, but not as good as The Grocery Clerk. Lots of good stuff. Boost it. Can't go wrong on Semon's.—William Thacher, Royal theater, Salina, Kans.

Hull Boat 35, with a special cast.—Found this a good drawing card with short subjects. They will never take another picture like this.—R. Charles, Liberty Theatre Circuit, Yoder, Wash.—Neighborhood patronage.

UNEASY FEET, with a special cast.—The most remarkable comedy we ever ran here. 1,500 feet of acting feet and color scenic and "Memories" make up a dandy two reel special to balance any program. Try Comediant pictures.—R. Ross Riley, Wigwam theater, Oberlin, Kans.
Does your music fit the picture? Or have you said, "I can't afford that kind of music."

The Bartola will solve your music problem just like it has done for other exhibitors.

The Bartola was designed for your theatre to give you 100% music. The kind that satisfies your patrons and increases your business and at a cost you can afford.

Let us personally introduce you to exhibitors who have increased their business with Bartola music. Men who have used the Bartola every day for years and swear by it (not at it).

Reichenbach Again Succeeds With A Sensational Exploitation Stunt

New York Newspapers Give Columns of Space to Story Which Is Concocted to Publicize “The Return of Tarzan”

Harry Reichenbach’s proclivities as a press agent again have received nationwide prominence.

About a week ago newspapers in every section of the country published an unusual story in which Thomas R. Zann of Leavenworth, Wash., and his pet lion, Jim, were the central figures. The press reports indicated that Zann was waiting in New York for a boat to South Africa, where he planned to return the lion to its haunts in the jungles.

Orders Too Much Beef

Zann, according to the story, succeeded in getting his pet into his room at the Belclaire hotel by housing it in a piano box, which was hoisted to the second floor during the absence of the manager. Not until he ordered an inordinate amount of raw beef were the suspicions of the management of the hotel aroused.

Upon investigation, the presence of the lion became known and Zann and his pet were ejected from the hostelry.

That is the gist of the story as carried by the press of the country. Many of the New York papers made column displays of the incident, while others, believing that it smacked of publicity, were apprehensive, but gave it some notice so as to play safe.

Some Editors Suspicious

Although some of the editors evidenced suspicions and made their stories read accordingly, the success of results as a whole are a credit to Harry Reichenbach’s progressive and sensational methods of exploitation. The Zann incident is only another of his clever stunts for heralding a forthcoming production, and in this case it is “The Return of Tarzan,” the screen version of Edgar Rice Burroughs’ novel which Goldwyn will publish shortly.

Only recently Mr. Reichenbach was successful in exploiting “The Virgin of Stamboul,” the Universal picture, when he received notice in the papers over the country with a story in which a maiden was stolen in the Near East, brought to New York by her abductors and found on the Lower East Side.

Others Play It Up

The New York Tribune, which slightly mistrusted the story, said:

“If Jim has nothing to do with any ‘jungle man’ or ‘ape man’ movie, Mr. T. R. Zann (say it aloud) certainly made a bad mistake in giving his breakfast order.”

Both the Sun and the Herald made stories of a column or more in length. The World was the most incredulous; in fact, it capitalized the story for its own use, as it is to run one of the Tarzan stories soon.

Alice Illoew Film Has

Week’s Run at Barbee

The two-reel comedy, “Her Bargain Day,” the Reelcraft production featuring Alice Illoew, has just completed a successful week’s engagement at Barbee’s Loop theatre, Chicago’s new first-run house.

The picture was made under the direction of Frederick J. Ireland, vice-president of Reelcraft Pictures Corporation and supervisor of production. The star’s name was given prominence on the theatre sign during the week.

Newsy St. Louis Squibs

B.W. GOLDMAN, director of three leading theatres here, was the first impresario to show up in a straw hat. Bill wore it for a week and was greeted by rain each day. He finally got it across on the eighth day, parading up and down film row for the education of everyone.

FRED McCHELLAN, director general for Famous Players in Missouri, is falling away to a mere shadow. He manages fifteen theatres and covers more territory than a book salesman.

JOHN C. FLINN of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, and F. C. Cornell, president of Famous Players Missouri branch, returned to St. Louis this week after a flying trip to New York.

SOL KOPLOW, formerly secretary and treasurer of the Consolidated Theatres Co., plans to go East shortly.

ELVIRA LEWIS, Realart manager, and Charley Werner, who serves in the same capacity for Metro, had good times at their respective conventions. Werner is the owner of a new Realart branch.

JOHN LOVEBRIDGE is the new manager of the Kings Theatre. He formerly was a district manager for Famous Players. John is promising some mighty presents.

AL DAVIDSON, a leading St. Louis musician, has been named as the musical director of the Mozart Airdome, which opened a week ago. The weather was a little cool, but has warmed up now and the Mozart is operating at capacity.

GLEN EASTMANN, Pershing manager, is the first of the summer widowers. Glen’s wife, a former concert and vaudeville singer, decided to desert her domestic existence for a while and accepted an engagement in Dass. Glen already is singing the "blues."

CECIL MAKERRIS, Goldwyn manager, reports record-breaking business. Cecil is a star at collecting his checks.

JOHN WEATER, manager of the Grand-Florissant, wants more pictures like “Mary’s Ankle.” John staged an ankle contest and had a wonderful time.

A new exchange has been opened here to handle Comedyart subjects.

Inter-Ocean Has Foreign Rights on Cohn Comedies

Inter-Ocean Film Corporation has obtained the world distribution rights, exclusive of the United States and Canada, on the “Hallroom Boys” comedies which Jack and Harry Cohn are producing, according to Gus Schlesinger, manager of the department of foreign film sales of Inter-Ocean.

For a period of three years, Inter-Ocean will handle twenty-six of these two-reel subjects annually.

Nineteen of these comedies already have been made under the new arrangement. It is announced that an extensive and far-reaching advertising campaign will be inaugurated in foreign territories in behalf of the pictures. The campaign will be under the direction of A. L. Feinman.
With the Procession in Los Angeles

By Harry Hammond Beall

Florence Vidor is to be loaned to Thomas Ince for one Artcraft special, "Revel," in which Lewis Stone will play the male lead. John Ray will direct the production. The deal, which has been pending for four months, was concluded upon the completion of "The Jack-Knife Man," King Vidor's forthcoming First National production.

"The Money Changers," Upton Sinclair's notable book, is to be put into photoplay form by Benjamin B. Hampton. An all-star cast will interpret the story under the direction of Hugh Ryan Conway.

"The God of His Country," is the forthcoming Jack London story to be picturized by Metro. Mitchell Lewis will be featured under the direction of Edward Sloman.

Harry Raff, the general manager of the Selznick West Coast Studios, announces that he will make two more productions before taking his organization back east. One will be "Nocturnal," starring Olive Thomas, and the other will be "Who Am I?" both an all-star cast directed by Henry Kolker.

Mary O'Connor, film editor of Famous Players-Lasky, has gone to New York to confer with the eastern offices, review shows and cast about for new screen material.

Cecil B. DeMille has practically completed cutting his latest Paramount Artcraft special, "Something to Think About," and is scheduled to start on a new picture in June.

The Motion Picture Art Directors' Association is taking a prominent part in the social affairs of the industry. A dinner dance is scheduled for early June at which the technical men will be present in A. W. Alley of Metro is president of the organization; R. E. Sibley of the Mayer studios, vice president; R. C. Hartley of the Hampton studios, secretary, and Sydney Ullman of Metro, treasurer.

D. J. Chatkin of the Marion H. Kohl Productions is on his way to New York to complete distribution arrangements for Grace Cunard, Polly Moran and "Smiling" Bill Jones short reel features.

Reverend George LeRoy Clark, the preacher-actor, has signed a year's contract with the Paragon Pictures Corporation to make comedies. His first venture was in "Dracula," he has been at the free lance and his success with his first picture resulted in the contract.

Colonel W. N. Selig is going over the top again. This time the veteran producer will offer a six-reel, wild animal comedy in which a quarter of a million in jungle live stock will participate.

In collaboration with the Los Angeles Herald, Thomas H. Ince is conducting free motion picture tests for those who aspire to become famous on the screen. On the opening day of the stunt nearly a thousand people lined up to be photographed.

Homer Scott, a member of the American Society of Cinematographers, is becoming amphibious. He is equally at home in the water, as he is on land. Scott is photographing the underwater scenes for "Caleb West," Maurice Tourneur's forthcoming screen version of the exploits of the master diver.

Katherine Macdonald, who has been vacationing at Big Bear, has returned to Los Angeles and is to begin work immediately on "Curtain," her forthcoming starring vehicle. James Young, who directed her in "The Notorious Miss Lise," will again direct.

Jack Callicott, managing director of the Kinema theatre, is in San Francisco in conference with First National Exhibitors and from where the recently announced circuit of prologues will be given its impetus with the presentation of Callicott's prologue to "The Woman Givens."

Monroe Salisbury has left for the wilderness with Donald Crisp, who will direct him in his forthcoming independent production, "The Barbarian." The star-producer and his director will drive around the Pacific coast until they find a suitable location then a telegram will give the remainder of the company probably fifteen minutes in which time to pack the equipment and get started.

Plans are under way for the filming of "Lightning," the play that created a sensation in New York, according to word received by Lloyd Bacon from his father, Frank Bacon, who created the play.

Nazimova has completed "L'Homme Riche" at the Metro studio and will take a three weeks' vacation before starting on her forthcoming production, which is to be known as "Billions."

Colonel S. F. Jacobs, who represents the motion picture pages of the Northcliffe group of British papers and is permanently assigned to Los Angeles, is a veteran of two wars. The colonel was a mere captain during the Boor war, but was immediately commissioned a full colonel for the late unpleasantness. He pushed aside a German bayonet with his hand and wears a Fleurs-de-lis scar instead of the usual life-line on his palm.

Christie Caranoe, the director of Jessie Barriscale features, is glad that Hollywood is not over-populated with taxicabs. His nickname is "Cabbie" and he admits he would have to look around every time a tourist hailed a passing taxi, if such were the case.

Motion picture direction by wire is the latest novelty in screen circles. Eddie Polo went to New York where Ringling Brothers' circus was playing, to take opening scenes for his new circus serial. When he left Los Angeles the script was not ready for him to take along, and Hope Loring, the serial supervisor, promised to send it to him by mail. When he was ready to start the script, owing to various changes, was not completed. The circus was there and ready, so each night Miss Loring telegraphed the continuity for the following day.

Eileen Seidovick, who played opposite Eddie Polo in his first circus serial, "The Lure of the Circus," is to be starred by Universal in a serial adapted from the well-known novel, "Wits and the Woman," by F. B. Irwin.

"Hoot" Gibson, Universal's intrepid young cowboy star, has become a director. He is wielding the megaphone for a series of two-reel productions, written by Louis D. Lighton, in which "Hoot" is also starring.

The Bankers Enjoyed This

California Bankers' Association visited the Christie Studios as a feature of their annual convention in Los Angeles and were given an insight to picture making. All Christie is directing Bobby Vernon and Dorothy Devoe in a scene.

Dear Sir:

In reply to your favor of April 29th regarding “Lost City,” I am pleased to advise that it is the biggest and best bet in the serial field we have ever played. This is the second episode we are now showing, and we have broken all records for serials. We used animal cutouts and trailers and in fact spent about as much much money on advertising as we would on a big production but it got results. As a box office attraction it brings home the bacon and also satisfies your patrons.

Yours truly

H Dame Rumor squawks truthfully, it looks to us as though Flaherty's soprano 'The Confession' with Lubliner & Triniz and Schoenhofen circuits talking the big Henry B. Walthall feature for their theatres.

Ross and Mack, always at your service' purveyors of effective advertising, printing and engraving, are now located in their new executive offices in Film Exchange Building, 207 South Wabash avenue and during the big rush these well-knowns are now enjoying, affably request their many patrons to form line at the right and all shall be served.

James Salter, sales representative of the local Vitaphone exchange is now dispensing a brand new motor creation, a Nash touring car, so get ready you Chicago exhibitors with the booking sheet for James will soon drive up with the winsome Miss Marge O'Doone' feature that is now cleaning up in these parts.

Harry Teitel, cousin of A. Teitel, the film conservationist, who recently returned from New York is again associated with his cousin and tells us of 'Chi has both the Publix and Broadway faded to a whisper.' That's alright Harry, we agree with you.

Another new independent outlet for films is now established in Film Exchange Building. Maury O'Hara's Salkin and his Sinn Feln pal, Henri 'McCabe' Ellman are the directing genius, to be known as the General Film Exchange offering the "Square Shooter" with Henry Carey and the feature, 'Are You Legally Married?' Last we forget, it is reported these magnates are now in control of the Julian theatre. Both nice boys—Yes?

Oswald, Max Levy's pet gold fish, is learning to sing. Already, Oswald's clear tenor voice can be heard above the din of the Muriel-Cole salesmen and Max's telephone instrument, Oswald sings a pretty little ditty said to have been written by Gerald Smith and is now being enjoyed by a Herald representative Mr. Smith said: 'I never wrote a song for the poor fish. He must have stole it. And anyway he sings it in the wrong key.'

George DeKeirp, who handles the advertising and publicity for Robertson-Cole in Chicago, spent his Decoration Day listening to the wild waves at Holland, Mich.

Orchestra Hall opened its third summer season as a motion picture house on May 31, under the direction of Messrs. Wessels and Voegel. A thirteen piece symphony orchestra under the leadership of Walter Davidson is furnishing the music for the pictures. Miss Marie Light, a soprano with an unusually sweet voice, is the soloist this year. John F. Gillespie is managing the popular Michigan house, which opened with 'The Prince Chap' starring Thomas Meighan in a Paramount-Burton Holmes Travel picture, International News and Paramount Magazine. Miss Mildred Fitzpatrick is back as organist.

Ire of Oak Parkers Is Aroused When Censors Bar Cecil DeMille Film

Sentiment in opposition to censorship at Oak Park, III., was expressed one night last week when John Hodgson, manager of the Oak Park theatre, notified the audience which filled the auditorium that the censorship board had refused a permit for him to screen Cecil B. DeMille's Paramount picture, 'Why Your Wife?' which he had booked for four days.

Hissing and other expressions of contempt greeted the announcement. Mr. Hodgson explained on one slide that if the censors prevailed in their practice of barring productions he had booked the theatre would be compelled to close. Another slide asked those in favor of good pictures to write to Mayor Prott and the newspapers urging removal of the censorship board.

Only recently the Oak Park experienced the same inconvenience when the board would not permit a screening of "The Corsican Brothers." In the case of "Why Change Your Wife?" Mr. Hodgson apologized for having been unable to notify his patrons of the last minute change.
Order of the Gumps Promotes Happiness Club That Started as a Joke Develops Into a Nation-Wide Movement

M. J. Mintz of Celebrated Players Film Corporation of Chicago, which holds the world rights on the Gump animated cartoons, recently organized the Glorious Order of Gumps, whose main object in life was to see how much humor and fun could be extracted from life. He started the club more as a joke, his friends and exhibitors in and around Chicago comprising the membership.

But the idea spread by word of mouth and Mr. Mintz was surprised to have queries come in from various state right buyers who have purchased the Gump cartoon for their territory, asking him just what the Gump Club was and how they could get in on it. Together with Mr. Friedman, president of Celebrated Players, Mr. Mintz hit upon an idea of spreading the joyful spirit of the club over the country, and as a consequence every exchange handling the Gump cartoon is a headquarters for the local Gump Club, furnishing application blanks and information to the theatres who in turn furnish them to the patrons of the house upon request.

"I didn't think when I started the Gump Club," said Mr. Mintz, "that it would amount to anything more than a sort of a joke. However, the cheerful spirit is so badly needed now and anything of a cheerful nature seems to be so acceptable to the people of America, that they have fallen for the Gump Club, and fallen hard. Perchance the American people, tied together by the bonds of cheerfulness through the Gump Club, can effect some radical changes in present-day situations. In my mind the spirit of the new joy organization is a direct antidote for the spirit of unrest and so-called Bolshevism that has of late been sweeping the country."

To meet the demand for membership applications and cards, thousands of them are being printed in Chicago. Those exchanges handling the Gumps and who have not allied themselves with this movement can obtain any number of application cards upon application to Mr. Mintz.

Photographers Test Powerful Arc Light Motographers of America Is Sponsoring Experiments

At Chicago Studio

A powerful arc light, perfected six years ago as a locomotive headlight but never put to this use, is being tested by motion picture photographers in Chicago in the belief that they have a discovery of unlimited value to the motion picture industry.

Eugene J. Cour is the man who introduced the light in motion photography. The Chicago region of the Motographers of America is sponsoring the experiments.

Mr. Cour used the light when he was photographing Chicago's "loop subway," an underground freight railroad of several miles in length. He declares it is far superior to any light now in use and very convenient in handling on account of its light weight.

Twenty-one of the lights have been installed in the Chicago Coliseum for the use of motion picture photographers during the Republican convention.

The lights were recently demonstrated at a meeting of the Motographers of America held in the Castle Studios, 2332 North California Avenue. The demonstration featured a well-arranged program, which included studio demonstrations, brief technical talks and musical numbers.

Harold F. Brown, president of the M. of A., presided.

The New York offices of Marshall Neilan Productions declares that his third independent picture, which will be published through First National about the middle of June, will display a very unusual character portrayal by "Bull" Montana. An expert on makeup experimented for two weeks before obtaining the desired results, it is said. The picture has not been titled.

Glantzberg Traveling Through the West in Interest of Typhoon

Ernst Glantzberg, president of Typhoon Fan Company, New York, is visiting several of the larger western cities. During his two or three weeks' absence from the metropolis he expects to close several orders with theatres now in construction.

Notwithstanding the late spring, farsighted exhibitors, it is said, continue to prepare their theatres to meet the demands of the coming hot weather, and as a result Typhoon Fan Company has contracted during the last week to equip the following houses with the Typhoon cooling system:

Winter garden theatre, Eighty-sixth street, New York; Strand theatre, Monroe, N. C.; Minerva theatre, Jersey City, N. J.; Capitol theatre, Pekin, Ill.; Star theatre, Rockingham, N. C.; Columbia City theatre, Columbia City, Ind.

NOVEL in theme, great in production and astonishing originality of situation, "Below the Surface" strike a new note in drama.

Here are a few of the amazing, breath-taking thrills that follow one another with lightning speed:

The daring plunge of Martin Flint (Hobart Bosworth) to the depths of the sea to rescue the submarine crew.

The luring of Luther Flint by the confidence woman, to dive for sunken treasure.

The hazardous descent to the sea bed, made by the fatuated youth, to please his bride.

The tragedy of the boy's return to his desolated home after his bride has fled with her partner in crime.

The descent of Martin Flint upon the gayety of the cabaret, where he seizes his daughter-in-law and takes her home.

The wreck of the liner, and the hair-breadth escape of Martin Flint.

The drowning of James Arnold and Edna Green on the wrecked liner.

The boy's dive to the wreck.

What he sees through the porthole.

His rescue when his father, without a diving line with a knife and swims with him to...

The Great

Made by an independent producer for any and every theatre in the land

First Release, July 12th

HARRY CAREY
in eight big outdoor productions, starting on July 29th with a story by H. H. Van Loan, author of “The Virgin of Stamboul,” and directed by Reeves Eason. The man who shows big houses how little houses make money will back your theatre to the walls for every one of this big eight.

CARMEL MYERS
in eight heart-appeal features, some in character, some “straight,” all made captivating by Youth and Personality and Beauty—that’s the program for bewitching Carmel Myers, just back on the screen after a great year of stage success, and now more than ever a national favorite.

EDITH ROBERTS
in love stories, pure but not simple—eight of them. Complicated by clever surprises, invigorated by the talent and personal charm of this fascinating young star, will be from a story by Ralph Stock, “Norman Dawn.”

FRANK MAYO
in eight productions packed with modern realism, action and red-blooded romance. His first is “The Red Lane,” directed by Lynn Reynolds, the man who made that great picture, “The Brute Breaker,” and released July 12th. Your whole year holds out no bigger promise of fine entertainment than these eight big Mayos.

LYONS & MORAN
The day of the comedy drama a la mode is here—and Lyons and Moran are here—with eight hugely amusing, perfectly dressed, “young married folks” productions that are fifty-fifty thrills and chuckles. Their first—“La, La, Lucille,” from the well-known operetta, August 16th.

A NEW STAR
Added to the foregoing forty New Star Series Universal Special Attractions will be a series of eight Prize Pictures featuring a fascinating new star who will have behind her all that artistic ability can supply in direction, story and setting. Watch for our early announcement.
Crash! Bang! went the wireless.
The words of the message meant little, but the spark!—
Angrily leaping across the gap it did what it was planned to do,—fired the fuse!
And there the girl lay, helpless, a prisoner!
That's just one of the hundred thrills in this hummer of a serial. They come in flocks, in every episode.
"TENSE AND APPEALING"

Exhibitor's Trade Review, which further says:

"This picture provides a wealth of tense and appealing entertainment from beginning to end. The best picture in which Katherine MacDonald has appeared to date.

"The star does very effective work as an innocent girl thrown among adventurers. Atmosphere of Monte Carlo appealing. High suspense.

"Supporting cast beyond criticism. Photography and lighting delicate and beautiful."

“The Greatest Love Story Ever Told”

Wins High Praise
from Trade Critics

“One of the most successful and inspiring love stories that has been presented on the screen . . . the screen play is no less absorbing than the stage play was and is free from that enemy of the good drama known as "padding."” — Moving Picture World.

“'Romance' is a picture of remarkable charm. It has been worth waiting for and unfolds on the screen a succession of maddening love scenes which positively thrill. It is the sort of thing to delight the discriminating and appeal to the masses.” — Exhibitors Trade Review.

“There is no doubt about the drawing power of 'Romance,' particularly in metropolitan quarters. It will bring out people that seldom come to the picture houses. The older ones, many of whom saw the original play when presented something over six years ago, and those who are familiar with the tragic yet beautiful character of the romance presented, will turn out en masse to see the picture. It is an unusual love story carrying a deep appeal and should appeal especially to the better class of audience.” — Wide’s Daily

“The verdict is sure to be ‘an artistic production’ . . . The picture will certainly appeal to those in search of romance or those who have lost it in the days when love was young.” — Motion Picture News.

“'Romance' is a drama in every sense of the word—a credit to the motion picture art.” — Harrison’s Reports.

“'Romance' is eminently fitted for the screen. It has all the elements of appeal for screen fans.” — New York Morning Telegraph “'Romance' is a romance in every sense of the word, replete with pathos, comedy and tragedy, a story that delicately points a moral.” — New York Dramatic Mirror.

Exhibitors Herald Says:

“THE WONDER MAN” (Robertson-Cole) seems destined for success. The initial starring vehicle for Georges Carpentier, it reveals unexpectedly a genuine talent possessed by the ring idol. His bearing is excellent, his camera presence that of a veteran, and the production promises much from the box office standpoint. It should be backed by extensive exploitation, which is thoroughly justified.

One of the Big Subjects of the year
Breathing Mystery, Color & Romance of the Tropic

Character Pictures Corp. 17 West 42 St. New York City
The form and methods of the Stanley company of Philadelphia have continually suggested a big idea to the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

At various times during the past two and one-half years the officers of Famous Players have seriously entered into consideration of a plan to form a booking company, patterned after the Stanley organization, to operate on a national basis.

The industry is well aware of the situation which has existed in Philadelphia for some time; it amounts substantially to, "Play with the Stanley company or don't play at all."

New Booking Proposition Is Ambition of Zukor

Just what such a plan, expanded into an organization operating nationally, would mean to the independent exhibitor and the independent producer is very easy to imagine.

This publication has learned from reliable sources that the Famous Players company is now at work upon a new booking proposition aimed to be nation-wide in extent and operated along the general lines of the Stanley company. The central office is to be opened in the Times Square district, New York City, and an official of the Stanley company is to be placed in charge.

The organization plan now under consideration is somewhat as follows:

Subsidiary companies of the central organization are to be opened in the exchange centers. Fifty-one per cent of the capital stock of the subsidiary companies is to be owned by the owners of the central organization and the remaining forty-nine per cent remains with the subsidiary companies to be purchased by the exhibitor-members.

With this organization carried into effect the Famous Players company would book for use by exhibitor-members throughout the country productions of other producers as well as their own. As may be readily seen if this booking company would include an important percentage of the entire number of theatres throughout the country the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation would be in an excellent position to dominate in every respect the independent exhibitor and the independent producer.

The first concrete effort of the Famous Players group to effect this nation-wide booking company was made about two and one-half years ago. A series of meetings participated in by officials of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation and a representative of the Stanley company, who explained the plan of operation of the Philadelphia organization, were held in a conference room at the Hotel Astor, New York City.

Tentative Plans Called For Five Year Contract

The tentative plan agreed upon at that time provided for a five year contract with exhibitors whereby the booking company would have the sole direction of what the exhibitor would play for the entire period. A final agreement was not reached at that time due to the insistence of one of the conferences that the exhibitor be permitted to cancel the contract if he was not satisfied with its operation after a period of one year.

Early last Fall the ambition of the Famous Players group to have a nation-wide booking company took on definite shape. Central offices were opened in New York in Forty-second street and all was set in readiness to commence a campaign to sell the proposition to the exhibitors of the country. For certain very interesting reasons, which will be referred to later, the project never got into actual operation.

Many indications at this moment point to the fact that the Famous Players plan of getting a grip upon the industry through the purchase of theatres in whole or in part has not been working out satisfactorily during recent months and that the less expensive method of a nation-wide booking company is to be resorted to.

From persons in a position to know the information is gained that at this time the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation through its multitude of real estate companies controls directly or indirectly about two hundred and fifty theatres in the United States and Canada. In this total there are a very large number of small theatres that would not have been considered individually but were taken in as units of a group. Out of the entire number of two hundred and fifty, only about thirty may be considered to be importantly situated theatres in key centers.

Small Portion of Field Influenced Up to Date

Although the theatre ventures of the Famous Players company up to date have involved a huge
A DANGEROUS FEAT!

- Sim Mancini -
expenditure it is obvious that only a small portion of the field has been influenced. This fact apparently has strongly impressed the financial groups behind the company and they are assuming a lukewarm attitude toward future theatre acquisitions except out of earnings. If this attitude carries through and Famous Players is restricted to annual earnings for the purchase of theatres the menace of its activities of recent months will be short-lived, for the largest possible earnings of a single year would be only slightly felt when directed toward the purchase of theatres over that period.

All of this forcibly directs attention to consideration of a shift in policy of Famous Players from control of theatres through purchase to a similar control of theatres through a booking company.

Either of the propositions is equally iniquitous and both tend toward the creation of a condition which would throttle the commercial and artistic advance of the business and render independent operation—whether by an exhibitor or by a producer—extremely precarious.

There are thousands of exhibitors throughout the country who have never had an actual fear of competition from Famous Players who nevertheless have suffered from the uses which the policy of the home office has been put to by the sales force. We refer to the threats that unless the exhibitor conform with the sales agreement desired by the corporation a competing theatre would be built. We have been informed of this practice being indulged in with reference to towns of as small a population as 25,000.

Theatre Activity Used As Sales Leverage

In these cases practically without exception the corporation has never for a moment seriously entertained the idea of building a theatre, yet the exhibitor unaware of just what the Famous Players plan has been become panic-stricken, thinking that he faced formidable competition together with the summary loss of such of the Famous Players pictures as he had been using.

We do not charge that this has been done with the formal consent of the officials of the company, but it does seem apparent with the fact, that these practices were being indulged in, a matter of common knowledge throughout the trade, the home office must have had some fairly accurate information as to what was transpiring.

Without question it has been this threat of what Famous Players intended doing rather than anything it has actually done in the way of building or buying theatres that has aroused the resentment of exhibitors throughout the country and has created a condition in which the customers of Famous Players now want to know definitely and finally what they are to expect from that organization.

We do not believe that this industry can continue prosperous under any such handicaps as would be imposed upon it under the Famous Players plan. We do not believe that production and exhibition of motion pictures form a logical combination and we believe that the exhibitors of America who are contributing to the revenue of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation are entitled to know just where they fit in under the Famous Players plan.

This industry must remain free and open. The investments of independent exhibitors must be protected against the encroachments of any tendency toward control of theatres or control of the product necessary for the theatres.

Monopoly Would Retard Advance of Industry

Persons in a position to judge accurately are thoroughly convinced that the highest type of motion picture has never been and never will be a machine-made product. Individual enterprise, initiative and genius must not be driven from this industry if the motion picture is to continue even that degree of progress necessary to hold the favor of the public. Creative energy even though it may be outside the pale of the chosen circle must be given an opportunity to contribute its bit toward the advancement of motion pictures.

If this movement toward dominating and monopolizing the motion picture industry succeeds, nothing can prevent it from lapsing back into a state similar to the darkened days of the Patents Company when a little group grew rich, meanwhile allowing the greatest gift to humanity of the age to linger in a stage of crudeness and undevelopment that for a period threatened to bring down upon the whole business the disfavor and disgust of the entire thinking public.

The real development of the motion picture came with the coming of the first independents; unless the principles fought for and won at that time are maintained against the present assault all hope of progress must be abandoned.

The exhibitors of the country are finally awake to the actual situation that is confronting them; they are now equipped with the information necessary for an adequate understanding of the problem and from this understanding will issue a line of action which will be a bulwark against further attacks upon their independence.

Fortunately exhibitor organization, which in the past has been sadly deficient, is rounding into a form which portends real accomplishments for the immediate future. While victory is in sight, every exhibitor who has pledged his support in the fight must realize that a thoroughly determined defense must be put up and every legitimate means of combat called into play to insure success.

The Third Article of This Series Will Appear in the Next Issue of EXHIBITORS HERALD
Heraldgrams

"Gone to Cleveland."

This is the sign which is hanging outside the private offices of practically all of the producers, and distributors, and a big percentage of the exhibitors this week.

It would be easier to list those who were NOT at Cleveland than to attempt to print the names of those who ARE at the conventions.

Marshall Neilan passed through Chicago Sunday, June 6, on his way to New York for important conferences with First National officials.

Oscar A. Price, president, and Fred B. Warren, general manager of the Associated Producers, returned to New York Monday after spending several weeks on the West Coast. Warren left Tuesday for Cleveland to attend the conventions and hurried on to Chicago Wednesday night.

Carlos Salazar of the Inter-Ocean Film Corporation sales staff, has been selected by Gus Schlesinger, manager of the department of foreign film sales, to tour the West Indies and South America. He sailed June 7.

A. MacArthur, Jr., has resigned as advertising manager of the Motions Picture World, effective June 12. He will leave immediately for the West Coast where he will enter the producing field. Mr. MacArthur has not made complete announcement of his plans.

Watterson R. Rothacker, who is attending the Cleveland conventions this week, has arranged to sail on the Olympic July 5 for London where he will build a film laboratory.

Elise Ferguson, sailed June 3 from San Francisco for Yokohama. She will spend three months in Japan, China and the Philippines.

Richard W. Saunders has been appointed comptroller of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. He was formerly cashier of the National Bank of Commerce in New York.

Louis Francis Brown, general manager for Burton Holmes, sailed May 20 for Bermuda on the S. S. Fort Hamilton where he will remain several weeks to complete two travel pictures. He was accompanied by his wife.

Ward Crane, who has just finished work as leading man for Anita Stewart in her two latest pictures, leaves this week for New York for a month's vacation before returning to the Coast.

Denison Clift, well known writer and director, has left Hollywood for the East. He will sail soon for Europe to visit France, Italy, Switzerland, Belgium and the British Isles.

Myron Selznick has left for Los Angeles to take charge of moving the producing companies, now on the West Coast, to the East.

Frank G. Conklin has been appointed assistant manager of the Eastern industrial division by Douglas D. Rothacker, industrial division manager for the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company.

F. W. Seitz, father of George B. Seitz, now producing serials for Pathé, has joined his son's producing organizations as vice-president and general manager.

Albert Warner is now en route to Los Angeles to complete arrangements for the International Producing and Distributing organization. His stay will be brief as he is due back in New York, June 23, and will sail for London, June 26.

J. D. Williams, general manager of First National Exhibitors Circuit, passed through Chicago June 5, en route to New York from Los Angeles.

Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, arrived in Chicago on Monday, June 7, to attend the Republican convention and incidentally to sidestep the excitement of the motion picture meet at Cleveland. He will sail for Europe on July 5.

H. S. Laver has resigned as publicity and exploitation director for the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation.

Mathias Radin of Radin Pictures Corporation, was a business visitor in Chicago for a week.

Charles F. Wagner, has left the Trade Review and joined forces with Pathé and will write exploitation stunts for Pathé serials.

To make the RITCHEY poster the finest medium wherewith to advertise a photoplay, not a single point is overlooked. The power of its conception, the beauty of its design and color, and the care taken in its execution, can only result in a poster product that is approximately perfect. Exhibitors United to Battle Paramount Theatre Menace

One Thousand Theatre Owners Assembled at Cleveland Cheer to Echo Declaration of War Upon Producer-Monopoly—Start $100,000 Fund for Purpose

Fifteen Delegates Challenged by Committee

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

CLEVELAND, OHIO, June 9.—With the opening of the greatest assemblage of exhibitors in the history of the industry at the Hotel Winton, Cleveland, on Tuesday, June 8, there is no doubt that the exhibitors of America are determined to battle through until victory is achieved against the menace of the producer-owned theatre, as represented by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

Nearly one thousand exhibitors from every state in the union gathered for the opening of the epoch-making convention and by every word and act indicated that they intend to make a finish fight against the monopolist.

PARAMOUNT ALONE REFUSES TO WITHDRAW

Frank J. Rembusch, exhibitor leader, was cheered to the echo when he declared in making his report to the convention:

"Paramount-Famous Players alone among the producers have refused to withdraw from the theatre field, have refused to treat with any exhibitors' organization and have stated that they are justified in taking every dollar from the exhibitor they can get while they are building and buying theatres against them.

"The committee told Mr. Lichtman, who made this statement, that the exhibitors were then justified in taking every dollar from Paramount."

The balance of the speaker's statement was lost in deafening applause, the ovation lasting several minutes.

Mr. Rembusch made this statement in connection with the report of the "Committee of Seventeen," formed at the Chicago convention, called by Willard C. Patterson, to request the producers to withdraw from the exhibiting field.

Bar All but Independents

For the first time in the history of motion picture conventions, it is the intention to bar all but bona fide exhibitors from the meeting hall. In carrying out this idea, the credentials committee, at its first session Tuesday afternoon, challenged the right of fifteen delegates to be seated.

Among these were prominent men in the industry, some of whom at various times have held offices in exhibitor organizations. These included:

ALFRED S. BLACK, president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors of America.
LEE OCHS, who for two years was president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America.
MARCUS LOEW, head of the Loew circuit of theatres.
E. M. MANDELBAUM, prominent Philadelphia theatre owner.
ERNEST H. HORSTMANN, prominent Boston theatre owner.

The basis of the challenge had not been made public up to late last night.

Wants Big Men to Head Organization

Mr. Rembusch also included in his comments on the report the plea that a man of prominence not identified with the industry be made president of the organization.

In speaking of the type of man he had in mind for the presidency, Mr. Rembusch specifically mentioned William Howard Taft for the position, in behalf of the committee.

Other recommendations of the Committee of Seventeen are as follows:

• Doing business only with the producers who are not in the exhibiting business.
• Voting as individuals, not as state organizations.
• Rule by the majority, with all abiding by decisions.
• A budget committee on finance.
• Basis of representation by congressional districts.

The last recommendation is one of the points which was strongly advocated by the faction which bolted the St. Louis convention a year ago, and indicates a big step toward harmony.

Permanent Officers Are Named

Permanent officers for the convention were named at the opening session. Both Frank J. Rembusch and Sydney S. Cohen, temporary chairmen, retired. The officers are:

Chairman—HERMAN H. LUSTIG, Cleveland.
Reporting Secretary—WILLIAM C. PATTERSON, Atlanta.
Reading Secretary—SAM BERMAN, New York.

"All existing exhibitor organizations must be abandoned," declared Mr. Rembusch, "and there must be concerted efforts behind this new organization. Unless you can raise $100,000, I shall doubt the sincerity of this movement."
Recording Secretary

Willard C. Patterson, of Atlanta, Ga., who was made Permanent Recording Secretary of united exhibitors' organization at Cleveland, June 8, 1920.

First National—In full accord with independent movement.

Detailed Statement From Metro
Metro—Alignment of Metro and Marcus Loew explained as the desire of Loew to insure product for his theatres. Company agrees to eliminate Loew name from Metro titles when objected to.

Goldwyn—Agrees not to enlarge theatre holdings and not to compete with exhibitors. Favor's independent movement.

Praise ‘EXHIBITORS HERALD’ Stand

FRANK J. REMBUSCH wires:

"Let me congratulate you for your splendid stand in exposing the unfair methods of Paramount-Famous Players. We need not only independent producers and exhibitors, but also an independent trade press, which will fight without fear or favor for the exhibitors' rights. Exhibitors greatly appreciate your stand, and we trust the other trade papers will follow the lead of EXHIBITORS HERALD so that fair dealing in this industry will be obtained for all. Every exhibitor in America is absolutely with you."

WILLARD C. PATTERSON, who is a leader in the fight for exhibitor independence, wires:

"Nothing could better have crystallized the sentiment of independent exhibitors assembled in Cleveland than your truly remarkable and unprecedented championing of their welfare in the complete expose you make in EXHIBITORS HERALD this week of the greatest menace which confronts them collectively and individually. You thoroughly deserve the utmost loyalty, allegiance and appreciation which they can give you."

CONVENTION SIDE-LIGHTS

There is no question about this being the biggest convention in the history of the industry.

Practically every hotel in the city is filled to capacity with exhibitors from all parts of the United States, with a few from Canada.

Cleveland hospitality will have a thousand press agents when the theatre owners leave for home. Everything humanly possible seems to have been done.

There is the usual 'hot stove' circuit organized in the hotel lobbies evenings when the veteran exhibitors are telling the "youngsters" all about the "good old days."

Frank J. Rembusch appears to have completely recovered from his recent severe attack of tonsillitis, but confesses that it will take several weeks before he will feel like himself.

The Chicago delegation headed by Joseph Hopp made a noisy entrance Monday night and was welcomed by scores of old friends.

The South is surprisingly well represented. Practically every state below the Mason and Dixon line has sent a delegation to the gathering, the majority of delegates making their first appearance at a national convention.

At the Hotel Winton, an energetic exhibitor took a straw vote Monday night to test out the feeling of theatre owners on the Republican presidential candidates. Governor Coolidge of Massachusetts, who a few days ago vetoed a censorship bill, proved to have many friends.

Chicago exhibitors have started a boom to land the 1921 convention for their city. Between sessions, they were busy talking up the advantages of the Windy City.

One of the surprising sights is to see exhibitors, who have been on opposite sides of the fence for years, walking arm in arm in apparent all past differences have been successfully buried.

The credentials committee was well organized and its work was carried on with dispatch and accuracy.

Pleas of leaders to leave home the "dice, cards and other diversions" apparently carried weight. Up to date no one has been neglecting business for pleasure, and the attendance at the sessions has been pretty close to 100 per cent.

A person would judge from the number of producers and their representatives who are in the environs of Cleveland that the exhibitors pre-convention cry, "Now for a show-down," was taken literally.
N. A. M. P. I. Seeks to Establish Better Relations With Exhibitors

Committee of Seven Is Appointed at Fourth Annual Convention to Adjust Differences and Create Spirit of Cooperation

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

CLEVELAND, OHIO, June 9.—In the hope that the entire motion picture industry will be able to present a united front against common dangers during the coming year, the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry in convention here yesterday appointed a committee to confer with the exhibitors’ organization with a view of adjusting differences and working out a better spirit of cooperation.

The men to whom is entrusted this mission are Harry Berman, Universal Film Manufacturing Company; Fred Beecroft, Motion Picture News; Samuel Goldwyn, Goldwyn Pictures Corporation; Charles C. Pettijohn, Selznick Enterprises; Watterspoon R. Rothacker, Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company; Martin J. Quigley, Exhibitors Herald, and Adolph Zukor, Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

NEED OF MOVEMENT IS APPARENT TO ALL

Unsuccessful efforts of the industry to obtain repeal of oppressive taxes and difficulties encountered in other lines have been directly traceable to the fact that the N. A. M. P. I. and exhibitors have not worked in harmony. This was due largely to the fact that the exhibitors were divided, but there have been many other obstacles in the way.

This step was the most important taken at the fourth annual convention of the National Association. On account of the lack of a quorum being present the meeting was adjourned to a later date in New York, at which time the obtaining of others will be held.

Brady Will Retire As President

Confirming his unofficial announcement of ten days ago, William A. Brady, president of the association since its organization, stated that he would not accept re-election to the chair.

During his address, Mr. Brady warmly condemned the scores of “fake stock-selling schemes” which have been flooding the country during the past year, declaring that they have brought discredit upon the motion picture industry. He warned that the association must take drastic steps in an effort to curb these frauds.

James R. Quirk, publisher of Photeplay, introduced a resolution embodying Mr. Brady’s suggestions, and it was adopted unanimously.

Slade of Directors Elected

The complete slate of directors, nominated by the various divisions of the N. A. M. P. I., was elected to office. It is as follows:

Many Executives Present

Although only eleven of the association’s forty-two directors were present at the session, there were many prominent executives in attendance.

The short notice upon which the meeting was called in Cleveland was regarded generally as the reason for the small attendance, many directors finding it impossible to arrange their business affairs so as to arrive on time.

Mr. Brady’s Annual Address

In his talk to the members, President Brady placed special stress upon the achievements of the association in defeating censorship measures in several states, during the first year in Massachusetts, where a victory was just won by the action of Governor Coolidge in vetoing the bill, as the biggest triumph.

One of the pertinent statements made by the president was relative to advertising upon the screen, a subject which has been continually before the industry in its many phases. Mr. Brady declared emphatically that he was opposed to advertising of every description upon the screen.

Relative to the invasion of the foreign market by American interests, Mr. Brady declared that it was paramount that some basis of reciprocity with the film interests abroad be worked out or the industry faced an embargo in many countries.

Given Vote of Thanks

Following his recommendation that the association declare against the fake stock-selling schemes that have been flooding the country, Samuel Goldwyn moved that the president be accorded a vote of thanks for his accomplishment, while in office. This was adopted.

A detailed report of the work of the association during the last year, showing the big advances made, together with several recommendations, was presented
Rembusch Puts Foot In Paramount Sign
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)
CLEVELAND, OHIO, June 7.—Before a large crowd here tonight, Frank J. Rembusch put his foot through a sign in the lobby of a Cleveland theatre which read: "An independent exhibitor is one who shows Paramount pictures."

by Frederick H. Elliott, executive secretary.

Must Stand United

One of the interesting reports was that of Gabriel L. Hess, chairman of the censorship committee, which was read by Royal K. Fuller, executive secretary of the committee. The report stressed the desirability of standing united against censorship throughout the country.

Hess' report described the excellent work that had been done during this last year and outlined the status of the present situation in various states.

Jack S. Connelly, Washington representative, was warmly congratulated on the achievements of his bureau. Other reports read concerned Sunday opening, fire prevention, film theft, transportation and finances.

Abramson Will Offer Exhibitor Proposition

CLEVELAND, OHIO, June 9.—Ivan Abramson, Joseph A. Golden and their attorney, Moses A. Sachs, are here for the purpose of endeavoring to interest exhibitors attending the convention in two new corporations. The first of these organizations will be a producing unit, while the other will handle the distribution phase.

When Thomas Mehigan comes East shortly, he will be accompanied by David Warfield, who has recovered from his recent accident in Los Angeles sufficiently to travel.

Modern Theatre to Replace McVickers In Chicago's Loop

A $8,000,000 new McVickers' theatre, which is the third oldest in the United States in point of name, is to replace the present structure. The building will comprise twenty-one stories for office use with a 3,000-seat auditorium on the ground floor.

With this announcement comes the statement that the lessees of McVickers, Jones, Linicke & Schaefer, have leased the Garrick theatre for twenty-five years, beginning on September 1, 1925. The rental is $75,000 a year.

Should the Subscribers relinquish their lease, the Lucas-Linicke-Schaefer-J. L. & S combination would install first class vaudeville. The seating capacity of the playhouse is to be increased.

Chicago Will Move Clocks Ahead Hour On Sunday, 2 A. M.

The Chicago city council has adopted the daylight saving law, which has been under consideration for more than six months, and it will become effective on Sunday, June 15, at 2 a. m. The ordinance gives the city an extra hour, so-called, until the last Sunday in October.

Council also adopted a resolution requesting that the ordinance be submitted to a referendum in September. Civic organizations are asked to circulate petitions necessary to put the question on the ballot.

Though the Association of Commerce was strongly in favor of the ordinance, labor and many other interests were staunch opponents.

Rumor Ascher Brothers Will Expand Activities

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, June 9.—Rumors are current that Nathan Ascher, head of a chain of motion picture theatres in Chicago, owners of a chain of motion picture theatres, who arrived in New York recently, was arranging with financial interests to construct more playhouses throughout the United States. Mr. Ascher was reticent regarding his mission here.

Moir and Guyon Will Build New Playhouse

Harry Moir, owner of three motion picture theatres in Chicago, and J. Louis Guyon, proprietor of Guyon's Paradise, a dance hall, have purchased a site north of the loop on which they will erect a playhouse seating 3,800 persons, a restaurant and dance hall. The building, it is said, will cost approximately $6,500,000.

Plunkett to Return To Strand Theatre

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, June 9.—Joseph L. Plunkett is to return to the Strand theatre on June 23, and will succeed Jack Eaton as managing director. A number of novel ideas will be introduced by Plunkett, who has been abroad since last October for Lewis J. Selznick.

Sydney S. Cohen

Who was one of the big factors in inducing exhibitors to attend epoch-making convention in Cleveland.

Citizens of Urbana Favor Sunday Show

Count of Ballot Results in 586 for With Only 182 Against

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

URBANA, ILL., June 9.—The Democratic-Citizen contest, just closed, indicates that the people of Urbana are desirous of having Sunday Motion picture entertainment. The ballots showed a total of 586 in favor of Sunday opening and only 182 against.

Just what affect the result of the contest will have on Sunday opening is not known. It has been suggested that a meeting of the Chamber of Commerce be called and the matter taken up by the business men. The council could possibly be approached through this medium.

It is understood that the advocates of the Sunday opening plan will not let the matter rest with the termination of the contest but will push ahead with an effort to get the play houses open.

Various plans have been suggested as restrictions upon the youth of the city. Afternoon shows only was one plan. No children admitted unless accompanied by parents was also suggested. Another plan that has met with favor is that it be held during the day and the second show after church begins in the evening.

Balaban Will Erect $750,000 Playhouse

Amalgamated Theatre Corporation, of which Barney Balaban is president, has received plans for the new theatre which will be erected in Sheridan road and Lawrence avenue, Chicago, at an estimated cost of $750,000.

Staxley C. Morse, a member of the Thomas H. Ince scenario department, is to become a director. He will make his first picture within the next few weeks under the personal supervision of Mr. Ince.

YOU have all heard eloquent declarations from certain publications in this field about their devotion to the exhibitors' best interests—

You have all heard their pleas for your favor on the grounds that they are fighting your battles—

You have all heard their assertions of freedom from entangling alliances; that they are committed to a policy of fair play for the exhibitor; that they bow only to the will of the exhibitor-reader.

You have heard all these things: Remember them now, and as you carefully note the attitude of each publication in this, the greatest crisis facing exhibitors since the dawn of the industry—you will discover for yourself what trade paper and what trade paper alone remains faithful to its trust.
Real Ability Is Needed to Protect Independence, Declares Hodkinson Distributor Says That He Believes That Theatre Owners Should Not Take the Risks of the Producer As Is Often the Case

W. W. Hodkinson, distributor, has issued a statement declaring that "only by the exercise of real authority and ability can the exhibitors today protect their independence, which is absolutely necessary to the healthy development of the great art of motion pictures."

"The convention in Cleveland," he declares, "shows that the men who own theatres are at last aroused to the situation that threatens the individual operation of their theatres."

"The greatly improved quality of independent productions is the first sign that things are turning in favor of the exhibitor. Every year he is assured of a greater variety and a finer grade of photoplay features. His greatest problem is to keep in touch with this market, not independent producers provide and be able to select the pictures he requires.

Should Not Take Risk

"I believe, that the exhibitor should not be required to take the risks of the producer, as he often does today. The producer should pay for his own mistakes. The producer in turn will make fewer mistakes from more careful methods of production.

"A year ago I predicted new consolidations, realignments, and affiliations, particularly on the part of the smaller producer-distributor concerns, if they were to compete with the larger concerns. These organizations," he said, "or may or may not place greater values on their assets and stock and so put a burden on the production of pictures which the exhibitor will be asked to shoulder. Today there are four big combinations that threaten to crush the life out of the independent exhibitor.

Menace to Industry

"Inflation of cost-capitalization are a menace to the stability and prosperity of the motion picture industry. I know as a fact where production units are turning out volume of business with one-fourth of the money that is represented on the books of certain other concerns, whose interests extend not only over production, but also distribution and the exhibition of pictures. Part of this high cost of production is due, of course, to the long debouches of bidding against each other for stars, directors, books."

Back in 1907 Mr. Hodkinson became interested in motion pictures when the exhibition rooms were called “motion picture parlors.” He was one of the few who declared that this new form of amusement was only a fad, and, like a bicycle craze, would soon run its course.

Seeks Improvement

He determined to try to improve motion picture methods of presentation. He believed that the only way to get the maximum output of one picture showed he could find. His competitors in town rather jeered at him. He announced he would raise the price of admission from 5 to 10 cents. But he installed an efficient ventilation system, provided for the comfort of his patrons by giving them more space to sit in and by improving the projection of the picture.

"On the very opening day of his theatre the attendance was so heavy that he was forced to turn away many who wanted to see the new talkie. Mr. Hodkinson’s one great problem from then on was to secure a better quality of picture. And that has been his effort through the twelve years, from the presidency of Paramount to the head of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation.

New Loop Playhouse Planned by Aschers Will Be Erected at a Cost of $3,000,000—Will Seat 3,000 Persons

Ascher Brothers of Chicago, owners of a chain of theatres, are to erect a motion picture and vaudeville playhouse at 16 to 20 West Washington street Present plans call for an expenditure of $3,175,750, on a house that will seat 3,000 persons.

According to Thomas E. Burke, press representative of Aschers, the new house will be the climax of Aschers’ circuit of twenty-three theatres.

The plot on which the theatre is to be erected is 110 by 162 feet. The building proper will be six stories in height, and will be devoted to offices in addition to the theatre.

The property where the house will be erected is of historic interest in Chicago. Crosby Opera House, one of the city’s first large theatres, formerly occupied the site, and it was in that building that the Republican National Convention was held in 1868, when General Grant was nominated for the Presidency.

Price and Warren Return From Coast

Oscar A. Price, president, and Fred B. Warren, general manager of the Associated Producers, passed through Chicago Sunday, June 6, on their way to New York after spending several weeks on the West Coast in conference with the "Big Six" producers.

Mr. Price expressed himself as well satisfied with the organization details which have been perfected. Branch managers to take charge of the twenty-six exchanges will be appointed early in July, and the offices opened August 1.

Mr. Warren hurried to Cleveland Tuesday to attend conventions, and returned to Chicago early Wednesday.

TORONTO, ONT., June 8—Julie and Jay J. Allen have purchased property in London, England, on which they will erect two motion picture theatres, which they say, will rival any in the world. The transaction represents a total expenditure, it is announced, of more than $4,000,000.

Standing on the property acquired by the Allens are two of the most historic buildings in London—The Empire theatre and Queen’s hotel, in Leicester Square.

Control Many Theatres

The Allen Brothers, who started in the theatre business only fourteen years ago, now control more than fifty theatres in Canada, representing an investment of $20,000,000, and have theatres under construction in Cleveland, O., and in Detroit, Mich. The smaller building is expected to be erected in the fall and the larger building is expected to be completed by the beginning of 1922.

One to Seat 4,000

C. Howard Crane, a prominent architect, will leave for London soon to consult with the building committee and submit sketches for approval. The smaller of the two London theatres will be similar to the company’s Winnipeg house. The larger theatre will seat 4,000 persons, while the smaller will have a seating capacity of 2,500.

Fifty-piece orchestras will be employed in both houses, and it is planned to give elaborate presentation to all productions. Many innovations, it is said, are planned in the construction of the playhouses. Bernard Allen, father of the brothers, is president of the enterprise hearing the family name.

Mayer Is Completing “The Trail’s End” By James Oliver Curwood

"The Trail’s End," a screen version of James Oliver Curwood’s "Isobel," is now in the cutting room at the Louis B. Mayer studios in the West.

In an effort to make this Curwood story into a worthwhile picture, Mr. Mayer assigned the direction work to Edwin Carewe, a personal friend of the author. The producer persuaded Carewe to cease operations temporarily of Edwin Carewe Productions, Inc., and transfer his entire staff from the Branhon studio to the Mayer plant.

The producer selected includes such prominent players as Jane Novak, House Peters, Tom Wilson, Ed. J. Peil, Richard La Renna, Bob Walker and Pearl May Norton.

SYDNEY COHEN says: "I have read with a great deal of interest your pre-convention stories and appreciate your evident desire to play square."
Paramount Employees Buy Small Theatres
Colorado Transaction Cause Mild Sensation—Report
Other Negotiations

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)
DENVER, COLO.—Milton Cohn, manager of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation local exchange, and H. E. Ellison, manager of the Denver theatres controlled by Famous Players, have purchased the Opera House at Rocky Ford, Colo., and the Iris theatre at Monte Vista. In the transaction they appear as individuals.

The impression in Denver film circles and among exhibitors in that territory is that the purchases were made for Paramount. On account of the comparatively small population of the towns, the transaction has caused a mild sensation.

Cohn and Ellison are said to be negotiating for the Cover theatre at Fort Morgan, the Emerson theatre at Brush, and the O'Rourke theatre at La Junta.

Wenzel Is Manager of Victory Theatre

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)
LOS ANGELES, June 8.—Chris Glimm has resigned as manager of the Victory theatre, and will be succeeded by Arthur S. Wenzel, who has previously managed the Sappho. Glimm came to Los Angeles two years ago to manage the Garrick theatre, and later when the Victory was taken over by the Caulfield interests he was placed in charge. Glimm makes no announcement concerning his future plans, and Wenzel's successor at the Superba is as yet unpicked.

Clarke Pictures On State Right Market

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)
LOS ANGELES, June 8.—The Reverend George LeHot Clarke, now engaged on his seventh comedy for Paramount Pictures, has announced that the two-reel comedies heretofore made will be released on the state rights plan. The Reverend Clarke is a regularly ordained minister of the gospel and his entrance into films marked an innovation in religion. He is supported by Marian Pickering, Johnny Hayes and a large cast of popular players. His seventh effort is to be titled, "All Balled Up."

Massachusetts Censorship Bill Is Vetoed by Governor Coolidge
Executive's Statement Declares That Part of The Measure Is Unconstitutional—His Action Is Sustained By House Members

BOSTON, June 8.—The measure providing for motion picture censorship by a state board has been vetoed by Governor Coolidge. The chief executive of the state declared in his veto message that the attorney general has advised him that parts of the measure were unconstitutional and would be entirely without avail.

House Sustains Official Action
After returning the bill to the house and senate of the state legislature, an effort was made by the lower body to over-ride the governor's veto, but his action was sustained by a vote of 202 to 14.

The executive's action ends a bitter fight in which thousands of people over the country and newspapers took an interest. The National Association of the Motion Picture Industry had aided exhibitors of the Bay State in fighting the measure.

The attorney general held that Section 2 of the bill was unconstitutional. It reads:

"On and after January 1, 1921, it shall be unlawful for any person to sell, lease, loan or use for public exhibition or commercial purposes any motion picture film unless the said film has been submitted to and approved by the commissioner."

Bill Not Limited
The attorney general said in his opinion: The language of this section is not limited to the inspection and approval of motion picture films to be used for public exhibition within the commonwealth, and, in this respect, it goes farther than the motion picture censorship laws which were upheld in Mutual Film Co. v. Industrial Commission of Ohio, 215 Fed. 138, affirmed 256 U. S. 250, and Mutual Film Corp. vs. Kansas, 236 U. S. 949.

"It is my opinion that this section is so broad that it would apply to a sale, lease or loan in this commonwealth of a motion picture film made in this state and on its way into another state, and would also apply to a film in the original package in which it might be shipped into this state from another state or from a foreign country.

"If so, it is to that extent in conflict with the clause of Section 2 of Article I of the constitution of the United States, which confers on Congress power 'to regulate commerce with foreign nations and among the several states, and with the Indian tribes.' I am, therefore, of opinion that said Section 2 is an attempt directly to regulate interstate commerce and is, accordingly, unconstitutional."

Preparing for Next Priscilla Dean Film

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)
LOS ANGELES, June 8.—Priscilla Dean's forthcoming Universal Jewel production, "Outside the Law," is keeping the technical staff at Universal City busy. The story, which was written by Tod Browning, calls for elaborate settings, and, it is said, will afford the star a picture worthy to follow "The Virgin of Stamboul."

A MINIMUM of sixty attractions for the 1920-21 season is listed by the fifteen independent production units having contracts for the exhibition of their pictures in the theatres of all franchised members of Associated First National Pictures, Inc.

The first publication date on this schedule comes November 30, the start of the new season, which will close on May 2, 1921. By fall it is expected that 6,000 independent theatres will be members of Associated First National Pictures, Inc.

A detailed schedule of publication dates for the sixty attractions is announced. The following schedule lists each production, the star, producer or director-producer, with its running order and which it has evolved.

In the initial showing of “The Scoffer” a critical audience was of the opinion that it was one of the strongest attractions Mr. Dwan had made. In story value, direction and cast it is said to be remarkably strong. Louis B. Mayer’s production of “The Harriet and the Piper” is from the story by Kathleen Norris, which ran serially in the Pictorial Review and is now being published in book form. Bertram Bracken will direct the production. Miss Norma Tal-madge, her pictures will be supported, by Ward Crane, Joan Cummings, Byron Munson, Charles Richman, Myrtle Stedman, Margaret Landis, Barbara LaMarr, Deely, and Lloyd Corne.

Adapt Stage Play

Miss Norma Tal-madge’s first picture for the new season is from Jane Cowell’s successful stage play. Choice of this vehicle in which to star Miss Tal-madge has brought considerable enthusiastic comment from New York state exhibitors, who suggested to Joseph M. Schneck that Norma Tal-madge be starred in a picturization of this play. Sydney Franklin, who scored a triumph in his direction of “The Hoodlum,” starring Mary Pickford in her second production from her own studios for First National, is working on his initial independent production for the circuit.

This will be entitled “Athletic” and is adapted from the story by Robert W. Chambers.

October 11, Charles Ray in “Peaceful Valley.”

October 25, James Oliver Curwood’s “Nomads of the North,” and “Old Dad,” with Mildred Harris Chaplin.

“The Woman” is a special feature which will be exploited in much the same fashion that characterized First National’s handling of “Auction of Souls.” This production, like the one for the greater box office attractions since the “Birth of a Nation.”

“Peaceful Valley,” according to Arthur S. Kane, will follow faithfully the celebrated story by Edward E. Kidder. “Peaceful Valley” will be remembered as the play stage with which Sol Smith Russell scored his greatest success. It has been played 3007 times on the legitimate stage.

Title to Be Changed

In view of the fact that the working title of the Walsh’s production has been changed several weeks in advance of the publication, the producer-director has asked that no title be mentioned. His picture deals with a problem of the ages relative to the fine workings of the conscience of good and bad.

“Curtains” has predicted that “Nomads of the North” will surpass in entertainment, thrills and box office receipts those of “Back to God’s Country” and “The Happiest Girl in the World.”

“Old Dad” is from the novel by Eleanor Hallowell Abbott, which ran serially in the Woman’s Home Companion and is now in book form. Lloyd Ingraham will direct this production.

November 1, Katherine McDonald in “Curtains.”

November 8, “Twin Beds,” with Mr. and Mrs. Carter deHaven.

November 15, Allan Dwan’s “The Heart of a Fool.”

November 22, Lionel Barrymore in “The Honorable Peter Sterling.”

“Curtains” is an adaptation of Rita Whitman’s story, which was originally published in The Saturday Evening Post. The deHavens will make their debut as a First National starring combination in “Twin Beds,” screen rights for which were purchased recently from the Selwyns.

Dwan Picture Complete

Allan Dwan’s “The Heart of a Fool” has been completed. “The Honorable Peter Sterling,” it is said, will be a radical departure from the various other screen and stage roles in which Mr.
Seitz to Sail for Spain July 6 to Make His First Feature for Pathe

June Caprice Will Co-Star In Love Romance Which Will Be Adapted---Company of Nine Players Will Accompany the Producer

George B. Seitz will sail on July 6 for Algeciras, Spain, with a company of nine players and technical experts to produce his first feature picture.

Mr. Seitz, who has been a producer, director and star of Pathé serials, has arranged with Paul Brunet, vice president and general manager of Pathé, for Redman has appeared in serials and has acted as technical expert in producing organization since its inception, and Wood has been doing Pathé serial photography for five years. He will be the chief cameraman.

The decision to star Mr. Seitz and Miss Caprice in a feature production was reached after short consideration. When he had completed his scenario from the play, Seitz submitted it to Mr. Brunet along with the production plans and the trip to Spain. The project received Mr. Brunet's prompt and unqualified approval. To facilitate matters in every way, Mr. Brunet secured the services of Miss Caprice, who has been under a Pathé contract since her successful appearance in "In Walked Mary."

National Film Finishes The First Episode of "The Son of Tarzan"

The first episode of "The Son of Tarzan," which National Film Corporation of America is producing on the West Coast, has been completed, according to David P. Howel, who controls the world rights on the jungle picture. An early release of the production is expected to be given in New York.

This is the fourth of the Edgar Rice Burroughs stories to be filmed. Harry Koster is handling the directorial work, while Roy Sommerville is writing the continuity.

Joe Brandt, director general of National, has been on the Coast aiding in the cutting and assembling of the initial episode, while Harry M. Kuby, president, and the author have been in daily conferences regarding the remaining instalments.

Approval Is Stamped On "What Women Love" At Premiere Showing

Annette Kellerman's comedy-drama, which Sol Lesser produced, was given its world premiere recently at Santa Anna, Cal. According to Harry Hammond, local West Coast distributor, the producer for the picture was stamped with the unanimous approval of those attending the showing.

The public has been accustomed to seeing Miss Kellerman in the role of a sea nymph, but in this production she enters the field of comedy, essaying the part of an American girl, fond of athletics and adventure. Now, this attempt has proved such a success, Mr. Lesser is making extensive plans for a Broadway presentation, with special exploitation. He will make another trip to New York in about two weeks, and at that time it is expected he will make his publication announcements.

Mr. Lesser announces that George Beban is completing the cutting and editing of his production, "One Man in a Million," and it should be ready in about a month.
Tucker Contract Sent To Mayflower After Reaching Amicable Settlement
Producer Resumes Work On "Ladies Must Live" His Second Independent Picture—Four Subjects Will Be Made By Him

Following an amicable settlement of the case between George Loane Tucker and Mayflower Photoplay Corporation, the latter organization has received the producer's signed contract which definitely and satisfactorily closes the litigation between the two.

Tucker, who made "The Miracle Man," has resumed the cutting and titling of his second independent production for Mayflower, "Ladies Must Live," actual production on which was completed some time ago at the Brunton studios on the West Coast.

The agreement reached with Mayflower provides that the producer shall make four more specials for distribution through that organization.

Will Lend Aid
In commenting upon the Tucker settlement, Mr. Prager stated that Mayflower would place at the director's disposal the resources of its organization and lend him all possible support and co-operation. "It is Mayflower's aim to help Mr. Tucker in every way possible to achieve in his forthcoming productions the same high standard of artistry that made 'The Miracle Man' the greatest film sensation of the past decade," he said. "We believe that he can more than duplicate this achievement, and we will leave no stone unturned in our efforts to foster his success."

"In characterizing Mr. Tucker as one of the screen's master directors, we are merely reflecting the opinion of the production picture. The press and the public. We welcome Mr. Tucker's return to the studio, for he has and will continue to contribute much to the artistic development of the photoplay."

To Surpass Former
Film experts who have seen "Ladies Must Live" in the rough, assert that the noted director has produced another epoch-making feature. "The Miracle Man" is destined to surpass in box-office strength and popular appeal its notable predecessor. The story, it is said, transcends in power and emotional intensity "The Miracle Man," while Tucker's handling again reflects the brilliant, penetrating mind and technical skill that found expression in his great photoplay classic.

The cast of "Ladies Must Live" includes many of the screen's foremost players, the principal feminine role being played by Betty Compson, who leaped to stardom overnight by virtue of her performance in "The Miracle Man." As the painted portrait of New York's underworld who found her soul in the crucible of Faith, Miss Compson startled the film world by the consummate skill and artistry of her performance.

Lasky Names Wanger Production Manager
Vice President of Paramount Sails on the Adriatic for London
Walter Wanger was appointed production manager of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation by Jesse L. Lasky before the latter sailed for London recently on the Adriatic. Mr. Wanger will supervise all activities of the department in the absence of the vice-president.

In enlarging the scenario department, Mr. Lasky widened the scope of duties of Robert E. MacAlarney, scenario editor, and assigned Maude Miller as Mr. MacAlarney's assistant. Victor Smith has succeeded J. N. Naulty, who resigned, as studio manager, and Roswell Dague succeeds Gardner Hunting as production editor of the Eastern studios.

Lloyd's Antics In "High and Dry" Are Said to Be Tonic for Summer Illness

A tonic for "summer illness" is the phrase used in describing the first of the new series of Harold Lloyd comedies, "High and Dry." The picture will be published on July 11 by Pathé.

The initial publication was longer in the making than any comedy ever produced by the Rolin Film Company, starring Harold Lloyd. It took nearly two months to create, but the time and money spent, it is said, is more than justified by the results.

Members of the Pathé organization have proclaimed "High and Dry" as the best comedy Lloyd ever made. This claim is confidently expected to be verified when "High and Dry" receives its Broadway premiere at the Strand and Capitol theatres in New York.

Will Be Featured
"High and Dry" will mark the launching of Lloyd as a feature at the Capitol theatre, which obtained the right to show the popular young comedian's works, after spirited bidding. Lloyd has long been an established favorite at the Strand, where his entire first series of two-reelers, including "Bumping Into Broadway," "His Royal Stenpies," "From Hand to Mouth," "Captain Kidd's Kids," "Haunted Spooks" and "An Eastern Westerner" were exploited widely by Managing Director Jack Eaton.

As the forerunner of the second series of Lloyds, "High and Dry" will be played by three times as many theatres as exploited "Bumping Into Broadway," which introduced the Pathe star in two-reel comedies. Virtually all the big first-run houses of the country have signed for the new Lloyds. There is no denying that in less than a year's time Lloyd has established himself as the leader in his type of comedy work.

He Is Money Getter
Foremost exhibitors have contributed their views on this score, and all are unanimous in believing the young mirth-maker as one of their surest money-getters. Aside from the host of first-run accounts signed for the new Lloyds, the Grand and Cameraphone in Pittsburgh were added to the list during the last week, as was the Strand, Brooklyn; Avon, Watertown, and American, Troy, N. Y.

One of the big features in connection with the growth of Lloyd's popularity, which is due principally to his own ability to create comedies with a universal appeal, is the price exhibitors are paying for his works. There are those playing Lloyd comedies who never dreamed they would have to pay such high figures for any production. Yet they gladly meet the price placed on him, if the returns at the box office warrant it. And that is the true test of any star.

Exhibitors Entertained
At Culver City Studios

Maurice Wolfe, resident manager of the Goldwyn Distributing Corporation in Los Angeles, was host to some twenty theatre owners recently. The big feature on the program was a visit to the Goldwyn studios in Culver City, California, where Vice President Abraham Lehr presided at a luncheon in their honor.

Among those present were L. A. Grant and F. A. Smith, Windsor Theatre, Los Angeles; J. Leslie Swayne, Hollywood Theatre, Los Angeles; W. G. Hasley, Lyceum theatre, San Francisco; M. Blumenfeld, Empire theatre, Napa; C. C. Griffin, New Piedmont, Oakland; A. Markowitz, Strand theatre, San Francisco; D. S. Markowitz, Crescent theatre, Inc., San Francisco; A. N. Jackson, Crescent theatre, Inc., San Francisco; J. M. Young, Apollo theatre, Holywood; D. B. Vanderlip, Huntington theatre; Sol Lesser, Claremont theatre, Oakland; T. Karski, Royal theatre, San Francisco; S. Frankel, Hayward theatre, Hayward; M. Klein, Majestic theatre, San Francisco; A. J. Salomo, Pek Street, San Francisco; Glen Harper, Apollo theatre, Los Angeles.

Tom Terriss Goes East to Finish "Trumpet Island"

After three months on the West Coast, where he had been directing the Vitagraph special production, "Trumpet Island," Tom Terriss is on his way east to make the final scenes for this picture in New York City and along the Hudson River. Mr. Terriss was accompanied east by his staff and several supporting players, as there are still a number of scenes to be filmed. In view of this, an idea of the film's magnitude may be gleaned from the statement that the $200,000 expenditure mark had been exceeded before Mr. Terriss and his company headed east.

This production, which was adapted from a story by Governor Morris, was filmed chiefly amid the beautiful scenery of Catalina Island, Palm Beach and Palm Springs, all noted Southern California tourist centers. Much of the action of the picture is accomplished in the air, and several planes from the many fields around Los Angeles were used in the production.

Educational to Publish
Short Subject Specials

Educational Films Corporation announces that hereafter it will pursue a policy of issuing one and two reel "specials" in scenic, topical and scientific subjects without reference to series. This plan has been determined upon, it is said, as the result of the number of inquiries received from "Modern Centaurs" and "The Valley of Ten Thousand Smokes" in advance of their release.

"We believe that the five years success of Educational," says a statement from that company, "has fully proven the place that the short subject deserves on the program. We feel that we have convinced the exhibitor that the question of length should not be the chief one considered, but quality, and we feel very sure that when they are furnished with exceptional product in short subjects they will give these the attention that they deserve."

Exhibitors struggle taking this gilded matter always the long anything Cinema said place not opportunity Universal Predicts hibitior progressive situation, hibitor him. will modest means knows film the stance? Declaring flat-footed the time is ripe for the independent exhibitors to make the producers lay their cards on the table. What really amounts to anything from the exhibitor's point of view is what will the producer do in the future to help the independent exhibitor? Why don't they come out flat-footed and say what they will do to help the exhibitor? Universal is not ashamed to say what it has done for the exhibitors in the past. Neither am I afraid of putting myself on record as to what Universal means to do for the exhibitor in the future. I have said it before, and I will repeat it. Universal, among other things, stands ready to give financial support to the independent exhibitor in his fight to tear from his throat the fingers of monopoly that seek to throttle him.

Organized to Fight Trust

"It makes me laugh to read some of the statements in the trade papers—statements by so-called 'pioneers' in the film business, who want to point with modest pride to how they espoused the cause of the exhibitor from the start. As a great many of these exhibitors know, Universal was organized solely to fight against monopoly in the film business, and to free the independents from the stranglehold of the Patents Company octopus."

"Where were all these 'friends' of the exhibitor, who are now becoming forth with philanthropic generalities, when the exhibitor had to pay the trust-like combination $3 a week just for the privilege of handling picture machines, for instance?"

"As I remember, Universal was the only outspoken champion of the independent at that time, just as it always has been. The rights of the independent in the film business had inception by the formation of the Universal organization—the banding together of certain independent producers who took the initial step to help the exhibitor free himself."

"That is why it makes me tired to see this or that producer posing as the patron saint of the exhibitor. When the latter was struggling for his very life against the ever-reaching tenacles of the combination that threatened to choke the industry, these producers were not on the side of the angels."

"The independent exhibitor today faces a struggle just as threatening as that which faced him ten years ago. If the film business is not to become eventually a regulated, subsidized industry, bending its knee at the beck and call of big interests, the independent exhibitor must organize for a long and desperate fight."

"And the exhibitor needs assistance. He needs friends. He needs allies. The time has come for him to turn a deaf ear to hallowed words. What he must have is concrete help. He must know exactly where he stands with respect to producing and distributing organizations, and nothing short of exact and definite offers of money and material support will do him any good."

Will Lend Material Aid

"That is why Universal is taking its share out of the feet—beside the exhibitor. It is no time for equivocation. When I place myself in the ranks of the independents, I mean for it to be understood that Universal will go to any extent to lend confidence and material aid to the exhibitor."

"Who else will come out wholeheartedly and unqualifiedly for the exhibitor? What other producer will make an offer of financial assistance? Now is the time for the exhibitor to remove the blinders from his eyes, and call for his true friends to stand by."
Collier, O'Brien and Moore Feature in Pictures Being Published This Month

William Collier, Eugene O'Brien and Owen Moore are the stars representing Selznick and Select in the list of June publications. Other Selznick issues for this month include Herbert Kaufman's weekly feature, the news weekly, Prizma color pictures and other subjects.

Owen Moore's vehicle, "The Desperate Hero," was published the first week in June, while Eugene O'Brien's "The Figurehead" will go into the theatres the last week of the month.

The Servant Question," the Select picture featuring William Collier, is listed for publication during the month. Another Owen Moore film, "Stop That Man," will lead the July issues.

Portrays Newspaperman

Owen Moore, in "The Desperate Hero" portrays the role of a young newspaper man who tries to maintain a certain amount of "front" in order to get a better price for his only inheritance, an oil lease. The complications which arise from a series of misunderstandings form the basis of a very clever comedy-drama for Mr. Moore.

Supporting Mr. Moore are Gloria Hope, Neil Craig, Henry Miller, Jr., Emett Vogan, Arthor Nezri, Charles Furling, Virginia Caldwell and Tom Ricketts. William Collier in "The Servant Question" is credited with giving one of his inimitable farcical characterizations as Larry Butler, a young man about town. Through a series of incidents that are said to create riotous laughter, Larry insists on taking the place of the butler, who has gone on strike, in order to capture a trio of thieves headed by Count Ambrey. Fitted out in the butler's uniform, Larry makes many ludicrous mistakes, but finally captures the crooks.

In the cast are "Buster" Collier, Armand Cortez, Virginia Lee and Rapley Holmes, all well known screen players.

Has Society Role

Eugene O'Brien in "The Figurehead" portrays the role of Sheridan Dows, a young society dilettante selected by a political boss as a victim for the political altar. At first Dows treats the whole matter as a joke, but, egged on by Mary Forbes, the only woman he loves, he accepts the nomination and shows Mary that he really can do something worth while. In the wind-up Mary realizes that even a wastrail may be a man, begs forgiveness and offers her love.

Prominent in the cast are Anna Q. Nilsson, Ora Carewe, Edwin Stevens, Joseph Girard, Frances Parks, Kate Price and Maurice Luxford.

"Athalie" Shipped East

According to a wire received by Benjamin A. Frager, president of the Mayflower Photoplay Corporation, from the Brunton studios, California, Sidney A. Franklin has completed the final cutting and titling of "Athalie," adapted from Robert W. Chambers' novel of that name. The print, Franklin states, will be ready for shipment to First National within the coming week.

Rothapfel Becomes Manager at Capitol

Has Been Engaged In Field for Goldwyn Company for Some Time

Sam Rothapfel has taken over the duties of manager of the Capitol theatre in New York. He has been absent from the stage for some time, being engaged during that time in producing picture palaces from Coast to Coast for Goldwyn.

Theatrically, musically and from the standpoint of presentation entertainment at the Capitol has reached a new standard.

The Rothapfel touch, it is said, predominates everything — the appearance of the huge theatre, the elaborate floral decorations, the polite alacrity of attendants, the smartness of the music and in the programme itself.

Managing Director Edward Bowes, watching the premiere of the Rothapfel policy, was fairly showered with congratulations for having appointed to control of the Capitol a man who could overshadow his own successes with the Strand, Knickerbocker, Rialto and the Rivoli theatres.

Astonishment was expressed at what had been accomplished, following only two days of darkness, during which a legion of artisans worked the miracles Rothapfel had conceived.

Lesser to Discontinue Production to Exhibit

Sol Lesser has issued a statement defining his position on the demand of the exhibitors that producers shall not invade the exhibiting field and vice versa.

In his statement Lesser asserts that he is an exhibitor first, last and all the time, and in future will confine his activities exclusively to exhibiting.

For some time Lesser has been in an anomalous position, inasmuch as he is a franchise holder of the First National in Southern California and Arizona and at the same time is producer of Annette Kellerman in "What Women Love" and George Beban in "One Man In a Million." In explaining his position Lesser claims that he was a producer and had the Kellerman and Beban productions under way long before he became a First National franchise owner. It was imperitive that he go through with the productions, once started, but he intends to make no more productions now that these two are finished.

Shirley Mason Will Be Featured In "Merely Mary Ann" By Fox Company
Producer Selects Edward J. LeSaint to Direct Play In Which Eleanor Robson Won Laurels on the Stage

Shirley Mason is to be featured in "Merely Mary Ann." William Fox has obtained the rights to the play in which Eleanor Robson appeared with such success under the management of Lieber & Company. Edward J. LeSaint will direct.

Work has commenced on the picture at the Fox studios in Hollywood. The title role, known to many theatregoers of the country, is suited perfectly to the little star whose success in "Her Elephant Man," "Molly and I" and "Love's Harvest," has brought her rapidly to the front. In addition to directing this film, Mr. LeSaint wrote the scenario.

Made Author Successful
"Merely Mary Ann," with that very fine dramatic actress Eleanor Robson in the title role, is probably one of the well known of stage successes produced during the past decade. It was in this play that Miss Robson, under the personal direction of George C. Tyler, managing director of the Liebler firm, established herself most firmly in the hearts of theatregoers and brought to the author of the play, Israel Zangwill, the greatest success of the day.

It was from the stage manuscript by Mr. Zangwill, and from his original book of the same name, that Mr. LeSaint made the scenario, and persons who were acquainted with Miss Robson while she was before the footlights have remarked upon the resemblance of Miss Mason to the long-retired star of the stage play.

According to arrangements made by William Fox a goodly portion of the original stage settings used by the Liebler firm in presenting "Merely Mary Ann" to Broadway audiences will be shipped to the West Coast for use in the film version. The remainder of the interior settings used in the screen production will be modeled after the design of the original stage backgrounds and properties, and every effort will be exerted toward making the most faithful production of a stage success ever viewed on the screen.

Will Follow Originals
Costuming of the picture will be patterned after the originals made from photographs of the entire cast of principals who appeared with Miss Robson in the play and all details in regard to atmosphere will be vouched for by men of the Fox technical staff whose acquaintance with this department of the stage dates back to the days of the premiere of "Merely Mary Ann" on Broadway.

The cast selected to support Miss Mason contains the names of players widely known for capable work in the silent drama.

Raymond Mc Kee, who acquitted himself with honor as leading man with Miss Mason in her latest Fox picture, "Love's Harvest," a comedy drama from the pen of Pearl Doles Bell, has been retained as lead in "Merely Mary Ann." He will play the part of Lancelet, which was enacted by H. B. Warner in the stage version.

Another of the principals is Harry Spangler, known to most lovers of screen entertainment. Mr. Spangler is a light comedian and has appeared in many Fox plays produced on the coast.

Georgia Woodthorpe will essay the role of Mrs. Leadbatter, and Babe London, a child actress, has been entrusted with the part of Rose Leadbatter.

Friend F. Baker will turn the crank on the filming of the production.

American to Publish Cosmo Hamilton Play
"The Week End," a play from the pen of Cosmo Hamilton, will be the next "Flying A" Special to be published by American, following "Peggy Rebels." It is a story of Margarita Fisher's own selection, and in it she appears in the stellar role under the direction of George L. Cox.

An unconventional comedy-drama, with the Cosmo Hamilton touch, with most of the action crowded into a few days during an unchaperoned week end at Hideaway Cottage, with Margarita Fisher delectable in some bathing scenes, the play is said to be ideal for summer business.

Milton Sills, leading man, does some earnest love making in an exceedingly satisfactory manner, it is said, thereby winning the hearts of women fans. In the role of his rival for the hand of the whimsical Vera, Bertram Grassby has a characteristic role. The supporting cast includes Beverly Travers, Mayme Kelso, Harvey Clark and Mary Lee Wise.

Ince Film Is Winner
Thomas H. Ince's special production for Paramount, "Below the Surface," starring Hobart Bosworth, which was published on June 6, proved to be a smashing box office attraction at Grauman's Rialto, Los Angeles, where it had its premiere.

Educational Will Publish Productions Made from Stories by Judge Brown

Adaptations of the stories of Judge Willis Brown, an authority on the American boy, hereafter are to be published by Educational Films Corporation. The pictures will be in two reels and there will be at least one and probably two issues a month. Twelve of the pictures are ready for laboratory work and production on others will be started soon.

Judge Brown, who personally produces the pictures, has devoted the greater portion of his life to work among the boys and embraces the rare qualities of knowing his subjects thoroughly. Before he began producing these two-reel pictures of boy subjects, he was well known in the motion picture field with his work on "The Girl Who Won Out," with Viola McMillan; "The Saint's Adventure," featuring Henry B. Walthall, and "The Spirit of '17," in which Jack Pickford appeared.

He Originates Methods

But Judge Brown has won far greater fame by originating many important and unique methods of dealing with the juvenile problem. "Boy City" is his idea, the first one being established at Charlevoix, Mich. Everyone who reads the magazines and newspapers is familiar with the large amount of publicity that this attracted. He originated the first parental court in Gary, Ind., where he put into practice his plan of encouraging the youth to become better American citizens rather than merely administering punishment. In Salt Lake City he established a similar court.

First of the "Judge Brown Stories," as they will be known, were made during the latter days of General Film Company's activities. While they did not get the wide circulation desired at that time, they attracted much attention. An incident testifying to the esteem in which they were held by exhibitors was supplied while these first new pictures were being shown for officials of Educational.

Will Control All

Under the contract just signed, Educational will control all of the Judge Brown pictures, and the ones that have been exhibited in some cities will be available to those who have not yet shown them. At the same time there will be a sufficient number of new productions to supply theaters with pictures that have not been exhibited before.

While boys and girls form the principal characters in these pictures, the appeal of them, Educational points out, is also great to the adult class as to the children. In fact, theaters reporting on the demand for Judge Brown stories declare that the greater portion of the requests have come from grown-ups. A portion of the pictures are based on policies pursued by Judge Brown in his "Boy City" and parental court work, while others are straight boy and girl stories. The comedy element is strong through all of the pictures.

"Finders Keepers" Sent To Finishing Laboratory

"Finders Keepers," completed by Otis B. Thayer, director general of the Art-O-Graf Film Co., Denver, Colo., has been sent east to the finishing laboratory, according to advices received from that concern.

It is stated that one of the highest insurance fees ever paid upon a production in similar shipment was paid to guard against possible loss.

New Hemmer Unit Is Now Producing Film

Maud Sylvester Is Star and Clayton Davis Is Named Assistant Director

Edward Hemmer, at one time manager of Mary Pickford, has organized his own producing company under the name of Hemmer-Sylvester Productions. Rapid progress is being made on the first picture, which stars Maud Sylvester.

Principals for the first production have been engaged, but Clayton Davis, assistant director, is busy selecting others for the minor parts.

Mary Pickford, on her arrival in New York, congratulated her former manager on the launching of his own organization.

The company of players is now in New Jersey on location. One of the scenes called for was a dilapidated farm house surrounded by blooming fruit trees and located in a fertile valley. Mr. Hemmer had scoured the country around New York for such a spot, but in vain.

Not until he met Harry Leonhardt was he able to cope with the situation. Leonhardt had noticed just such a scene, while riding through New Jersey. Together they sought out the place, and the next morning the cast was at work.

Huff and Hammerstein Productions Complete

"The Dangerous Paradise" and "The Point of View," starring Louise Huff and Elaine Hammerstein respectively, have been completed, according to announcement from the Selznick studios.

William P. S. Earle directed the former from the story by Edmund Goulding. Alan Crosland being in charge of the Hammerstein producing unit. Templar Saxe supports Miss Huff and Rockliffe Fellowes appears opposite Miss Hammerstein.

Opening of New York Offices Marks Expansion of Activities by Sennett

Mack Sennett's personal representative, E. M. Asher, is in New York to open offices for Mack Sennett Comedies, Inc. and to map out an active and extensive campaign of exploitation. This action is a part of the producer's plans to expand his activities in the motion picture industry.

Sennett's latest achievement in big pictures is "Married Life," which is scheduled for publication by First National. Ninety days thereafter the second Sennett five-reel comedy to be contracted for by the United Artists will be published, and that will bring Mr. Sennett's producing activities up to the opening of the operations of Associated Producers, of which he is treasurer.

Plans Eight Shorts

Mr. Asher states that offices will be opened with, or near, the headquarters of Associated Producers when that corporation decides on a location. Mr. Sennett's plans, according to his representative, contemplate the production of eight or ten two-reel comedy features a year and four or perhaps five five-reel comedies or comedy-dramas.

For the present and until the expiration of existing agreements, the Sennett two-reel pictures will continue to be distributed by Paramount.

The announcement from Mr. Sennett that he will make from eight to ten two-reel comedy features is answer to the rumor that he was about to retire from the field of two-reel comedy productions.

Won't Abandon Field

"Nothing could be further from my mind," Sennett directs Mr. Asher to say, "than to abandon a field wherein I pioneered and in which a definite and substantial reward has always awaited."

The public demand for effective two-reel subjects grows rather than wanes and as a producer in this form the distance is immeasurable between Sennett and competition.

"But Mr. Sennett will produce fewer of them, making not more than ten in comparison with twenty-six as contractee thereby for under Paramount distribution," says Mr. Asher. "The success that has attended the appearance of a Sennett five-reel product has been tremendous. He would regard himself as singularly lacking in sensibility if he didn't take the hint and continue to give the public what it manifestly wants. Hence the dual policy already under way at the Sennett studios in Los Angeles."

Louise Glauin Finishes Fourth Read Production

"After four months of effort on the part of star, director, cameraman and cast, Louise Glauin, star of "Sex," "Sahara" and "The Lone Wolf's Daughter," has completed what is reported to be her greatest starring vehicle. Producer Read's choice of the tentatively titled star, "The Girl Who Dared," is said to prove his keen insight into screenable material for his star. The story is reported replete with thrilling and tensely dramatic situations. Wesley Ruggles directed.

The company spent two weeks at Coronado, the fashionable summer and winter resort. Many beautiful "shots" were obtained at this well-known watering place. James Kirkwood, erstwhile director of prominence, is Miss Glauin's male lead. Joseph Kilgour has a formidable part in the production.

LOS ANGELES.—Production activities of six companies were suspended for a time recently by a strike of 150 cowboys, who demanded $10 a day while working in pictures instead of $7.50.

Offer Blood to Save Exchange Man's Life

Edward Barbour has returned to his duties in the Chicago branch of the Republic exchange, after recovering from internal injuries sustained while changing a tire on his automobile several weeks ago.

Blood transfusion is believed to have saved his life. Shortly after the accident, volunteers were asked to give their blood to insure Barbour's recovery.

Ben Beadell, manager of Select, was the first man to volunteer. He was closely followed by Richard Brokhaus, Select booker; Paul DeOuto, a Republic salesman, and two others of Barbour's friends. Not all who volunteered were called upon, but the operation was a success.

Glifograph Screen Is Used for Initial Show

Robertson-Cole Selected This Silver Sheet for Presenting Carpenter Film

After a thorough examination of the advantages of all screens Robertson-Cole Company selected the new Glifograph screen for the initial presentation of its George Carpenter picture, "The Wonder Man," in the grand ball room of the Astor Hotel in New York.

The picture was shown for the benefit of the American Legion, and its presentation at the Astor was the first opportunity given other producers and the public to see it.

The officials of the company expressed themselves as well pleased with the Glifograph screen, not only because of the depth it gave the scenes, but because of the excellent lighting and the removal of eye strain and distortion, no matter from what angle the picture was viewed.
Report That Neilan Has Severed Relations With Associated Denied

Flat denial that Marshall Neilan has severed his connections with Associated Producers has been made.

In company with Fred Warren, general manager of Associated, and Oscar Price, President, Mr. Neilan passed through Chicago on June 6, en route to New York, where he will confer with First National officials regarding future productions. It is expected that several important announcements will be made by the producer on his arrival in the city.

The director-producer has in mind several big plans affecting his future First National pictures, it is said, which involves the production of a number of internationally famous stories. Full details concerning these plans are promised before Mr. Neilan returns to the Coast.

Has Print of Third

It is understood that the producer is bringing cast with him an advance print of his third First National publication following “The River’s End” and “Don’t Ever Marry.” The title of this picture and details regarding the story are not made public. It is stated, however, that Agnes Ayres, who recently signed with Mr. Neilan, makes her first appearance in this film under this trade-mark in the leading part. Playing opposite her is Pat O’Malley, whose exceptional work in this film resulted in his further appearance in Marshall Neilan Productions. This production is said to be entirely different from anything Mr. Neilan has ever attempted.

Fourth Is Completed

The fourth Neilan production for First National has been finished except for its final treatment, and details concerning this picture are also promised with Mr. Neilan’s arrival in New York. This is the picture in which Wesley Barry, Mr. Neilan’s little freckle-faced protege, makes his debut in a feature role. Opposite the youngster is Colleen Moore. The story was written by Mr. Neilan in collaboration with Reed Heustis.

Other who were in Mr. Neilan’s party were Alfred Wright, attorney for George Loane Tucker; Maurice Tourneur and J. R. Grenier, eastern representative for Mr. Neilan.

Details concerning Mr. Neilan’s plans in connection with his trip abroad are expected soon. Advance arrangements for his tour through Europe are well under way and are in charge of Harry Ham, foreign representative, who is now in England.

Amicable Settlement of Universal-Holubar Case

Certain disputes arose sometime ago between Universal Film Manufacturing Company, on the one side, and Allen J. Holubar and Dorothy Phillips on the other side, as to the performance of the obligations of the parties under certain agreements previously executed between them, and as to the rights and certain options of the respective parties under the terms of these agreements.

These disputes have been settled and an amicable disposition of the contention of the respective parties has been accomplished.

Arrow to Distribute Al St. John Comedies

The Arrow Film Corporation of New England has closed a deal whereby the Al St. John comedies being handled by Warner Bros., are to be distributed throughout Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut by that company.

Concident with the announcement is disclosure of the information that practically all the territory offered on these productions has been disposed of.

“Tillie Wakes Up” Is Masterpiece Picture

June 21st is Set As Publication Date by Manager of the Chicago Exchange

Masterpiece Film Corporation, 207 South Wabash avenue, Chicago, announces through its manager, Phil Solomon, that “Tillie Wakes Up,” featuring Marie Dressler, will be published in the company’s Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin territory on June 21.

Of prominence in the cast of this picture, which was directed by Harry Davenport, are Johnny Hines, the well-known comedian; Ruby de Remer, Frank Berman, Ruth Harrett and Jack Brown.

Mr. Solomon announces that Masterpiece has prepared a unique line of exhibitor aids which should prove valuable in successfully presenting this production.

For many years Miss Dressler has been considered one of the foremost actresses on the stage. Johnny Hines is making a name for himself as a comedian in short subjects. Miss de Remer has been seen recently in several pictures embracing all-star casts.

Argus Enterprises to Handle Fulco Products

The Argus Enterprises, Inc., with branch offices in New York, Chicago, Boston, Denver, Omaha, Salt Lake City and Los Angeles, have been appointed exclusive distributors on the West Coast, including Washington, Oregon, California, Nevada, Arizona and Idaho, for the E. E. Fulton Company of Chicago, manufacturer of the Fulco products for exhibitors.

A complete stock of Fulco products will be carried in each one of the branch offices and shipments to Argus customers will be made direct, thus saving the time necessary to receive goods from Chicago.

Chicago Commission Shatters Plan of Three $10,000 Censors
Cut Proposed Salary to $5,000 With Several Members Favoring Further Reduction—Hurley Report Is Cut to Pieces by Sub-Committee

Chairman T. D. Hurley's cherished hope of three $10,000 motion picture censors for Chicago was shattered Friday, June 4, when the censorship commission, which is now drafting a new ordinance for the city, cut the proposed salary to $5,000. Even this figure represents a compromise as several members of the commission favored $4,500 or $4,000 and even less.

Hurley Draft of Report Cut to Pieces
At the same meeting, a sub-committee which is drafting the report of the commission to accompany the proposed ordinance announced that the original draft of the report, drawn up by Chairman Hurley, has been rewritten and radically changed.

William A. Brady, Paul Cromelin, and other opponents of censorship, who appeared before the commission but were practically ignored in the first draft of the report, are to be quoted at length in the revised version, it was declared.

Chairman Hurley advocated $10,000 as the salary he would like to see given three censors, but in writing the first draft of the ordinance placed the figure at $6,000. This sum, however, was objected to as too high.

Warm Argument Follows
Mrs. Henry Solomon, who raised the first objection to the Hurley report on the ground that it was unfair to present both sides, opened the fight on the $6,000 salary. She favored $1,000 and indicated that even $3,500 might be sufficient.

Chairman Hurley expressed himself as still favoring $10,000 and against any further reductions. Rev. W. S. Fleming stated that he considered $4,500 a sufficient sum and that he would be willing to serve at that figure. Rev. Frederick Siedenburg declared he would consider nothing less than $5,000.

Attorney Adolph Kraus added that he would favor nothing in excess of $5,000.

A compromise suggestion of $5,000 was submitted and carried by a vote of 7 to 2. Rev. Fleming, who opposed the motion, stated that he considered $4,500 adequate.

Report Being Rewritten
Mrs. Henry Solomon, who insisted on the report being rewritten, said that a great deal of the original Hurley draft had been taken out and several additions had been made. The censorship laws of Ohio, Kansas and Pennsylvania have been incorporated in the report. The most important change, however, is the giving opponents of censorship some space.

Attorney Adolph Kraus, who appeared June 4 for the first time since last fall, took exception to the language in the report. He read an extract from it which classed motion picture censorship as more important than transportation and many other problems.

"That is laying it on pretty thick," said Attorney Kraus. "There is such a thing as ruining this report. When you say censorship is more important than transportation, you make yourself ridiculous."

To Single-Space Report
Attorney Kraus urged brevity in the report. The members generally opposed any further cutting down of the report. It will run about fifty or sixty type-written pages and makes a formidable sized folder in its present form.

"Better have it single spaced on the typewriter so it will look shorter," suggested Rev. Fleming. The suggestion was taken up enthusiastically.

Chairman Hurley reported that six members of the commission had withdrawn from its deliberations on account of various reasons.
Chester Beecroft to Film McCordell Story
Organizes Production Unit In Which Louise Prussing Is To Be Starred

A new picture corporation has come into being under the title name of Chester Beecroft Productions, with offices at 501 Fifth avenue, New York. Mr. Beecroft's first presentation will be a story from the pen of Roy McCordell. The feature will star Louise Prussing, who has been playing recently in leads with Eugene O'Brien.

The first picture will be as even-real drama, and publication arrangements have been perfected with C. Gardner Sullivan and Messmore Kendall, president of Moredall Realty Company under whose auspices the Capital theatre was built; Isaac Wolper, former president of Mayflower, and other prominent men identified with the C. Gardner Sullivan enterprise.

Lends Color to Reports
The first picture will be a seven-reel productions, Inc., with Messmore Kendall at the helm lends color to the undesired reports that these new ventures, as well as the Capital theatre, were sponsored by the DuPonts.

Mr. Beecroft is so well identified with the trade and is of such long standing in it that an introduction is hardly necessary. Chester Beecroft, it is understood, will continue Chester Beecroft Exporter, Inc., as well as directing the destinies of the production company.

To Produce Soon
It is understood that production on the first picture will commence on June 15. It is well known that Mr. Beecroft has been negotiating for a long time past with Julia Marlowe, who has never appeared in pictures, and who is considered one of America's greatest actresses.

There is every reason to believe that Mr. Beecroft has been successful in getting her to consent to star in one of his productions.

Chester Beecroft Production's publicity department will make a statement to the press in the near future.

Booking Plan With New Features for 1920-21 to Be Announced by Realart

Realart Pictures Corporation will announce shortly its plan and policy for 1920-21, the statement to include the production activities and the company's booking plan, which will embrace new features for both the large and the small exhibitors.

The new policy announcement is the result of the conferences held recently for a week between the Realart field men and home office officials. It will be the first detailed statement which the company has made, inasmuch as its activities during the last season were limited to six months of actual business.

Statement of Interest

"There will be some welcome news for exhibitors all over the country," declared General Manager Woody, "in the announcement we are to make within a short time. Not only our old clients but hundreds of other exhibitors who, I am confident, will join the Realart family this year, will be interested in the proposition we will have to offer."

"Realart called all its managers in from the field after sending them into their territories to get a first hand knowledge of what exhibitors wanted. All of that material was presented to the conference, carefully gone over and analyzed. We have formulated our policy to conform with this information and to advance, as far as we can, the interests of large and small exhibitors."

Cards on the Table

"Realart is ready for any exhibitor who wants a showdown. Our cards are on the entire fifty-two from a clean deck and no joker running wild. Despite the fact that the deal will produce a good many full houses, it is to be a gentlemen's game and Realart invites the best in the business to sit in."

"Although our plans may occasion some surprise for their size and importance, they are fully justified by the success which Realart has attained in its first year of existence. Despite the fact that we didn't get under way until late in the season, we made a record that is little short of miraculous."

"We encountered a market that was fairly hungry for quality pictures. That Realart has made good in meeting that demand has been evidenced several times—notably by the Wanda Hawley campaign. The same elements that made this success possible are at the foundation of our next year's plans. That's promising exhibitors something worth while."

Lewis Will Make Four Or Five Features for Pathe for Coming Year

Edgar Lewis has just signed a contract with Paul Brucet, vice-president and general manager of Pathé Exchange, Inc., which calls for four or five productions for Realart. This is exclusive of the present publication, "Sherry," and the forthcoming production, "Lahoma."

The new contract becomes effective on or about May 15. These plays are to be produced from stories of the sterling box office material of "Other's Men's Shoes," adapted from the novel by Andrew Souris.

Mr. Lewis will continue his policy of featuring the story, rather than a star, a policy he has maintained ever since he gained prominence in the directorial art.

Bergman Adapts First Bebe Daniels' Vehicle

Helmar Walton Bergman, who adapted fifteen O. Henry stories to the screen some time ago, has joined Realart's scenario staff at Hollywood, where he recently completed the first Bebe Daniels starring vehicle for Realart, "You Never Can Tell," from two Saturday Evening Post stories by Grace Lovell Bryan.

In it he has provided the new Realart with many opportunities to wear beautiful clothes and to display the striking dramatic talent she has shown in recent productions.

"Hidden Dangers" Set

For July Publication

On his return from the West Coast Albert E. Smith, president of Vitagraph, announced that "Hidden Dangers," the serial in which Joe Ryan and Jean Paige are co-starring, will be published in July. More than half of the fifteen episodes have already been completed on the Coast under the direction of William Bertram.

The story of "Hidden Dangers," which was written by Mr. Smith and Cleveland Moffett, has received many words of praise, it is said, from exhibitors who have seen the first episode screened and who have booked it on the strength of this early action. Mr. Bertram, the director, however, in a wire to Mr. Smith this week, claims that the big "wallop" thing, as he styled them, are yet to come.
THE COMMON AIM

Individual controversies, group movements, interior wranglings and dissensions of whatsoever nature notwithstanding, the common purpose of each and every member of the motion picture industry remains unalterably the same—the sale of screen amusement to the greatest possible portion of the American public.

Screen entertainment is the sole article of merchandise.

Advertising is its single salesman.

Two objectives stand out as essential—the perfection of the product and the sales method.

Into the business of attaining these ends every person engaged in and deriving income from the industry or any branch thereof should put 100 per cent of his efforts 100 per cent of his time.

To do less is not merely to slacken the progress of the industry but to impede his own advance as an individual.

Advertising, by which great force alone the buying public is influenced, presents the common ground upon which the thousands identified with the motion picture meet with a single purpose and strive for a uniform benefit.

The author who writes a story, the director who effects its transcription, the producer whose money is invested in the film version, the distributor who carries the finished product to the theatre man and the exhibitor who conducts the final public sale protect their own interests and insure their future prosperity, as well as those of their fellows, by making every picture a box office picture.

This is, and should be understood to be, the common aim.

The Author's Angle

The author, in whose brain is born the germ idea which develops into the box office success, should know advertising. It is important that he know what the public wants. It is more important that he know what the public can be sold.

It would be well worth the while of anyone and everyone writing for the screen to put in a considerable period of time in the managerial office of a modern theatre.

Here he would become familiar with that side of the industry known to the exhibitor alone—the sales side. He would learn, and learn quickly, the type of fiction that can be advertised effectively, and the type that may be technically meritorious and desirable but is commercially impracticable.

The Director's Business

The director might also profit greatly from such a period of study.

The director's business it is to make the screen version of any story which he is given as attractive as it is possible to make it. As a general rule, he is given considerable freedom in the matter of alterations.

After a visit of some duration at such a theatre, a period of actual association with exhibitorial conditions, he could not be otherwise than benefited.

Knowing what the public wants, he would waste no time and no money in carefully working out intricate situations which, artistically excellent as they might be, would not materially advance the quality of his product as a sales item.

Producer May Also Profit

The producer whose money makes the manufacture of motion pictures possible owes it to himself, no less than to those who are dependent upon him and upon whom he is dependent, to make a similar study.

It is not sufficient that he own a theatre or a number of theatres, entrusting actual management to paid subordinates.

The information which will fit him for better production, which will enlighten him as to shortcomings and failings which seriously cut into his annual revenue, can be obtained by personal observation, by "elbow-rubbing" intimacy with actual exhibitorial problems.

Distributor's Benefit Obvious

The distributor, whose operations usually embrace the preparation and distribution of the materials with which the exhibitor advertises, will find such an experiment particularly valuable to him.

He will learn that a great many of his products are seriously lacking in practicability, that the majority of the exploitation stunts which he puts down so easily in his press books, look good on paper and are absolutely useless as exploitation material.

He will learn, incidentally, some highly interesting things about tardy shipments, mis-addressed paper consignments and C. O. D. deliveries.

Theatre Vital Factor

It is no longer a common thing to hear representatives of other branches of the industry belittle the importance of the theatre and the exhibitor.

Such words are not spoken in these days, but the attitude they evidence exists in many cases, all too many cases, nevertheless.

It is the advertising that the exhibitor uses in his efforts to bring the public into his theatre to see his pictures that makes the industry thrive or starve.

The public's money supports all.

Exhibitors' advertising controls the volume in which that money comes in at the box office wicket.

Advertising is something more than agate lines in newspapers.

It begins with the author.

Everybody has a hand in it.

To make it perfect, that it may bring the greatest possible results, should be and rightly is the common aim of the industry.
A display with genuine and unassociated interest which was used in the lobby of the Audubon theatre, New York, while "Treasure Island" was being exhibited.

Novel Methods Improvised for Exploiting "Treasure Island"

When "Treasure Island," the Paramount Arcaft production, was announced as ready for publication, no furore swept through exhibitor ranks because of exceptional exploitation or advertising possibilities presented. Instead, in fact, there was considerable concern in some quarters on the ground that the picture would come under the "costume play" classification—and the phrase, costume play, has become, in effect, a danger signal.

That at least two exhibitors have managed to exploit the picture effectively, so effectively as to overcome the dampening box office effect of the costume classification, reflects great credit upon the individuals responsible and points an important truth—that exploitation can be made to work the highly desirable miracle, the putting over of the costume play.

When producers ceased production of costume plays they automatically closed off a source of material access to which would greatly relieve the present alleged shortage of story material. It is, or should be, a well-known fact that the unpicturized literature of the past contains material of sound dramatic merit and production possibilities unequalled in the contemporary market.

If it can be demonstrated to producers, to exhibitors and to the public that these works are good and worthy of production, the industry as a whole will benefit.

And it can be demonstrated.

Exploitation is the solution.

When the picture under discussion was exhibited in Seattle, Wash., a huge float was made up, with a set of pirates specially constructed for the purpose. Three pirates rode the equipment through the streets, their classically villainous appearance exciting considerable curiosity. It is said that theatre attendance showed in marked degree the effect of the enterprise.

In New York the picture was shown at Fox's Audubon theatre, and yet another method of exploitation was used. Models of ancient ships were constructed and placed on display in the lobby of the theatre. A photograph of the display, reproduced herewith, shows the details and general effect.

Displays of this sort are especially potent in interest-arresting power. With the exhibits numbered, and with reference material conveniently placed, the result was that few passed the place without stopping to read carefully all about the models and their originals.

When exploitation has been developed to the point where it can render so valuable a service as the revival of the costume play, with the consequent enrichment of the photoplay field, men engaged in the science may justly lay claim to one of the greatest success stories in motion picture history.

"Sex-O-Grams" Put Punch in Ad Copy

"Sex-O-Grams," by which appellation is designated the snappy, pithy punch lines evolved by Sig Schlager, of the J. Parker Read sales department, and F. B. Warren, then general manager for W. W. Hodkinson, qualify as "good stuff." They are valuable in themselves to exhibitors playing "Sex." Louise Glaum's recent vehicle, and additionally valuable as a model.

Copy, all copy, should be brief. It has not been recorded that anyone ever read advertisements for the joy of reading.

Ground has been gained in this direction. Old practices, the packing of space and the use of endless six point, have gone by the board.

Clip the illustration. Paste it up somewhere where it can be referred to. The next time copy is to be written, let the aim be to get the necessary information and suggestion into not as few but fewer words.

Merchant's Cooperative Style Show
Gets Big Returns Without Expense

Without doubt one of the chief reasons for the backward tendency shown by some exhibitors in the development of picture presentation is the popular belief that any presentation feature worthy of consideration is a vastly expensive affair. It is a reason that should be abandoned at once, for the good of the exhibitorial profession.

It has been said that the exhibitor who once stages a presentation feature is an exhibitor convinced of their merit. It has not been recorded that such a man has gone back to the old order of things without a sturdy protest, if at all.

Important, then, to every exhibitor, and especially to those who have not yet made use of presentation features, is the highly practical and commercially successful feature staged at the Strand theatre, Seattle, and illustrated above. "Why Change Your Wife?" Cecil B. DeMille's Paramount Arcturk production, was the picture exhibited at the time, but the market affords innumerable attractions with which the feature can be used effectively.

As the illustrations show, but three persons figured in the feature. The model and the designer were furnished by C. C. Carpenter, head of the MacDougall-Southwick department store. The maid was one of the Strand ushers. The expense element, it will thus be seen, was entirely eliminated, the theatre management having but to provide a stage setting and musical accompaniment—neither of which can properly be counted as expense.

As a feature the performance was highly satisfactory.

The model came upon the stage in negligee, doffed the garment when she mounted the pedestal, the maid carrying it off stage, and the designer proceeded to drape upon the model the uncut material from which the costume she wears in the final pose was fashioned. Ten minutes were consumed, the orchestra furnishing suitable accompaniment and effective lighting being provided.

They were ten interesting minutes, interesting to men and women alike, for the fashion field is an ever-interesting one, and the male, traditionally intrigued at the wonders of Milady's toilet, was appealed to no less strongly than the female.

As conducted at the Strand, without change, the feature is highly commendable. As it might be developed, with the introduction of a vocal selection or easily written and highly diverting semi-humorous, bantering dialogue, its commercial value is enhanced.

The most interesting angle of all, of course, is the expense phase of the matter.

In every city or town, from the metropolitan centers down to the merest village, there is a dry goods or department store which will be glad of the chance to co-operate in the manner indicated. The advertising value of such participation is so obvious as to require no discussion.

The stage space required is small. Where there is no stage at all the feature can be used upon a platform in the orchestra pit raised for the occasion.

Exhibitors should not overlook the opportunity to make a favorable impression upon their audiences the next time a picture in which the feminine characters are lavishly gowned is exhibited.

The simplified fashion show will get results. It will bring business that would not otherwise be forthcoming.

And it will open the way for presentation—than which no better object can be served.

THE PRESENTATION SIMPLE

The last remaining vestige of an excuse for the exhibitor who has not tried out picture presentation vanishes with the publication of the story of the merchant's cooperative style show staged at the Strand theatre, Seattle, Wash., for "Why Change Your Wife?"

Any exhibitor can duplicate the feature.

Any theatre will accommodate the enterprise.

Any dry goods or department store will provide the talent.

The expense is nil.

The results are 100% profit.
Last Week—

Harry Goldburg, proprietor of the Sun theatre, Omaha, Neb., offered an orphan for adoption as a means of advertising "The Heart of a Child." Nazimova's Metro production. The city fathers, if wondering if Typhoone fans were installed in the Sun a few seasons ago when that cyclone blew Omaha onto the front pages of the nation.

A hundred Klondyke prospectors in San Francisco, awaiting the ship that was to take them to the land of their endeavors, aided Frank Costello in perfecting a stage setting for "The River's End."

The Adams Theatres Co., operating the Garden theatre, Waterloo, Ia., brightened up its house organ by reprinting with due credit J. R. M.'s "Re-Takes of the News" from this journal. The idea, like the house organ, is good.

"Extra—Wallace Reid in 'The Dancin' Fool' Now Showing at the Queen Theatre" was the red line struck off on several thousand copies of the Houston, Tex., Press as it left the press room. And the authority reporting this daring enterprise is truthful enough to state that the Queen's box office records were not quite broken.

Promoters of the Wiggins-Block fight at the Armory, Jackson, Mich., advertised a crowd of 3,000 on the fighting qualities of Georges Carpentier on the night before "The Wonder Man" was opened at the Bijou theatre.

Elmer Harris, manager of the Blackstone theatre, Pittsburgh, Pa., sounds a timely note of warning against "loud peddlar" exploitation without ground and stresses the importance of personally witnessing a screening of every picture before advertising it. The practice should be made universal.

A. H. Fisher printed sugar envelopes for a large Minneapolis cafeteria to advertise "The Willow Tree," showing at the New Garrick. No particular association of ideas, perhaps, but good publicity.

John Weaver, manager of the Grand-Florissant theatre, St. Louis, played "Mary's Ankle" and staged an ankle contest in which contestants stood back of a curtain slowly raised from the floor, the audience passing judgment and indicating same by applause. A good time was had by all—and there were many present.

West Coast Wedding Is Grauman Capital

Sid Grauman, whose Million Dollar theatre, Los Angeles, will always be remembered for its prominence as a pioneer among progressive institutions, is primarily a showman. What is capital to the newspapers is capital to the Grauman exploitation genius. And he keeps the two well associated.

Los Angeles newspapers recently gave great prominence to the marriage of Norman Selby, "Kid McCoy," to Dagmar Dalgren, a classic dancer. The event was played up purely on its news merits.

But Sid Grauman saw more than news in it. He saw Grauman capital in it, and proceeded to make the most of the opportunity.

Accordingly, the bride's signature was affixed to a contract and she appeared upon the Grauman stage, widely heralded, as Sid Grauman can be depended upon to herald any event that transpires at his theatre, in a Grecian Symphonic Dance.

The newspapers had not yet ceased carrying details of the wedding. Now they took up the engagement and increased the size of the space allotted. The Los Angeles Herald gave excellent position to a four-column portrait of the bride, along with a story entitled, "Why I Became the Eighth Wife of 'Kid' McCoy."

Mention was also made of the fact that the lady was the only American pupil of Isadora Duncan, whose fame is greatest on the West Coast.

It is said that the salary paid the dancer for the engagement ran into figures that do not look convincing in print. But it is unimportant. There is not a doubt that the attendance and publicity gained more than offset the original cost.

The recruiting poster tie-up as executed in Detroit, Mich., with "The Toll Gate," but in Jackson, Mich., with "The Wonder Man."

Recruiting Poster Tie-Up Effective

Considerable general interest attaches to every new tie-up that is effected by motion picture theatre advertisers. Each innovation is another link in the chain that is being wrought to bind theatre advertising and the box office in inseparable unity.

The recruiting poster, that well known agent that is busy twenty-four hours every day urging men to join the army and navy, is the latest addition to the advertiser's territory. Its unvarying prominence is sufficient guarantee of its merit.

Above illustrations show two applications of the plan.

In one case Eli M. Orowitz, Famous Players-Lasky exploitation representative in Detroit, Mich., made up the poster shown for the purpose of promoting interest in "The Toll Gate," William S. Hart's most recent publication. In this instance the officer stationed at the recruiting station gave assistance, adding comment of the proper nature when passers-by spoke of the unusual wording.

Below this illustration may be seen a reproduction of a photograph showing the tie-up effected in Jackson, Mich., when "The Wonder Man," Georges Carpentier's initial starring vehicle, was exhibited at the Bijou theatre.

In the latter instance the tie-up was of something more than surface significance. The identification of the French pugilist with patriotism has been made thorough and lasting by the sport writers of the world. It will no doubt have the effect of enhancing the value of the association of the fighter's name with the army.

The tie-up is effective. It should be used promptly, as it loses effectiveness with repetition.

Dagmar Dalgren, dancer, whose recent marriage to Norman Selby, "Kid McCoy," was capitalized by Sid Grauman at his Million Dollar theatre, Los Angeles.
"An Exhibitor's Picture"

There are artistic successes, dramatic successes and box office successes, the latter being pre-eminently important to the theatre business, making commercially practicable the development of the motion picture art.

"The Idol Dancer," D. W. Griffith's First National attraction, is one of these. As few pictures in history, it has advanced the science of exploitation and presentation. Its effect will be lasting.

Comedy Exploitation Tested on Broadway

What is said to be the nucleus of one of the most unique exploitation campaigns for a motion picture is illustrated for the exhibitor in the tie-up of "Up in Mary's Attic," the six-reel super-comedy now being published on the state right market by Fine Arts Pictures, Inc., with the Cosmopolitan Ladies' Shop on Broadway and Forty-first street, New York City. The Cosmopolitan has duplicated some of the lingerie worn by the girls in this production and is giving the picture special prominence and publicity in their store displays and among their trade. On Broadway they have placed four large painted pictures from the play in two special window panels which stand out from the wall of the building more prominently than the center display.

Arrangements are now being made, according to a statement from the Fine Arts, with stores in every section of the city for similar displays. This by way of illustrating what exhibitors in any section of the country can do with "Up in Mary's Attic" in their own locality.

"The lingerie display, however," says M. W. Garson, president of Fine Arts Pictures, Inc., "is only one phase of the many tie-ups for this production. These tie-up stunts cover a scope of displays ranging from talcum powder, bathing suits, cigars, baby clothes and soap to one-step song hits. Every exploitation possibility is illustrated in New York City for the exhibitor to follow. The huge publicity value from these stunts, linked with the genuine quality of the picture will put over 'Up in Mary's Attic' in a big way that will make itself felt at the box office. The publicity is never strained or far-fetched, because there is a wealth of material to draw from in this photoplay production. In every case there is a definite and closely related link. 'Up in Mary's Attic' is more than a comedy greater than a drama and more entertaining than any mere slapstick buffoonery can attain. It contains every element of appeal. It has romance, pathos, adventure, thrills, pep, pay humor and human interest.'

Serial Stressed for Paying Lobby Splash

Theory entertains. Figures convince. When theory is applied and figures that prove theory fact follow—the result is commonly called success.

I. Burnstine, manager of the Capitol theatre, Springfield, Ill., booked "The Lost City," the Warner Bros. serial featuring Juanita Hansen, because he had confidence in its power to please the public and bring them into the theatre to be pleased. Mr. Friedman, president of the Celebrated Players Film Corp., distributing the serial for the territory, shared Mr. Burnstine's faith in the business qualities of the product and told him what to do.

Theory dictated that the public that was to be pleased if box office receipts were to be as desired would have to be made acquainted with the fact that the serial was being shown at the Capitol and that it was a jungle story in which many animals appeared. Accordingly the front of the Capitol was transformed into a smashing paper display which left no possibility of a doubt in the mind of the beholder as to the general character of the serial.

The front is reproduced herewith. The photograph shows the convincing effect obtained. But the figures that make the event important must not be overlooked. The Capitol has exploited other attractions on a lavish scale. Various methods have been used, with varying success. The day that "The Lost City" opened the box office record showed all previous days surpassed in number of admissions sold and gross receipts.

Visibility

The science of camouflage, developed to a high degree in the war, has, by converse application, a distinct value to the user of display advertising. Many simple devices were contrived which, surprisingly enough, lowered to approximately zero the visibility of moving troops. With these designs the advertiser may advantageously concern himself. Not that it pays to do in advertising—but because they are excellent examples of what not to do.

Toler's "Tiger Lady"

As soon as "A Modern Salome," her first production with her own company, was completed, Hope Hampton went abroad to assist personally in the dispor-sition of its foreign rights, the United States distribution being handled by Metro Pictures Corporation. In Europe "A Modern Salome" is being distributed by Sir William Jury for England and the Colonies, and by the Munich Film Com-

With the contest well under way, Miss Hampton's company set about obtaining stories for the productions subsequent to "A Modern Salome" and, after carefully combing the field, it bought several stories, one expressly for this production. First of these is "The Tiger Lady," by Sidney Toler, the picture on which Miss Hampton is now actively engaged on the West Coast. The picture was written by Maurice Tourneur's Hollywood Studios. The other stories whose purchase may be expected to be definitely announced in the near future are: "Hawaiian Story" by H. H. Van Loan, tentatively titled "The Taint," and another original scenario by the same gifted writer that has been contracted for but not yet completed.

Shirley Mason Pictures
For State Right Market

Seven Shirley Mason dramas revived by George Kleine and handled as selling agents, by Photo Products Export Company, 220 West 42nd street, New York, are being offered on the United States and Canadian State Right Market. The pictures were made comparatively recently and as the stories are strong and human, the productions were well received and there should be well pleased with the offer-

Mr. Kleine also is reviewing "Girls You Know," the series of twelve comedies, made by James Montgomery Flagg, the famous illustrator, starring his models. Flagg has transferred his delicate and facile touch to these screen pictures for which there appears to be always a demand on the part of exhibitors and the public.

reel Chas. Morgan comedies, twenty-six-ing Bill Jones comedies, fifty-two Urban Movie Chats," twenty-six "Snap-

Vitagraph Installed In New Philadelphia Home

Vitagraph, Inc., has opened its new quarters in Philadelphia, occupying three especially constructed buildings on Vine street.

The layout of the buildings was planned with special reference to the comfort and convenience of exhibitors. An innovation, warmly welcomed by exhibitors, was the setting aside of the front part of the main building, containing the offices, as a lobby and rest room for the exhibitors. This room is comfortably furnished.

Five Cosmopolitan Films Complete
Or in Final Stages of Production

Two Others Are Under Way With the Adaptation of Several Popular Books and Plays to Start in a Short Time

Five new productions have just been completed, or nearly so, at the studios of Cosmopolitan Productions, while two others are in their second week of production. It is announced that the program for the next few months calls for the adaptation of several stories or plays of prominence.

Cosmopolitan's latest publication is "Humoresque," which has been playing at the Criterion theatre in New York. This is an adaptation of the story written by Fannie Hurst, and is said to be one of the greatest pictures dealing with mother love that ever was produced. Frank Borzage is said to have achieved excellent results in directing the piece.

Scheduled for Publication

One of the productions scheduled for early issuance is "The Restless Sex," the screen version of Robert W. Chambers' novel which features Marion Davies. Supporting the star are Ralph Kellard, Carlyle Blackwell, Charles Lane, Robert Vivian, Etta Ross, Stephen Carr, Vivian Osborne and Corrine Barker.

Robert Vignola has just completed the direction of the Cosmopolitan production, "The World and His Wife," a picturization of the play by Charles Frederick Nirdlinger; taken from the dramatic verse of Jose Eckegeary. Anna Ruben is the featured player and is supported by Montague Love, Pedro de Cordova, Charles Gerard, Gaston Glass and Margaret Dale.

A Whiff of Heliotrope" from the dramatic story of the same name by Richard Washburn Chabot, which appeared a short while ago in Hearst's Magazine, recently has been completed by Director George D. Baker and will be issued in the near future.

Adapt Churchill Book

A screen version of Winston Churchill's novel, "The Inside of the Cup," now is nearing completion under the direction of Albert Capellani. This is the story which created much discussion a few years ago when it appeared in book form.

Marion Davies has started work on a new picture entitled "Buried Treasure," from the story by E. Britten Austen, which appeared recently in Hearst's Magazine. George D. Baker is direct-

Grauman's Million Dollar Orchestra

On the evening of May 23, upon the departure of Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford for New York City, Sid Grauman entertained a number of friends at his Million Dollar theatre, Los Angeles, by having Charles Chaplin play his violin, Mary Pickford burlesque "singers she has heard," "Dough" play the bass viol, while Mr. Grauman "tinkled the ivories."

First House of Circuit Will Be Opened by United Early In July

Bernard G. Ziv, formerly connected with the amusement department of the Chicago Evening American, has been appointed director of publicity for Chicago United Theatres, Inc. Mr. Ziv was on the Chicago paper for more than five years.

The first of a chain of houses to be run by United, the Stratford, will be opened early in July. This theatre, located at Sixty-third and Halsted streets, one of the busiest sections outside of the loop district, was erected at a cost of approximately $1,000,000. It will seat 3,000 persons and will be the last word in theatre construction, it is said. A symphony orchestra of forty pieces will provide the musical entertainment.

One of the most complete Typhoon cooling and ventilating systems in the city has been installed in the Stratford and will aid greatly in making the patrons of this house comfortable during the warmest days.

Borzage Seeks Naturalism
In Producing His Pictures

Frank Borzage, director of "Humoresque," told members of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers at their weekly meeting in New York that he believed in making every character in his picture human, and that in his opinion every part of screen production should conform to nature.

"Picture making," he remarked, "is simply the application of common sense—be natural—can't the artistic temperament! It is not easy for a director to grasp the commercial end of the motion picture business and for that reason he must necessarily be guided by those in charge of the exploitation and sales department. I think that every picture should run its length. If the story calls for seven, eight or nine reels, that should be the length of the picture."

ing. A cast of notable artists is being engaged to support Miss Davies.

Director Robert Vignola has started work on "The Passionate Pilgrim," from the novel of the same name by Samuel Merwin, which ran serially in the Cosmopolitan Magazine, while Director Frank Borzage begins "Just Around the Corner," by Fannie Hurst.

To Be Produced Soon

A few months ago Cosmopolitan took over Sulzer's Harlem River Park, occupying a full city block at 156th street and Second avenue, which has been rebuilt into a studio. But even this immense structure was not large enough to take care of the company's needs and, recently, a lease has been taken on Estree's studio, in West 125th street.

On the evening of May 23, upon the departure of Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford for New York City, Sid Grauman entertained a number of friends at his Million Dollar theatre, Los Angeles, by having Charles Chaplin play his violin, Mary Pickford burlesque "singers she has heard," "Dough" play the bass viol, while Mr. Grauman "tinkled the ivories."

Foster's "The Trap" Is Purchased by Goldwyn

The latest important purchase announced by Goldwyn Pictures Corporation is Maximilian Foster's successful story, "The Trap," which ran in McClure's Magazine from December 10 to May, and was read, it is conservatively estimated, by not less than 5,000,000 persons. In novel form, this amazing tale of love, mystery and intrigue will be published by D. Appleton & Co. some time in July, and the book will be exploited in connection with the picture.

Executives of Goldwyn Pictures and Appleton & Co. have changed the title from "The Trap" to "To the Highest Bidder."

Perfect Continuity to Reduce the Number of Subtitles to Minimum

Perfect continuity, says John Stahl, who recently directed Mildred Harris Chaplin in her yet unnamed First National attraction, will reduce subtitling to a minimum.

"This picture is so perfect in continuity that instead of more than 200 titles, which is an average for a production of this size," he says, "I intend to use less than seventy-five.

To test out my theory I exhibited the picture at Chicago without titles. The thread of the story was so apparent that not a tangle resulted in the minds of the spectators. In fact it has been suggested that no titles be used, but I do not think the public is ready for such a radical departure from precedent."

Sales Agency Is Formed By Bamberger and Levy

Announcement is made that Leon J. Bamberger and Joe Levy have organized the firm of Bamberger and Levy, with offices on the second floor of the Putnam building, 1492 Broadway, New York.

Bamberger and Levy will act as general sales agents to the trade. However, to make known the comprehensive scope of their plans, the following items are quoted as coming within their field of operation and in which either one or both partners have had many years of experience:

The sale of United States rights, state rights and foreign rights on both features and comedies; the sale of scenarios and stories; the booking of big productions on percentage; exploitation; publicity; advertising; financing; promotion; organization; systems installed; production of advertising and industrial films.

Vitagraph to Begin Work Soon on Additions to Its Western Studios

Work is expected to be under way soon on the building program at Vitagraph's western studios, according to W. S. Smith, general manager. Plans for the additions to the plant were made while Albert E. Smith, president, was on the coast.

Construction work is expected to continue through the summer months, and will give the company one of the most modern plants in the industry, it is said.

To Erect Star Building

The administration offices will be renewed entirely. A separate modern building will be erected for stars' dressing rooms, and will contain every convenience, including individual shower baths. More stages will be put up, including one huge glass-enclosed structure designed especially for the large sets of the feature companies. The studio will then have a full dozen separate and distinct stages.

W. S. Smith recently was the successful bidder in probate court for ten acres of an old Los Angeles estate which adjoins the original Vitagraph property in Hollywood. This has been in use for temporary sets for the past two months. Under the new plans much of this extra area will be devoted to permanent sets, work on which already has begun. Vitagraph now holds twenty acres in Hollywood.

Building Is Booming

While building operations seem at a standstill in other parts of the country, they are booming on the Pacific Coast. Los Angeles especially, and conditions are ideal for improvements, as plenty of material is available.

An advance in serial production methods, now practiced by Vitagraph, is another reason for the improvements. Vitagraph serials are getting the same value in sets and such as any special feature, an innovation that has been found to meet instantaneous recognition and appreciation from exhibitors and public.

Mr. Smith expects all new quarters and stages to be completed and available for use early in September.

Express Satisfaction With Faversham Film

Morris Says "Man Who Lost Himself" Big Drawing Card at Strand

Audiences that filled the Strand theatre in New York during the engagement of William Faversham's "The Man Who Lost Himself," the Selznick picture, expressed complete satisfaction with the production, according to Sam E. Morris, vice-president and general manager of Select Pictures.

All of the New York critics were loud in their praise of the subject, Mr. Morris said, as were other reviewers in the largest cities over the country. The entire bill during the week of the Faversham showing was composed of Selznick productions.

"The Strand broke a long standing rule in booking William Faversham in "The Man Who Lost Himself," according to Mr. Morris. "And this booking shows that no matter what pictures a theatre has contracted to exhibit, if a good box office attraction comes along they'll push their pre-arranged schedule to the background. That is exactly what has been done not only at the Strand theatre, but also at Grauman's Los Angeles theatre, Sullivan, Cleveland Palace, Washington; the Poli, and all the big New York circuits, the Regent, Gordon and Piccardylly of Rochester, and the Temple theatre of Toledo."

"Another big instance of the popularity attending the picture is Roth's Imperial theatre of San Francisco. Mr. Roth had at first decided to show the production at his Tivoli theatre, but switched it to the Imperial, a much larger house."
Selznick Gets Paragon Plant Which Gives it Big Fort Lee Studio Space

Place Was Remodeled and First Production Work Was Commenced on June 7—Six Companies Are Now Active for Organization

The Paragon studio at Fort Lee, N. J., has been acquired by Selznick Enterprises. This acquisition gives the company two-thirds of all of the studio space at Fort Lee.

Immediately the lease was signed for the property, day and night shifts of workmen commenced remodeling the structure and installing a new lighting system. On June 7, the first scenes of a production were made in the new acquisition.

Units to Move East:

Acquisition of the Paragon studio is said to be the sequel to Lewis J. Selznick’s recent announcement that hereafter all productions of Lewis J. Selznick Enterprises would be made exclusively in the East. It is intimated that by July 1 all stars, directors and technical experts now working at the Selznick West Coast studios will have arrived in New York. All interior scenes for Selznick and National Picture Theatres productions made for Selznick will be taken in the three Fort Lee studios.

Mr. Selznick declared that the studio facilities for the production of Selznick pictures would be practically unlimited. On the main studio stage at Fort Lee, it is said, four companies can work simultaneously without interfering with the production work there of the Herbert Kaufman Weekly. The Paragon studio stage will accommodate an equal number of companies. About a month ago Mr. Selznick announced the acquisition of the Solax studio, also at Fort Lee. The stage space there will accommodate two more units.

Space for Exteriors:

The grounds of these three studio buildings are said to embrace a total acreage about ten times the area of their stages. This will provide unlimited facilities for the erection of elaborate exterior sets. The grounds of the main Selznick studio are so extensive that just now they are being used for the erection of an entire village, copied from a photograph taken in Canada and to be used in the making of scenes for “The Sin That Was His,” a Hobart Henley production in which William Faversham will make his second appearance as a Selznick star.

Among the Selznick productions now in work are those starring Olive Thomas, William Faversham, Elaine Hammerstein, Eugene O’Brien, Owen Moore and Louis Hut. It is stated. In addition to these, Mr. Selznick announced recently that work had been started on “Wilderness Fear,” a special production directed by Burton George, and “Red Foam,” a Ralph Ince special production in which Zena Keete, the Selznick 1920 star, is playing the leading role. Four Herbert Kaufman Weckles are said to be nearing completion.

A force of more than 500 employees is employed in the main Selznick studio at Fort Lee.

European Rights for “Determination” Sold

The European rights on “Determination,” have been sold by United States Photoplay Corporation to Stoll Film Company of London. The picture is yet unfinished, but the company of players is working day and night at the corporation’s studio at Grantwood, N. J.

Howard Hall, the noted author, had charge of the continuity. This production will be published first in New York. Arrangements are being made by the London concern to show it in one of the largest houses in the Stoll chain in Drury Lane.

Seizure of United Theatre Picture
By Exhibitors From Hallmark Illegal

Receiver Appointed by Court Declares That Damage Sustained by Inability to Screen Prints Must be Met by Showmen

Several exhibitors who sustained apparent losses because of the financial difficulties of United Picture Productions Corporation and United Theatre Pictures are holding prints of United pictures received from Hallmark exchanges illegally, without regard for the bookings of other theatres, according to a statement given out by Hallmark Pictures Corporation.

Harry Balkin, appointed by the United States district court as receiver for United organizations, has notified Hallmark officials that exhibitors will be held responsible for damages caused by the company's inability to exhibit these pictures.

Action Is Illegal

Exhibitors who hold franchises in United Theatres and who had paid deposits on United and Triangle subjects have no legal right, says the receiver, to attempt to collect their claims by withholding film shipped to them by Hallmark.

Mr. Balkin's letter concerning the matter to Hallmark reads:

"My attention has been called by you to the fact that a number of exhibitors who have sustained apparent losses by reason of the financial difficulties of the United Picture Productions Corporation and United Picture Theatres, have sought to protect themselves by holding United pictures which they have received from your exchanges formerly operated by the United.

Court Won't Permit It

"Will you at once call their attention to the fact that such seizure is illegal and that the United States district court which appointed the undersigned receiver will not permit such taking of property in the possession of the court."

"Will you also notify these exhibitors that they will be held responsible to me for all damages sustained by reason of your inability to exhibit these pictures, which damages may run up to considerable amounts."

Can't Force Payment

The idea that Hallmark can be made to return security deposits or money paid to United for franchises is a mistaken one, it is said. There is no question, it is declared, that the courts everywhere in the United States will uphold the receiver and compel exhibitors to return films unlawfully held, but it is just as true that every exhibitor guilty of such an act would not allow himself to be a party to it if he gave the matter any thought.

Holding of these films, it is said, is working a serious hardship on Hallmark and Triangle, both parent parties to the whole transaction, and is seriously affecting the business of other exhibitors in addition to the receivers from realizing full returns on United assets.

Harry Weiss Has Rights to Seven Features—Seeks Record Bookings

With Illinois and Indiana rights to four productions and Illinois rights to three additional features, Harry Weiss, manager of the Superior Screen Service, Inc., Chicago, is piling up a record number of contracts for the warm months in the Chicago territory.

The new exchange is offering a complete line of accessories with every production and is handling no re-issues.

Pictures for which Illinois and Indiana rights have been obtained are:

"His Pajama Girl," five reels, starring Billie Rhodes.

"Witch's Lure," five reels, with an all star cast headed by Augustus Phillips and including Edward Coxen, Charles Maillès and "Teddy."

"Neglected Wives," six reels, a Burton King production with Anne Luther, Claire Whitney and Charles Gerard.

Illinois rights have been obtained for the following pictures:

"Mother, I Need You," five reels, a Lloyd-Carden production with Emid Markey and Edward Coxen.

"The Great Sinner," five reels, with James K. Hackett, Irving Cummings and Ormi Harris.

"The Sport of Kings," five reels, Arthur Somers Roche's racing play, with Matt Moore and Rogers Lytton.

Emid Markey, who is featured in "Mother, I Need You," was starred in the stage production "Up in Mable's Room," which recently had a long run at Wood's theatre, Chicago.
PARIS VICTORY FETE IN COLORS
Gaumont Brings Picture to This Country Which Shows the Results of Trichrome Process Which Is Said to Raise Standard of This Photography

L E O N GAUMONT, of Gaumont Company, has arrived in America to present the company's production in a natural color, in which the company's Trichrome process was used, of the 'Victory' Parade in Paris.

It is the contention of Gaumont that these pictures will prove that the problem of presenting pictures in natural colors has been completely solved. Regarding the Trichrome process, Mr. Gaumont says:

"Before the war we presented in New York the first results of our Trichrome process. Since then we have completed same, so that it is possible now to assure from the distance and at any time the perfect superposition of the three pictures by means of a very simple apparatus placed at the reach of anybody's hand with some intelligence.

Bring Picture to U. S.

"Today we are fortunate enough to bring to our American friends, for their appreciation of the practical end of our process, the most important historical document ever known—The Victory Parade.

"From the start we immediately and resolutely directed our efforts, in our researches, to the Trichrome process, being convinced that it is materially impossible to reproduce with two colors all the shades and all the tints which please our eyes. The complete solution of the problem was to be studied, of nothing at all; in acting differently it was devoting one's time at the mercy of a new process.

"This is how we abandoned the bicolor process, even though it presented the possibility of using the film of any of the usual cameras.

Solution Is Offered

"We say and we maintain that the Trichrome process alone furnishes the complete solution of the problem. During our stay in New York we are ready to give at our expense any exhibition desired for comparison purposes, and we are even willing to pay $1,000 to a benevolent society if a competitor can show us a picture above or equal to ours in quality.

"The future of cinematography in natural colors is incommensurable. No demonstration is required. If we will just think for a minute we will immediately realize how illogical it is to present on the screen the numerous manifestations of life uniformly in black and white. What a terrible infancy it would have been if our Creator had deprived us from being able to appreciate the splendid harmonies of color existing in the world.

"In some future time, nearer perhaps than we expect, color will master the screen and we will wonder how we could be satisfied with the present monochrome pictures.

Regular Films Used

"Following is some information which will confirm our statement that we have completely and practically solved the problem of cinematography in colors. Films used for view taking and projecting purposes are the very films regularly supplied by the famous firm, Eastman Kodak, and on which we have done all possible trials.

"We are using the same width and the same perforation. The formula and process of panchromatising pertain to the domain of the laboratory. There is no sorcery in it once you know the nature of the products and the proportion of the mixtures of panchromatising products.

"The various developing operations, toning, printing, are the same as those for ordinary films, with the exception, however, of the development of the negative in an almost absolute darkness.

Filters Are Used

"Do not forget that the colors appear on the screen only, thanks to and on account of the use of filters placed before the objectives of the camera and also before those of the projecting machine. The apparatus differs in a very small proportion from those daily by all the operators, and the use of same is neither difficult nor complicated.

"The only criticism that could be made regarding our process, if this can be called a criticism, is the fact that by projecting and superposing simultaneously three pictures a special projecting machine is an absolute necessity, also a metalized screen making the projection more luminous, avoiding thus the diffusion at the rear sides of the room of part of the projected light.

Argus Enterprises Has Bought Swanson Stores
In Middle West Cities

Swanson Theatre Equipment Company's stores in Omaha, Denver, Salt Lake City and Des Moines have been purchased by Argus Enterprises, Inc., with general offices in Cleveland and branches in Chicago, New York, Boston and Los Angeles.

Argus either manufactures or holds the sales right for practically every accessory needed in furnishing a theatre, it is said. It is the intention of the company to establish branch offices in all important centers as soon as possible and thereby increase its service to customers.

Argus is said to be the pioneer in Maxda projection, being patentee of the Argus-Sheek Universal adaptor for motion picture projection. General Electric Company manufactures this product for the concern.

Lesser Acquires Rights

Sol Lesser has purchased the state rights for California, Nevada and Arizona on Ayvon Film Corporation's five-part Western dramas starring Rex Ray, Delaware, Maryland and the District of Columbia has been sold to Empire Film Distributing Company; Lyric Film and Supply Company of Terre Haute has purchased the rights for Indiana; Utah, Colorado and New Mexico territory was sold to Arrow Film Company of Denver, while Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia are controlled by Penn Film Service. The Dooley Film Exchange of Syracuse has bought the rights for upper New York State, while Greater New York and Northern New Jersey territory will be controlled by Ayvon.

Say New Mayer-Chaplin Film Is a $2 Picture

The next $2 motion picture production, according to a number of exhibitors who attended the First National Convention in Chicago, will be the film now in the making by Louis B. Mayer starring Mildred Harris Chaplin.
As yet unnamed and untitled, the production created a sensation when shown privately to several prominent exhibitors. Five months have been consumed in preparing and photographing the picture and at least another month or two will be required to complete the cutting, titling and assembling. It was directed by John Stahl and every detail was accomplished in the most lavish style.

"Mollycoddle" Cost More Than Any Fairbanks Film

Douglas Fairbanks established a new record for the cost of production, it is said, when he finished the filming of "The Mollycoddle," his third United Artists' picture.

The expenditure on "The Mollycoddle," according to figures compiled by John Fairbanks, general manager, and Leeds Baxter, auditor, is just a few dollars short of half a million. This is more than $100,000 above the cost of any previous Fairbanks production. Hiram Abrams announces that this picture will be ready for distribution June 13.

A campaign is to be directed to the heads of all state universities to have a department of scientific motion picture photography added to the curriculum, according to H. Lyman Broening, secretary of the American Society of Cinematographers.
DIGEST OF PICTURES OF THE WEEK

MECHANICAL equipment will always remain an important, indeed a vital, consideration in the theatre business. The proper projection of pictures will always be a powerful factor in theatre success.

It is important, therefore, that any and all announcements of new equipment be given careful attention. In them is found the information essential to full and satisfactory development of the projection science.

The Argus Crystal Bead Screen is one of the newest inventions offered the exhibitor business man. It is the product of the Argus Enterprises, Inc., Cleveland, O., and an attractive folder issued in its behalf makes pretentious claims for the results that may be obtained from its use.

The surface of the screen, it is said, is made up of hundreds of thousands of minute crystal beads, uniform in size and color, firmly cemented upon a tough and durable cloth backing. It is claimed that exceptional depth of focus, with consequent heightened realism, characterizes the picture projected upon this surface.

These qualities are desirable. The product advertised as capable of producing them is worthy of attention.

"A MASTER STROKE." (Vitagraph) is advertised as "a comedy of high finance." It is comedy, but comedy of a new type, reserved, almost subtle, well bred and logical. Earle Williams finds in the leading role a character which he should be able to perpetuate to good advantage. Nothing sensational, as regards either dramatic strength or exploitation possibilities, it is still good screen material—and should pleasantly amuse the general public.

"THE PATH SHE CHOSE." (Universal) presents the decidedly pretty though not overly confident Ann Cornwall in a not unusual story which has been rather well produced. Edward Coxen has the masculine lead and, though it is not a difficult nor promising role, satisfies demands. Remarkable in no particular, the production provides satisfactory screening for ordinary occasions.

"MISS HOBBIS" (Realart) is an excellent vehicle for the presentation of Wanda Hawley as a star. Fine production prevails throughout the picture, which offers something rather distinctive for the exhibitor to present. Showmen will find that "Miss Hobbs" contains box office value and establishes a precedent for Miss Hawley.

"THE STRANGE BOARDER." (Goldwyn) is a typical picture for Will Rogers' type of portrayal. The production should appear to those, as well as for the story is diverting and its adaptation is sufficient. The story is from the pen of Will Payne.

"WHISPERS" (Select) presents Elaine Hammerstein in a story of scandal—the scandal hound and the scandal sheet. There is humor enough in the picture to satisfy everybody, this phase of the picture being handled very adeptly. Miss Hammerstein is pleasing as usual.

"BURNING DAYLIGHT." (Metro) shows Mitchell Lewis in a story of the Yukon where the virile and rugged type of person lives. Lewis handles the characterization creditably. The picture is interesting but is lacking in intensely dramatic moments.

"THE IRON HEART." (Fox) is a drama built around the machinations of the steel trust to crush an independent mill owner. While the plot material is not new it is handled in such a manner that it holds one's interest throughout. Madlaine Travers is starred and George McDaniel appears to good advantage in her support.

"UNCHARTERED CHANNELS." (Robertson-Cole) is a tirade against the "reds" with H. B. Warner in the role of a lovable chap who routs the I. W. W's. While not as strong as some of Mr. Warner's former vehicles, it contains many pleasing episodes and a first class cast assists the star in putting the story over. Principal among these are Sam de Grasse, Kathryn Adams, Percy Challenger, J. P. Lockney and George Swann.

"DANGEROUS DAYS." (Goldwyn) qualifies as high-class drama. Unfortunately, exhibitors are somewhat restricted in their advertising of the play, the war background generally considered unsaleable predominating. The play will please even those wary of its subject matter, however, if they can be brought to its screening. Mary Roberts Rinehart's name should be stressed in all publicity.
Elaine Hammerstein in WHISPERS

Five-part comedy-drama; Select. Directed by William P. S. Earle. Published in June.

One of the most interesting occurrences in “Whispers,” the comedy angle being aptly handled, evoked laughter aplenty from a cosmopolitan audience at the State-theatre in Chicago’s downtown section. This in conjunction with the more dramatic aspect results in a picture in which Elaine Hammerstein is credited with ingenious work. “Whispers” depends for its main theme upon gossip—the “scandal hound and the yellow sheet.” Besides providing ample entertainment value, the subject of a gossip can be capitalized largely in the advertising. Especially is this true if exhibitors are home to use the teaser campaign method of exploiting. Gossip always has, and probably always will be, a productive source for both troubles and jokes. Tactfully applied it can serve the showman well in this instance.

Noticeable in “Whispers” as in other selected settings prevail throughout, some of the scenes in the earlier part of the production are especially elaborate.

SYNOPSIS: Daphne Saxon, against the wishes of an aunt who has social ambitions, keeps company with a married man. Gossip abounds, and not until Daphne is placed in a compromising position does she awaken to the situation. Immediately she plans to return to her father whom she has not seen for years. Fate places her on the same train as the man whom she desires to evade. A reporter from a scandal sheet, Patrick Darrell, follows, and in Washington finds them together. But Patrick falls in love with Daphne and refuses to send in a story. Instead he remains in the little town where Daphne’s father runs a paper and together with her helps run the paper.

Ann Cornwall in THE PATH SHE CHOSE

Five-part drama; Universal. Directed by Philip Rosen. Published in June.

One of the few good bits, a few not so good, and a host of commonplace combine to keep “The Path She Chose” in the rank of “every day” pictures. There is nothing in it to make it stand out from the crowd. Ann Cornwall, a delicately pretty but not an attractive young lady, is carefully directed through the steps of the leading role. She does not make a lasting impression, perhaps mainly because the plot affords her no great opportunity.

Edward Coxen, veteran of some years’ screen service, appears in what qualifies as the leading masculine role, though considerable more footage is given William Moran, who, as the evil brother of the struggling working girl, impresses strongly in a most unpromising characterization.

The story details the steps by which a child of the slums rises by hard work to a position of independence, surrendering it to become the wife of her employer. The complications arise from the efforts of her brother to drag her down to his level.

Though well made, the picture contains little that may be profitably advertised or exploited. With not even a prominent name to play up, the play as a whole drops naturally into the class of machine-made drama.

SYNOPSIS: Virginia Clerson, virtuous daughter of a drunken father and sister of a villainous brother and a wilfully erring sister, leaves home to make her way in the world. She obtains employment in the Parker millinery factory and by diligent application to her work and study at night school works her way to a foremanship. While here she meets her sister, who has tared badly, and takes her into her home. Her brother then finds her, tells her employer, who has fallen in love with her, a false story of her early life and attempts to take her back home with him. But Parker learns the truth, sends the brother upon his way after a beating and marries Virginia.

Mitchell Lewis in BURNING DAYLIGHT

Six-part drama; Metro. Directed by Edward Sloman. Published in June.

SYNOPSIS: One of Jack London’s tales of romance, adventure, intrigue and pathos is the basis of this Metro picture featuring Mitchell Lewis, whose portrayals of the virile and rugged roles has prompted gracious exhibitor comment. The star’s physical make-up attatches realism to his productions, it being unnecessary to play upon the imaginative instincts when he stages a fight against odds, or endures the hardships of the frozen North.

The locales of this London story are the Yukon and New York. In each instance the scenes photographed are compatible with the descriptive elements of the story. The snow scenes in particular are well handled, their beauty remaining on the screen.

While the picture generally is entertaining, it lacks the punch that might be expected from a London story. This undoubtedly is no fault of the adaptor, but can be traced to the novel itself. Many of the incidents of the picture are very amusing and Lewis’ expressive work during these lighter moments is commendable.

One praiseworthy feature of every picture involving a story of the North is the fact that they yield easily to exploitation, especially as regards lobby displays and stage presentation. Working with spotlights and various colored globes, the snow scenes can be reproduced in a manner that should attract the outsider. Especially can the lobby be made very alluring.

The facile work of the cast will be enjoyed. Those supporting the star are Helen Ferguson, his leading lady; Gertrude Astor, Louis Morrison, William V. Mong, Edward Johnson, Alfred Allen, Arthur Edwin Carew, Newton Hall, Robert Bolder and Aaron Edwards.

SYNOPSIS: “Burning Daylight,” a typical character of the Northlands, discovers property rich in gold. He returns to McDonald’s dance hall and while revealing his find to “Necessity,” a lawyer who is the victim of bad whisky, and the owner of the Tivoli, the conversation is overheard by the field agent of the Letton syndicate of New York. Letton goes north and endeavors to fleece "Burning Daylight," but because of the latter's shrewdness the New Yorker is compelled to pay $5,000.00 for the property. "Burning Daylight" then takes "Necessity," his daughter Dora, whom "Burning Daylight" loves, and her little brother, who is a cripple, to New York, where he spends money freely. The Letton syndicate endeavors again to run him, but again "Burning Daylight's" shrewdness gets the better of them after a hard battle. "Burning Daylight" and his friends then return to the land they love.

Earle Williams in

A MASTER STROKE

Five-part comedy-drama; Vitagraph.

Directed by Chester Bennett.

Published in June.

OPINION: Described as a "comedy of high finance," the latest Earle Williams vehicle appeals chiefly because of a certain novelty of structure which offers possibilities of profitable development. The producers should delve more deeply into the realm invaded—psychological comedy.

The play presents a somewhat baffling front. In it the star is seen as a society man whose fondness for gambling and speculating has resulted in a rather serious financial embarrassment. Pressed for funds and greatly discouraged, he commits a near-crime, explanation of which keeps the audience pleasantly intrigued until the successful working out of a satisfactory and novel, though not far-fetched, ending. There is little of spectacular incident, naturalness being the keynote throughout. It is because of this, perhaps, that the picture appeals as it does, puzzling slightly as it entertains.

It is good screening all the way, and, though the exploitation and presentation possibilities are but ordinary, the production should be popularly proclaimed a success.

In the field thus opened up Earle Williams has found a character to his liking and one for which he is well suited. He will doubtless experience excellent results if maintained in roles of the type.

SYNOPSIS: Yale Duranti, society idler, immediately after the death of his friend, Jack Millington, to hold down the chair as head of his brokerage business during his absence. He makes use of the opportunity to borrow valuable bonds which George Trevor, unknown to him a rival of Millington, greatly desires. Trevor is loaned the bonds for four days and makes use of them to attack Millington on the street. Jack Millington returns unexpectedly and wins back the bonds. Millington, says Trevor, it is the discovery. The elder Millington also returns, and exposure seems certain, but a master stroke by Miss Patten saves the situation, which brings about the happy ending.

Mary Roberts Rinehart's

DANGEROUS DAYS

Seven-part drama; Goldwyn.

Directed by Reginald Barker.

Published in June.

OPINION: Despite the national conviction that the picture which so much refers to the war is doomed to early obscurity, there is reason to believe that the Eminent Authors' picturization of Mary Roberts Rinehart's story will give general satisfaction. The box-office record may not be of a high level, but such a failure must be set down to conditions prevalent rather than to lack of merit in the picture.

The production is high class in every respect.

The general outline of the plot is not greatly dissimilar to many that were used while the war picture was at its best, but characterizations are finely registered, situations are set forth with peculiar clarity; incidents occur naturally though opportuntuly, and a splendid cast makes every character seem real.

It is hard to believe that a public should feel as they do about the class of drama of which "Dangerous Days" is representative. The fact that the picture will score heavily where it is possible to bring people to its exhibition. The opposition to the class will not operate detrimentally when the picture is actually presented.

The appeal that is made to human emotions is as strong as though among other time and setting were employed. This is certain in its effect and that effect is excellent.

Fine production prevails throughout.

And there are incidents which would have been capital for exploitation purposes before the signing of the armistice.

The real exhibitors' success has to do with the marketing of the play. For a short run it may be possible to bring satisfactory business by omitting mention of the war element. This step is justifiable, as the picture will satisfy. But a long run is another matter. People will talk about the picture. No doubt of that. And they will mention the element that discourages patronage.

SYNOPSIS: Clayton Spencer, owner of a vast sugar plantation, is called upon the question of his son's enlistment. As a personal sacrifice he turns over his mighty estate to the government. Herman Klein, an employe long in his service, resigns when shells are made to be fired at Germany, but his daughter continues working in the office. Graham Spencer, Clayton's son, German sympathizers work upon Klein, telling him that his daughter is intimate with young Spencer, and unfortunate circumstances seem to prove the truth of their statements. Accordingly he blows up the whole plantation, is caught and he is taken prisoner. The elder Spencer then breaks with his wife and his son joins the army.

Wanda Hawley in

MISS HOBBES

Five-part comedy-drama; Realart.

Directed by Donald Crisp.

Published in June.

OPINION: If it is something different and novel that the exhibitor is desirous of booking, he need go no further, for Wanda Hawley's initial starring vehicle is distinctive in every sense of the word, and, furthermore, it is a credit to her screen efforts.

It is a pleasant relief to view a picture which incorporates new ideas, a picture which introduces a story that has not been remodeled a legion of times for the sake of as many productions. Fans, no doubt, will note this dissimilar phase of the picture and will leave the theatre feeling that an hour has been entertained spent.

Discrimination has been practiced in staging "Miss Hobbes." The sets are specimens of exceptional merit. Each and every one is an illustration of the distinctive touch that has been given the whole production. Novelty predominates to the extent of making "Miss Hobbes" refer occasionally to the photographic accomplishments have done much to enhance the beauty of the technical achievement.

Taking the picture as a whole Miss Hawley is very fortunate in having it as her initial feature. Her portrayal is marked by wholesome abandon and sincere work. She has gained public favor by her past work, and present indications are that she will retain it, for this adaptation. George Jessup and his "Jerome's" play is genuinely promising.

Others instrumental in the success of the picture are Harry T. Jenkins, the producing director. Donald Crisp has given sagacious treatment to the directorial phase, while those in the cast who portions include are Harrison Ford, Helen Jerome Eddy, Jack Mulhall, Walter Hiers, Julianne Johnston, Emily Chiches ter and Millington.

While in no way of a spectacular nature, "Miss Hobbes" should prove beneficial to theatre box offices. It is a clean cut and airily lighted comedy-drama of a diverting nature.

SYNOPSIS: Miss Hobbes, a man-hater and faddist, inherits a large estate. She is devoted to her hobbies, such as ridiculous smocks, futuristic art, vegetarianism, and barefoot dancing in the dewy grass at daybreak. She succeeds in deserting Reulah Hackett to desert her husband and Milli cent Farley to break her engagement to George Jessup so that both may take up her fads and ideas. Hackett and Jessup appeal to friend, Wolf Kingscari, who falls in love at the first sight of Reulah. The two get married, but Reulah comes to his house with heart trouble he is enabled to meet her often, while the same time she poses as his wife. After her acquaintance with him causes her to yield to normal ideas and sends Mrs. Hackett and Miss Farley back to their husband and sweetheart, respectively. Kingscari then explains that his heart trouble was only love at first sight.

Directed by Denison Clift.
Published in June.

OPINION: Pulsating with dramatic incident, "The Iron Heart" tells an interesting story of a woman's fight against big interests in the steel industry. Madlaine Traverse has the role of the independent mill owner and with the aid of George MacDaniel, Edwin Booth Tilton and Melbourne McDowell successes in the rather conventional plot in a manner that makes fair screen entertainment. The scenes taken around a steel mill will prove particularly entertaining and director Clift has gone to considerable pains to secure the proper setting for his story.

The one weakness of the picture seemed to be in the handling of the mob scenes. Long shots were made of men at work, suddenly dropping their tools and running off at the blowing of a whistle. The story works up to a fine climax, however, where the loyal mill hands make a stand and take out the shipment of steel in the face of the "trust's" hired thugs.

J. C. W. J.

MADLEINE TRAVERSE
In "The Iron Heart," assisted by George MacDaniel (Fox).

As a tie-up exhibitors should not overlook the opportunity to get the local overall clubs out to advertise the picture. Warner appears in overalls; in the role of type of characters. Madlaine Traverse in a splendid message both for the worker and the employer. Bill it as a "drama of the man in overalls."

OPINION: Timothy Webb's father dies and leaves him $100. He obtains work in the Webb shops, and there makes the acquaintance of a socialist, Nicholas Schunn. Schunn has inveigled an heiress into contributing $50,000 to the "cause." Timothy shows the "reds" in their true light and saves the heiress from another $50,000 loss as well as rescuing his father's factory from complete annihilation. He settles a strike at the plant in a manner most satisfactory by throwing out the agitators and winning the admiration of the loyal workers. The story has the usual happy ending.

H. B. Warner in UNCHARTERED CHANNELS

Six-part drama; Robertson-Cole.
Directed by Henry King.
Published in June.

OPINION: Labor unrest is a timely subject and as "Unchartered Channels" deals with strikes, "reds" and labor conditions, it should be advertised as a tax-saver this time of year. The Jesse H. Hampton production, however, is more of a satire on the efforts of a W. W. W. to disrupt business and the subject is treated in a light vein all the way through, in character delineation, subtitles and the final running of the "reds."

Warner gives his usual careful and pleasing character study, this time of a youth whose father has died and left him practically penniless, so that he is compelled to earn his own living. He does overalls and while working in his father's picture studio breaks up a gang of parlor agitators who invade the works. There is a stirring fight in the last reel and Director King's handling of the mob scenes is commendable.

Appearing opposite Mr. Warner is Katharyn Adams, as a wealthy society girl who is engaged to William MacDaniel and with the "reds" until she is shown the error of her ways; Sam de Grasse, as the leader of the radicals; Stu Hart as a "red" who injects a bit of wholesome comedy. The subtitles are written in a satirical vein and poke fun at the sanctimonious attitude of the picture industry. The hero, a town's hero, is so typical of the heroes of the screen that Mr. Clift has added realism to the screen delineation.

To the legion of Rogers' fans and others as well this picture will offer satisfactory entertainment. Though mostly of a serious nature, there are pleasantly humorous incidents throughout that serve their purpose well.

Will Rogers in
THE STRANGE BOARDER

Five-part drama; Goldwyn.
Directed by Clarence Badger.
Published in July.

OPINION: That same natural and unassuming attitude and truly genuine humanity that placed Will Rogers' name among those of prominence on the stage are the qualities that have made his work in the silent drama successful. His faculty of creating an atmosphere of attention is an art with him, and in "The Strange Boarder," as in previous productions, this compelling force makes for the success of the picture.

Because of the interesting situations in which he figures and because of his childlike mannerisms and lack of self-consciousness, the star's son, Jimmie Rogers, is a favorite. Many of the human touches of this picture are enacted by father and son and serve materially in strengthening the whole effect of the piece.

A writer of some note, Will Payne, is the author of The Strange Boarder. The character created by him is so typical of Rogers himself as to add realism to the screen delineation.

To the legion of Rogers' fans and others as well this picture will offer satisfactory entertainment. Though mostly of a serious nature, there are pleasantly humorous incidents throughout that serve their purpose well.

The players who make their characters seem almost real are Irene Rich, James Mason, Doris Pawn, Lionel Belmore, Jack Richardson, Sydney Deane and Louis J. Durham. Good production has been given the story.

SYNOPSIS: Sam Gardner mortgages his ranch to Oklahoma for $10,000 so that he may come to Chicago and fulfill a promise made to his dying wife that he will educate their son, Billy, in the East. Immediately on his arrival in the big city he is mulcted of his money and goes in search of a job, which he is unable to find. As a result he associates with a group of gamblers and, following the murder of one of them, he is accused and tried to jail. Before the trial commences, however, the real murderer, who has fled to Mexico, confesses to the crime in a telegram to the author. All Gardner is released and he and Jane Ingraham, who has become attached to Billy, decide to return to the ranch in Oklahoma.

Will Rogers'
ILLITERATE DIGEST

Short novelty; State Right.
Published weekly.

OPINION: Anyone who has heard Will Rogers on the stage or has read his daily comments in current news knows that there is a world of humor in his philosophical squibs. The "illiterate digest," a picture produced and directed by Marion H. Kohn Productions and distributed on the state right market, presents with each issue a number of the comedian's short and happy "take-offs" on various newspaper items.

Exhibitors should find this available novelty of paramount significance, for there is a laugh in every line and the comment is new and original. Rogers' spontaneity of expression undoubtedly is responsible for the success of his sayings. The comedian appears at both the beginning and the ending of this 400-foot reel.

Herbert Kaufman's
CONTENT

One-part feature; Select
Published weekly.

OPINION: "Content" is the second editorial by Herbert Kaufman, the noted critic of the "Century." It presents in a forceful manner the pertinent idea conveyed by the writer, that of the author's need to reveal his worldly possessions and should not be wishing continually for what the other fellow has.

This weekly should prove itself to be of considerable worth to exhibitors. As presented, the editorial, in pictorial form, is more than enlightening—it appears in an interesting manner, having both acting and story value as well.

New Scenarioist for Constance Talmadge

The initial series of Constance Talmadge productions having been completed for First National Exhibitors' Guild, Joseph M. Schenk has signed Dorothy Farquah to do the scenario work on the forthcoming pictures. Roy Newall will write the scenarios.

The first six subjects were John Emerson and Anita Loos productions and were directed by David Kirkland. "Good Intentions" will be a silent drama, and will be released in both a silent and a talkie version, with the latter depending on a change in the studio plans. The six pictures scheduled for Miss Talmadge in 1921 are: 'Time and the Conqueror'; "A Woman's Intuition"; "Three Ancestral Days"; "The New Woman"; "Romance's Royalty"; and "The Strange Love of Mr. Verybody."
Walsh Is Prepared to Begin Filming
His Second Picture For Mayflower

R. A. Walsh has completed preliminary work for his second independent production which will be presented by Mayflower Photopl oy Corporation through First National Exhibitor's Circuit. Actual production will start immediately.

The producer's initial subject, "The Deep Purple," has been published.

Details concerning the new Walsh feature are being withheld for the present. It is estimated, however, that the theme and treatment will be marked by a radical departure from that of "The Deep Purple." The continuity was prepared by Director Walsh in collaboration with Earle Browne. The cast, it is said, contains a number of prominent players.

Scenes in Baltimore

A location expert attached to the

Walsh staff is now in Baltimore making arrangements for exterior settings. Immediately upon his return, the director, accompanied by a large company of players and technical experts, will entrain for the city where many of the film's most important scenes will be photographed.

Sidney A. Franklin has completed the screen version of the Robert W. Chambers novel, "Athalie," a Mayflower production to be distributed by First National. Director Franklin shortly will cut, edit and title it.

The cast of "Athalie" is a well-balanced all-star aggregation of players, re-recruited for the production because of their type and dramatic ability. Sylvia

Bremer plays the title role. Conrad

Nagel plays opposite Miss Bremer. Rosemary Thelby is said to do some of the best work of her career in "Athalie." Robert Cain plays the heavy. Cain appeared for several years on Broadway and has traveled with a number of dramatic road shows.

DeGrasse in Cast

Sam DeGrasse, who played the leading part in "Blind Husbands," and "The Devil's Pass-Key," has an important role in

"Athalie." Edward Martindel also plays one of the principal parts in the Franklin production for Mayflower.

The story of "Athalie" deals with a spiritualistic theme. The wave of attention created by the writing and lectures of Ella Wheeler Wilcox and Sir Oliver Lodge, the British scientist, who recently toured this country, makes the production timely in interest.

Actual work on the sixth and last

Allan Dwan production to be presented by the Mayflower Photopl oy Corporation through First National has been started. The personnel of the cast comprises actors and actresses of proven ability and some of the best known names in the film business.

Mary Thurman and Niles Welch will play the leading roles in the all-star cast. Joseph Dowling, who created the role of "The Miracle Man" in the famous George Loane Tucker production of that name presented by Mayflower figures prominently in the action, as does Frank Campeau. Others in the cast are George Hackathorn, Stanton Williams, who played in "Eyes of Youth," and Eugenie Besserer, who appeared in Dwan's "The Scoffer."

Premiere of "Miss Hobbs"

Enthusiastically Received

Wanda Hawley's initial Realart production, "Miss Hobbs," was enthusiastically received at its premiere showing at Sid Grauman's million-dollar theatre in Los Angeles. The picture was published in the middle of this month.

Realart managers declare that the picture will have played in every city of 10,000 population within thirty days after publication.

Following a showing at his theatre,

Mr. Grauman wrote to J. S. Woody, general manager of Realart, that "Miss Hobbs" was as successful as anything, the superior to anything of a similar theme.

Eugene O'Brien To Stay
With Selznick Company

Eugene O'Brien, contrary to recent reports, will remain with Selznick Pictures Corporation, the termination date of his contract having been extended to April 27, 19.

In making this announcement, Myron Selznick, president of the corporation, declared that at no time had the star considered concluding his association with the company.

"Although it has been common knowledge that various producers have been bidding for the services of Mr. O'Brien," declared Mr.

Selznick, "the extension of the contract is the logical outcome of the unusual facilities of our organization.

"All of the O'Brien-Selznick productions have been successful because we have neither spared expense nor labor in the making, from the purchase of stories to the perfecting of the last mechanical detail. Mr. O'Brien's recent decision was not inspired by sentiment. To the contrary, his relations with Selznick Pictures have been the pleasantest of all, and hence but that is not the main reason why the relations are to be continued.

Mr. O'Brien is remaining with the company solely because of the success he has achieved as a Selznick star.

Mr. O'Brien first became a star under the Selznick banner. His initial stellar appearance was in

"The Perfect Lover," a Selznick picture that is said to have created a sensation. Following "The Perfect Lover" came "Sealed

Hearts," justifying the high promises held out by its predecessor.

Mr. O'Brien's third Selznick picture, "The Broken Melody," was heralded as another bull's eye success. His recent publication was

"A Fool and His Money."

By Harry E. Nichols

DETROIT, MICH., JUNE 8, 1920.

The many friends of Ralph Quive will be glad to learn that he is rapidly improving in health and will be back in the old swivel chair at the local RealArt Exchange in a couple of weeks.

ROY Aten of the local Universal Exchange and Yo Scribe journeyed through the clouds in a couple of Canadian planes piloted by Harry E. Slater and R. B. Woolfson. The object of the flight was to take close-up pictures of the actual operation of the stunt employed by the local Universal Exchange in exploiting "The Great Air Robbery."

R. S. Shraider, central western division manager for Pathé, dropped in to visit the local Pathé Exchange this week. Mr. Shraider will leave for Chicago in a few days.

William C. Guensche, manager of the Fine Arts exchange, has finished plans to enlarge his theatre and will install a large organ of the very latest type.

A. Levine, manager of the Globe, reports that his house is doing exceptionally good business, which speaks well for the able showmanship of Mr. Levine. The Globe was formerly known as one of Detroit's "lemons" before Warren & Cohen Circuit took it over. By the way, Mr. Levine—who is an uncle of Sid Chaplin—told of a recent visit made by the comedian and his wife.

Tom McEvoy of Indianapolis was a caller in the city selling "The Mother and the Law."

The Family theatre, one of the Harris Amusement Company houses and still under the management of E. E. Kirchner, who has had charge of this house eleven years, is undergoing extensive alterations.

WANTED: Information that will lead to the recovery of several pink elephants that were seen about 2 a.m. by a local exhibitor and exchange man. Address Ed. Murphy or Bill Hayes.

The smiling face of James McCabe, one of the pioneer exhibitors of Michigan, was seen in Realart's office last week. Mr. McCabe stated that business was fine at the Broadway in Mt. Pleasant.

FRANK PRESTON, manager of the Highland Park theatre, will leave the last of this month on a two weeks' vacation, making the Atlantic City convention of the Rotary Club, of which he is a member.

Walter (Duke) Richards, general manager of the Duplex and Rosedale theatres, advises us that plans are under way to enlarge the Rosedale theatre. Maybe you never knew it but Duke used to be some lecturer of note in his time.

One of the old-timers, none other than the former manager of the Orpheum Circuit, William D. Ascough is now managing the Regent, one of the beautiful suburban houses owned by the Miles Circuit. William has just returned from a trip through Colorado and Kansas.

William F. Klett, who owns the Rosedale and Duplex theatres, was seen at the Duplex one night last week. This house is a two-in-one theatre and for the summer months, one half of the house will be closed with the exception of Saturday and Sunday, when both auditoriums will operate. Mr. Klett advised us that he will consolidate the house early in the fall, making one large theatre.

Walter F. Schaefer, son of Charles J. Schaefer of Chicago, is now manager of the John H. Kunsky Garden theatre, Detroit.

Hennyssy and Moross have purchased the rights for Michigan of "His Paiana Girl," featuring Billie Rhodes, for release June 1st.

One runs into Chicago exhibitors on every corner. A. Ruttenberg, brother of N. Ruttenberg at Ascher's Milford theatre in Chicago, is now manager of the Universal Grand Circuit theatre in Detroit. He is running "Clytie," and is putting it over in great shape and why shouldn't he? He comes from a family of showmen. He is closely related to F. F. Rice, who runs the Columbus in Chicago.

Howard O. Pierce, director of publicity for the John H. Kunsky Enterprises, will leave for a two weeks' vacation at Colorado Springs the latter part of the month.

The Academie theatre will open June 15 under the ownership of M. Korns, who will close the Oakland. The seating capacity of the Academie is 750 and cost, it is said, $40,000. A Typhoon system has been installed and the policy of the house will be a daily change of program.

Jay Recher, chief cameraman for the Submarine Film Corporation, found Cuba to his liking. It must have agreed with him since he put on about fifteen pounds (not liquid measure).

G. W. Sampson, branch manager of the local Pathé exchange reports that the second series of Harold Lloyd special comedies, have been sold to Fox's Washington theatre. J. O. Brooks, feature salesman, has been promoted to the position of assistant manager. The credit of selling the Washington theatre the Lloyd's goes to Harry Zapp, Pathé's special short subject salesman.

Ralph Meverson, special field representative for Hallmark, was at the local exchange a few days, introducing the new manager, George W. Thompson, formerly of New York City, Ralph left for Cleveland, where he will reorganize the Cleveland office.

C. S. Williams, who has been connected with the Gardner interests at Buffalo for a number of years, has resigned to take charge of the Comedianty Exchange, which will be located at 49 Swan street, Buffalo. Frank D. Drew of the local Comedianty Exchange, has been appointed 'district' manager over the Toronto, Buffalo and Detroit offices of Special Pictures Corporation.

George Wiber of Pontiac was a visitor in Detroit last week and reports that ground has been broken for their new theatres, the Orpheum and Strand, and that construction of same is going ahead rapidly. The Orpheum, which will be a vaudeville house and will have a seating capacity of 1,500, is estimated to cost $175,000. The Strand, which will show pictures exclusively, will seat 1,200, and will cost $100,000. The Kleist Amusement Enterprises, Inc., also operate the Oakland, Howland, Central and Eagle theatres.

Frank Joslin, owner of the Empress at Belding, Mich., was in Detroit and stated he was planning to enlarge his theatre to seat 300 more people, and will join a new vaudeville circuit that will give him a vaudeville program two nights a week.

James C. Ritter, president of the M. M. P. E. A., and who is manager-director of the Rialto and Boulevard theatres, stated plans have been completed and a site purchased on Cadillac avenue to build a fifteen-hundred seat house, to cost $200,000.
POWER'S PROJECTORS

OFFICES OF Universal Film Manufacturing Company
Pacific Coast Studios
Universal City, California

February 11, 1920

Nicholas Power Company
90 Gold street
New York, N. Y.

Gentlemen:

We are using your projectors exclusively, ten in number, and they are giving us excellent results. Our work is very exacting, more so, in fact, than in any studio I know of. We must have perfect projection in order to judge photography and printing; poor projection would be worse than nothing. In addition, owing to the large number of companies at work, the machines are used constantly all day long, and a large part of the night—a severe strain that only mechanical perfection can meet.

The fact that we are using Power's Cameragraphs exclusively speaks for itself.

Yours very truly

Slam Bang Jim, with William Russell.—A good picture. Starts out with a wedding in New York and finishes in the wilds of Arizona. It's a breezy comedy-drama that you will find your patrons will like. Francella Billington plays female lead. It is a reissue of Snap Judgment, which was released in November, 1917.—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield theatre, 2944 Madison St., Chicago, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Thirtieth Piece of Silver, with Margaret Fisher.—A good business. One reel business too.—B. Mendel, Palace theatre, Galveston, Tex.—General patronage.

Six Feet Four, with William Russell.—Good business on rainy day. Almost as good on return six weeks later.—C. D. Howland, Forrest theatre, Portsmouth, O.—Neighborhood patronage.

Slam Bang Jim, with William Russell.—Western comedy-drama. Pulling good for these warm days.—A. Schriever, Blackstone theatre, Detroit, Mich.—Transit patronage.

First National

Passions Playground, with Katherine MacDonald.—Picture is a good one. Passions peak well in general of production. Settings excellent. Cast good. Photography good. Drawing good at each performance.—Madison theatre, Detroit, Mich.—Downtown patronage.

The Fighting Shepherdess, with Anita Stewart.—Very good picture, and well received. Poor business. Storm started just before show.—J. P. Woodward, Utah theatre, Garfield, Utah.—Neighborhood patronage.

In Search of a Sinner, with Constance Talmadge.—I always feel confident when the Talmadge girls are on my screen. This one was a dandy.—Jack Cairns, Brooklyn theatre, Detroit, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Woman Gives, with Norma Talmadge.—A good subject. Powerful drawing card, but not as good as She Loves and Lies, last of her subjects with Select.—Fred Cosman, Electric theatre, St. Joseph, Mo.

The River's End, a Marshall Neelan production.—Book it and boost it. Boost your price with it. Drew well for two days, and could have played it longer.—Oscar Tatro, Lyric theatre, Rugby, N. D.

Polly of the Storm Country, with Mildred Harris and Chaplin.—One of the best pictures I have played in a long time. Drew big house.—Eugene Saunders, Palace theatre, Havard, Ill.—General patronage.

The Woman Gives, with Norma Talmadge.—This feature far from being her best, but people wanted Norma and came to see her. Big business one day. Good the next. A big drawing card.—Mrs. J. A. Dostal, Ideal theatre, Omaha, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Virtuous Vamp, with Constance Talmadge.—We always get a crowd on either of the Talmadge girls. This is a splendid picture.—Frank Ober, Boynton theatre, Boynton, Okla.—General patronage.

The River's End, a Marshall Neelan production.—Say, boy! Give us more like this and we will all be rich.—S. A. Hayman, Lyda theatre, Grand Island, Neb.

The Love Expert, with Constance Talmadge.—Another dandy picture that gets the business.—Peter Krauth, Opera House, Denison, 1a.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Inferior Sex, with Mildred Harris.—Best work of this star. I know, as we ran all she ever made. This star is growing to be one of the few but big pullers.

The Rivendell, or the Marshworn Neelan production.—Say, boy! Give us more like this and we will all be rich.—S. A. Hayman, Lyda theatre, Grand Island, Neb.

The Love Expert, with Constance Talmadge.—This was one of the funniest as well as one of the best pictures in which Miss Talmadge has appeared in. No mistake will be made in booking this picture, as it is sure to please.—William Noble, Empress theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla.—General patronage.

The Inferior Sex, with Mildred Harris.—Best work of this star. I know, as we ran all she ever made. This star is growing to be one of the few but big pullers.

The Woman Gives, with Norma Talmadge.—This feature far from being her best, but people wanted Norma and came to see her. Big business one day. Good the next. A big drawing card.—Mrs. J. A. Dostal, Ideal theatre, Omaha, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Twilight Baby, a Henry Lehrman production.—Good comedy. Probably too long. Too reels long enough for laughs.—Alvin S. Frank, Jewel theatre, Lafayette, Colo.—Neighborhood patronage.

To God's Country, with Nell Shipman.—A fine picture. Book it and boost it. Use the dog tracks to advertise it. You can't go wrong.—Oscar Tatro, Lyric theatre, Rugby, N. D.

The Greatest Question, a D. W. Griffith production.—Griffith trying to get by on past reputation. This picture the bomb. They walked out on it. One patron said, "If this is the class of pictures you are showing you needn't expect me again."—Archibald & Carruthers, Orpheum theatre, Pocatello, Idaho.—Transit patronage.

In Old Kentucky, with Anita Stewart.—One of the best features we have exhibited. Bad weather both nights.—Harold C. Co., Odeon theatre, Hardin, Mo.—General patronage.

In Search of a Sinner, with Constance Talmadge.—Very satisfying picture and we did a nice business.—John H. Ashton, Columbia theatre, Provo, Utah.—Neighborhood patronage.

In Old Kentucky, with Anita Stewart.—It keyed it two weeks. Too long for small houses. Six reels would tell the whole story.—Jack Cairns, Brooklyn theatre, Detroit, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

Two Weeks, with Constance Talmadge.—Fair.—S. J. Osika, Burlcy theatre, Burley, Idaho.—General patronage.

Mary Regan, with Anita Stewart.—A good picture, but Anita Stewart doesn't make any money here.—Bert Norton, Kozy theatre, Eureka, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

In Search of a Sinner, with Constance Talmadge.—Best yet of this star, and she surely gets the people in. For plays of this kind she cannot be excelled. Steadily gaining in popularity with plays of this type. Big business one night. Good the second.—Mrs. J. A. Dostal, Ideal theatre, Omaha, Nebr.

The Turning Point, with Katherine MacDonald.—A fair picture. Wonder-Tom Mix invades the leading lady's dressing room in "The Terror" (Fox)

The Splendid Sin, with Madeline Traverse: Good photography and plot. A little too deep for average audience. Also suggestive.—L. G. Sewing, Crown theatre, Galumet, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

Tim Pan Alley, with Albert Ray and Elmon Fair: Fair picture and fair business.—I. C. Lamontette, American theatre, Breckenridge, Tex.—General patronage.

The speed Maniac, with Tom Mix: This is the first Mix picture we have run. All our patrons were well pleased and Tom Mix will hold a place along with other Western stars.—Frank Ober, Boynton theatre, Boynton, Okla.—General patronage.

Fox

Wings of the Morning, with William Farnum: A very good Farnum picture. Drew two good houses, and pleased everyone.—W. H. Creal, Suburban theatre, Omaha, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

Heart Strings, with William Farnum: A satisfied audience viewed this one. A sympathetic drama, but not suited to the star. Why do they put Farnum in such plays?—G. N. Armstrong, Y. M. C. A. theatre, Rose Lake, Idaho.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Manhattan Knight, with George Walsh: Very good and pleased.—Peter Krauth, Opera House, Denison, la.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Lincoln Highwayman, with William Russell: Very good Western. Lots of action and should please.—A. L. Hepp, Idyl Hour theatre, Greeley, Nebr.

The Last of the Duanes, with William Farnum: Fine picture, and went over big for this time of the year. It pleased them here. I am sure it will please them for you.—Oscar Troyer, Lyric theatre, Rugby, N. D.

The Lone Star Ranger, with William Farnum: A good one and a good drawing card.—J. L. Meyers, Liberty theatre, Ivesdale, Ill.—Small-town patronage.

Evangelie, with Miriam Cooper: A very good picture. Well played. Patrons pleased.—Fred Paulick, Paulick theatre, Muscola, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Speed Maniac, with Tom Mix: This is the first Mix picture we have run. All our patrons were well pleased and Tom Mix will hold a place along with other Western stars.—Frank Ober, Boynton theatre, Boynton, Okla.—General patronage.

The Splendid Sin, with Madeline Traverse: A picture not fit to show in a roadhouse. Traverse is fine if Fox will keep her out of such obscene stuff. Lay off this one.—A. R. Bird, Opera House, Arlington, la.

Evangelie, with Miriam Cooper: Very good picture for those who have read the story. Especially good for school children.—Frank Ober, Boynton theatre, Boynton, Okla.—General patronage.

The Lone Star Ranger, with William Farnum: Played to capacity. One of the best, and most liked pictures I ever showed. Pleased 100%.—Harry Hobolth, Maxine theatre, Emjay City, Mich.—Small-town patronage.

Wings of the Morning, with William Farnum: Picture very good. Pleased patrons. If you are not running Farnum's latest stuff you better get in on it and raise your prices.—Joseph Heint, Empress theatre, Verdiure, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

Wolves of the Night, with William Farnum: A great show that pleased all who came, but cannot get proper advertising on Fox specials. This one only drew fair.—Rex theatre, Aurora, Minn.—Small-town patronage.

Sacred Silence, with William Russell: Great. Not a kick on this one. Book and boost it.—M. H. Goodrich, Opera House, Piper City, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Goldwyn

Dangerous Days, with a special cast: A wonderful picture, and drew well. It went over big and can't be praised too highly.—Henry C. Stearns, Kings Inn theatre, Kingsville, Tex.—General patronage.

The Strange Boarder, with Will Rogers: Pleased. Good story and Rogers' personality gets over.—P. G. Estee, Fad theatre, Brookings, S. D.

Shadows, with Geraldine Farrar: Fair program. Nothing to go wild over.—A. L. Hepp, Idylhour theatre, Greeley, Nebr.

Strictly Confidential, with Madge Kennedy: Goldwyn has given Madge Kennedy an excellent starring vehicle in this. It is one picture that you can show and then meet your patrons at the door as they leave the theatre. They'll tell you it's a good one without your asking.—Harry M. Palmer, Liberty theatre, Wash- ington, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

One Week of Life, with Pauline Frederick: This picture was well liked. A number of good comments. Photography good and plot well balanced.—Jno. J. Saunders, Cheney theatre, Cheney, Kans.—Neighborhood patronage.
Hodkinson

The Deadlier Sex, with Blanche Sweet. — Pretty good picture. Fair business. — Law, American theatre, Breckenridge, Tex. — General patronage.

Desert Gold, with E. K. Lincoln. — A beautiful story, but oh, ye gods, the title! So dark you must guess every one of them. Why do the producers stick on so much tinsel as to completely spoil the picture? As I write this my patrons are complaining. — Jack Cairns, Brooklyn theatre, Detroit, Mich. — Neighborhood patronage.

The Lone Wolf’s Daughter, with Louise Glaum. — A good interesting melodrama and it surely pleased. Miss Glaum is a world beauty yet. Has not the looks, but sure is an actress. Good business one day. Fair the second. — Mrs. J. A. Dostal, Ideal theatre, Omaha, Nebr. — Neighborhood patronage.

The Lone Wolf’s Daughter, with Louise Glaum. — Good picture. My only criticism of Hodkinson is they pay no attention to the story. A good paper on their pictures. Pathe is another offender in this regard. First National and Universal are the only firms that give exploitation careful study on every picture. Hodkinson make class A pictures, but his paper is about class D. — Alvin S. Frank, Jewel theatre, Lafayette, Colo. — Neighborhood patronage.

The Sagebrushers, with Noah Berry. — Keep away from this if you eat to a discriminating audience. Fell flat. Flat-ter than a tire. — Mrs. J. A. Dostal, Ideal theatre, Omaha, Nebr. — Neighborhood patronage.

The Joyous Liar, with J. Warren Kerrigan. — Good. All his shows are good. — Jack Cairns, Brooklyn theatre, Detroit, Mich. — Neighborhood patronage.

Metro

Should a Woman Tell? with Alice Lake. — One of the best pictures we have ever had. Alice Lake is great. — M. Kuhns, Gibson theatre, Gibson, N. M. — Mining camp patronage.

Shore Acres, with Alice Lake. — It satisfied my patrons and it kept the box office busy. They will stop and tell you that this is a good one when passing out. I had many a complimentary remark on it. Story is human and heart appealing. I noticed a great many elderly people the two days we showed it. One man in particular who has not been in the theatre since Christmas. Direction perfect and acting real. Book it and don’t be afraid to boost it. It is a play that will never grow old. — Charles H. Ryan, Gar-field theatre, Chicago, Ill. — Neighborhood patronage.

Fair and Warmer, with May Allison. — The best laugh my patrons ever had. Don’t be afraid to boost it as one of the best comedies you ever had. — A. L. Hepp, Idylhour theatre, Greeley, Nebr.

Pals First, with Harold Lockwood. — Above the average. — J. F. Alker, Mahlon theatre, Mahlon, Wash.

The Heart of a Child, with Nazimova. — Not one of her best, but always do a good business with this star. — T. M. Harvey. Unique theatre, El Paso, Tex.

The Right of Way, with Bert Lytell. — Good picture, but failed to draw. — Joseph Winninger, Appleton theatre, Appleton, Wis.

Hitting the High Spots, with Bert Lytell. — Excellent program picture. You can’t go wrong on Lytell. — R. A. Botts, Grand theatre, Carrington, N. D. — Small town patronage.

Stronger Than Death, with Nazimova. — Nazimova is always good, and this is no exception. — L. M. Kuhns, Gibson theatre, Gibson, N. M. — Mining camp patronage.

Lombardi Ltd, with Bert Lytell. — Pleased nearly everyone. Very fine dress parade and should be on the ladies. — A. L. Hepp, Idylhour theatre, Greeley, Nebr.

Paramount Arcaft

Let’s Get a Divorce, with Billie Burke. — A dandy program picture. Pleased a good audience. — E. D. Luna, Hubert theatre, Hubert, Okla. — Neighborhood patronage.

Pettigrew’s Girl, with Ethel Clayton. — A fine picture. Pleased all. — A. N. Miles, Eminence theatre, Eminence, Ky.

Realart is sorry it can’t tell you NOW about the new one.
The war made the world safe for democracy.

Realtar makes your house safe for profits.

False Faces, with Henry B. Walthall. -War stuff. Why will they make an exhibitor take them. Would have been a wonderful picture two years ago. -Alvin S. Frank, Jewel theatre, Lafayette, Colo.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Romance of Happy Valley, a D. W. Griffith production.—Griffith not good here. Never could get a crowd.—Jean Dagle, Liberty theatre, Murphy-doro, Ill.

Putting It Over, with Bryant Washburn.—A good picture. Washburn gets the crowds in for —Peters & Johnson, Liberty theatre, Milligan, N.C.—Small town patronage.

The Misleading Widow, with Billie Burke.—This is good. It makes them chuckle. Business satisfactory.—John Shafter, Princess theatre, Donora, Pa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Double Speed, with Wallace Reid.—This is the kind they pay real money to see.—W. H. Mart, Strand theatre, Grinnell, la.—College town patronage.

The Poppy Girl's Husband, with William S. Hart.—Hart never does what he starts up with.—Mr. Mal, one thinks of Broncho Billy. No action in this, and action is what people want. No one cares for this sob stuff. However, Hart does good acting here.—Cowan Oldham, Dixie, theatre, McMinville, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Dark Star, with Marion Davies.—Comparisons with other R. P. specials I could not put over any of them as specials. Average business.—W. L. Uglow, Crystal theatre, Burlington, Wis.—General patronage.

His Wife's Friend, with Dorothy Dalton.—Good picture. Good business.—J. C. Lamonetter, American theatre, Breckenridge, Tex.—General patronage.

Little Women, with a special cast.—The bunk. Why do they call a picture like this a special? The exhibitor is bun good and he unwittingly honeys his patronage. What does the producer care? He collects his rentals in advance. Paramount is not the only offender. A lot of them are over-advertising weak pictures. -Alvin S. Frank, Jewel theatre, Lafayette, Colo.—Neighborhood patronage.

Wanted, a Husband, with Billie Burke.—Very good picture of Billie. Good business.—J. C. Lamonetter, American theatre, Breckenridge, Tex.—General patronage.

L'Apache, with Dorothy Dalton.—Good picture. Miss Dalton well liked in this neighborhood.—J. C. Lamonetter, American theatre, Breckenridge, Tex.—General patronage.

Hay Foot, Straw Foot, with Charles Ray.—Ray's pictures are always pleasing. The star's acting here is reflected in the faces of the audience as they leave. —Beth Drew Gish, Pastime theatre, Dcean, Wis.—High class patronage.

Out of a Clear Sky, with Marguerite Clark.—Clark is cast in the kind of role to which she is suited in this film. If you played The Miracle Man it will be well if you also bill Thomas Meighan, as he does fine work. This is the first good Marguerite Clark picture we have had in many months. —W. D. Palmer, Liberty theatre, Washington, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

Little Miss Hoover, with Marguerite Clark.—Girls must work out on war stuff.—Advin S. Frank, Jewel theatre, Lafayette, Colo.—Neighborhood patronage.

In Mizzoura, with Robert Warwick.—Picture only fair and business still less.—John Hafner, Princess theatre, Donora, Pa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Capt. King, with Walter Pickford.—Poor. Am glad that I am done with the Pickford stuff.—A. R. Bird, Opera House, Arlington, la.

Scarlet Days, a D. W. Griffith production.—Well picture. Well liked.—J. C. Lamonetter, American theatre, Breckenridge, Tex.—General patronage.

L'Apache, with Dorothy Dalton.—Not the type of Dorothy. Acting very good, but story somewhat repulsive.—W. H. Crael, Suburban theatre, Omaha, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

More Deadly Than the Male, with Ethel Clayton.—Very good picture. Good business.—J. C. Lamonetter, American theatre, Breckenridge, Tex.—General patronage.

The Valley of Giants, with Wallace Reid.—A very good outdoor picture. Title not a drawing card. Business poor.—John Hafner, Princess theatre, Donora, Pa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Pathe

Other Men's Shoes, an Edgar Lewis production. —One of the best pictures ever played here. Greatly boosted. Good business.—J. C. Lamonetter, American theatre, Breckenridge, Tex.—General patronage.

Other Men's Shoes, an Edgar Lewis production.—Big picture. Well liked by all.—Eugene Saunders, Palace theatre, Harvard, Ill.—General patronage.

Twin Pawns, with Mae Murray.—This is a real picture. Play it and see.—L. B. Mills, Auditorium theatre, Tilden, Nebr.—General patronage.

The Gay Old Dog, with John Cumber-land.—A picture and that is all. Didn't please them at all. How does John Cumber-land please you? —Oscar Troyer, Lyric theatre, Rugio, N. D.

The Moonshine Trail, with a special cast.—Best picture I ever saw. Shows where a drinker's sin is to drink before his children.—C. E. McClain, Liberty theatre, Tryon, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

Fighting Cressy, with Blanche Sweet.—Good Western. Did fairly good business for these days.—T. M. Harvey, Union theatre, Watertown, Minn.—General patronage.

A Virtuous Model, with Dolores Cas-sinelli.—Fairly good picture.—Verner Hicks, Family theatre, Marion, Ill.—General patronage.

OTHER MEN'S SHOES, an Edgar Lewis production. —I did not see the picture previously, but I had all sorts of favorable comments on it, and no unfavorable ones. Satisfied patrons is the best test, after all. -Alvin S. Frank, Jewel theatre, Lafayette, Colo.

Tarnished Reputations, with Dolores Cas-sinelli.—Good picture, and good photography, but no business.—J. C. Lamon-etter, American theatre, Breckenridge, Tex.—General patronage.

Realart

The Fear Market, with Alice Brady.—Our experience with Realart pictures so far has not a lot of people are able to keep up the standard they now maintain no one need fear to book them. —Hardin Ent. Co., Odeon theatre, Hardin, Mont.—General patronage.

Anne of Green Gables, with Mary Miles Minter.—Minter always draws and pleases. Played matinee, inviting big graduating class as guests, and had big business following two nights.—T. G. Estee, Fad theatre, Brookings, S. D.

The Mystery of the Yellow Room, with a special cast.—Nothing to it.—T. M. Dandridge, Queen theatre, Durant, Okla.—General patronage.

Nurse Marjorie, with Mary Miles Minter.—A clever comedy-drama that pleased satisfactorily to our patrons.—H. V. Friedrich, Majestic theatre, Sheboygan, Wis.—Downtown patronage.

JUDY OF ROGUE'S HARBOR, with Mary Miles Minter.—O, the wonderful joy it has to pictures please as this one did. Wonderful, doubt the star's best work. Pleased 100% of the people and did big business for two days. —P. M. Dandridge, Queen theatre, Durant, Okla.—General patronage.

The Fear Market, with Alice Brady.—Star does not draw for us, and story too weak to be used.—G. Estee, Fad theatre, Brookings, S. D.

The Stolen Kiss, with Constance Bin-ney.—This is a good picture and Realart's comedy lately is popular here.—Frank Ober, Boynton theatre, Boynton, Okla.—General patronage.

Anne of Green Gables, with Mary Miles Minter.—Exceptionally good picture and pleased a large audience.—Peter Kraush, Opera House, Des Moines, la.—Neighborhood patronage.

Republic

Twelve-Ten, with Marie Doro.—Good picture. Wonderful business.—J. C.
DORIS KEANE IN A SCENE FROM "ROMANCE"

One of the dramatic bits from the United Artists feature which was produced under the direction of Chet Withey Lamonette, American theatre, Breckenridge, Tex.—General patronage.

The Amazing Woman, with Ruth Clifford.—Cannot help it, but this did please our patrons. Ruth Clifford's work is lovable. Good business for the one day. Run it as it will make you money.—Mrs. J. A. Dostal, Ideal theatre, Omaha, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Beloved Blackmailer, with Carlyle Blackwell.—Lots of action and quite a bit of comedy. All well pleased, although it did not draw extra well.—S. B. Broek, Electric theatre, Hagerman, N. M.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Love Cheat, with June Caprice.—Rather tame, but a good, clean picture. Could have been put in three reels.—R. H. Hess, Marion theatre, Edna, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

Robertson-Cole

The Wonder Man, with Georges Petipier.—Two days' business exceeded any past week's business. Patrons showered me with compliments as they passed out. Hot weather had no effect on this feature. Will stand increased admission prices. Wonderful picture.—J. S. Fushenas, Bijou theatre, Jackson, Mich.—General patronage.

Seeing It Through, with ZaSu Pitts.—Very poor picture. Why don't they give star something to show her ability? Keep away from this one.—T. E. Walton, National theatre, New Bedford, Mass.—Neighborhood patronage.

All-of-a-Sudden Norma, with Bessie Barriscale.—A very good picture.—Hardin Ent. Co., Odeon theatre, Hardin, Mo.—General patronage.

The Beloved Chester, with Lew Cody.—Fine business only. Drawing power of the picture over-rated.—T. M. Harvey, Unique theatre, El Paso, Tex.

Poor Relations, with ZaSu Pitts.—Good picture and pleased.—Peter Krauth, Denison theatre, Denison, Ia.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Dragon Painter, with Susie Haya- kawa.—This star has a strong following in this city. This picture below standard.—W. L. Uglow, Crystal theatre, Burlington, Wis.—General patronage.

The Third Generation, with Betty Blythe.—Good story, and splendid direction. Poor business. Star unknown in this section.—T. E. Walton, National theatre, New Bedford, Mass.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Heart of Juanita, with Beatrice Michelen.—A Western picture and a bit rough.—Peter Krauth, Opera House, Denison, Ia.—Neighborhood patronage.

Select

She Loves and Lies, with Norma Talmadge.—The Talmadge girls are our best bet. The majority of them being good stories. They make a combination that is hard to beat.—S. L. Stokes, Princess theatre, Baird, Tex.—Small town patronage.

A Perfect Lover, with Eugene O'Brien.—A good average picture.—H. H. Billels, Pleasant Hour theatre, Pine Island, Minn.—Neighborhood patronage.

Woman and Wife, with Alice Brady.—Here is a good one, well acted and some beautiful scenes. Many said it was better than the book. Good crowd.—Jno. L. Saunders, Cheney theatre, Cheney, Kan.—Neighborhood patronage.

Cheating Cheaters, with Clara Kimball Young.—Her best picture with Select. Alan Dwan directed it.—Beth Drew Ghul, Pastime theatre, Delavan, Wis.—High class patronage.

Sealed Hearts, with Eugene O'Brien.—Lucille Stewart made me think of a diving coil. O'Brien had no chance to do anything under such handicap. Did good business with this star, but won't again. Fitfully poor.—Cowan Oldham, Dixie theatre, McMinnville, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

His Wife's Money, with Eugene O'Brien.—Fair program production.—C. C. Teas, Crystal theatre, Watertown, Minn.—Neighborhood patronage.

Youthful Folly, with Olive Thomas.—This is really a good comedy, as well as a dramatic subject. There are as many laughs as in a five-reel comedy. Good.

United Artists

When the Clouds Roll By, with Douglas Fairbanks.—Not any better than other Fairbanks.—C. C. Teas, Crystal theatre, Watertown, Minn.—Neighborhood patronage.

Down on the Farm, a Mack Sennett production.—Sure got the jack. It and Woman hold the record for business. Book it.—Charles Taylor, Best theatre, Colorado, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

Realart will speak next week in the Realart way—profits for the exhibitor.
When the Clouds Roll By, with Douglas Fairbanks. —Good enough for anybody. Did good business one day.—Jessup & Nagle, Dixie theatre, Clay Center, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Pollyanna, with Mary Pickford. —This is one of the best pictures we ever ran in our theatre. This star always gets us a crowd.—Frank Ober, Boynton theatre, Boynton, Okla.—General patronage.

Pollyanna, with Mary Pickford. —A good clean-cut picture for the whole family. A powerful drawing card in any theatre.—Fred Cosman, Electric theatre, St. Joseph, Mo.

Pollyanna, with Mary Pickford. —The best Mary Pickford ever did.—Picture went over good.—Mart Cole, Queen theatre, Richmond, Tex.—General patronage.

His Majesty, the American, with Douglas Fairbanks. —Here is where my judgment got the better of me. Poor picture, overworked and Fairbanks the biggest failure at the box office. Never, no never again.—Mrs. J. A. Dostal, Ideal theatre, Omaha, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

His Majesty, the American, with Douglas Fairbanks. —We have used all this star’s later pictures, but consider this the best.—Frank Ober, Boynton theatre, Boynton, Okla.—General patronage.

Universal

The Virgin of Stamboul, with Priscilla Dean. —Give us more pictures like The Virgin of Stamboul. This is a very small town and I have a very small house, but nevertheless, there is no picture of the caliber of The Virgin of Stamboul too big for me to play. May play a return engagement.—Earle W. Forsythe, Star theatre, Canonsburg, Pa.

Loot, with Ora Carew. —A good crook story well produced and very interesting. Please a good Sunday crowd.—W. H. Cravat, Suburban theatre, Omaha, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Great Air Robbery, with Ormer Locklear. —This is a good picture for its kind. I can’t put specials over to make anything on the house. Most of them are not any better than some program pictures.—Ethel M. Huber, Opera House, Camp Point, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Marked Men, with Harry Carey. —A picture. Harry is a good card. Always draws. Book this one. Not one dissenting word. All praise.—I. G. Sewing, Crown theatre, Calumet, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Great Air Robbery, with Ormer Locklear. —The picture disappointed all our patrons. Exhibitors should stay away from this one.—Preston Bros., Crescent theatre, Audubon, la.—Neighborhood patronage.

Bullet Proof, with Harry Carey. —Played to standing crowds and picture was highly complimented by hundreds of well-pleased patrons.—H. C. Stearns, Kings Inn theatre, Kingsville, Tex.—General patronage.

The Virgin of Stamboul, with Priscilla Dean. —Coloredly good picture which pleased. Good story coupled with spectacular features.—P. G. Estee, Fad theatre, Brookings, S. D.

Her Five-Foot Highness, with Edith Roberts. —Very pleasing. Title weak. Star unknown here, but picture took care of the usual good business.—Henry C. Stearns, Kings Inn theatre, Kingsville, Tex.—Small town patronage.

Bullet Proof, with Harry Carey. —Another good one. Can’t raise prices. The red deckers for us, and they leave pleased.—P. G. Estee, Fad theatre, Brookings, S. D.

A Little Brother of the Rich, with Frank Mayo. —Very good. This will please your high class business.—Frank Allen, Rose theatre, Byron, Ill.—Small town patronage.

The Great Air Robbery, with Ormer Locklear. —This picture will get the money. Stunt picture with a nice love story. Pleased all.—Harry Holohol, Maxine theatre, Imlay City, Mich.—Small town patronage.

The Triflers, with Edith Roberts. —A pleasing picture. Star not popular here.—Verner Hicks, Family theatre, Marion, III.—General patronage.

Blind Husbands, with Eric Von Stroheim. —Title is what gets the money on this. However, you will make mistakes if you raise prices.—Harry G. Green, Dixie theatre, McMinnville, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Right to Happiness, with Dorothy Phillips. —High price picture. Nothing to it. Lost money.—H. Damits, Dixie theatre, Winona, Miss.

Riders of the Law, with Harry Carey. —Another Carey picture that went over huge. Business is all stuff is all going and gets the business.—R. Ross Riley, Wigwam theatre, Oberlin, Kans.—Small town patronage.

Vitagraph

The Fortune Hunter, with Earle Williams. —Best subject in company ever produced. We enjoyed heavy business. Everybody spoke highly of the offering.—C. J. O’Neill, Shullsburg Amusement Co., Shullsburg, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Vengeance of Durand, with Alice Joyce. —Very good picture, but I played a picture of the same name two years ago and patrons got them mixed.

The exhibitor who is in business to grow, will love that Realart announcement of next week!
A NEW portrait of Wanda Hawley, whose first starring vehicle for Realart Pictures is “Miss Hobbs,” the story of a modern young woman with very advanced ideas, especially with regard to woman’s independence.

Thought it was the same one. Very poor business. Lost money.—T. E. Walton, National theatre, New Bedford, Mass.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Fighting Colleen, with Bessie Love.—A program feature that pleased a good audience.—Bert Norton, Kozy theatre, Eureka, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Sea Rider, with Harry Morey.—Poor. Pictures of this type we cannot make a cent with. Morey deserving of better pictures or I will be compelled to cancel his contract.—Mrs. J. A. Dostal, Ideal theatre, Omaha, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Garter Girl, with Corinne Griffith.—Pleasing and good business.—A. B. Mendel, Palace theatre, Galveston, Tex.—General patronage.

Shadows of the Past, with Anita Stewart.—My patrons liked this picture, and the star. Business better than average.—E. J. Degenhardt, Princess theatre, Mendoza, Ill.—Small town patronage.

When a Man Loves, with Earle Williams.—Very slow picture. Will do for matinee when you have only ladies, but not for men patrons.—T. E. Walton, National theatre, New Bedford, Mass.—Neighborhood patronage.

When Arizona Won, with Shorty Hamilton.—Fair picture. Good business Fri-day and Saturday.—T. E. Walton, National theatre, New Bedford, Mass.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Shepherd of the Hills, with a special cast.—Patrons failed to appreciate this production with exception of those who read the book.—E. E. Bonham, Bonham theatre, Prairie du Sac, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Finger of Justice, with Crane Wil-ber.—My patrons did not like it. Broke even on it on my best night, Saturday.—Alvin S. Frank, Jewel theatre, Lafayette, Colo.—Neighborhood patronage.

Custer’s Last Fight, with a special cast.—Positively the biggest drawing card I ever played at raised admission price.

THE WOMAN WE LOVE (Lesser), with Annette Kellerman.—Greatest attraction that ever played this house. Under-water stuff took audience by storm. Unani-mous opinion was “The best thing Annette Kellerman ever did.” Opened to packed houses.—E. D. Yost, Temple theatre, Santa Ana, Cal.

The Indians’ work through the school was a wonderful drawing medium on my poorest day of week.—F. H. Siem, Stanley theatre, Chicago, Ill.

The Desert Scorpion, with Edmund F. Cobb.—A good program feature. Went over big. Will please any audience 100%.—W. J. Wood, Grand theatre, East Troy, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

When Arizona Won, with Shorty Hamilt-on.—Very good, but failed to pull. Too much war stuff. Shorty is best in Western comedy-dramas.—William Thacker, Royal theatre, Salina, Kan.

The Woman He Chose, with a special cast.—A picture every exhibitor should play. Got me a lot of money and more than satisfied. A wonderful production. Well acted and directed. Give us more pictures like this.—L. B. Salkin, Jackson Park theatre, Chicago, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Long Arm of Mannister, with Henry B. Walthall.—He never ran a better picture than this one. Holds your interest from start to finish. Photography excellent.—Frank Allen, Rose theatre, Byron, Ill.—Small town patronage.

The Woman He Chose, with a special cast.—One of the most remarkable prod-uctions of the season. During a four days’ engagement held them out every day. Pleased 100% of the audience.—J. Teacher, Star theatre, Evansion, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Long Arm of Manister, with Henry B. Walthall.—Very fine seven reel special. This is indeed a much better picture than has been exploited. If you can impress your patronage to try this, you will fill your house with pleased customers.—Will C. Perry, Grand theatre, Alvin, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

Order next week’s copy of this paper in advance.
| Title | THE LOST CITY (Warner Bros.) with Juanita Hansen.—Just the kind of a serial to revive the serial-weary patrons. It is clear off the beaten track of other serials. It is so good and so different that it will pay you, brother exhibitor, to camp on the trail of that “Lost City” salesman immediately. —Harry M. Palmer, Liberty theatre, Washington, Ind. |

Lightning Bryce (Arrow) with Ann Little and Jackbox—Broke all records. On the 10th episode and still increasing patronage. Don’t wait. Book it and take advantage of a money maker.—Emil W. Starr, Overland theatre, 115 W. 1st St., Chicago, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Daredevil Jack (Pathé) with Jack Dempsey.—The tenth episode. Packs them in and more coming. Book it quick. Best serial we ever ran.—F. Galley, Crystal theatre, Wayne, Neb.—General patronage.

Scheals (Sennett), with a special cast.—Good comedy—Alvin S. Frank, Ideal theatre, Lafayette, Colo.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Head Waiter (Vitagraph), with Larry Semion.—Semion is a flaky. The comedy is one of his best. The cat and mouse alone keep folks howling.—A. N. Miles, Rialto theatre, Eminence, Ky.

U-95, with a special cast—All it is claimed to be. Good business.—J. Christensen, Star theatre, Sandusky, Mich.—Small town patronage.

This His Wedding Night (Paramount), with Roscoe Arbuckle.—My second run of the year. Doing bigger business than before. Arbuckle leading comedian in my house —R. A. Bons, Grand theatre, Carrington, N. D.—Small town patronage.

The Champion (Essanay), with Charlie Chaplin.—Went big. Did fair business. Book it. Will go big.—William Thacher, Royal theatre, Salina, Kan.

The Garage (Paramount), with Roscoe Arbuckle.—All of these Paramount Arbuckles are good, and Fatty is my best puller. This one is one of his best.—C. E. Weitzel, Orpheum theatre, Ada, Minn.—Neighborhood patronage.

Dew Drop Inn (Vitagraph), with Harry T. Eleven—Did not come up to expectation. Nothing to it. No better than his former comedies.—C. A. Hvezcek, Columbus theatre, Columbus, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

Short Subjects

The Garage (Paramount), with Roscoe Arbuckle.—Good comedy. Suitable for any house. His stuff is clean, hence it’s great drawing power. Give us more of his kind.—S. L. Storks, Princess theatre, Baird, Tex.—Small town patronage.

Carmen (Essanay), with Charles Chaplin.—Just a bash-er of former days.—S. A. Hayes, Grand theatre, Grand Island, Neb.—Transient patronage.

Camping Out (Paramount), with Roscoe Arbuckle.—One of the best. Keeps them laughing all the time. Good house.—E. R. Ik:le, Star of the Air, Ryegate, Mont.—Small town patronage.

AGREE—

UNANIMOUSLY

“The Hawk’s Trail”
Is a WINNER!!

Motion Picture News—
“There is plenty of fast action, scenes in Chinatown’s underworld, fights, auto races and all that go to provide thrills. . . . This serial can be counted upon to entertain any audience anywhere.”

Motion Picture World—
“The Hawk’s Trail’ is bound to prove a winner. The story is entertaining and contains much dramatic action, which is well carried out by a notable cast. The cast is headed by King Baggot, who acts convincingly.”

Exhibitors Herald—
“Action is swift and interspersed with periods of comparative quiet that give the beginning and end of each episode added power. Advertising possibilities are plentiful. Crook stories are invariably popular, and this is one of the best crook serials that has been offered.”

Exhibitors Trade Review—
“The action sizzles with exciting incident and a thrilling climax has a place at the finish of each episode. . . . ‘The Hawk’s Trail’ will keep patrons highly absorbed in its sequences and bring them back for each and every episode.”

Wid’s Daily—
“Full of plots, action, hidden dens, thugs and all else that delight the serial enthusiast, Louis Burston’s serial, ‘The Hawk’s Trail,’ will undoubtedly prove successful. . . . From the viewpoint of the serial fan it should be a hit.”

Morning Telegraph—
“The Hawk’s Trail’ will offer more entertainment value than the average serial. It is more picturesque in setting and rather more actionful. . . . Should commend itself to the box office because of the construction of its episodes.”

I love my old home town, but

O You Cleveland!

I feel restless unless I'm in the middle of an angry mob of regular guys—and all the regulars are going to be on deck down at the old convention hall at Cleveland. I wanta meet you there. If you miss me in the crowd, just yell "O Min," and see what happens.

Well, I've kissed Min good bye and given Chester his next Sunday dime in advance and I'm all set for a clean-up.

But—whatever happens—don't tell the wiff.

Yours truly

Andy Gump

Reported by "Mac"

Chicago is not a deserted village this week, but there are a good many familiar faces missing.

Three exhibitor conventions and the annual convention of the N. A. M. P. I. combined to make Cleveland the temporary film capital, with the result that exhibitors and exchange men hurried Eastward if they could get away.

The Illinois Exhibitors’ Alliance, of which Joseph Hoff is the guiding genius, made a big noise Monday morning when they boarded their special Pullman at the Lake Shore depot and started for the convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America.

In the last minute rush, it was impossible to check up on all present or absent. The “reservation list” a few hours before train time showed fourteen down state exhibitors and eleven theatre men from Chicago, as well as a great number of exchange men and others.

Those from Chicago who arranged to make the trip included Joseph Hoff, president; William J. Sweeney, organizer; John Frundt, Fred Hartmann, Harry Van Meeteren, M. O. Wells, James Kosten, V. R. Langdon, George Hopkinson, Gus Treulich and W. H. Bell.

The A. A. A. directors voted against sending an official delegation to the convention and advised members to go as individuals. There were many who made the trip.

Joseph Chojnisky, president of the A. A. A. and Dr. Sam Atkinson, business agent of the organization, were among this number.

Sidney Goldman and R. C. Steery were included in the exchange men who announced they would be in Cleveland during the convention.

Film men remaining in Chicago engaged in the great indoor sport of attempting to get a look at the Republican convention. Frank J. Flaherty broke in by disguising himself as Uncle Joe Canon, while Tom Miller was given an escort of honor when he presented himself as William Howard Taft.

Just before going to press, it was learned that an independent boom to secure the nomination of Creson Smith as vice-president was well under way, with Jack O’Toole angling for a berth in the Cabinet.

They may all rave about lobby and theatre front decorations, but Edie Jen-

Frank Young, representative for the George Swarts Photoplays exchange, for the past several months is now affiliated with the local Goldwyn exchange.

Running true to what the poets say about true love, June, and another galaxy, again of Chicago has been captured by one of the city’s fairest. That is, the event is to take place in the near future and the well known Gus Treulich paying all bills for furniture, coal, etc. Best wishes, Gus, may all your troubles be little ones.

Now that local blind-dam has started with a romp in the forming of its American Legion Post, all you huddles that have been doing “bunk fatigue” get busy. SNAP TO IT. “First call” has already been blown and we want to see you all in line before Revelle, to answer “here” when the roll is called. Give us your following the boot, and over, you all surely have a pal among ‘em.

J. G. Frackman, representative for the Unity photoplays exchange is now covering the northern Illinois field on a twenty-one day intensive campaign for his company’s big serial, “The Hawk’s Trail.”

Guess we all had better get the right people in shining shape and slip up to the Selznick Enterprises suite in the Film Exchange building and congratulate Ben Bearell upon his new appointment. Yep. June first he was informed that from now on he is the manager of the Select and Republic offices. Sh! Lest we forget— the yearbook. Silverman adds another title. He is now sales manager for both the Select and Republic output.

Considerable comment has been overheard with regard to the box office appearance of St Greier upon his return from Manhattan Isle. Either Si walked the path of Prehistoric or its that new creation he brought back. Supposition leads us to think Si must retire at an early hour, for Dunlop has a branch store on State Street and you can buy the same vintage here as in New York—only our prices are higher.

With James Murtagh dashing around to the local exhibitors in that big Buck six, looks like Unity Photoplays is busy locally. You say Frank Zambreno is chauffeur? Nix—last week’s commission was so large an amount that the company president thought he would drive around to see how it was put over.

Some one paging George Levy, Unity Photoplays? Fix you right up now. Wireless him care the Indiana highways, en route in a “Detroit can” pathfinder.

SIDNEY SMITH

The popular cartoonist drawing a strip of Gump cartoons, J. L. Friediman, president of Celebrated Players Film Corporation, has just had Mr. Smith’s good right hand insured for a large sum.

With the renowned Andrews Duffel giving the Loop fans an opportunity to enjoy the cinema with a garnishing of operatic selections at one iron-man wafer a seat, even the blind concede all honors to the celluloid for effective entertaining. Last we forget, considerable praise should be given A. Teitel for the splendid condition of the “For the Soul of Rafeal,” Clara Kimball Young’s feature which more than held its own with the canaries of the opera.

Another “independently” exchange has come up for air in the Film Exchange building at 207 South Wabash avenue. Yes sir, Elias Schwartz has put his salesman’s grip in storage and is to reawaken his exchange of the bygone days. It will be called the E. S. Film Service and he announces for early release “Reclaimed” featuring Mable Julienne Scott and Niles Welch, which he just purchased from the Alpha Pictures, Inc., for Illinois and Indiana, also Fifteen episodes of the two reel Shorty Hamilton subjects.

M. Padorr, manager of the Merit Film exchange, reports the acquisition of the Zip comedies, single reel subjects featuring Chris Rub, for the Indiana and Illinois territory, recently purchased from the Radio Pictures Corporation.
Heavy Sales Reported on Vitagraph's Curwood Film

Although the finished prints of "The Courage of Marge O'Doonie," Vitagraph's special production of the popular novel by James Oliver Curwood, have been reaching the various Vitagraph exchanges only recently, heavy sales are being made in all parts of the country and Canada, it is reported.

Within the past week additional bookings have been recorded as far South as Texas and as far West as California, with the middle West and Eastern territory crowding the various branches for prints. One of the most recent bookings was for fifty-seven days in the Proctor theatres in New York City and state and nearby territory and sixteen days in Poli theatres in New Haven, Hartford, Bridgeport, Waterbury and other cities.

Plays Hero and Villain In Talmadge Production

"Captivating Mary Carstairs," which features Norma Talmadge and which National Film Corporation has announced in preparation for re-issue, is an added attraction in the fact that a dual role is portrayed by one of the cast.

Alan Forrest, who takes the part of the hero in the picture, also portrays the villain and Norma Talmadge is daily mystified in trying to distinguish one from the other in the plot of the picture. "Captivating Mary Carstairs" was adapted for the screen from the famous novel by Henry Sydnor Harrison and is a Bruce Mitchell production made for Nazimut Theatres of Chicago. F. DeHrie has completed the re-editing of the film and new prints are now being made.

Starts Third Feature At Lifeograph Studio

At the American Lifeograph studios at Portland, Oregon, work has commenced on the production of the third Lifeograph-Keele society comedy, under the supervision of W. E. Keele. The first picture has been titled and cut and is now complete, with the second one being put together in the cutting rooms. The temporary title of the second production is "The Kiss at Dawn." The working title for the third picture is "The Two Kisses and the Fatal Cherry Blossoms."

J. Park's Jones again plays the featured role with Eugenia Gilbert and Clare Morris. Both girls are said to be stunning beauties with splendid figures, measuring five feet seven inches in height. Ex-Surtevant, scenarist, who is editing photoplays for the Lifeograph-Keele organization, made the adaptation of the story.

FOR SALE

Two motor drive 1918, Simplex machines, used only one month, like new, 2 shock adapters, 1 transformer, bargain price.

and during every hot day since his business has continued to increase.

It's the same old story—people seeking summer pleasures are going where they can be cool and comfortable, and if your theatre is one of the hot, stuffy kind you are going to lose money.

Typhoons installed NOW will prevent this loss.

5000 EXHIBITORS

within the past three weeks have admitted that now there is no other release offering weekly the high average quality of "COMEDY-ART."

Our infant struggles are over. In every branch of production we have used unlimited money to secure the greatest artists—from title writers to directors.

By doubling the size of our producing organization, we gained quality and the absolute certainty of maintaining our schedule of one release each and every week.

"COMEDYART" can help you—on your screen, not the screen of your competitor.

MERMAID COMEDIES

We offer four series of comedies which have met Educational's quality standard. Chester comedies feature animals and remarkable child actors, combining mirth and amazing feats, alternate laughs and thrills. Rapid fire fun and pretty girls will always be found in Mermaids.

Johnny Hines is the star in the "Torchy" series from the Sewell Ford stories.

Each of these three series will supply a release monthly.

Christie Comedies supply a release semi-monthly, featuring Bobbie Vernon, Fay Tincher and the Follies Girls.

"From every standpoint, Katherine MacDonald's latest picture, 'Passion's Playground,' is a very beautiful production. The lovely star was never more radiant nor deserving of her title, 'The American Beauty.' The love theme is an exquisite bit of Heaven, while the photography and settings have reached the pinnacle of surpassing beauty. Story contains thrills, adventure, romance running on high, with quick action and swiftly moving plot."—Los Angeles Examiner.

"Katherine MacDonald is really alive, keenly intelligent and knows how to express emotion through facial expression. She is one of our greatest screen actresses."—Los Angeles Times.

Notice to Applicants
For First National Franchises

It is rapidly becoming evident that it will be impossible to grant Franchises to hundreds of exhibitors who have applied for them. There can be but one franchise holder in each zone. We assure you that every application is given careful, impartial consideration. It is because we desire to be perfectly fair to applicants—and at the same time select the exhibitor best qualified for a membership in the organization that we have gone slowly in announcing the award of franchises.

If you are the leading exhibitor in your zone, have no fear—we will find it out and you will get your franchise.

To those disappointed ones who fail in securing Franchises, we can only say—The best man has won.

Yours for fairness,

One Group Will Sell You Out
As Quickly As The Other

Let’s talk some English without chewing the words. What are any of the various producer and distributor crowds giving you when they sell you a franchise?

In addition to paying for hollow, valueless franchises you also pay for the pictures they cover—many of them pictures you wouldn’t buy unless the franchise forced you to do so.

Associated Producers, Inc., isn’t franchising or sub-franchising anything or anyone.

Seven powerful producers—and there will be others—have burned all the bridges that linked them to other organizations and banded irrevocably together for a long term of years. Their productions will enable any exhibitor who wishes to be free and independent to hold his theatre and escape any organization’s franchise yoke.

With our first release September 12th we guarantee a minimum of thirty of the most powerful productions the industry has ever known.

You do not have to be owned, controlled or throttled by us to get our productions. We have always believed and still believe that powerful pictures, independently and cleanly sold, guarantee the success and independence of any theatre.

The chief value of a franchise is that it makes you “human collateral” for the organization that sells you the franchise and that once securely franchised you can be—have been—and will be sold out by selfish individuals who measure you only from your dollar values to themselves.

A Plain Statement of the Situation Facing the Independent Exhibitors and Producers

ARTICLE III

By MARTIN J. QUIGLEY

The situation has changed; for the moment—at least—Famous Players has quit displaying an exhibitor-be-damned attitude.

This is unquestionably and directly traceable to the fact that Mr. Zukor, after having quietly slipped into Cleveland last week wearing his most disinterested manner, discovered to his apparent surprise nearly one thousand exhibitors controlling upwards of three thousand theatres engaged in a serious business session.

And the one main object of this serious business session—despite all the lying propaganda inspired in familiar sources and aided by a spineless press—was to combat the producer-exhibitor menace which as evidenced by resolutions unanimously passed is not a myth but a concrete and menacing peril and, in the language of the resolution, "the Famous Players-Lasky corporation is the most flagrant offender."

Although not expecting anything like the course that actually was taken at the Cleveland convention, Mr. Zukor, as mentioned in a previous article, saw to it that he was present at the scene of action with a full staff from the great headquarters—Arthur Friend, Al Lichtman, S. R. Kent and thirty others. Although feigning to ignore the exhibitors' meeting, he established at the outset a reason for being in Cleveland at the time by fixing the annual meeting of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry to be held there—and we use the term "fixing" advisedly.

Adolph Zukor Arrives On the Opening Day

The exhibitors' convention opened on Tuesday. Mr. Zukor arrived in Cleveland the same day. But Mr. Zukor kept right on ignoring protests and complaints of the exhibitors until Thursday, at which time it was apparent to everyone that the Famous Players' plan was put on the grill by the exhibitors.

He then issued a statement in which he said:

"We have no desire to extend our theatre interests."

If this is true (we are compelled to accept with certain reservations any statement which Mr. Zukor makes on the subject at this time), then it would be very interesting to hear from Mr. Zukor just when the desire to grab every theatre the bankroll would reach was abandoned.

At the time the convention went into session, when there was no certainty that the exhibitors would be able to fight back through a compact organization, such a statement would have indicated a voluntary change in front; coming at the time it did after the exhibitors had made plain what they intended to do about protecting their interests it is either a plea for mercy or just plain drivel—in either case worthy of no further consideration.

His Excuse Is That of The Original Bad Boy

The major portion of this Waterloo statement to which we refer is based on the original bad boy's excuse: "Somebody made me do it," the argument being that a group of exhibitors having associated for the distribution of pictures necessitated the purchase of theatres "to obtain proper representation in many important centers."

No one can argue against the fact that it would be perfectly proper for the Famous Players organization or any other organization to go into a center where its pictures are locked out and purchase a theatre in order to obtain representation. This is not the Famous Players situation and we do not profess the degree of gullibility necessary to give their contention in this respect a moment's consideration.

If Mr. Zukor is correct in this assertion then not an exhibitor in the country has a single reason for complaint; the seven hundred and more exhibitors who traveled thousands of miles to register their protest against Famous Players at the Cleveland convention were simply victims of June madness!

However, a few thousand theatremen throughout the country have a very good reason for complaint and the journey to Cleveland of several hundred of them was a sane, logical procedure of self-respecting men toward the goal of putting up a real fight against a serious menace.

"Proper" Representation Must Mean 100 Percent

Mr. Zukor says he was forced into the theatre business to obtain "proper representation." This is doubtless correct if by "proper" representation he means as nearly one hundred per cent of the theatres as it is possible for him to obtain at any given point. The whole trade knows that at several points he has not stopped at the point that would mean consistent representation for the type and quantity of product issued by his company. Hence Everybody's home from Cleveland.

And while everybody isn't happy over what happened there, the exhibitors are.

Minneapolis delegates are particularly pleased over landing the 1921 convention and, with a real exhibitors' organization accomplished, the convention is a prize worth landing.

The "I told you so's," which predicted that harmony in exhibitorial ranks could not be achieved, are now looking for cover.

Official estimates place the attendance at 700 independent exhibitors. Add to these the producers, distributors, accessory dealers, and others attracted to Cleveland and the figures will mount well over the 1,000 mark.

It is the first convention on record, according to many exhibitors, where business came before pleasure. The fact is, however, that there was so much business, pleasure didn't figure in at all.

Felix Feist, vice-president of Goldwyn Pictures, came to Chicago from the exhibitors' convention at Cleveland and remained a few days to discuss business with I. Van Ronkel.

Clara Beranger, who has just signed another contract with Famous Players-Lasky Corporation to write scenarios, will leave for the London studio immediately. She will return in August.

Hoff Hailey, well known and popular film executive, has been appointed production manager of Hallmark Pictures Corporation.

Lindsey McKenna has been engaged as publicity director for the Betty Compson company, now producing at the Brunton studios. He was engaged in newspaper work, prior to going to Los Angeles as West Coast publicity representative for Selznick Enterprises.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Brunton have returned to Los Angeles after a short vacation trip to Coronado Beach. During their stay in the South, they motored to Tia Juana.

Margaret Ettinger, for several years connected with trade and fan papers of the film industry, has joined the Mabel Condon exchange, an agency in Hollywood, Cal.

Dr. Oscar J. Lamberger, director of publicity for Victor Kremer, Inc., arrived in Chicago Thursday, June 10, from Cleveland, and departed the following day for Detroit and New York.

Matthew Teplitz, owner of the Independent Film Company of Pittsburgh, was among the film men who visited Chicago during the past week.

Carl Laemmle, president of Universal and Harry M. Berman, general manager, inspected test films of the Universal $10,000 beauty prize contestants at the Universal exchange June 14. The two officials returned to New York Tuesday.

Ben Beadell, manager of the Chicago Select exchange, has taken over the added responsibility of managing the Chicago exchange of the Republic Distributing Corporation.

Messmore Kendall, president, and Edward Bowes, vice president and managing director of the Capitol Theatre, New York, were among the thousands of visitors attracted to Chicago last week by the Republican convention.

Lewis J. Selznick and C. R. Seelye joined in announcing that Mr. Seelye had resigned as general manager of National Picture Theatres, Inc.

Mr. and Mrs. Aaron J. Jones, the former a well known Chicago exhibitor, have opened their summer home at Flossmore which is one of the show places of Chicago's South Shore.

R. C. Gary, who was publicity director for Robertson-Cole's central exchanges, has resigned to become director of publicity and exploitation for Goldwyn Pictures Corporation at Atlanta, Ga.

Tom Gallery, star, has been in Chicago the last week visiting his father, Captain Michael Gallery of the police department.

Many men, seeking gold, dig up much earth, and find nothing but angle worms. The one sure way for the exhibitor to obtain all the gold he is entitled to is to bend his efforts toward securing plenty of RITCHEY posters wherewith to exploit his programs.

Victory Over Paramount Looms As Exhibitors Complete Organization; Sydney S. Cohen Named President

Adolph Zukor Buttonholes Theatre Owners in Cleveland Hotel Lobby in Vain Personal Effort to Stem Tide—Issues Tardy and Evasive Defense of Activities in Theatre Field

Defiance Gone, Lasky Group Cut Sorry Figure

Defeated at every turn, the embryonic octopus of the motion picture industry—the Famous Players Corporation—dragged itself from the exhibitors' convention at Cleveland, on Thursday, June 10, a badly beaten factor, more than seven hundred exhibitors from every state in the Union having registered their determination to conquer the menace.

Adolph Zukor, head of the producing-exhibiting combine, personally jumped into the breach early in the convention week and began what proved to be a hopeless fight to stem the tide of sentiment against Famous Players which daily gained in momentum in the convention hall at the Hotel Winton.

In the meantime the delegates, blind to all else but the need of a strong national organization to combat the tactics of the Famous Players-Lasky corporation, ironed out their differences and emerged late Thursday afternoon, a united line of defense.

End of Convention Comes Suddenly Thursday

The end came suddenly. The delegates responded to roll call shortly before eleven o'clock on Thursday. Preliminary work consumed the time until after one o'clock. No adjournment was taken for lunch, no one thought of it. Then came the call for funds to meet the needs of immediate financing.

The plans for the first year's war chest had already been laid. The finance committee had recommended that $100,000 be raised and this had been passed by the convention unanimously.

Every delegate in the big hall wanted to give something but many differed as to the method in which the donation should be made. It seemed for a time as though the debates then engaged in would defeat the object. But Charles L. O'Reilly, who had frequently come to the front and straightened out seemingly impossible tangles, against smoothed things over.

Marcus Loew and James Miles Donate $2,000 Each

Chairman Lustig called on the delegates a state at a time and a representative of each delegation stepped forward and placed his donation amid the cheers and handclapping of all. Marcus Loew and James Miles topped the list with $2,000 each. J. H. Kunsky of Detroit gave $500, and when the total was announced it showed that more than $20,000 was available for immediate use.

Adjournment seemed inevitable at this juncture but again the voice of Mr. O'Reilly was heard asking that the report of the committee on nominations be read and action taken. The coatless, perspiring exhibitors wavered for a moment but voted unanimously on the motion.

When the names of the men recommended by the committee to guide the affairs of the new organization during the first year of its existence had been read, nearly every delegate in the room was on his feet gesticulating to the chair for recognition. Ben Sawyer of Cleveland won the coveted honor.
"I know you all want to get away," he began, "but I know you are all happy. I knew you could not go wrong if you came to Cleveland and I knew this would be a success. Everybody has worked hard and diligently, and it now takes but one step to put the final stamp of approval on this convention, and that is, to say to these men who have worked so hard and diligently, go forward, we are with you. Go to Sydney, we stand by you.

"I move that the secretary of this convention instructed to cast a ballot of the convention for the nominees as read by the chairman of the committee on nominations."

It will probably never be known who seconded Mr. Sawyer's motion. Bedlam broke lose and the convention reached a frenzy of enthusiasm unknown in the earlier deliberations. The shouting and cheering subsided momentarily but rose to increased heights as Sydney S. Cohen, first president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, accepted the gavel from Henry I. Lustig, retiring permanent chairman.

After expressing his thanks for the honor paid him and characterizing the convention as a "wonderful triumph" President Cohen said:

"On all sides by abuses of the worst kind, but some months ago when the octopus set out their plans to crowd up and put us out of business, the first thing that presented itself for our consideration was, if we fellows were going to allow ourselves to be stampeded. I felt that was the time to keep both feet on the ground. We called in all the independent theatre owners, and now you have been here for three or four days.

"The Executive Committee has been sincerely and honestly elected, and I am sure these men understand the problem of the smallest exhibitor in this country. These men I am sure sincerely want to function so they will protect every independent motion picture theatre owner in the United States, and I pledge you my word that I shall give my best effort, the best things in me, to build up an organization on a National scope that we may all be proud of, and one that will be productive of results.

"My office will be in New York, and if there is anything that I can do I would be glad to hear from you. If there is anything that I can do in your particular section let me hear from you. If you are threatened by anyone because you won't abide by him, or a lot of other things that happen, we have elected a capable executive committee and the men from your territory will keep in communication with the main office and we will be open to transact any business for you.

"You must understand we have now a national organization where every independent theatre owner in the United States has been invited to belong. I did not know but two of them when we came to the City of Cleveland, but I felt it made no difference because those men who were selected by the exhibitors in that territory for an important position were good enough for me because I had confidence in the independent exhibitors of every territory in the country.

"It is getting late, it is very warm, and all will say to you I like business man, I don't possess any magician's wand, there is nothing concealed up my sleeves, and this proposition consists of laying out a plan, and then working your plan. That is what we did in New York and we propose to do the same thing throughout the nation. We are going to the bat, we feel the bases are loaded, and we want to clean up. We want your cooperation, we want your counsel, we want your advice, and I assure you we will give the best that is in us to the Motion Theatre Owners of America."

One by one the new officers took their places beside Mr. Cohen, a great ovation greeting W. C. Paterson of Atlanta, who called the famous "pack your grip" meeting of exhibitors in Chicago, declared by many to have been the foundation for the successful convention just closed.

Many resolutions were passed by the convention designed to rectify existing ills foremost among them that directed against the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation for its alleged unfair methods and theatre activities. The corporation is described as "the most flagrant offender against the independent exhibitor movement" and exhibitors are advised to protect themselves by all lawful means.

A similar approach by the Society of Authors, Publishers and Composers, and action will be taken in an attempt to have national legislation passed to assure equity.

Other resolutions included those against the advance deposit system, lending of film by producers to non-theatrical institutions, producers' organizations pledging the use of the screens of the country for any purpose whatever; existing film contracts, compulsory purchase of posters or any kind of film exploitation and technicalities "Home Office" dictate. Resolutions were passed pledging hearty support to the independent producers.

FAMOUS PLAYERS PRESENTS

"Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde"

By AL LICHTMAN

General Manager of the Department of Distribution, Famous Players-Lasky

(Statement made to the Committee of Seventeen in New York before the convention concerning what Famous Players-Lasky intended to do about getting out of the theatre business.)

"We don't know anything about the proposition. We are not interested. We won't do business with an organization of exhibitors. We will deal with the exhibitor as an individual only.

"We have a right to take every dollar away from the exhibitor we can get."
Eleventh Hour Effort to Break Up Convention Proves Dismal Failure

Pamphlet Signed by Alfred S. Black and Attacking Exhibitors Leaders Fails In Purpose—Is Answered by Vote of Confidence

A four-page pamphlet containing insinuations that personal gain had accompanied the interests of Sydney S. Cohen, Charles L. O'Reilly, Sam Berman, Henry H. Lustig and Fred Herrington in the distribution of industrial films through exhibitors organizations threw the convention into an uproar Thursday morning—an uproar of men seeking to protect the integrity of those attacked. The statement was signed by "Alfred S. Black, president, Motion Picture Exhibitors of America, Inc."

Mr. Black was bitterly excoriated from the convention floor by more than a dozen men, the keynote of their sentiment being reached when W. C. Patterson, of Atlanta, declared that if "Alfred S. Black had the guts of F UVIKO and distributed doors from their hinges, walk in and make his accusations in person."

New York Delegation Demands Apology

W. A. Dillon, of Ithaca, New York, was the first to take the floor, Waiving one of the circulars he strode to the front of the room and mounted the platform.

"I want to say New York comes here clean," he shouted. "We did not come here to be insulted and Alfred S. Black has insulted every man in New York state. My friends, I demand that he either be cast out by exhibitors or be made to apologize."

Mr. Cohen next took the floor, but before he was permitted to begin speaking, Maurice Chovinski, of Chicago, moved that the convention voice its disbelieve in the charges without any statement by Mr. Cohen.

The speaker however, insisted, and though he up the charges separately and denying each one.

"This statement," he said, referring to the pamphlet, "represents an eleventh hour desperate attempt of the interests behind Alfred S. Black to create dis- sension in this convention. I notice that the communication is signed by him as president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors of America. He wasn't decent enough to appear here. I pledge you, gentlemen, I am interested in none, other than the exhibiting branch of motion pictures."

Accuse Famous Players

The Famous Players-Lasky corpora- tion was accused of being behind the movement by A. C. Hayman of Buffalo, who next took the floor.

"The greatest compliment that the Famous Players ever paid to us is the distribution of this circular," he said, "written by the Famous Players advertising manager, Mr. Black. It is an attempt by the Famous Players to stampede this convention, pay no attention to it."

"It is the last move of the octopus, dying and grabbing at a straw," said Mr. Berman in denying the charges. He declared that Mr. Black's operations in New England were akin to those of the Lynch syndicate in the South and charged that the instigator of the charges was a tool of Adolph Zukor.

Will See It Through

"We came here in the hope of forming a great national organization," said Mr. O'Reilly, "I personally, having done everything within my limits to do so. I want to tell you one thing, that this is one time—and I am no candidate for office—that they have got to go all the way through with me. There are some gentlemen who will find that when this organization has permanently adjoined that I still retain the prerogatives of an American citizen, and they are going all the way through with me. This is the last attempt of Zukor and his gang."

Mr. Herrington said he would be satisfied with a vote of confidence from the Pennsylvania delegation which was given him.

Reproduction of the pamphlet which was distributed in the streets and in the lobby of the Hotel Winton, follows:

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITORS OF THE UNITED STATES WITH RED BLOOD IN THEIR VEINS:

ARE you willing to be sold out under guise of an Independent Theatre move- ment by a handful of men who have carefully plotted and planned for many months to gain control of national screen advertising for their personal enormous gain?

ARE you satisfied to attend the Cleve- land Convention and be mere figure- heads subjected to and controlled by the most brazen "railroad methods" of con- vention procedure, whereby all commit- tees have been appointed by the chair and all important business of the con- vention referred to said committees to be handled for the interests of a given few?

ARE you going to accept the report of a nominating committee named by the chair, or have you red blood enough in your veins to nominate and elect officials who will work for the best inter- ests of exhibitors of the U. S. without purpose of personal gain from national screen advertising or other sources?

I ASK openly of you, Mr. Sydney S. Cohen, if you were directly or indirectly interested in the contract made with J. Brandt & Jack Cohn, whereby they were given exclusive control of the screens belonging to the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of New York and their so-called affiliated associations in other states?

WHAT consideration did Joe Brandt and Jack Cohn pay you for the privilege of booking the Fashion Picture in these territories?

HOW much of the money received from the advertiser was paid to the theatre owners who showed this picture, or did the theatre owner pay you a share of his net profit?

WHO has paid Mr. Herrington, the new chairman of your advertising commit- tee a salary and his expenses to travel around the country selling the industrial film idea?

WHOSE signature is attached to the contract that Mr. Herrington still holds and how much is still owing to him for performing the above services?

SYDNEY S. COHEN, before the assets of the erstwhile Cohn & Brandt screen "advertising monopoly" were sold, did you get bids on it from other advertisers of screen advertising?

I AM told you sold the idea of turning over the screens of our theatres for exclusive advertising privileges to the Baumer Film Co. Are you prepared to read this signed and sealed contract upon the floor of the convention?

ARE you a stockholder in the Baumer Film Co.? Are you participating directly or indirectly in their profits?

WHAT shares of the receipts are you and your associates receiving for the exclusive distribution rights of these films through the Merit Film Co.?

ARE you prepared to read your signed and sealed contract with Merit Film Co. on the floor of the convention?

HOW much of the total monies col- lected from the advertisers have been

THE ANSWER

RESOLVED. That this convention express its severe con- demnation of the cowardly and groundless attack made by Al- fred S. Black upon Messrs. Cohen, O'Reilly, Berman, Lustig, and Herrington; and be it

FURTHER RESOLVED, That we regard this devious way of attacking these men as an effort to undo or discredit the honest and constructive work done by these men. It is FURTHER RESOLVED, That this convention declare its unbounded confidence in the integrity and honesty of pur- pose of Messrs. Cohen, O'Reilly, Berman, Lustig and Herrington.

Therefore Be It Resolved That

Resolutions Adopted by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America at the Convention in Cleveland

NON-THEATRICAL PERFORMANCES

This convention goes on record as opposing the practice of permitting the showing of motion pictures, produced, distributed, and copyrighted in this country, in parochial and religious schools, community houses, or charitable organizations. We believe that the showing of such films would detract from the legitimate use of our theatre system and cut into the legitimate profits of the legitimate payers of tax, in accordance with the principles of our origin and purpose. We call upon all branches of our industry to cooperate to this end.

FOREIGN-MADE PICTURES

We deplore the extent to which certain pictures are being shown on foreign-made pictures to such extent that it casts a shadow over the whole industry. We demand that the Motion Picture Producers' organizations pass such a resolution that will have the effect of excluding foreign-made pictures from the screens.

SCREEN OWNERSHIP

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America is hereby resolved that screen producers' organizations shall pass such resolutions as will have the effect of excluding foreign-made pictures from the screens.

INDEPENDENT PRODUCER

This convention looks upon the motion picture industry as one of limitless possibilities and will always welcome the motion picture pictures that comes into the hands of a few to the exclusion of the majority. We believe that such a control is the greatest practical support to the independent producer and distributor, as well as the maintenance of as much as possible both the independent producer and distributor in marketing their products. We believe that there can be no end to competition in producing pictures of quality.

SCHOOLS AND CHURCHES

It is the sense of this committee that we condemn as unfair competition the leasing or giving free of charge, or by playing percentage, any motion picture to schools, church, community house, or charitable organization, of pictures in conflict with the use of such pictures by a motion picture theatre.

ANNOUNCEMENT MADE IN THE TRADEPAPERS OF THE N. Y. STATE EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE AND WHO HAS THE BALANCE?

In the matter of the Cleveland exhibitors being restrained by you from showing Industrial Films by reason of a contract entered into by that body and yourself is your New York Distributing Company? Where do you stand?

WHERE does Henry H. Lustrig fit into the National Advertising Proposition?

This is why we refuse on behalf of the Cleveland Exhbitors as late as seven weeks ago to use advertising film without your personal permission.

ARE you still in favor of censorship of national advertising film by a self-appointed committee?

DOES this committee consist of Messrs. Cohen, Reilly and Berman?

ISN'T it a fact that the real purpose behind the whole half of the welfare of the exhibitors is camouflage and that the true purpose and intent of your visit to Cleveland is to gain control of National Screen Advertising?

ISN'T it true that the real motive behind the whole move is to gain control of the control and profit to be derived from National screen advertising, and that the Independent Theatre movement is secondary in connection with this move?

DO YOU know that you have received from advertisers since your first announcement was made in the tradepapers that offices had been established in New York for the business of making and distributing films, and to what producing company do you turn over the inquiries so received and have you an interest in the producing company?

DO YOU turn competitive bids from all producers of Industrial Film?

DO YOU intend them to us on the convention floor?

DO YOU realize how much revenue you have handed over to the exhibitors of the United States and that they are publishing competitive bids for their screen advertising?

DO YOU realize in face of your opposition and propaganda that our organization has already turned over to the exhibitors of the United States nearly $5,000,000. How much money has turned over to the Exhibitors through your efforts?

DO YOU believe that the best interests of the Exhibitors in the United States are safeguarded by a convention with self appointed committees, whose slate was previously passed by a chosen few? And how many of the many committees are interested in National-Screen advertising activities?

DIDN'T you tell me last fall in New York City, when I held several conferences with you, Reilly and Berman, that you were interested in the possible profits that might be derived from National Screen Advertising, and didn't you ask me if we brought about an amalgamation of the two Exhibitor Leagues you were going to "cut in" on same, and wasn't this my answer—"that I would not exercise the trust that was placed in me at the St. Louis convention to the exhibitors of the United States in any way for personal gain, and wasn't it a fact that these elections were unable to make any further progress toward amalgamation with you?"

MR. RED-BLOODED EXHIBITOR:

This is your last chance to rescue the convention from the plan to control fair screens by national advertising purposes through the so-called "Cleveland Plan" which you have already paraded through this on the floor and which could be a steamroller tactics; ask for its full meaning. Then you will rescind this resolution and call the officials who will stand for a square deal.

Signed,

Resolution, expressing the faith of the delegates in the men attacked and condemning the cowardice and groundlessness of it, was passed uprootedly.

POSTERS

(The compulsory purchase of certain amounts of posters and other advertising from an independent producer)

It is the sense of this committee that we are unalterably against all contracts with distributors for pictures. We do not use any such contract or give such advertisement.

We insist that the convention be left entirely to the discretion of the exhibitor who uses the pictures. We will not purchase or control the product, or have any control with his product, and purchased outright at a fair price, and under no circumstances be leased from the distributor or producer.

AMERICANIZATION

The motion picture theatre owners of America, in convention assembled, take this occasion of avowing their intention to cooperate with the movement for Americanizing the foreign-born, who have sought the opportunity at this republic. We believe that the screen is especially suited for the intelligent people of this important work. All the great facts in our history and the conceptions and institutions peculiar to our land are illustrated on the screen, and there is no better medium for the daily exposure, know the best avenues of approach; and this convention, therefore, offers the benefit of its influence in the preparation of literature and the making of such pictures.

RESOLVED, that this convention appoint a committee consisting of exhibitors whose advice and experience shall be available in the preparation of scenarios and the making of the pictures.

RESOLVED, that this convention desires to assure the former Secretary of the Interior, Frank Lane, that it desires to cooperate with him and to thank him for his appearance and address before this convention.

RESOLVED, that the members of this organization be requested to display at their respective theatres the information that they are members of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America. That the secretary mail to all members slides.

decide to fight music tax

No further negotiations are contemplated by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America with the Society of Authors, Composers and Publishers, it was indicated by Sydney Cohen, president, who declared before the convention at Cleveland that the only solution of this problem now was to go to Congress.

"The general counsel of this society questioned me as to the possibility of coming before the convention and making a deal with the organization for contracts," Mr. Cohen said. "My reply was that I didn't think we would entertain them; that we intended to go to Congress with an amendment to the copyright law and try to get it endorsed, which would put a stop to this very obnoxious practice."

Privilege of the stage and screen in the motion picture theatres was denied the society in a resolution which is as follows:

RESOLVED, that it be the sense of this committee that inasmuch as the success of the members of the Society of Authors, Composers and Publishers, is based almost exclusively upon the popularizing of such productions by the playing of them in the motion picture theatres, that we condemn as unjust, inequitable and an ingratitude on their part that they should insist upon the additional collection from our theatres after they have been paid a sufficient sum for each piece of music to yield them a just and fair profit.

Two Governors Are Endorsed

Governors of two states—Coolidge of Massachusetts and Smith of New York—were the subjects of endorsement at the convention, the former for his courageous stand in vetoing what is declared to be the most inequitable bill yet framed, and the latter for the unimpeachable support he has given important legislation in his state.

Governor Coolidge was highly praised by Ernest H. Horstmann of the Massachusetts delegation for his act, and a committee was appointed by Chairman Lustig to frame a telegram of thanks to that public official who was in attendance at the Republican convention in Chicago. The convention's expression of gratitude to Governor Smith follows:

"The convention desires to express to you its profound gratitude for helping the motion picture theatre owners in securing their money now on deposit with producers against every form of misuse. We further wish to congratulate you for having added your signature to the new law which

The Salute to Famous Players

Your Committee on Business Relations begs leave to report that the following resolution was passed unanimously:

WHEREAS this Committee, after carefully deliberating upon the data placed before it, and after interviewing, individually and collectively, many independent exhibitors who are accredited delegates, from all points of the United States, to your Convention, find that the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation is the most flagrant offender against the independent exhibitor movement, in as much as this corporation, over the protests of independent exhibitors, has continued to extend its theatre activities in unfair competition with the independent exhibitor, BE IT THEREFORE

RESOLVED, that it is the sense of your Committee that this Organization urge every independent exhibitor to protect himself, by all lawful means, from the aforesaid corporation until such time as they furnish competent evidence that they have changed their plan of producer-distributor-exhibitor control of the motion picture industry and will deal fairly and equitably with each independent exhibitor throughout the United States.

COMMITTEE ON BUSINESS RELATIONS

Voice of Industry Commends “Exhibitors Herald”

From An Exhibitor—

MARTIN J. QUIGLEY, EXHIBITORS HERALD:—Speaking for myself as an independent exhibitor, and having the honor and delegated authority to speak for thirty other independent exhibitors of Nebraska, I wish to thank you personally and in the name of those I represent for the fearless stand you have taken by your editorial in the Exhibitors Herald of June 12, 1920, in the interest of the independent exhibitors of America.

We are mindful of the fact that mercenary and selfish interests are at work that menace the very existence of the industry, and we realize the importance of having a journal whose influence is national and whose editor is fearless enough to go over the top at the zero hour and lead us on to victory.

The independent exhibitors of America owe you a debt of gratitude that cannot be liquidated alone by dollars and cents. We owe you our moral support and encouragement, that your influence in the cause of justice and fairness may be broadened.

Very truly yours,

(Signed) J. C. JENKINS.
Auditorium Theatre, Neligh, Nebr.

From a Producer—

MARTIN J. QUIGLEY, EXHIBITORS HERALD:—Congratulations on your declaration of independence. You are now in the same class as Patrick Henry: Give me liberty, even if I lose thirty pages. Please reserve for me all or any part of space that Famous Players cancels.

MARSHALL NEILAN.

From a Distributor—

MARTIN J. QUIGLEY, EXHIBITORS HERALD:—Congratulations on your determination to stand by the exhibitors of the nation in their present crisis and to help them find a way out of their difficulties.

There can be no greater service to the industry at the present time than for a thoroughly independent publication like yours to first make sure of the facts and to then point out the dangers confronting the exhibitor and impartially guide him out of his chaos. The exhibitor is under such pressure on account of the various schemes being loaded on him that he is now forced to take some action to get out from under or perish. He will let, he must let anyone—who has a voice that can reach him and who is impartial—guide him. This is my interpretation of the position of your publication and your desire.

I’m for you in your campaign.

Yours sincerely,

(Signed) WM. W. HODKINSON, President.

puts the admission of children into motion picture theatres of New York state into the hands of the parent. We believe that the parents are responsible for the welfare of their children and that they cannot delegate this natural duty to any official appointed by the government.

We take this occasion to assure you that we appreciate this act of the legislature, as well as the recently enacted law, which places the responsibility in the hands of the parent who has the care and custody of the child.

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, in national convention assembled, wish to assure you that they will follow your public career with sympathetic interest and that they share your ideas of public service and the duties of statemanship.

All Censorship Is Condemned

All forms of censorship, local, state or federal, is condemned in a strongly-worded resolution which was unanimously adopted by the convention.

Every exhibitor in the organization is bound by the resolution to use "all proper means and lawful steps" to prevent the enactment of any "such vicious laws.

The resolution, complete, is as follows:

RESOLVED, that we realize that the screen as a channel for the transmission of thought excels all other mediums of expression heretofore known. We are cognizant of the fact that this is not understood by all, which fact entitles us, and this national organization, to stand out in as much as the use of a proper and intelligent use of the screen is an education and a wholesome experience, which is a benefit to all.

We, therefore, are, unalterably opposed to all forms of censorship. Censorship has proven a failure in the three states where it has been tried, and we confidently maintain that after six years of motion picture censorship has established higher standard of morality in Pennsylvania, Kansas and Maryland than in any other portion of the country.

We find that our opposition to local, state or federal censorship, as censorship is vicious in principle and which is the opposite to the spirit and genuineness of our institutions. The great factor in the national control and scrutiny of all forms of public entertainment is public opinion. Public opinion keeps the picture business on its toes and no form of amusement can exist without public applause.

This resolution take all proper means and lawful steps to prevent the enactment of any such vicious laws.

Resolution Hits F. I. L. M. Clubs

A resolution, a certified copy of which is to be mailed to the attorney general, was passed by the convention attacking the F. I. L. M. clubs or similar organizations, charging that they pretend to act in place of the lawfully constituted courts of the country.

It reads:

RESOLVED, that this convention protests against the activity of the so-called F. I. L. M. clubs or similar organizations throughout the country. These clubs or organizations pretend to act in place of the lawfully constituted courts of the country in all disputes between producers or exhibitors and film companies or actors; on the other hand, they presume to enforce obedience to the decision of their respective members by threats of denunciation, boycotts, the refusal to buy their films, or denying them service to the exhibitor who refuses to abide by their and who seeks redress for his grievances in the courts of law.

RESOLVED, that a certified copy of this resolution be sent to the Attorney General of the United States, with the request that he take action in the matter and pass upon the constitutionality of these F. I. L. M. clubs uniformly claims to extend from state to state.

Designate I. E. A. Official Branch

The Illinois Exhibitors' Alliance, of which Joseph Hopp is president, has been designated as the official Illinois branch of the newly formed Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America.

The Alliance is exclusively an exhibitors' organization, and in addition to its Chicago membership, has added most of the down state exhibitors during the past few months. It has had William Sweeney in the field as organizer for the past ninety days.

Officers Refuse to Take Salaries

Without exception, all of the newly elected officers of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America declined to accept a salary. The mention of remuneration brought a storm of protest from the men elected to office, and the matter did not get as far as a motion.

In his address to the group, a lot of money was voted to an officer, $2,500 being appropriated to the corresponding secretary for the expenses of his office.

Marcus Loew Declares Percentage Booking Drove Him Into Producing

Challenged by the credentials committee as to his right to be seated, later given full voice by a unanimous vote of the entire convention, Marcus Loew, in a clean-cut, all-the-cards-on-the-table speech, won the respect and friendship of all the delegates by his appeal to fairness.

Mr. Loew frankly admitted his heavy holdings in the Metro Pictures Corporation and explained in detail just how his entrance into the producing end of the business came about. He charged that it was a necessary protection to assure himself of sufficient film for his many houses that led him to ally himself with Richard A. Rowland in making pictures.

Fearless Percentage Booking

"I had viewed with the advent of the non-remunerative contract," said Mr. Loew, "and then when a representative of one of the producers came to me to warn me of the workings of the percentage system of booking my feelings passed beyond alarm. I called Mr. Rowland on the telephone, made an engagement for lunch, and that afternoon I was a heavy holder in a corporation which I felt would assure me of the films I needed.

The speaker emphasized that he was primarily an exhibitor; that he sympathized fully with the movement to organize a strong organization and voiced his belief that once this was accom
To the Exhibitors of America

Greetings –

Whereas:

Martin J. Quigley, editor and publisher of Exhibitors Herald, has openly and irrevocably attacked, in the editorial columns of Exhibitors Herald the producer-exhibitor menace, in all its forms, and has presented facts and evidence which prove that his attitude and action are solely in defense of the best interests of the independent motion picture exhibitors of the country, now, therefore, be it Resolved: That this convention of Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, assembled at the Hotel Winton, Cleveland, June 10, 1920, having every reason to know that the facts on which Mr. Quigley bases his remarkable editorial stand are true, hereby officially express its sincere appreciation to Mr. Quigley for what it justly believes to be the most significant and beneficial act which any trade journal publisher ever has performed in defending the independence, the individual business interests, the integrity and the collective morale of the independent exhibitors as a body, for the lasting freedom of the screen.

“Both are equally bad,” he said. “To undersell the exhibitors means cutthroat competition against some other distributor or producer and means ruin for some of them. To oversell the exhibitor means his ruin eventually for he cannot pay more than his receipts warrant.

I recently had a meeting with the exchange managers of the company in which I am interested and tried to instill this spirit into them and I intend that this be the policy which shall govern our business. And I make this proposition now. If there is any exhibitor here who feels that he has been overcharged for film service, if he will come to me I will take it up with the company. If they will not rectify it I will do so, personally.”

Pledge Screen to Americanization Work

Eloquent Appeal of FRANKLIN K. LANE, Former Secretary of the Interior, Wins Unanimous Promise of Assistance

FRANKLIN K. LANE, former Secretary of the Interior of the United States, met with enthusiastic applause and a rising vote of endorsement when, on Tuesday afternoon, he addressed the convention in connection with the Americanization project, of which he is the head.

Mr. Lane characterized the motion picture screen as the greatest medium of education in the world today and urged the exhibitors to put aside personal gain their duty to their community and their country.

The speaker told of his unsuccessful attempts to interest both Congress and the Senate in a campaign on the screens of the country, in the hope of settling the present unrest and convincing the foreign-born that America was still the land of opportunity. Not until a committee from the motion picture industry made their appearance in Washington and appealed to the country’s highest legislative bodies did he obtain the support he asked. Mr. Lane said, “What the schoolhouse was two hundred years ago, what the pulpit was one hundred years ago, the motion picture theatre is today to the people of America and the world. You are the story of the past, the life of the present and the hope of the future.”

Mr. Lane cannot convince anybody of your spirit of friendliness and a square deal by putting up signs bearing the legend: “I am your friend.” You must prove that you are his friend or show him something in your past record to convince him of that fact.

There is nothing in American life that would not make a picture on the screen. America is the land of opportunity—it is a true democracy—it gives advantages to the emigrant that he can obtain in no other country on the globe. The United States can accept every challenge to her and stand the test unflinchingly.

Power Exceeds That of Press

“You, men, have a wonderful opportunity in this Americanization project. You wield a power which exceeds even that of the press.”

Mr. Lane emphasized the fact that the movement of which he is the head would yield no profit to any one concern. He told the exhibitors that their support of the movement would prove invaluable. He called upon them to provide material for scenarios from which films could be made along the lines of his campaign, telling them that their acquaintance with the people in their own communities and their needs would be of great weight in the work.

“Every person loves a contest. We—you and I—do not go to a prize fight because one of the contestants is to receive a broken nose or have blood smeared across his face. We go because the spirit of contest manifests itself.

Only Way to Reach People

“So I say to you that incidents in any man’s life would make a fit subject for a moving picture. The contest of a man reclaiming desert land by irrigation from the nearby mountains is of interest to me and of interest to competition against some other distributor or producer and means ruin for some of them. To oversell the exhibitor means his ruin eventually for he cannot pay more than his receipts warnant.”

There is no doubt now in the minds of the delegates that Frank J. Remisich comes from Shelbyville, Indiana, and that occasionally he visits Indianapolis, also in the state of Indiana.

Sam Berman had the easiest job at the convention. All he had to do was read everything that was submitted to the chairman in the form of resolutions and other bits of information. He varied this by calling the roll, defending himself from Black’s attack and nibbling on troches.

Joe Friedman’s “If you want a drink yell ‘Oh Min’” was a big hit and many of the parched lip exhibitors joined the Gump club. Ye editor of this column yelled “Oh Min” having mezzanine floor of the Winton and two blondes and three brunettes responded.

Senator Walker’s Will Rogersism pleased the crowd immensely. If oratory, ability and wit will get a man any place he won’t stop as a governorship.

Treasures Elect Peters of Dallas, Texas, failed to respond when President Cohen called him to the platform for his speech of acceptance. The tension was somewhat relieved, however, when it was discovered that the funds had not yet been turned over to him.

Will Brandt of New York asked permission of the chair, with the indulgence of the lady delegates, that the men be permitted to remove their coats. His reason, a brand new silk shirt was apparent a few minutes later. Brecker followed suit—silk shirt, too. The coats at the press table stayed on.

Wonder what the winning Cleveland aggregation of ball tossers thought with all those seats vacant for the Thursday game? My, how the exhibitors have changed.

W. C. Patterson of Atlanta, familiarly known by all as “Pat” who made famous the “pack your grip” Chicago convention and who always says yes added to the list. The Guts of Patterson. That boy’s backbone is solid steel when it comes to a fight.

Adolph Zukor, popular hero of the convention, took up lobbying as a last resort, his billboard campaign and other efforts having failed. He buttonholed everyone he could, trying with a perspiring face to explain away Paramount practices.

Many of the boys with pasteboard tendencies got well acquainted with house detectives they had never seen before. Sociable set, those house sleuths!

Ralph Talbot, head of the Oklahoma state exhibitors, put the first check on the speakers’ table when the foundation of the wall was laid. It represented ten per cent of his state’s quota.

Marcus Loew undoubtedly created a deep impression on the delegates and will probably be less misunderstood in the future.

Jackson’s of the Californian delegation was the only voice that came anywhere near approaching Berman’s in volume and penetration.

Careful perusal of the records reveals the fact that John Mannheimer of the Brooklyn boys took first honors in the “I can’t believe you, was the degree New Yorkers tied for the “second that motion” honors.

Tom Goldberg of Baltimore was apparently the only delegate-at-large at the Convention. He arose to a point of “personal privilege” from every section of the large assembly hall. He even ducked behind the press table, which represented Hawaii.

STEPPES of the Minneapolis aggregation evidently had his hat in the ring for something or other. The way it hung on his noble brow looked like every delegate in the convention had walked on it.

Sam Bullock’s pipe of the same war club dimensions was again in evidence. He steamed along merrily during the entire four days. Sam’s pipe is as much a part of him as Maurice Chovenski’s canvass-ribbed coin bag is a necessary detail of the veteran Chicago exhibitor.

After listening to the impassioned speeches of the various delegates moved to oratorical pretexts, one wonders if they’d all be dumb if it hadn’t been for the great war.

Joe Hopp swung his wicked vocabulary with telling effect in response to every speaker who addressed the convention. Despite the speaker’s assertion that “he had just been informed a minute before” we suspect he had sufficient warning to dust off a few of his pet phrases.

Griffin of California emphasized many times that he had come three thousand miles to get the right dope and the peculiar part of it is, he batted one thousand on getting his desires.

Dan Barton, general manager of the Bartola, Optical Instrument Co., was up and at ‘em all the time. The phone wires of the Hotel Winton were kept sizzling continuously, with the cream of Cleveland theatres on one end and the genial Barton on the other, and we understand that a substantial array of orders for both the Barton organs and Bartolas were consummated.

Many wanderers along the great American desert were promptly cared for in the great oasis discovered in Room 406. Much appreciation should be extended the good samaritan Reilly for the appreciable quality of “salvation” this likable Celt provided.

We’ll admit that Sergeant-at-Arms Henry Cole shortly blossomed into one of the hits of the convention, due to the most efficient and careful visiting all credentialed delegations that he delegate or any visitor to convention chambers was admitted. If you have any doubts as to who we refer to, just scan these affiliations of Henry’s. He is the executive secretary of the Cinema Exhibitors Association of Bronx County and owner of the Garden theatre, 197 Walton Avenue, Borough of Bronx, Greater New York.

Due to the courtesy of the entertainment committee of the Moving Picture Theatre Owners, all exhibitors attending the convention were cordially invited to attend a showing of the Dempsey-Willard fight pictures taken at Toledo, July 4, 1930, for the benefit of the Toledo Orphan Asylum. The showing was presented from the screen of the Strand theatre at 11:30 a.m., June 10th. These are the films taken under the direction of the Hallmark Picture Corporation and were recently given permission to be shown in Ohio.

With the convention over Thursday afternoon, the railway station was jammed to capacity with that Indiana, Wisconsin and Illinois delegation all trying to get aboard the 11:15 for Chicago. With the railway officials coming to the rescue another special was arranged to leave at 12:15 and all left Cleveland carrying many happy memories of the splendid hospitality of this charming metropolis by the lake.

A reporter for the Cleveland Plain Dealer walked up to the information clerk at the Hotel Statler and announced that he wanted “to talk to the biggest gun in the news business.” The clerk paged J. D. Williams.

Sam E. Morris’ old home town got an opportunity to prevent that young hero certainly made good when he went to the Big Town.

Not that Charles C. Pettjohn needed it to maintain his position of genuine popularity, nevertheless he came well supplied with an article calculated to insure popularity anywhere in these days of lemon pop and root beer.

Harry Berman, Universal’s sales chief, is one man in the m. p. business who can win an argument against film matters without raising his voice above a whisper: what he lacks in clamor he supplies in logic.

An enviable group of ad specialists and friends of the paper mills concerned with United Artists’ productions—Paul N. Lazarus, Kenneth McGuiness and Carl E. and Charles E. Moyer—looked in to see that all was progressing satisfactorily.

A. S. Kirkpatrick who presides over the sales destinies of Robertson-Cole was noted quietly spreading R-C propaganda among the foyers.

William A. Brady announced that at 6:45 p.m. on Wednesday he was going out of film politics. At that hour he took a train for New York. “Ise done through,” said William A. of that effect.

Having no comedy relief scheduled for the program of the convention Adolph Zukor took advantage of a personal appearance to explain how he was helping the exhibitor was not accepted.

It is now the cold grey dawn of the morning after the “Big Offender”.

If anyone is thinking of running a popularity contest for general managers they had better see John S. Woward in advance to be sure that it will be acceptable to him.
Need Unity to Fight Adverse Legislation

Exhibitors Hear Pertinent Truths From JAMES J. WALKER, Minority Leader of the New York State Legislature

I n a message surcharged with personal magnetism and of deep significance to the exhibitor, Mr. J. J. Walker, minority leader of the New York State Legislature, last Wednesday outlined the convention the potency of its cause, and the possibilities of a united front in combating adverse legislation.

Mr. Walker was invited to talk to the convention because of his acumen in New York state in behalf of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners. Mainly through his efforts came the defeat of the censoring bill and the repeal of the state's stringent blue laws.

Praises New York Leaders

The speaker paid a tribute to Sydney S. Cohen, newly elected president; Charles I. O'Reilly and Sam Berman, through whose efforts he said he had first become interested in the problems of the motion picture industry particularly from the exhibitor's standpoint.

"It is because of my association," said the speaker in opening his address, "it is because of the love of liberty upon which they are built, that I found myself shoulder to shoulder and so closely allied with the motion picture exhibitors of the state of New York. I congratulate you on this wonderful convention."

"It is the only way to get some place in my humble opinion, and that opinion is predicated upon eleven years' experience in the New York State Legislature, from which I come to you today, not because an invitation so flattering was extended to me for my personality, but rather because that legislature has learned to look so favorably upon the exhibitors of New York state; and that in conference between the most prominent men in our legislature, including the majority leader, the speaker, and the governor of the state of New York, I was asked to respond to your invitation, to fight the Buell-Yield to Major.

"There is no reason in the world why an industry so powerful as this should not meet together and it should not altogether be pusseyfooting affair either.

"There are enough Celtic tendencies in me to love a good fight, and there is no convention worth while that does not carry its fights, with this reservation: That when the fights are over let the majority rule and the minority conform.

"Now, let us: I let us fool about it. The purpose of the minority is to harass, is to make it uncomfortable for the majority, to filibuster, to throw all the opposition possible in the way of the majority, but when your little dickerings are done, when policies have been adopted, there is more to be gained in a solid line front. If you have any respect for Americanism or American institutions, you have never had the respect that you were entitled to in this country. To receive any attention or respect, you have got to stand unified, all for one and one for all.

"I say that I know a little bit about your industry. I do; In my official capacity I have got to find out something about it. And it is because of that knowledge, that acquaintance I have had with your industry that I speak thus. I know it because I have met them officially and I say to you that you are public service corporations, public service individuals. You are a quasi-public service, if not entirely. You are serving the people, and the people in some instances look to you to

Tell's of Censorship Fight

"One year ago when the lower house of the New York State Legislature passed a severe censorship bill that was on what we call the order of third reading in the senate, with the necessary number of votes to pass it, that it was by my own single effort that the bill was defeated and it is for that purpose I make mention of it here.

"Three men had come that year, representing the exhibitors of the state of playing fair and that they had more than fulfilled the trust put in them.

He urged the exhibitors not to forget the small town exhibitor and characterized him as "the backbone of the industry." The fellow with the little 400-seat theatre, he said, is just as much a part of the show as any Broadway house.

In replying, Joseph Hop of Chicago thanked Mr. Walker for his kindness in coming to Cleveland and intimated that the industry might at some future time draft him into the service.

English Producers Agree to Stay Out Of Exhibitor Field

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, June 13.—Agitation in Great Britain has resulted in an agreement between exhibitors of that country and the Anglo producers whereby the latter will withdraw and stay out of the exhibiting field, Charles Frederick Highman, M. P., leader in advertising and publicity in Great Britain stated today.

The noted Englishman also announced that in his capacity as managing director of the Alliance Film Corporation, Ltd., he has completed arrangements with the First National Exhibitors' Circuit to distribute the English company's output, approximately twelve pictures a year.

He also wired President Woodrow Wilson offering to make one picture as propaganda for the League of Nations, the president to outline the way the picture is to be made.

He denied point blank that Adolph Zukor had completed arrangements for distribution in Great Britain with Lord Beaverbrook.

AMERICANIZATION

of the President's cabinet was greeted with deafening applause, which only subsided when he had left the convention room in company with his escort of three delegates appointed by Chairman Lustig.

Pledge Aid Unanimously

The exhibitors present voted unanimously to tender their screens as a medium for disseminating the teachings of true Americanism as advocated by Mr. Lane and evinced a desire to appoint a committee of prominent exhibitors to formulate ideas to be submitted to the speakers' committee for picturization.

Following Mr. Lane's speech, Harry M. Crandall of Washington, D. C., at present the exhibitor representative on Mr. Lane's committee, offered a resolution embodying the wishes of the exhibitors that they be counted 100 per cent for the proposition.
FROLICKING
in the FOYER
By HARRY REICHENBACH

Anyone who heard the nine hundred delegates talking at once, would wonder where the term "silent drama" came from.

The trust imposed in each other, by various leaders was impressive. I asked one what he thought of the other, "He's so crooked," he replied, "the flies use him for a scenic railway."

Alfred Black was so mad, he stayed once on acens back to back.

Conversation
Exhibitor—How many men are running for president?

Outsider—Three, I think.

Exhibitor—Who has the best show?

Outsider—Oh the Stillman has the best show.

Up to Wednesday night at two highballs after seven, the convention had definitely established who were the best domino ticklers and stud studiers. Very important to the industry, says I.

Adolph Zukor, William A. Brady, Samuel Goldwyn and other celebrities, took the air Wednesday night. The average producer, during his stay at Cleveland, felt about like a bell buoy does in the middle of the ocean, only moreso.

Some of the boys, unsuccessful in securing Scotch reported to the barber shops and imbibed Herpicide. Which by the way is 195% also.

Wid Gunning breezed in about Wednesday A. M. and things went right along regardless of the shock.

Sol Lesser gave Christian Science Scotch to everybody.

Sol spent as much money on stunts as he did on the negative and still no one at the Convention knew what women love the most. I certainly won't tell.

T. R. Zann was proposed for president of the N. A. M. P. I, but no one seconded the nomination.

Chowyński of Chicago, Kunsky of Detroit, and other well known ski's were tremendously noticeable.

Paul Gusdanovic of Cleveland announced the acquisition of Harold Lloyd for Associated, which I claim is one big and unbeatable bet and deserving of a serious notice (there it is Paul).

Old Editor Quigley, who throws a nasty qual, sure stirred things up with that "Independence or—Disaster" editorial.

Personally, I spoke to Martin, but if he noticed it, or not, I did not linger long in his presence for I am fearful of flower pots when under a balcony.

Earl Gulick of the O. J. Gude company, charged Paramount with two full showings whereas but one was posted. 'Twas all in the way he looked at them.

Many faces were missing. Where are the old time exhibitors who used to gross hands full of nickels, vegetables, etc. Guess he's gone the way of the chase film—leastwise he was not present.

When a waitress returned John Kunsky's change, ten cents short, John made a howl. "IT'S NOT THE PRINCIPLE OF THE THING EITHER," he said, "IT'S THE DIME" which was a fast retort.

Ethiopian dominoes were the predominating diversion.

Two leagues made three presidents. Three presidents make a fine fight, A fine fight makes a convention. A convention makes a damn fool out of a lot of serious minded men.

Ivan Abramson was a busy little person. He was here, there and everywhere, "Someone Must Pay" he says.

Fred Beecroft kipped with Bob Welse, Bob hates sleep when away from home. Confidently, he gets away very little and lives at Elmhurst, L. T., where sleep is the only indoor sport.

Strange to say, Sydney Cohen was elected president. Not a soul expected this, except everybody at the convention.

Al Black has called another convention for July. Sure picking nice weather for it.

ANYHOW IT IS MY LAST ONE—TILL NEXT YEAR.

The Answer of Alfred S. Black

In the issue of June 12, EXHIBITORS HERALD asked the question: "Where does Alfred S. Black stand: Is he with Famous Players-Lasky Corporation or the Exhibitors?"

Mr. Black has written a communication to EXHIBITORS HERALD in answer to that question. Whether or not it meets the issue directly can be judged from the wording of the fifth paragraph. The letter is as follows:

To EXHIBITORS HERALD:

In reply to your article as to where I stand at the present time, it would first be perfectly proper to question your honesty of purpose: why you have seen fit at this eleventh hour to apparently play politics for certain interests: what are your inside motives and who is back of you in the attack launched?

The Producer-Distributor-Exhibitor movement in the New England States has been and is led today by Mr. Nathan B. Gordon who controls the New England First National franchise and is one of theimportant officials in their national movement. Mr. Gordon with his affiliations, controls the largest chain of theatres in New England. The Black chain is a close second. There is hardly a more pronounced example of Producer-Distributor-Exhibitor control than that of Nathan B. Gordon activities in New England.

My organization has been and is now friendly to the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. Under the conditions just noted, it would be poor business to be otherwise, so long as possible.

As to what booking arrangements I may have with the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation or any other Film Company, that is my private business and no one has the right to inquire into same.

My organization has not sold out to the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation or does their corporation control its activities.

As the head of the Black Theatres, I am today, and expect to be for some time, one of the largest buyers of independent film service in the United States. There are but very few men more interested than I am in future film rental and no one more interested in exhibitor organization upon sound business lines. There is a wonderful field for work helpful to everyone in the exhibiting end of the business, but personal ambitions, the control of the organization for personal gain or for selfish reasons must be cut out, if we are to expect an amalgamated exhibitors organization to succeed as it should.

Very truly yours,

ALFRED S. BLACK.
MINNEAPOLIS 1921

The next convention—1921—will be held in Minneapolis.

This decision was arrived at by the executive committee at a meeting held Thursday night following the close of the convention. The dates for next year’s sessions have not been fixed.

W. A. Steffes and the Minneapolis delegation put on a determined campaign to land the affair, strewing the convention hall last day with cards, bearing the words: “I am going to Minneapolis in 1921. How about you?” With the assurance that they were all going, the Minneapolis boys left for home in a jubilant mood.

IMPRESSIONS AT CLEVELAND
An Editorial View of the Rapidly Moving Events
Which Took Place During the Recent Convention
By MARTIN J. QUIGLEY

For the first time in the history of the industry there now exists a real exhibitors' organization—a body consisting of a representative calibre and a representative number of the theatre owners of America.

Now that such an organization has been accomplished—against seemingly insurmountable obstacles—the fact must not be lost sight of that the success of the movement has been due to the exceptional ability and extraordinary energy of the group of men who have labored hard and long in the work of uniting the exhibitors of America.

The theatre owners of the country owe a lasting debt of gratitude to those men whose names are mentioned conspicuously elsewhere in this issue, who have labored unceasingly toward the goal of building up a strong line of defense against those seeking to undermine the exhibitors' freedom and independence.

* * *

It is particularly noteworthy that the convention succeeded at all against the flood of lying propaganda which deluged every spot where exhibitors gathered. It was repeatedly charged that the entire purpose of the convention was to effect a plan for screen advertising circulation. Yet those who are known to have favored such a plan and probably still do allowed it to pass substantially without action in order that nothing would be permitted to interfere with what all acknowledged to be the main concern of the meeting.

* * *

The words and action of Marcus Loew throughout the convention typifies the spirit that makes for mutual welfare in the industry regardless of any divergence of interests and viewpoints that may exist.

Mr. Loew in a manner of convincing sincerity came before the convention and while he insisted in a very natural manner upon his own rights, he indicated his intention that his policies would take a course that would neither injure or jeopardize the interests of any other exhibitor.

When Mr. Loew took the position that if the trend of events require it he was willing to eliminate himself as a producing factor he did something that has made him a very big man in the eyes of the industry at large.

"Independence or—Disaster!"—Article III

more than seven hundred exhibitors in convention assembled unanimously adopted a resolution urging "every independent exhibitor to protect himself by all lawful means from the aforesaid mentioned corporation until such a time as they furnish competent evidence that they have changed their plan of producer-distributor-exhibitor control of the motion picture industry and will deal fairly and equitably with each independent exhibitor throughout the United States."

The final paragraph in Mr. Zukor's statement is a clean-cut right-about-face: After having given the exhibitors of the country during recent months to understand that it was the intention of Famous Players to go right ahead on their plan regardless of what the rest of the trade thought of it, he says he will be very glad at all times to confer with a committee. In this he assumes a changed front, but in order to emasculate the offer so that later on he may be able to do just as he sees fit he adds the impossible condition that the committee must represent all the exhibitors, knowing full well that such a committee does not now exist and in all probability never will.

Menace Not Passed But Situation Is Changed

The Cleveland convention changed the situation materially.

The menace of monopoly, sinister control and combine is not yet passed.

But a real impetus has been given to the movement for independence in this industry, which will not and cannot be stopped.

The Fourth Article of This Series Will Appear in the Next Issue of EXHIBITORS HERALD
Hiram Abrams Elected President of “Big 4” At New York Meeting
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)
NEW YORK, June 15.—Hiram Abrams has been elected president of United Artists Corporation to succeed Oscar A. Price, who resigned to become executive head of Associated Producers. Other officers elected were Dennis O’Brien, who is attorney for Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks, vice president, and Albert H. T. Banzhaf, attorney for D. W. Griffith, secretary. Among those attending the meeting, which was presided over by Miss Pickford, were Douglas Fairbanks, D. W. Griffith, Hiram Abrams, Banzhaf and O’Brien.

Hitch in Bryan’s Plan To Star in Production
George R. Dalton has filed an injunction in the superior court here to restrain William Jennings Bryan from appearing in a picture as an argument for prohibition, unless produced by himself. Dalton declares that he originated the idea and made an agreement with the former secretary of state, which the latter refused to carry out. Dalton declares in the bill that he expended $12,000 on the proposed picture and time and effort which he valued at $35,000.

Vitagraph Will Have Own Chicago Building
Alfred Cowles is to erect a two-story building at 839-43 South Wabash avenue, which will be occupied by the Chicago Vitagraph exchange. The building, which will be 42 by 132 feet, will cost $50,000.

LaGrange to Have New Theatre-Hotel
K. C. Holman of La Grange, Ill., is to erect a $400,000 theatre and hotel in that suburb, construction work to start about July 1. The theatre will seat 1,800 persons, while the hotel will have 122 rooms.

Harry Koplar’s Experiences Form a Story with a Moral
St. Louis Exhibitor Sells His Nineteen Theatres to Famous Players—Now Says He has been Unable to Collect Any Money ny illuminating side-light on what exhibitors may expect in their dealings with the Famous Players Corporation is to be seen in a situation now existing in St. Louis.

Several months ago Harry Koplar entered into a deal with Famous Players to dispose of his interests in nineteen theatres in St. Louis.

Koplar now alleges that he has been unable—despite repeated efforts—to collect any part of the agreed purchase price; that over his protest Famous Players is collecting the daily receipts of all the theatres and depositing the funds to its own account and by order of Famous Players’ agents he has been excluded from even entering the theatres.

Koplar’s plight apparently is a desperate one. He states that his deal with Famous Players was not in writing; due to the fact that he placed full reliance in Frederick L. Cornwell, a St. Louis attorney who conducted the negotiations with Famous Players, Koplar says in these negotiations his business vision was blinded by “the glare of Broadway lights reflected from the smooth desk tops of the biggest toads in the motion picture puddle.”

The case has attracted widespread attention in St. Louis. One evening recently Koplar sought to gain entrance to one of the theatres of the chain which he formerly was in possession of and was forcibly ejected. Later, a temporary injunction was obtained by Famous Players restraining him from entering the theatres. The case has been set for hearing at an early date.

St. Louis Post-Dispatch Tells the Story

The following is the account of the situation as described by the St. Louis Post-Dispatch:

The recital of the events of the deal, which, at its consummation last March, gained attention as the record financial transaction involving the exhibition of motion pictures in St. Louis goes back to the formation by Koplar of the Greater Amusement Company, by which Koplar added the Kings, Pershing, Shenandoah and Juniata theaters to his string.

“I owned half the stock in that company,” Koplar began. “My brother-in-law, Sam Hamburg, owned the other half. Sam sold one-half of his interest to Cornwell, with whom he was associated in real estate projects. I only knew Cornwell by reputation up that time. I regarded him as a big man—director in the Chouteau Trust Company. I’d be ashamed to ask a big man like him to put any business deal I was undertaking with him in writing.

“Well, shortly after Cornwell came into the company, the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation made a proposal for the purchase of not only the four theaters of the Greater Amusement Company corporation, but my own theaters as well. Now, I knew that the Famous Players was buying up motion picture theaters all over the country. I knew that next year, or maybe the next, the Famous Players would have enough theaters so that they would sell films only to their own theaters and that if I didn’t get in I would have a bunch of houses and no pictures to show in them. So Cornwell and I went to New York to talk over the proposition.

Let Cornwell Do Talking

“In fact Cornwell and I went to New York three times. We slept together, dined together, wined together, automobiled together, saw Broadway together and went to the Famous Players’ offices together. I let Cornwell do the talking. I'm not much for the talk and he had a magnetic tongue. I tell you he had the most magnetic tongue I have ever listened to."

"Said he'd make you the biggest motion picture exhibitor in the United States, didn't he, Harry?" Sam Koplar, a brother, who was present, interposed.

"Yes, and I ate it up," Harry admitted, "and why? I can't understand this yet. I own a lot of motion picture theatres and yet I've got no place to hang my hat. Had to rent this room in Hotel Jefferson to have a headquarters."

"Well," Harry continued, "Cornwell made a fourth trip to New York. I wanted to go on this trip, but when Cornwell came back he had contracted for the sale of all the theatres in which I was interested. I had given him the price at which I knew that I could buy up all the stock in the theatres and deliver it."

"Here is the contract he brought back. I studied over an instrument written in contract form, one of the first paragraphs of which mentioned the theatres involved, and I frame this phrase: "Which hereinafter shall be known as Mr. Cornwell's theatrical interests."

"How do you beat it?" Koplar exclaimed.

"Do you wonder I'm all up in the air? Here are my theatres, in which I personally own more than $500,000, described as Mr. Cornwell's theatrical interests, in which Mr. Cornwell's cash investment is not more than $2,500."

Manager at $7,500 a Year

"The Missouri Famous Player Corporation was to be organized to take over the theatres. I discovered that Cornwell was to be president of the corporation. I was to be manager of the theatres at $7,500 a year and was to employ two of my brothers, Sol and Nate, at $5,000 a year. It explained to me that it would require some time to organize the corporation and work the contract."

It was continued to proceed in the details necessary to complete delivery of title to the theatres. It was to deliver possession of the theatres at once, and I did."

"Well, things went on for awhile without my getting any money. I commenced to ask Cornwell about it. He put me off from day to day. Finally he said to me, 'Harry, get the deeds and everything ready for May 10 and we'll wind it up.'"

"We set up a straw man, as is customary in such deals. Ed Costman, Sam Hamburger's chauffeur, was chosen to be the straw man. A few days before May 10 I put up deeds to the King's, Pershing, Shenandoah, Juniors and Novelty theatres with Costman. Instead of holding the deeds until May 10, Costman transferred them to William Hamburger, a real estate man, who transferred them to the Famous Players Corporation."

"May 10 came, and Cornwell said that all the details for the transfer had not been accomplished. I told him I wanted my money by that time. He said he was to get $25,000 a month for 12 months and the remainder was to be secured by mortgages and bonds. By the way, Cornwell was to market the mortgages and bonds.

DORALDINA
Who will appear in "The Passion Fruit" as her first Metro picture. it is a story of Hawaii, in which Doraldina will do a native dance.

Says He Was Told to Go to Court

"Cornwell told me, 'Why, the only way you can get your theatres now is to go to court.' So I'm going to court. I want to find out whether I own these theatres or whether I've been dreaming I owned them."

"Now they were collecting all the receipts each day. One night I determined to stop that. I went to the Arco theatre, one of the string. I said to the manager, who had worked for me for five years, 'Beginning tonight you deposit all receipts to the credit of the Arco Theater Co., not the Famous Players.' I called up later and he told me that two of Cornwell's men were there and said that they were going to stay there. I went to the theatre and ordered them out. Cornwell showed up. We argued for an hour and a half. Cornwell won. He has a magnetic tongue. I told the theatre manager to continue to deposit the receipts for the credit of the Famous Players. Cornwell assured me that everything would be all right."

Removed as Manager

"Last Saturday I got a notice that my services as manager no longer were needed. It was signed by Cornwell. When I visited the Novelty Theatre, I was handed another notice ordering me not to enter my own theatres. Now, mind you, I own that myself, alone. I was being ordered in my own theatre not to come into my own theatre."

"Passers-By" To Play One Week At Capital

J. Stuart Blackton's screen version of C. Haddon Chambers' stage success. "Passers-By" will go into the Capitol theatre in New York on June 20 for a one-week run. Samuel L. Rothafel, managing director of the playhouse, plans an exploitation campaign of wide scope on the picture. Pathe Exchange, Inc., is distributing this production.

Kremer Will Produce Feature Attractions

Will Close Out First On The Re-Issues That He Is Now Marketing

Victor Kremer, who has been highly successful in marketing a series of re-issues, announces that as soon as he has disposed of all the territories on these pictures he will produce and distribute independent productions.

Mr. Kremer has not announced full details of his production plans, but these are expected momentarily as only a few territories remain to be sold on the re-issues.

The pictures now being handled by Mr. Kremer are the Essanay-Chaplin's Broncho Billy Westerns and the Snake-ville series, the latest of the feature productions starring Bryant Washburn, Henry B. Walthall, Shorty Hamilton and Taylor Holmes.

The only announcement made by Mr. Kremer regarding his future plans was that the pictures he will produce and distribute will be presented in every sense of the word. He has made no statement as to the players he will sign for his pictures or the stories to be produced.

C. B. Price Company Is House In Its New Quarters In Broadway

Owing to the rapid increase in business of C. B. Price Company, Inc., moved into larger offices at 1446 Broadway, New York City, and now occupy the entire third floor of this building, giving them 1,200 square feet. With their new facilities the company is planning an enlarged fall business which will include a number of big features as well as shorter length subjects including company comedies.

While the C. B. Price Company, is only one year old its progress in the business has been considered remarkable by its short time. In its new quarters the company has ample facilities to conduct a business that will establish it among the foremost state right distributors in the field. At present publications, which include Billie Rhodes in "His Fajama Girl" and fifteen single reel Moniac Darkfeather subjects are among some of the better known subjects which are handled. It also will be remembered that the company marketed the "German Submarine U-25" pictures which created such a sensation last fall throughout the country.

Independence or--Disaster!
Tourneur Starting “Big 6” Schedule
After Completing One Other Picture

Maurice Tourneur, one of the “Big Six,” has one other picture to make under his present contract with Famous Players-Lasky Corporation after completion of “Deep Waters,” and it is now his aim to formulate his plans for his activities with Associated Producers and making the final scenes of “Deep Waters.” It is the version of F. Hopkinson Smith’s “Caleb West, Master Diver.”

The producer has announced that at the termination of his present contract he will change entirely his method of production. The day of the mediocre pictures cast aside, public demand for the really big things of the screen, he will devote whatever time is necessary in the making of his future productions.

Story Is the Thing
Tourneur believes that the public is more interested in a human story, convincingly told, than in stories built around personality, and in the future he will devote his entire energies to the visualization of stories of exceptions, not of about some vital theme in place of around a personality.

“I am through absolutely twisting and turning poor story material to try to balance my time between the two,” he said. “In the future I shall never start work on the projection of a story until I am through with the actual construction of it as a motion picture vehicle.”

The first story he will visualize for the new organization has been purchased, and he is one of the most widely read pieces of modern fiction. A number of months will be required for the planning of the production, which will embody the element of the spectacular as well as carrying a virile story.

To Limit Productions
It is the plan of the producer to make fewer pictures of very possibly not more than two or three, and in no event will he make more than four. In forming his new organization, Mr. Tourneur will carry a few capable actors in stock, but the majority of his players will be cast according to their ability to interpret the characters of the story at hand. Jack Gilbert, who was engaged as a permanent member of Mr. Tourneur’s organization some time ago to play juvenile leads, is now one of the important factors of the organization, having been given the post of assistant director as well as playing important roles in screen interpretation.

Barbara Bedford, although unknown to the photoplay fans at the present time, is another important member of the organization. She was discovered by Mr. Tourneur some time ago and for several months he has been travelling with her. He has cast her in the leading feminine role of his current production.

Means of Distribution
In speaking of the distribution of the production, Mr. Tourneur said: “I believe that the names of the six producers who are members of Associated Producers are guarantee enough to the exhibitors, and to the public as to the quality of productions that will be distributed through our organization. Our distribution arrangements have been announced and the productions will go directly from the producer to the distributor, eliminating the middle man entirely. This will give us an opportunity to cooperate directly with the gentlemen who are showing our product, and this is something that I believe is going to be one of the important forward steps for the exhibitor and the producer alike.

“Surely no one is more interested in a production than the man who makes it, and he is in a far better position to cooperate with the exhibitors than anyone else, for he has studied the production from every angle and knows the many interesting points that will appeal to the public. While these productions will all be distributed through the same exchanges, the same keen competition will exist between the producers as before.

“It is my intention to establish a very close working arrangement with the exhibitors showing productions and to give them every aid to get the maximum business with them. The success of the theatres will be the success of the producer, and it is just as important that the new arrangement to lend every cooperation possible as it is to make good pictures.”

Hope Hampton will be featured in the last picture he is to make under his present contract.

Showing of Hygiene
Production In N. Y.
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, June 15.—“Some Wild Oats,” a production controlled by Social Hygiene Films of America, Inc., is prohibited from being exhibited at the Harriet theatre or elsewhere by a decision just rendered by Supreme Court Justice Thomas F. Donnelly. The court refused to grant an injunction restraining John F. Gilchrist, commissioner of licenses, from interfering with the exhibition of the picture.

Hall Room Boys Comedies Put in First Run Houses

Jack and Harry Cohn, producers of the two-reel Hall Room Boys comedies, the filmization of the cartoon series by H. A. MacGill, report increasing first-run bookings on their laugh reels. They report the booking of two of the comedies on the Marcus Loew New York circuit for a period of seventy-two days. While these comedies have played on Broadway, this is said to be the longest booking record ever made of the series.

Charge Film Official
With Misuse of Mail
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

CLEVELAND, O., June 15.—F. W. Packer, president of Fidelity Picture Play Syndicate, and Miss Harriet Mills, secretary of the company, are held charged with the fraudulent use of the United States mails. Postoffice Inspector Cochrane declared that the sale of syndicate stock exceeded $100,000. Witnesses who will be called in the case are Frank J. Cannon, former United States senator from Utah; George L. Knapp, editor of the Chicago Daily Journal, who, it is claimed, had been asked to write a scenario on Senator Cannon’s book on Mormonism; Earl D. Bloom, former lieutenant governor of Ohio; C. B. Hoyt, superintendent, Nickel Plate Railroad, Cleveland, and others.

Eight More Short Films Completed by Reelcraft

Eight more pictures have been completed for the exclusive short subject program of Reelcraft Pictures Corporation and delivered to the general office in New York. Alice Howell has completed “Rubes and Romance” at the Chicago studio.

Rapid Expansion Forces International Departments Into New Studio Building

The new building occupies an entire city block and is said to be one of the most thoroughly equipped in the country.

Occupied Sixteenth Floor

The vacated offices of International are on the sixth floor at 729 Seventeenth avenue, where the company had been for three years.

"Success can be had only by cooperation and co-ordination of effort," said Mr. Hobart, "and the reason for concentrating our entire personnel under one roof is because we feel that in that way we will obtain better understanding between the different departments of the organization, which will have, naturally, a favorable effect upon our production. Under the new system each department can keep in close touch with the other departments without waste of time and effort. Our plans for the coming year are very ambitious and we believe that by concentrating our various departments at the studio we strengthen our organization by a considerable degree."

The former quarters in Seventh avenue contained the executive department, the author's department, the sales department, the contract department, the publicity and advertising department, the book departmnet where the animated cartoons were made, and the news reel department. Under the new plan all these departments are moved up to the studio with the exception of the news reel department which takes up headquarters at 238 William street, in the heart of Newspaper Row.

International Film Service's activities cover a wide field. First and foremost are the Cosmopolitan Productions, published through Paramount. Under this brand name are made the productions starring Marion Davies and the features directed by Frank Borzage, George D. Baker, Albert Capellani and Robert G. Vignola from the stories that appear in Cosmopolitan Magazine. The cartoon department makes the cartoon comedies published as International-Goldwyn-Bray Pictographs and International-Goldwyn-Bray Comics. The coast studio makes the "Bringing Up Father" comedies distributed by Pathe, and the news reel department compiles the three news reels issued by Universal.

Nevada Governor Is Featured By Special Executive Appears In Scenic of Famous Virginia City Mine In West

Famous men are more or less accustomed to the click of the news weekly cameras, but it remained for Governor Emmett Boyle of Nevada to be featured in a play photoplay being made by "Dick" Burrud for the Special Pictures Corporation.

On the famous "Tia Juana to Nome" expedition, which Burrud is filming for Special Pictures Corporation in conjunction with Sunset Magazine, Jane Lindsay and "Bobs" Lorraine, the two pretty girls who are traveling with the company, visited Carson City and Virginia City, the center of the historic silver boom.

Governor Boyle afforded the picture people every courtesy and agreed to appear in a reel of film depicting the famous Virginia City mine, from which more than $7,500,000,000 in silver ore has been taken.

The Sunset-Burrud Special Pictures expedition returned to Los Angeles for a rest a little after the triumphant return of the traveller at Lake Tahoe, the famous California watering place. They visited Coloma, where Gold was first discovered in California, and took many scenes around Placerville, which is the "Flargtown" of Bret Harte's works.

After a few days in the laboratories of the Special Pictures Corporation in Los Angeles, where the pictures already made are to be edited and the expedition will leave for Vancouver, where Stewart Edward White and Wallace Irwin are to join the party for a trip to Alaska. The two writers will record on the printed page what the camera registers of the trip.

Cohns Concentrating on Producing and Exploiting

With the entire foreign rights for the Hall Room Boys comedy "Dispicable" in the hands of two producers already under contract, Jack and Harry Cohn, the producers, are now concentrating their efforts on production and exploitation of the series.
Educational's New Policy Effective June 20 When Its Exchanges Open

Offices Will Be Maintained in Twenty-Four of the Principal Distributing Centers With Only Short Subjects on Program

June 20 marks another advancement in the five years of operation of Educational Films Corporation of America.

On that day the company will open its own exchanges in twenty-four of the principal distributing centers, and it will have entered upon its new and permanent policy embracing past activities and an expanded output for the future.

When Educational organized five years ago it confined itself solely to short subjects and it never has departed from the one and two reel field.

Product Has Tripled

With the week of June 20, Educational starts business upon its own exchanges with its product more than tripled and the claim that its offerings represent a high standard in the short subject field.

The next few weeks will see active operation exchanges devoting their entire attention to Educational product in New York, Buffalo, Boston, Philadelphia, Washington, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Louisville, Atlanta, New Orleans, Dallas, Indianapolis, Chicago, Minneapolis, Detroit, Des Moines, Omaha, Kansas City, Denver, Salt Lake City, Los Angeles, San Francisco and Seattle.

In each of these exchanges local interests are represented financially, but Educational maintains the majority stock of every branch, believing that this represents an ideal plan in insuring the ultimate co-operation in sales and exploitation effort, and at the same time maintains a positive exhibitor purchase opportunity.

To Distribute Comedies

With the opening of these exchanges Educational takes a new venture into the comedy field, and will have five two-part subjects available each month with the indication of several others being added soon. Christmas will supply a two-part comedy every two weeks while there will be a monthly two-reel publication of the Chester, Mermaid and Topsy series, Judge Brown stories, with a monthly and possibly semi-monthly issue, have been acquired, and another two-reel series of unusual heart interest will be announced later.

Educational has expanded also in the scenic, travel, animal, scientific and educational pictures, which have been intimately associated with its growth. Chester-Outing scenes have been taken over, formerly with the Bruce scenes a complete "cover" of this field. Chester screenies will be a bi-weekly publication while a number of series of travel and scenic subjects have been acquired.

Preferred Slow Growth

"Educational Films Corporation," says a statement just issued, "has preferred to feel slowly along sound business lines. When this company was formed five years ago, its founders had many plans in view, but they did not attempt to put them into operation until they believed that the time was ripe. They realized that it was a radical departure for a company to devote its whole attention to short subjects, especially at a time when there was a general rush towards features; but they were confident that the time would come when an organization handling nothing but one and two reel subjects, travel, educational, scientific, cartoon and comedy pictures would be as important and as powerful as any others.

For five years we devoted the greater portion of our time to developing the quality of our product and to proving the necessity of these short subjects to the theatre. The Bruce scenes, the Ditmars Living Book of Nature, George DeWright's Mexico Today, the Photoplay Magazine Screen Supplement and various series of similar character have been shown in thousands of theatres and there has been created such a demand as to cause us to greatly increase the volume of product.

Have Cream of Field

"During this period we were compelled to distribute our product through the best medium available, though from the start we have, of course, only partly distribution for our interests and those of the exhibitor would be our own exchange system.

"So, when we felt that the time had come for us to establish our own exchange system we let the fact be known among producers of short subjects whom we knew to desire better results. The results have would astonished anyone who had not been the center of the short subject field that we have given it for five years. We were literally overwhelmed with quantity of material. We have given space in all of our material attention, though we have rejected the greater portion of it. But this vast opportunity of selection, we believe, has given us the very cream of the field."

Max Levey Resigns as Robertson-Cole's Manager In Chicago

Max Levey, Chicago manager for Robertson-Cole, has resigned, effective June 26. Mr. Levey joined the Mutual Film Corporation, which was later taken over by Robertson-Cole, in February, 1919. He is probably one of the best known film men in the central west, having at different times represented Triangle in Chicago, World, Pathé, Metro, and finally Exhibitors' Mutual. Of his ten years' experience in handling film, he has spent six years in the Windy City.

Levey has the distinction of having built the first neighborhood motion picture theatre in Toledo, O. That was in 1909, when two reels of film was a big bill. He also bought the Ohio state rights to "Resurrection," starring Blanche Walsh, the first four-reel picture on the market at that time, and presented it throughout the state as a road show. Two others who have left the Robertson-Cole Chicago office are George DeKruif, publicity and advertising manager, and Wallace Mayer, assistant manager.

Mr. DeKruif has joined H. E. Rice, and will travel throughout the east and southeast assisting in publishing a series of booklets known as "Rice's Pathfinder." The first of these covering the highways and auto routes out of Chicago is just off the press.

Mr. Mayer has accepted a position with Roderick Ross, the printer.

Mr. Levey has several offers which he is considering, but contemplates taking a much needed vacation before accepting any.

April Exportation of Picture Films Totals
More Than $700,000

(Washington, D. C., June 26—Exports of motion picture films during April totaled more than $700,000 in value, according to figures just obtained from the department of commerce. Shipments of unexposed film during the month amounted to 1,785,701 linear feet, with value of $66,341, and of exposed film to 18,302,833 linear feet, with a value of $678,492.

Our export trade in films is fast becoming an important factor in our foreign commerce, and probably will total $9,000,000 or more for the fiscal year ending June, as indicated by the growth of the trade during the month of April. A large number of countries have been developed into good markets for exposed films.
Robertson-Cole Takes Decided Stand Against Entering Exhibitor's Field Distributing Organization Tells The Delegates At Cleveland That It Will Not Acquire Theatres Unless It Is Forced To Do So

Robertson-Cole will not operate motion picture theatres in any city in the United States unless forced to do so "where and when allied interests exercising a monopoly have eliminated competition."

This, in tabloid form, is the jist of the policy determined on by Robertson-Cole Distributing Corporation and announced in a statement signed by A. S. Kirkpatrick, vice-president and general manager, which was issued at the convention of exhibitors at Cleveland.

Statement Issued

The statement defining this policy follows:

Robertson-Cole will not build, purchase nor otherwise acquire motion picture theatres in any city in the United States, nor will we engage in the exhibition of motion pictures for profit unless — you, the exhibitor, force us to do so.

Robertson-Cole demands the right to open and fair competition on the basis of merit and will only feel "forced" to acquire theatres where and when allied interests exercising a monopoly have eliminated competition.

Robertson-Cole are merchants engaged in the distribution of motion picture productions on a commercial brokerage basis, and we intend to adhere strictly to our field without digression or trespass.

Appreciate Conditions

Robertson-Cole stands free of all entangling alliances and affiliations, and we fully appreciate the ideal position in which our independence places us. Robertson-Cole does not intend to jeopardize that position.

Robertson-Cole has but one objective, and is concentrating every ounce of energy upon it. We have no conflicting interests within our organization, and no connections outside of our organization that would divert our attention and influence the conduct of our business of distribution.

Robertson-Cole believes in competition. Without competition there is no incentive to progress; and there should be progress in every branch of the motion picture industry.

Believes in Competition

Robertson-Cole believes the exhibitor should be encouraged to progress in building, improving and fortifying the prestige of the motion picture theatre, and we are convinced that to discourage the progressive spirit of exhibitors by an invasion of their field is dangerous to the long life of the industry.

Robertson-Cole looks at the motion picture film as so much merchandise, and in the market to purchase the best class of "merchandise" and to resell it to the trade.

Robertson-Cole looks upon the exhibition of motion pictures as a theatrical and amusement enterprise — a class of business that legitimately belongs to the showman, and does not intend to invade that field.

Are Dealing Fairly

Robertson-Cole believes that dignity, commercial integrity and business honor should characterize every transaction between producers, distributors and exhibitors.

Mr. Robertson and Mr. Cole decided that the distribution of motion pictures was a class of business that they, as a successful commercial company, aside from their film interests, with connections in every civilized country in the world, could handle to the mutual advantage of producer and exhibitor. They organized the Robertson-Cole Distributing Corporation to handle this business on a fair and equitable margin of profit, and it is on this basis and in the capacity of merchants that they will continue to be connected with the motion picture business.

Don't Use Deposit Money

Robertson-Cole does not use deposit money received from exhibitors in the furtherance of its business enterprises. We have unlimited financial resources and do not need exhibitors' money to carry on our business.

Robertson-Cole places all deposit money in separate trust accounts; and a clause which we have written in our contracts absolutely prevents our using these funds until we have delivered the film that they guarantee.

Robertson-Cole intends to invest whatever may be necessary to maintain a foremost position in the industry, and to safeguard this investment we propose to do everything possible to secure the confidence of our customers.

ROBERTSON-COLE DIST. CORP.

Vice-Prs. and General Manager.

LOS ANGELES, June 15—Henry McRae, former district general at Universal City, who recently achieved more fame by taking Marie Walcamp to the Contracts for a big serial production, has signed with First National to make his own picture.
A Boat That Was Never Launched

To get night scenes aboard a ferry boat for a new production Universal’s carpenters duplicated one of the boats that ply between San Francisco and Oakland, Cal. The job was done in a few days, and although the vessel constructed might not have stood severe service in the bay, it answered all film requirements and could not be distinguished, on the screen, from the real article.

Rapid Progress Made On Farrar’s Initial Associated Exhibitors Film

Production of “The Riddle: Woman,” Geraldine Farrar’s first picture for Associated Exhibitors, is progressing rapidly at the old Thanhouser studio at New Rochelle N. Y., under the direction of Edward Jose.

Frank Losee is the most recent acquisition to the cast which is supporting the opera and picture star. Two other prominent names, Adele Blood and Montagu Love, are also in the cast.

One Set Pretentious

Associated officials consider that this production, which Pathe will distribute, will be one of the truly great contributions to motion pictures. The Egyptian set upon which the company is now engaged in making early scenes of the play is said to be very pretentious.

The most recent acquisition to the cast, Mr. Losee, is a veteran of stage and screen, whose work is known to motion picture enthusiasts throughout the land. For twenty-five years he appeared in many of the great stage plays, under the direction of Belasco, Frohman, Klaw & Erlanger; the Shuberts and John Cort.

Associated, being purely an exhibitors-owned organization, it is to be assumed its members know just what the public wants in the way of entertainment. Director Jose, before advancing the work on the stage play, in which Bertha Kalich starred for two years, consulted with the board of directors. He obtained the individual views on just how the picture should be presented, and in that wise gained opinions that would be of vast assistance to him during the production period.

Her Strongest Part

Miss Farrar has entered upon her work with her characteristic vigor. The strength of the characterization she is drawing in “The Riddle: Woman,” is said to be greater than any she has ever portrayed for the screen.

Director Jose is finding the old Thanhouser studio an ideal place for the filming of the production. The stage is sufficiently large to permit the erection of two sets at the same time, so there need be no delay while waiting for the building of interiors. Mr. Jose’s knowledge of Miss Farrar’s capabilities is another factor in the smooth, rapid progress being made with “The Riddle: Woman.”

Song Is Written To Exploit Tower Film Territories Have Been Sold on “Tillie’s Punctured Romance”

Byron Gay, author of “The Vamp,” “Sand Dunes” and other popular songs, has written “Tillie,” which will be used in exploiting “Tillie’s Punctured Romance,” which is being distributed on the state right market by Tower Film Corporation.

Henry Burr Publishing Company has arranged to publish this number and will inaugurate a national campaign on it. This exploitation by Henry Burr company will assist state right buyers and exhibitors throughout the country in the exploitation of the photoplay.

Tower Film Corporation announces the sale of the following territories on this production:

Federated Film Exchanges, Boston, Mass.—New England States; Maurice W. Jencks, Funston, Kansas—Missouri; Criterion Film Service, Atlanta, Ga.—North and South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama and Tennessee; Equity Distributing Company, Portland, Oregon—Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana; W. J. Film Service, Indianapolis, Ind.—Indiana; Sterling Film Corporation, Omaha, Neb.—Iowa and Nebraska.

Joe Fox, Kansas City, Mo.—Kansas; Gardner Syndicate, Buffalo, N. Y.—New York state; Standard Film Exchange, Pittsburgh, Pa.—western Pennsylvania and West Virginia; Twentieth Century Film Company, Philadelphia, Pa.—eastern Pennsylvania and southern New Jersey; Wisconsin Film Corporation, Milwaukee, Wis.—Wisconsin.

From reports received from these various state right buyers, the picture is being booked for week runs in many theatres throughout the country and the box office reports from these theatres prove that this comedy is drawing more than capacity business, it is said.

Independence or Disaster!
Mayflower Program Will Include At Least Seventeen Specials This Year

Productions of Six Prominent Directors Figure in Output With Publications Being Made at the Rate of One Every Three Weeks

Seventeen special productions as a minimum of output, with a publication every three weeks, represents the program outlined by Mayflower Photoplay Corporation for its 1920 schedule, which began on January 1.

In making this announcement, Benjamin A. Prager, president, declared that twelve productions already have been completed, these pictures representing a total investment of more than $3,000,000.

Six Big Producers Contribute

Contributing to this program are six of the industry's prominent directors and producers, including ALLAN DWAN, GEORGE LOANE TUCKER, SIDNEY A. FRANKLIN, R. A. WALSH, EMILE LOANE TARD and CHARLES MILLER. Each of these will make one or more pictures for the company. The list of subjects completed and in the distributor's branch office includes Allan Dwan's "Soldiers of Fortune," "The Luck of the Irish," "A Splendid Hazard," "The Scoffer," and "In the Heart of a Fool"; R. A. Walsh's "The Deep Purple"; Sidney A. Franklin's "Athalie"; Charles Miller's "The Law of the Yukon," and Chautard's "The Mystery of the Yellow Room."

Since the beginning of the year, four productions presented by Mayflower have been published. They include Dwan's "The Luck of the Irish" and "Soldiers of Fortune," Walsh's "The Deep Purple" and Chautard's "The Mystery of the Yellow Room," all of which were issued under the Realart banner. "A Splendid Hazard," an Allan Dwan production with Henry B. Walthall in the leading role, is receiving pre-release showings in seven key cities, preparatory to its general distribution through First National franchise holders.

Issued in August

Dwan's "The Scoffer" is tentatively scheduled for publication by First National on August 23, to be followed on September 27 by "Athalie," founded on Robert W. Chambers' novel of that name and just completed by Director Franklin. Dwan's "In the Heart of a Fool" will be published the following month. "The Law of the Yukon," adapted by Charles Miller from Robert W. Service's poem of that name, will be issued by Realart early this fall.

In addition to this, Emile Chautard has completed two productions to be presented by Mayflower, neither of which has been definitely titled. "George Loane Tucker is cutting and titling "Ladies Must Live."

Tucker is under contract to make four additional specials to be presented by Mayflower, two of which, in addition to "Ladies Must Live," will be published this year.

Dwan is working on the sixth of his independent productions which, in all probability, will be published this year, following "In the Heart of a Fool. R. A. Walsh has begun his second production which, together with "The Deep Purple," will be another subject to follow.

"One now in course of production, will constitute this director's contribution to Mayflower's 1920 schedule, "Every Picture a Special."

In disclosing the Mayflower program, Mr. Prager commented not only upon the exceptionally large volume of his organization's 1920 output but also upon the fact that every production in the list is a "special."

That Mayflower, despite its youth, has attained supremacy in the field of independent production is evidenced by the glance at the list of productions released and scheduled for release during 1920," said Mr. Prager.

"Particularly significant of the progress made by Mayflower during its one year of existence is the fact that it is presenting a larger number of special productions than any independent producing organization in the industry. This fact alone furnishes conclusive proof of the sound financial basis upon which Mayflower is founded and of the progress which it motivates its sponsors. The impetus provided by the sensational success of George Loane Tucker's "The Miracle Man" has been more than maintained through the present year. I take this opportunity of expressing Mayflower's appreciation to the thousands of exhibitors whose hearty support of its policies made possible the great scope of the program which is now fulfilling,"

New General Manager Now Is Planning to Equip the Long Island Plant

Arthur V. Smith has been recently appointed general manager of the Eastern studios of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. At present he is attending to details relating to the equipment for the company's new studio and laboratory at Long Island City.

The new official declared that in all probability the new plant would be in operation between July 15 and August 1, and by that time he expected to have six or seven producing units working.

Regarding production activities, Mr. Smith said:

"At the present time we are producing three pictures at the Fifty-sixth and Forty-fourth street studios, George Fitzmaurice is at work on 'Idols of Clay,' with Mae Murray and David Powell. Harley Knole is working on Miss Dalton's next picture, 'A Winter City Favorite,' and Edvard Dillion has begun 'The Frisky Mrs. Johnson,' with Miss Burke."

Ralph Bradford Resigns

Ralph Bradford, manager of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation Chicago office, has resigned. Mr. Bradford but lately succeeded Fred Creswell when the latter was made division manager, having come here from Atlanta, Ga., where he was connected with the S. A. Lynch Enterprises. Mr. Bradford has not announced his plans for the future. He will be succeeded by Harris P. Wolfberg, who occupies the position of division manager of the Lasky company at Cleveland.
Mr. and Mrs. De Haven Affiliate
With Arthur S. Kane Corporation

Mr and Mrs. Carter De Haven, according to an announcement by Arthur S. Kane Pictures Corporation, have effected a be-up with the latter organization. Mr. Kane, through the affiliation, handles the business interests of the actors with First National Exhibitors Circuit, the distribution medium.

While in New York City last month Mr. De Haven made the preliminary arrangements whereby the Kane corporation is to take over the business affairs of the star and his wife in their forthcoming First National productions. Negotiations concluded during the past week complete the affiliation.

Comment Is Favorable

The news of the union of Mr. and Mrs. De Haven and Arthur S. Kane received favorable comment from keen observers of the picture business. It was pointed out that the De Havens, under the supervision of a film man of Mr. Kane's acknowledged standing, are in a position to supersede in a large way their previous successes, and are assured of bringing out productions that combine all the big qualities of pre-established box office value.

With this strong combination of artistic and business talents, the forthcoming offerings of the De Havens under the First National banner are expected to be unusual picture attractions with money-making possibilities foremost in view, and points of importance from the exhibitor angle carefully stressed.

Walsh Progressing With Second Mayflower Film

Work on R. A. Walsh's second independent production to be presented by the Mayflower Photoplay Corporation is progressing rapidly at the Biograph Studio. This will be the first Walsh production to be distributed by First National. The title of the story and its origin are being withheld for the present.

Psychic Phenomena Basis of Mayflower's "Athalie"

Public interest in spiritualism, which has been especially prevalent of late, is expected to contribute much to the box office success of "Athalie," Sidney Franklin's production, which Mayflower Photoplay Corporation will distribute through First National Exhibitors Circuit.

This Robert W. Chambers' story deals with an interesting phase of psychic phenomena, relating the experience of a beautiful girl endowed with these powers.

Through the girl's ability to exist extra-sensually, beyond the horizon and her gifts of clairvoyance, she attracts the attention of New York's elite and becomes a successful mystic. In the high-powered climax, the young seeress, before a large and fashionable gathering, stirs society by revealing the crystal globe, an illicit love affair between the wife of the man with whom she is in love and a dissolute social parasite.

"Athalie" is played by a large cast of screen favorites headed by Sylvia Breamer as the medium, and including Conrad Nagle, as her lover, Rosemary DeCamp, and Bessie, Robert Cain, as the inscrupulous philanderer, Edward S. T. Martin and Fred Warren.

Character's 'Isle of Destiny' Gives Ample Opportunity for Exploitation

In producing "The Isle of Destiny," Character Pictures Corporation gave special attention to the exploitation angle as well as to the entertainment qualities of the picture itself.

The unusual locale and the picturesque allure of the locale, it is said, offered the producers splendid opportunities to get something attractive and different into the production. Some of the most interesting scenes allowing for exploitation are those laid in the heart of the Florida jungles, which are so thick that the company was forced to cut their way through to the desired locations.

Unusual Scenes Taken

These scenes were taken far off the beaten track in territories never before exposed to the eye of the camera. It is declared. A real tropical banana grove plays a part and for several days the company worked on one of the largest plantations in the world to get the atmosphere of the Philippines.

Much of the story of "The Isle of Destiny" is laid on a desert island of the South Seas, and the company journeyed to Oriental Island, Florida, to insure these scenes. The scenes taken there should lend themselves wonderfully to exploitation, as the beach on Oriental Island is considered to be very remarkable.

Cannibals Take Part

Cannibals play an important part in the picture and much time was given to get the correct type. One of the scenes is a scene in which it is estimated that 50,000 fiddler crabs are in evidence. In trying to get scenes and locations that were different, the company had great difficulties and only obtained them at the expense of much time and money.

Most of the scenes of "The Isle of Destiny" were taken far away from all lines of transportation and communications and all props and equipment had to be carried by hand. The company, however, feels that the results obtained will more than repay for this extra attention.

"The Isle of Destiny" will be given a trade showing in a few days.

Robert Harron’s Initial Picture Will Be Made in the East—Doraldina, Dancer, Also Is Signed
By the Organization

With one of the authors just signed by Metro Pictures Corporation now working at the company's West Coast studios, four others are preparing to leave for California shortly to write and to assist in production of their stories.

Eugene Presbrey is the writer now on the lot, while Irvin S. Cobb, George Kibbe Turner, Hubert Footner and Arthur Somers Roche are the ones who will make the trip West soon. Two other authors, Henry C. Rowland and Donn Byrne, have been signed by Metro.

Two Stars Signed

Two new stars will appear in productions for Metro this coming year. They are Robert Harron, the former Griffith star, who will head his own company, Robert Harron Productions, and Doraldina, the dancer.

Harron now is preparing to start production on his first picture, which will bear the tentative title, “Coincidence.” The story is by Morton Macy and appeared in the Cosmopolitan Magazine several years ago.

Doraldina will be featured in a series of spectacular productions that will enable her to display advantageously her exceptional skill as a dancer.

Double Production Work

With the acquisition of these authors and stars, Metro’s production policy for 1920-21 will almost double in extent that of the present year, it is said. Between fifty and sixty specials will be published during the year beginning this fall. “Fewer and better” pictures, although more of them, will be possible, it is explained, by the greatly increased studio facilities.

Metro’s studios at Hollywood, Cal., are working to capacity, with eight or nine productions under way, while the New York plant in West Sixty-first street is busy with three productions.

A new $2,000,000 studio is to be erected shortly on Long Island. It is expected to have this plant in operation by next spring.

To Make Four Pictures

Robert Harron will make four productions a year for distribution by Metro, while each of the authors signed will prepare from four to seven original stories during the year. Negotiations for the services of the writers were placed in the hands of Bayard Veiller, the playwright.

Harron, who will produce at D. W. Griffith’s studio in Hollywood, N. Y., will be directed by Chet Withey. June Walker will play opposite the young star in his first picture.

Doraldina will start work immediately on the Coast on her first production, “The Passion Fruit.” The story has a Hawaiian locale, and it is expected that the company will go to the islands for exteriors.

Flora Finch Member of Well-Balanced Cast for Initial Hemmer Picture

A well-balanced cast, including such players as Flora Finch, Pete Raymond, John Boone, Horace Weston and others, has been chosen by Clay Davis, casting director for Hemmer Superior Productions, for the company’s initial picture.

“Once we have made the type we are not merely picking types,” says Mr. Davis. “We are selecting actors and actresses of experience who can interpret characters and who not only look the part, but know how to act it intelligently. Mr. Hemmer believes that a well-balanced cast will assure finished acting.

First, then, in importance with us was the selection of the cast—locations, sets and all other considerations came afterward. We feel that in this cast is Flora Finch, remembered by all picture enthusiasts, for her work with Biograph, Pathé, Paramount, Blackton and others; Pete Raymond, John Boone, Horace Weston and so on—all people of wide experience on the stage and all accomplished actors.”

Garson and Somborn Sign Sada Cowan to Write Screen Plays
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, June 15.—Sada Cowan, author of both stage and screen plays, has been signed by Harry Garson and Herbert K. Somborn to write exclusively for them original stories which will be produced as specials.

One of Miss Cowan’s most recent screen endeavors was the scenario for “Why Change Your Wife?” In addition to other motion picture successes she is the author of such dramas as “Playing the Game,” “The State Forbids,” “In the Morgue,” “The Moonlit Way,” “The Honor of America” and “The Wonder of the Age,” a comedy produced by Grace George.

Preliminary work on the initial Cowan production is under way. These pictures will be published as specials.

Color Photography Used in Salisbury Production

Color photography will be a feature of “The Barbarian,” Monroe Salisbury’s first independently produced photodrama upon which he now is at work. One of the two cameras trained on the action will record the scenes in natural colors. The perfected orthochromatic process will be used.

LOS ANGELES, June 15.—Molly Malone, comedienne with Universal, “Fatty” Arbuckle and Christie, has been signed by Goldwyn on a long time contract.
Booth Tarkington to Write Feature Photoplays for Goldwyn Corporation

Booth Tarkington, the noted American author, is to write feature photoplays for Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, the rights to these photoplays having been obtained by the producing company from Tarkington Baker, the writer's cousin.

Henry Hertzbrun, attorney, represented Baker in the negotiations. Many flattering offers for the rights were received by Mr. Baker, who is a cousin of the author, said Mr. Hertzbrun, before he recently went to India on a picture mission and left in doubt the fate of the projected photoplays. The influence which caused Goldwyn to be selected to produce the pictures was the financial and artistic success of the "Edgar" series of two-reel comedies which Mr. Tarkington wrote for production at the Culver City studios.

"Edgar" Series Successful

The "Edgar" stories, known officially as "The Adventures and Emotions of Edgar Poweroye," have proven money-makers from the beginning, and officers of the Goldwyn company believe that they give every indication that Mr. Tarkington has mastered the art of writing original screen themes. Consequently, they believe that the longer stories about American life, which he will compose for the films will be big box office attractions.

The universal acceptance of "Edgar," by critics and public alike, has created a market for the Tarkington screen wares which exhibitors will sell with gratifying results, the officers say. In a manner, these short-reel comedies, which have been successful in their way as stories and as lucrative assets, will now prove to have been missionary works arousing the interest of the motion-picture audiences so that when the first of the longer photoplays, written about and for adults, are produced, they will already have a decided appeal and value both to the exhibitor and his patrons.

One Phase of Decision

There is another phase of Mr. Tarkington's decision to write directly for the screen which must prove important in the long run. This phase is the acquisition to the screen of another writer who will create for the new medium with intelligence and sincerity. Producers have long felt the need of having screen writers whose stories will bear the fine scrutiny of logic and turn aside irony. Perhaps one of the greatest reputations which has as yet set out to write film vehicles is Maurice Materlucy, who is under a long term contract with Goldwyn to write one story a year for the screen.

Sol Lesser's Publicity Stunts Score

Another Point at Cleveland Gathering

Maurie Meyers, Eastern publicity representative for Sol Lesser, West Coast exhibitor and producer of the Annette Kellerman production, "What Women Love," was a busy visitor in Cleveland during the exhibitors' convention.

Meyers repeated the activities of the Lesser aggregation during the Chicago meeting. Every exhibitor woke up in the morning or retired for the night with some new stunt in his hotel box.

First Stunt Monday

The first stunt was fired on Monday night, when several hell boys paged prominent exhibitors with telegrams (each exhibitor "shelled out" with a dime or more), which proved to be "Annette Kellerman-grains," which read:

"Boys I turned eight handsprings and nine somersaults when my Annette Kellerman Picture what women love went over with a bang at its premier presentation in Santa Anna California last Tuesday night stop I am tickled to death and so will you be when you get an am with you in your contentions. Regards"

Signed—SOL LESSER

Placed In Boxes

These messages also were placed in all the boxes of the Hotels Winton, Statler and Cleveland.

The second stunt took place Tuesday night. Meyers obtained about 300 brown six-ounce whiskey flasks, filled them up with water and corked them tight. A pink label on the flask read:

"This is not "WHAT WOMEN LOVE" but what ANNETTE KELLERMAN LOVES Yours for something stronger than water"

SOL LESSER

The bottle was enclosed in a heavy envelope on which was printed HANDEL WITH CARE. This stunt proved quite a laugh. One exhibitor, thinking he was the only one who got the package, hid the bottle quickly in his pocket, looked all around and then hurried to the elevator, thinking of the good time he was going to have.

These bottles also were placed in the boxes of the different hotels and distributed throughout.

$11,000,000 Program Outlined By "Big 6"

LOS ANGELES, June 15—Following the meeting of Associated Producers, Inc., here recently, it was divulged that a program that will represent an expenditure of $11,000,000 has been outlined.
Barnstyn In America
To Purchase Pictures
Will Also Import Product Of Foreign Producers For Distribution Here

J. C. Barnstyn of British & Continental Trading Company, whose previous visits to America were in the interest of H. A. P. Film Company of Holland, has returned for the purpose of purchasing productions for his clients in Continental Europe. British & Continental Trading Company also will import the product of large foreign producers for distribution in this country.

During his absence from this country, Mr. Barnstyn, whose offices are at 220 West 42nd Street, New York, made an extended stay in Holland and toured the principal film centers of Europe.

Represents Large Firms

"I have just returned from a long sojourn in Holland and an extended tour of Continental Europe," said Mr. Barnstyn, "and am happy to announce that I have perfected arrangements to act as the American representative for several large continental film renters operating extensively throughout Europe.

"I shall conduct all business under the firm name of British & Continental Trading Company. I retain my interest in H. A. P. Film Company of Holland, which organization I shall represent in this country as their exclusive buyer of films for consumption in the Holland territory. In this respect I might mention that plans are under way for the acquisition of a number of 'special' productions, the names of which I shall be pleased to announce when contracts are closed.

Has Large Distribution

"I have been appointed the American representative for the Cinematographic M. Hacken, Societe Anonyme of Belgium, France and Switzerland. This organization specializes in the distribution of motion pictures on a large scale, and I propose to purchase many big American pictures for distribution throughout the Scandinavian territory, will be represented in America by my organization. I am at present negotiating for a number of American pictures for distribution throughout this territory, returning for this company during the coming year.

"The J. Lundin Photoplay Company of Stockholm, a vast motion picture enterprise recently perfected to acquire American and native productions for distribution throughout the Scandinavian territory, will be represented in America by my organization. I am at present negotiating for a number of American pictures for distribution throughout this territory, returning for this company during the coming year, and shall make known the details of the contract at some later period.

Wants Big Productions

"In making this announcement to the American trade, I wish to impress upon all those who might be interested in doing business with me, that I am desirous of obtaining big American productions having the facilities for marketing these pictures, and the money to pay for same.

"While my interests will be chiefly devoted to the purchase of American productions for my clients in Continental Europe, I have also arranged to bring over the product of some of the largest European producers for distribution in this country."

Pearl White in Kentucky Mountains
Making Her Third Picture for Fox

Pearl White, with her director, Charles Giblyn, and her supporting players, including Richard C. Travers and J. Thornton Boston, is in the Kentucky mountains, near Pineville, making exteriors for her third picture under the Fox banner. The production has not been titled.

Company Precedes Her

Prior to the star's departure from New York the company had been in Kentucky making scenes that did not require her presence.

Although inclement weather delayed operations after her arrival at Pineville, the company is expected back in New York shortly to complete the final scenes.

Mr. Travers, who is cast as leading man, is also a star in his own right. After returning to this country from the front he resumed at once his screen career. He played opposite Miss White in her first feature production for Fox, which it is expected will be published this fall.

Played Heavy Role

In the second of Pearl White's vehicles, which she completed just prior to her departure for Europe, J. Thornton Boston played the heavy role. He is similarly cast in the new film.

With these two sterling actors and Pearl White as the star, under the skillful direction of Charles Giblyn, this feature promises a treat of fine dramatic quality.

Bessie Love Going East
To Buy Gowns and Hats

Bessie Love has made reservations in Los Angeles for a trip to New York City to buy gowns and hats. The star is working on the final scenes of her second Andrew J. Callaghan production, "Bonnie May," and will leave for the East immediately upon completion of the picture.
American Productions More Popular With French Fans Than Other Films

Leon Madieu Says, However, That Stronger and Better Constructed Scenarios Would Be Welcomed in Europe

Today the American productions lead the field in the motion picture market in France. This statement on the existing conditions in France was made by Leon Madieu, chairman of the board of directors of Pathé Cinema, Paris, and treasurer of Pathé Exchange, Inc.

Mr. Madieu, who is in the United States studying methods of production, declared further that the French public seems to take pleasure in attributing to the American pictures technical qualities of the highest standard.

Require Better Scenarios

"Aside from the excellent qualities observed in American direction and acting, the mentality of the French masses in general would require stronger and better constructed scenarios," he declares further. It is my belief, moreover, that, in the near future, the American public will make the same demands.

"In France efforts have been made in the detailed production of artistic emotional photoplays. One of the latest works that Pathé Exchange, Inc., has chosen is the fascinating drama by Abel Gance, entitled "J'Accuse." By this intensely realistic film, Americans will be brought to a realization of what impressive progress in pictures has been made by the French. I believe that the public on this side of the Atlantic will receive this picture enthusiastically."

"A considerable number of reed-Italian product have crossed the frontier of France, but very few of them have met with success. Italian acting seems too exuberant, in the gestures especially, and there are many discrepancies in scenario."

MACK SENNETT'S NEW FIVE REELER

There is one question which interests American motion picture producers—the degree prohibiting the importation of raw film into France. The sole reason for this law is the critical financial situation in our country. We have been obliged to restrict our purchases from other countries in all branches of commerce and industry.

"The French government, knowing the capacity of the Pathé Cinema plant, and that Pathé Cinema could supply the French market, did not hesitate to take this step. Pathé Cinema most assuredly will draw out a profit from this restriction, but it has done nothing, and could do nothing to provoke it. Aside from this, it is sure of its position as an international factor in the industry and looks forward to the time when competition, which is the life of trade, will be resumed.

Is Favorably Impressed

"My ideas concerning the American market are not yet quite definite enough to allow me the pleasure of setting them forth."

"Let it suffice me to say that during the course of my first visit I have been most favorably impressed with the perfect organization which I found in Pathé Exchange, Inc. It is instinct with the American spirit of achievement. Mr. Brunet thoroughly has understood the importance of the vast enterprise he is conducting, and, ably seconded by his entire personnel, he is directing constructive efforts to the full attainment of the high ideals which have always been his guiding line of conduct."

WINS BEAUTY CONTEST

Gertrude Olmsted, 17-year-old La Salle girl is Chosen to Lead Parade And Star in Film

Gertrude Olmsted, 17-year-old La Salle, Ill., schoolgirl, has had her fondest hopes realized. She is to be a motion picture star.

Two months ago Miss Olmsted entered her picture in the beauty contest conducted by the Chicago Herald and Examiner in the interest of the local Elks, the winner to represent the Spirit of America in the Elks pageant on July 7, at the national convention.

In addition, Carl Laemmle, president of Universal Film Manufacturing Company, promised to star the winner in a picture to be made at Universal City. On Sunday, June 13, Miss Olmsted was declared the "lucky girl." Of the hundreds of contestants, the judges were unanimous in their decision that she possessed beauty and ability, the requirements of the contest.

Before Miss Olmsted was chosen she appeared, with other girls, many times before the judges and posed as many more times before the camera. Her simplicity, naturalness and poise stood out prominently in the film tests that were made.

The "lucky girl" has taken part in nearly every amateur performance that has been given in La Salle since she was 7 years of age. She has taken esthetic dancing lessons since she was 5.

SUMMER STUFF

Summer has arrived—officially, climatically and financially speaking. Chicago box offices first gave definite indication of the event last week, and Chicago exhibitors, with exhibitors throughout the country, now face squarely the problem of the season—how to avoid the old familiar Summer slump.

Exploitation is the logical solution, of course. More and better advertising covering a wider field is the instrument with which the handicap imposed by Nature can be offset.

Theoretically the matter is simple. It can be set down in a single sentence. To put the idea into practical application, however, is another and difficult operation.

INTENSIFICATION IS ALTERNATIVE

In most cases exhibitors will find extension and improvement of their advertising difficult for the very good reason that it has already been extended to the apparent limit and improved to the full extent of its sponsors' ability.

In the majority of cases it will not be found possible to gain extraordinary results by mere expansion and elaboration.

Intensification of effort is the obvious alternative. By paying attention to certain very important details, both in advertising and house management, definite results can be obtained—and the bugaboo of exhibitor-dom, the "hot weather slump," can be almost if not quite entirely overcome.

It is to call attention to these details, to bring them to mind that they may be properly taken care of, that the following paragraphs are written.

Black is naturally associated with heat. Anything that suggests heat is taboo during the warm period. Therefore, it is well to keep newspaper advertising, as well as other forms, free of black blotches and splashes. Openwork designs will prove infinitely more attractive— with the natural and very desirable result.

Get white into your theatre. Usurers' uniforms, seat covers, draperies, presentation settings, lobby furnishings, all play an important part in the general ensemble. Keep them light as possible and invariably clean. The psychological effect is worth infinitely more than the cost price.

Legitimate theatres, so-called, almost without exception, send girls through the auditorium with ice water for those who wish it. Some day Grauman, McCormick or Rojasenfeld is going to begin the practice and American exhibitors will follow suit in a body. Why wait?

Ventilating systems have doubtless been installed before this. It does not hold true that all have capitalized them to the full. A sign, "Twenty Degrees Cooler Inside," is worth something, but it isn't convincing. A big thermometer, conspicuously mounted, with pipes painted white so arranged as to seem connected directly with the interior, the thermometer being an adjustable dummy, will bring better results.

A soda fountain was recently installed in the lobby of the Ziegfeld theatre, Chicago. It is an independent enterprise, the space being rented at a gratifying figure. It is doing a thriving business—and many of the pedestrians who stop in to buy a drink linger to patronize the theatre. Any ice cream parlor should welcome an opportunity to install a small fountain in your lobby—and pay well for the space. The results are mutually beneficial.

Sandwich men, with which are included all who take part in street exploitation measures, should appear cool, whatever their actual state or the effort required to get that appearance. "Back to God's Country," "The River's End," "The Courage of Marge O'Done" and similar productions are especially desirable, but make-believe Eskimos will not be found as profitable street figures as floats bearing Arctic settings, snow and ice backgrounds, with polar bears, or imitations, mounted thereupon.

A short show is best for Summer. That does not mean a show of few reels. As many or more subjects than customary is advisable. But projection should be spirited, comedy should be well represented, musical accompaniment should consist of the lightest selections reconcilable with the picture. Speed in all that tends to make up house conduct is essential—but show of speed is fatal.

Tactful, carefully training of em-

Warm Weather
And Cold Feet

The Summer slump, traditional bugaboo of the present season, is, curiously enough, the result of nothing more nor less than what is slangily but expressively referred to as "cold feet" on the part of exhibitors generally.

Summer undeniably imposes its hardships—but they should not be considered as more than that.

Simply because these hardships are imposed by Nature, instead of by another exhibitor, is not a logical reason for submitting without a struggle.

Competition is merely competition, from whatever source it arises, and no self-respecting exhibitor ever gave up to competition without a battle.

Hot weather is competition. Why "quit cold?"

ployes is the thing that will make this possible.

Screen advertising must be reduced to a minimum. It is tiresome to the average patron at best. It is worse than when collars are folded and starched dresses cling limply to feminine forms.

Get pretty girls. Competency and beauty do not always go together, but your patrons are not concerned with the former. Get pretty girls, and dress them to look cool. The bathing suit idea is "out." But tennis, yachting, fishing and track costumes offer splendid possibilities. But be sure the girls are pretty. Pretty girls never look as warm as their less attractive sisters.

Let them hear the ventilators. If your mechanism is so well situated that its operation is not audible from the auditorium—rig up a wind machine that sounds like a gale. Patrons are convinced that it's a hot day before they come into the theatre. They may feel cool without realizing it. When they hear the purr of whirling blades they believe it.

Get good pictures. Their general character is less important than their interest holding qualities. An interested patron does not worry about temperature. Keep them interested.

Furnish good music. Add pieces to your orchestra if necessary, but make sure that the music is the best that it can possibly be made. Again the interest argument holds good.

Run good shows. Leave nothing undone that will improve the performance as a whole. Leave no weak spots to try the patrons' patience.

Summer is not ideal for hard work. But by hard work and unremitting vigilance, and by no other means, the exhibitor can make sure of looking back over his box office records next Fall without being ashamed of his showing.

Suggestion

There is more power in suggestion than in concrete instruction.

Suggestion leaves initiative free to operate. Concrete instruction cramps imagination, limits enterprise.

Advertisements which leave nothing to the imagination are less productive than those which suggest forcibly, alluringly.

The error is common.

Correction should be prompt and unanimous.

Exhibitor Builds Own Treadmill For "Old Kentucky" Presentation

Barney Lumberg, proprietor of the Lumberg theatre, Utica, N. Y., believes in presentation, exploitation, and all that goes to make up modern showmanship. He has in his recent experience with "In Old Kentucky"—Anita Stewart's First National Attraction, demonstrated to the satisfaction of all that his ability extends beyond the field of the managerial office. He has given unmistakable evidence of an ingenuity and determination that can bring but one result—success!

In the early history of "In Old Kentucky" the treadmill with the genuine horse race as the culmination of a programme figured prominently. Certain branch offices of First National Exhibitors' Circuit, Inc., made arrangements to supply treadmill and supplementary apparatus with the production.

It was no great accomplishment for an exhibitor to stage the feature after the material was supplied him, though it did require a certain courage if he was not in the habit of staging big attractions in a big way.

Mr. Lumberg's accomplishment was genuine, however, as he devised and constructed his own mechanism for the occasion.

The manner of its operation is shown rather clearly in the accompanying illustration, snapped while the horses were galloping at such a pace that their legs and feet didn't register. The photograph is interesting for two reasons, one of which is its educational value.

The other and more important reason has to do with inspiration.

What Mr. Lumberg can do successfully in Utica, Mr. Anybodyelse can do in any other city in the United States. What Mr. Lumberg has courage and initiative to do with "In Old Kentucky" Mr. Anybodyelse should have courage and initiative to do with any other picture that deserves exploitation.

The results of exploitation are always in direct ratio to the enthusiasm and determination with which the sponsor enters into the business of their preparation and execution.

An example is a valuable thing.

No man is afraid to try what another man has successfully accomplished. Few men are not afraid to try what has not been done by someone before them.

There should be more work of this type — regional independent exhibitorial enterprise.

Last Week—

Setting up a miniature studio in one of the leading department stores, E. A. Zorn, manager of the Temple theatre, Toledo, O., conducted tests in connection with the beauty contest being conducted by the Newspaper Enterprise Association. The winner of the contest will appear in an R. A. Walsh Mayflower production, "The Deep Purple," when showing at the Temple, prospered accordingly.

Leo M. Valdez, manager of the Royal theatre, Laredo, Tex., found it difficult to bring people into his theatre during the showing of "A Daughter of Two Worlds" following the capture of Neuvo Laredo, just across the Mexican border, by revolutionists. Accordingly, he rented his theatre to the high school for commencement exercises, preparing a strong lobby display for the picture. The following evening many of those who had attended the exercises returned to see the picture—bringing friends.

The William Taylor Company, operating Cleveland's largest department store, held a golden jubilee celebration, using a special newspaper supplement and an 85-piece symphony orchestra. Fred Klein, manager of Loew's Stillman theatre, suggested co-operation, offering "The Idol Dancer" as due cause. The result was mention in the huge advertisements run by the Taylor Company and a brilliant and highly successful girl revue staged with Taylor models.

A swimmer's contest, in which a prize of $150 was offered to the person who stayed "Under the Surface" longest, was used to exploit the run of that production at the Imperial theatre, San Francisco.

The Goldwyn Pictures Corporation offers especially prepared descriptions of the programs staged by S. L. Rothapfel at the Capitol theatre, New York, to anyone who cares to be placed on the mailing list.

Sid Grauman staged a "Lovers' Week" for the "Miss Hobbs" premiere.

William Friedman, manager of the Metropolitan theatre, Cleveland, O., gave a "Dixie Week" for King Vidor's "The Family Honor."

Getting to be a weekly occurrence—which proves the value of suggestion. (EXHIBITORS HERALD, page 67, May 8.)

Dish Pan and Drum Make Lobby Device

Haste makes waste. But haste is one of the essentials of the advertiser's lot. If he doesn't do a thing quickly, more often than not, he doesn't get to do it at all. But there is another kind of waste, a kind that can be avoided—because it comes from thoughtlessness and failure to grasp opportunities through failing to see them. A certain ingenuity in making the most of every opportunity is what constitutes exhibitor genius.

Frank H. Burns, manager of the Rialto theatre, Jacksonville, Fla., is one of the select group of American showmen who possess this ingenuity in marked degree. His work shows it.

When, recently, "Alarm Clock Andy" was being exhibited at the Rialto, Mr. Burns made capital of material that would have been overlooked by nine out of ten exhibitors similarly situated.

The accompanying illustration shows the unique lobby device contrived for the occasion by Mr. Burns. But it doesn't tell the facts in the case.

The face of the clock is an old bass drum that was found in the theatre. The bell is a dish pan found in the alley.

With the aid of a battery and buzz system installed in the theatre and an oscillating fan located in the manager's office the huge clock was made to sound a ridiculous and therefore attractive alarm at set intervals throughout the day. It got attention—and attention is business.

There are dish pans in every alley. There are bass drums, or suitable substitutes, to be found with little trouble. The ingenuity is the thing.

An old drum and a dishpan were converted into a set piece for lobby use with "Alarm Clock Andy" at the Rialto theatre, Jacksonville, Fla.

Three-sheets under screen are posted on delivery wagons and public conveyances by the Adams Theatre Company in Creston, Ia.

Adams Theatres Co.
Uses Moving Stands

There is something in human nature that makes getting something for nothing a particularly pleasant experience. It is not always selfishness, if ever, that really accounts for the sensation of satisfaction that follows such an accomplishment. Advertisers, no less than other human beings, are particularly related to that campaign or individual stunt that costs nothing and brings results.

The Adams Theatres Company, operating a chain of theatres throughout Iowa, has cause to be elated over the accomplishment of a something-for-nothing deal in Creston, Ia., where their representative has succeeded in getting advertisements for current attractions upon practically every delivery wagon and public conveyance that travels the streets of the city.

The above illustration shows one of these signs, this one upon the side of a delivery wagon, advertising "In Wrong," one of Jack Pickford's First National productions. The arrangement is simple. It consists of a regular three-sheet board with wire net covering under which the paper is securely held.

Even one such conveyance is a valuable advertisement, coming within vision range of hundreds of persons daily who would not pass a stationary stand anywhere in the city.

Business exhibitors, accustomed to dealing with merchants in co-operative advertising campaigns and other enterprises, should not find it difficult to arrange for any number of them. Occasional co-operation in advertising, or the contract to be responsible for the painting of the conveyance when necessary should be sufficient inducement.

Theatre and Attraction Exploitation Highly Developed by Detroit Showmen

From a position of comparative obscurity a short year ago, Detroit, Mich., motion picture theatricals have advanced to a place in American theatredom that challenges the attention of all. Few cities of equal size, certainly none smaller, have shown such marked progress in that period.

Acting upon the theory, apparently, that nothing was quite good enough, not to say too good, for Detroit, exhibitors in the automobile stronghold of America have developed an exploitation science peculiarly distinctive. It includes the two important phases, theatre and attraction exploitation, and recommends itself to exhibitors great and small in population centers of all sizes.

Prominent as leaders in this great advancement are and have been the John H. Kunsky Enterprises, controlling several of the more prominent theatres and a number of the smaller ones. John H. Kunsky, president and managing director, and Howard O. Pierce, head of the publicity and advertising forces, have done great things for Detroit theatricals, both by deed and example.

Kunsky exploitation and presentation activities have been recorded in these pages from time to time, and each time past performances have been excelled. The page layout in a recent number showing the Madison theatre during the run of "The Idol Dancer" pictured one of the most complete and artistically as well as commercially satisfactory settings ever provided for a motion picture.

The force responsible for this achievement and the many other of similar qualities and magnitude that have gone before and will doubtless follow, from President J. H. Kunsky to the carpenters that provide stage settings weekly, is unified in the effort to make Detroit a theatre city second to none in the country.

Howard O. Pierce, in charge of all advertising, publicity, presentation and exploitation, is a tireless worker who deserves unstinted praise for his accomplishments.

Carlo Del Guercio, chief decorator, is one of the recognized authorities on interior decoration. B. L. Kilbride, in charge of the Kunsky offices, is assisted by a corps of fifteen persons trained in the business, while George W. Trendle, associated with Mr. Kunsky since the opening of the first theatre, is a corporation lawyer of many years experience.

To a man they are devoted to a single objective—the advancement of the theatre in Detroit and the John H. Kunsky Enterprises.

Other Detroit exhibitors are no less progressive.

The situation is as it always is where business is to be done. The rapid growth of the city itself has brought a big percentage of theatregoers into range of the advertiser's effort.

Business is almost constant—and always good.

With the element of chance greatly reduced, exhibitors have been at liberty to devote considerable time and energy to the development of exploitation and presentation.

A recent instance of note was the opening of Orchestra Hall with "The Fall of Babylon," the Babylonian episode from D. W. Griffith's "Intolerance," which is handled by the Minter-United exchange for the territory.

Orchestra Hall is not ideally located for picture purposes. People had not been trained to go there.

The "100" of the city had supported the institution by subscription, and classical concerts had been the order of things.

Pictures had been tried—with unsatisfactory results.

James Minter, handling the exploitation, sent personal communications to Orchestra Hall supporters.

Madja, the Oriental dancer who, with her Nautch girls, has appeared with the picture throughout the country, was brought to Detroit for the presentation by an orchestra of twenty-five pieces being provided.

Seven hundred and fifty street cars carried sign boards.

One hundred and fifty twenty-four-sheet stunts were erected. Four thousand additional sheets, in various sizes, were posted on every available space.

A newspaper campaign of like magnitude was conducted.

The prices ranged from 50 cents to $1.50.

Business, which seasoned showmen prophesied would be disappointing, was such that the picture was held over for the third week, after the two weeks' run originally contemplated was finished.

In the big Kunsky organization and in the case of the individual exhibitor with one small theatre, the same spirit, a peculiarly Detroit spirit, prevails.

Showmanship is the thing, in every case. And it is genuine showmanship.

Details are considered as they should be considered, means to an end. That end is primarily advancement, with which, of course, must be linked business.

The theatre is advertised in Detroit as in few other cities. And this without slighting the importance of the current attraction.

Exhibitors throughout the industry should never lose sight of the importance of that combination.

To exploit current attractions is, of course, vital. Upon them is built future success.

But the theatre is not one whit less important, and the advertising that does not net a certain gain in prestige and popular favor for the theatre cannot be called successful advertising.

Upon the theatre, his own creation and his own property, the exhibitor cannot lay too great stress. Pictures come and go. Stars are shown at your theatre today—at the opposition house tomorrow.

The theatre never changes.

It is yours today, tomorrow and the day after.

Theatre and attraction should share in the benefits of every exploitation enterprise that is executed—else that exploitation, no matter what the cash results, is not 100 per cent efficient.

GOOD ADVERTISING—IF IT DIDN'T WIN

At the Republican Convention last week Gen. Leonard Wood advertised himself by passing out woodcock feathers with his name printed upon them, dropping them in thousands from the Coliseum ceiling when he was presented.

Lowden supporters cheered lustily for the stipulated thirty-nine minutes following his presentation.

Johnson's contingent gave a like demonstration, those participating working with a will and showing marked endurance.

Senator Warren G. Harding of Ohio didn't get a striking ovation—but he was chosen Republican candidate for president of the United States.

Political writers agreed from the first that Wood, Lowden or Johnson had small chances of winning.

Advertising men agree, however, that their efforts classify as good advertising—if it didn't win.
Orchestra Hall "Goes Over"

Orchestra Hall, Detroit music lovers' holy of holies, heretofore supported by subscription and devoted to classical entertainment only, has been converted to motion picture purposes.

"The Fall of Babylon," the Babylonian episode from D. W. Griffith's "Intolerance," was the attraction so intensively exploited as to bring patrons to Orchestra Hall's somewhat out-of-the-way location.

Madja and her Nautch girls, who have appeared with the pictures throughout the country, took part in the presentation accompanied by an orchestra of twenty-five pieces.
Stage of the Majestic theatre, Jackson, Mich., as it appeared during the run of "Down On the Farm," at which time, according to W. S. McLaren, manager, all house records were broken.

Another Record for "Down on the Farm"

The exhibitor-reported history of "Down On the Farm," Mack Sennett's production distributed by United Artists, reads as if written by the advertising man assigned the duty of advertising the attraction to exhibitors. It is an almost unbroken series of box office records—and such in large measure because the picture is typically an exploitation feature.

There is nothing remarkable, then, in the statement that W. S. McLaren, manager of the Majestic theatre, Jackson, Mich., broke his house record recently with "Down On the Farm." Many would register greater surprise if it were recorded that he did not break it, especially after the above reproduction is examined.

Here, as throughout America, exhibitor initiative was put to the task of making the picture pay, and here, again, the picture's unquestionable advertising qualities brought results.

There is room in the market for an unlimited supply of pictures of that type. It is absolutely impossible to make too many of them.

Stimulating in their effect upon exploitation as a science, stimulating in their effect upon the public, as recorded by the box office, they are of infinite value to the industry.

The common aim of producers, as set forth in this department last week, should be to create productions that can be exhibited by reason of their presentation and exploitation qualities, to the greatest possible number of people.

In this direction lies advancement, improvement, bettered conditions, and a general prosperity for the industry as a whole and every member as an individual.

Freak Stunt Brings Business in Peoria

Daniel Roche, Chicago exploitation manager for Famous Players-Lasky, broke several supposedly well-established precedents recently in Peoria, Ill., incidentally putting "Male and Female" over to good results at the Majestic theatre.

"They say" you can't make light of native institutions.

"They say" comic exploitation doesn't get results.

"They say" there must be definite connection between stunt and picture.

But Mr. Roche took the town pet, a monkey, placed him in a cage in a prominent window, plastered the cage with "Male and Female" posters, worried not about the connection, permitted the monkey to tear down the posters—and the citizenry to laugh itself into the idea of going to the Majestic to see the picture.

All of which proves—nothing.

Another man might not have succeeded.

In another city the plan might have been disregarded.

At another place the citizens might have laughed the picture out of consideration.

But it worked in Peoria.

Daniel Roche, exploitation manager for the Chicago district of Famous Players-Lasky, created much merriment and more comment when "Male and Female" played the Majestic theatre, Peoria, Ill., by making capital of the town's pet monkey.
Orphan Benefit Is Success at Audubon

The past year has witnessed a great improvement in the box office qualities of motion picture titles. Producers, realizing the absolute necessity of selling pictures to the public, have developed a highly commendable policy of selecting titles, when possible, that have distinct box office advantages. Such a title, of demonstrated value, is "The Orphan," which is the name of a recent Fox production.

When the picture was exhibited at the Audubon theatre, New York, the title was taken as sufficient reason for a free matinee, at which hundreds of orphans from various institutions were guests. As is usual in such cases, the conveyances which brought the children to the theatre and returned them to their dwellings were equipped with banners giving the facts in the case.

This form of advertising, if it must be limited to that classification, has been commended frequently in this department. It is one of the best thoughts that have been brought forth in some time.

The children, were they told that the enterprise were one hundred per cent advertising for the theatre, would doubtless accept the invitation as willingly as otherwise. But it cannot be said that the enterprise really is that.

It cannot be forgotten that the matinee of this character is really a genuine service to humanity, and to a particular portion of humanity that gets all too little service at any rate.

The exhibitor who engages in such an enterprise is commended merely upon merit. He is a genuine benefactor.

Yet it cannot be denied that the immediate returns stamp the event as excellent advertising, nor that the lasting influence upon future business is anything but desirable.

Charity and advertising are strange bedfellows, undoubtedly, but when they are as well mated as in this and similar instances that have been recorded, there can be objection from no quarter.

A honeymoon automobile send-off was duplicated and much attention gained by George Mayne, manager of the Gem theatre, Salt Lake City, when "Don't Ever Marry" was showing.

Sure-Fire Exploitation Device Evolved for "Don't Ever Marry"

Upon the face of it, without a shadow of doubt, the device evolved by George Mayne, manager of the Gem theatre, Salt Lake City, Utah, for "Don't Ever Marry," Marshall Neilan's recent First National attraction, is what is commonly and expressively designated "sure fire stuff." The above illustration gives the idea in its essentials.

The picture, as is well known, is a comedy based upon married life. Such comedies are invariably popular. Married people and single folks alike enjoy them, for different perhaps but powerful reasons. The single folks are curious and the married people are—married. Mr. Mayne's stunt, and it can properly be called that, is so simple as to make everyone who hears of it wonder why it had not been thought of before.

It consists of staging a typical honeymoon send-off, with "Just Married" banners, old shoes and rice in profusion, adding the necessary banners giving facts about the picture and the theatre.

The staging of the stunt is elemental. It will not be found difficult to obtain principles for the performance, and when the automobile goes through the streets every pedestrian will automatically become an actor in the playlet.

The attraction power of the honeymoon equipage is obvious.

The perambulating nature of the display is another factor in its favor. Elaborations can be applied without limit.

The society editor of any newspaper can be prevailed upon to feature the event as a mystery story—"Who Are the Mysterious Bride and Groom?"

It may even be possible to link up the event with a genuine wedding. A little concentration upon the license clerk should get a lead, and a sufficient inducement to the contracting parties is not out of the question.

The feature should not be confined to the society columns, of course, but that is the logical place to start it. It will break onto the front page of its own force if properly executed.

The feature can be carried out to the extent of staging a wedding breakfast, luncheon and supper in every hotel in town—taking them in turn to get distribution. The cost of the meal is the only expense incurred—and this can be moderately arranged.

The possibilities are unlimited. The idea is the thing. It is excellent.

Hundreds of New York City orphans were the guests of the Audubon theatre during the showing of William Farnum in "The Orphan," conveyances of this sort attracting great attention as the children were brought to the theatre.
"The Prey" Is Alice Joyce's Next Special for September Publication

George L. Sargent Directed Story by Le Brandt
And Harry Benham Appears as the Star's Leading Man

Alice Joyce's next Vitagraph special is an adaptation of Joseph Le Brandt's original story, "The Prey." It will be published in September.

This picture, which was directed by George L. Sargent, is said to contain excellent material for the very effective display of the star's talents and charm.

Benham Has Lead
Playing opposite Miss Joyce is Harry Benham, with L. Rogers Lytton cast in the heavy role. The story is said to be highly dramatic without becoming melodramatic at any time.

Miss Joyce first appears in "The Prey as a joyous natured young girl a-thrill with the sheer delight of living and the engagement ring she has just received from the man she loves and admires. The first change of mood comes swiftly when Helen is made to realize that either her lover or her reverenced father must be unworthy of her regard. Her fiancé, unwilling to wound her by denouncing her father, makes no defense. In a tense scene, then, the engagement ring is returned.

Furnish Striking Posters
In the horror and grief of Helen over the tragic death of her father, her anxiety over her happy-go-lucky brother in his trouble, her loathing of the man she has been tricked into marrying, are among the many changes of mood in "The Prey." Alice Joyce adds a notable achievement to her many triumphs. Realizing its possibilities, Vitagraph has furnished some striking posters and other advertising aids of this special production.

Helen Reardon is the daughter of a broker, Robert Reardon, formerly very wealthy and still believed to be so. He has speculated disastrously, however, and in desperate endeavor to recoup his losses he uses trust funds in his care. In desperation he appeals to Gordon Lynds, a young attorney whom he has aided in raising from obscurity to success in his profession to aid him in forming a partnership with Henry C. Laine, a profiteering millionaire. This Robert Reardon does, thinking that as district attorney he will have to prosecute Laine. Reardon then calls him an "ungrateful cur," and this is overheard by Helen Reardon. She asks Robert to explain, and when he declines to do so, she breaks the engagement.

Father Kills Self
The bright spirit of Helen is broken by her father's suicide, which turns her even more strongly against Robert, and then she is filled with distress by the confession of her brother, Jack, that he has forged the name of Laine to a check. Laine, who has been an unwelcome suitor of Helen, offers to give up the forged check if she will marry him. She agrees, unhappily, and tears up the check, intending to use it again as a threat to compel the girl, after marriage, to submit to his will.

A maid in the Laine home, with some crude ability as a mimic, practices imitations of the voice and mannerisms of her new mistress. This ability is discovered by Laine, who seeks to use it in a plot to compel Helen to save him from prosecution by appealing to her former sweetheart, the district attorney.

The contrast between the appearance and acting of Alice Joyce in the role of Helen, and the imitations by the maid, will be interesting to all admirers of the popular Vitagraph star.

New Sennett Comedy Shown To Exhibitors
Delegates To Convention Also See Norma Talmadge In "Yes or No"

Hundreds of exhibitors attending the Cleveland convention were given an opportunity to see Mack Sennett's latest five-part comedy, "Married Life," and Norma Talmadge's new production, "Yes or No."

Exhibition of "Married Life" was arranged by First National Exhibitors Circuit and E. M. Asher, personal representative of the comedy producer. Both pictures were screened in the Grand Ball Room at the Hotel Statler on June 9.

A special orchestra was used for each picture, and while the crowd was finishing their coffee and lighting up the smokes, the lights went out and the pictures started. Each picture was presented with two photos in an envelope, one of Ben Turpin, featured player in "Married Life," and Phyllis Haver, his leading lady.

Those in charge of arrangements were Jim Anderson, Earl Hudson and Norman Lask of First National, E. M. Asher, Maurice Meyers and Charles Muhleman.

Paramount Will Publish South Sea Film In June

Famous Players-Lasky Corporation will publish in a June issue of Paramount Magazine the first of a series of pictures of the lower Pacific which the Paramount-South Sea expedition traveled 13,000 miles to get. The first picture will be issued under the title "Beneath the Southern Cross."

Included in the party are Alvin Knoechel, cameraman, who is making the motion pictures under the direction of E. B. Badger, a Boston financier who for years has been identified with commercial affairs of the South Pacific, and Arthur B. Tilton, a prominent Harvard man. Another well-known Bostonian who accompanied the party is Herbert H. White, president of South Seas Pac-
Edward Laemmle and William Alder Return From Trip to the Far East

Universal and Science Representatives Acquire Photographs of the Uncivilized Tribes in the Interior of Japan

Edward Laemmle, a nephew of Carl Laemmle, president of Universal Film Manufacturing Company, passed through Chicago on June 30, en route to New York City, and while at the Universal exchange he related a few of the many interesting experiences of his recent trip in the far east.

Mr. Laemmle, together with William Alder, spent thirteen months abroad and took over 40,000 feet of film. Mr. Laemmle displayed a unique badge suitably engraved which they received in South China. The pictures taken will be published from time to time in two, and five-reel lots, as part of the Universal service.

After leaving America, the expedition went immediately to the interior of Japan, where views and trophies of the uncivilized tribes were obtained. From there they journeyed to the mountainous districts of China, where they participated in the South China revolution. Here again they received some unusual pictures of the natives.

Decorated in China

For their services in the rebellion they were decorated by General Mah Chai of the expeditionary forces.

Their next stop was Singapore, in the Strait Settlements, where they outfitted for a trip of nearly 400 miles up the Barun river, to the interior of Sarawak, the land of the White Rajah, where they obtained many thousand feet of film of scenes there.

After returning to Singapore, they outfitted once more and started up the Barito river, reaching the geographical centre of Dutch Borneo. His trip entailed many hardships, for after reaching the head of navigation they embarked in native boats, practically cutting their way through the jungle, and walking the last forty miles through swamps and dense undergrowth.

They were accompanied on this trip by two Dutch officers and a number of native soldiers. They were able to get intimate photographs and animated films of the life and customs of the Dyak head hunters, and nearly lost their lives at one time, it is said, when they were filming an attack on a village by a hostile tribe.

Boats Are Wrecked

They next struck civilization at Sarabaya, Java, where the government loaned them a two-masted schooner for a trip about the islands. Their boat was wrecked one reel, and the party landed on an island inhabited by a cannibal tribe. They were met with hostile demonstrations, but eventually they won the confidence of the inhabitants, and they remained in their midst for nearly two months. They occupied a native hut, but one of the two white men, either Laemmle or Alder, was always on guard during the night for fear of treachery. They were finally rescued by a Dutch patrol on a surveying trip and returned to Java on a Chinese schooner.

The films men visited many other interesting places on their trip, including Australia, Siam and the South Sea Islands.

Aside from the thousands of feet of film which the expedition brought back to America, picturing life in hitherto unexplored places, they also returned with many trophies and relics from every place visited. Spears, shields, arrows, skulls, domestic utensils, primitive agricultural implements and hundreds of other strange articles comprised their baggage on the return trip. These effects will be distributed among the museums throughout the country, while the films will be exploited by Universal.

Educational Ships Prints

For June 20 Publication

Prints and advertising accessories are being shipped to the various exchanges by Educational Films Corporation of America in preparation for the opening of its own branches on June 30. One two-reel comedy every week is provided in the initial publication schedule of Educational. There will be also a Chester-Oaring Picture with Bruce Scenic Beautiful and a Seree Scenic alternating. In addition, there will be other special prints, including two single reels among the first block.

It is possible that some of the branches will not be ready for business by June 30, but the mechanical arrangements are being pushed, and wires received at the New York offices indicate that those jointly interested in the various exchanges are seeking to overcome every difficulty.

GEORGE WEST

Closes contracts with eight exchanges to handle pictures produced by Reelcraft Pictures Corporation.

Effective Sales Trip

Chalked Up by West

Closes Contracts In Several Territories For Reelcraft Productions

George (Rapid-fire) West has just returned to Chicago after an absence of five weeks during which time he closed contracts in eight territories for Reelcraft Pictures Corporation productions.

Mr. West covered the country from Chicago to the Coast, and while in Los Angeles he aided Sid Grauman in a successful exhibition of "The Water Plug," featuring Billy Franey. This picture was given a week's run at the Grauman house.

The following exchanges closed with Mr. West on their respective territories: Magnet Film Company for Iowa and Nebraska on the Melbourne Moranti and Billy Franey comedies; United Film Company for Southern Illinois and Eastern Missouri on Moranti and Franey comedies; First National for Western Missouri and Kansas on Moranti and Franey; R. D. Lewis for Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas on Moranti and Franey; Supreme Photo Company for Colorado, New Mexico, and Wyoming on Moranti, Franey, Howell, Guinan and West; Supreme Photo Company for Oregon, Montana, Washington and Idaho, on Moranti, Franey and Guinan; Consolidated for California, Nevada, Arizona, Hawaiian Islands on Moranti, Franey and Guinan; and Pearce Film Company for Mississippi and Louisiana on Billy West, Alice Howell, Gail Henry, Melbourne Moranti, Texas Guinan, Billy Franey, and Napoleon and Sally Monkey comedies.
Proud Mothers Tell Reelcraft of Ambitions to See Sons in Pictures

Reelcraft Pictures Corporation, since its announcement that Matty Roubert, the 12-year-old leading man, would be featured in a series of pictures, has received communications of proud mothers who have star ambitions for their sons.

Many scenarios also have been submitted as vehicles for the young actor. Reelcraft declares that state right buyers, exchange men and exhibitors have expressed appreciation of the forthcoming series.

First Five Titled

The titles of the first two pictures are "Circus Day" and "She's a Vamp," from the pen of William Henry Warner. The first prints will be in the hands of exchanges soon.

The making of "Circus Day" required the services of an entire circus, and picturizes the love of youngsters, for the annual visit of the one-ring circus to the old home town and the after effect shown in the backyard circus of the kids with its parade and "Wild Man of Borneo," a little colored chap who consents to a liberal painting of whitewash to give him the necessary "wild" effect. There is a thread of human pathos interwoven with countless laughable situations, culminating in a happy ending.

To Be Two Reels

"She's a Vamp" deals with the love of a newsboy and his adventures in the childhood lives of a wealthy "vamp" and her true blue sweetheart of "de-alley," then following closely along the lines of the grown-up triangle cases.

The pictures are to be but two reels each and published one a month at the reelcraft and allied exchanges throughout the United States.

A national advertising campaign on this series has started, and Reelcraft plans to carry a "parallel advertising campaign for each issue.

New Ascher Theatre To Open on June 19 $350,000 Playhouse Erected at Forest Park, One of Chicago's Suburbs

Ascher Brothers, owners of a chain of houses in Chicago and other cities, will open their new $350,000 Park theatre, Forest Park, a suburb on Saturday, June 19.

This 1,500-seat house is so located that it will draw its patronage from nearby communities—Oak Park, Maywood, Riverside, Berwyn, Melrose Park and other towns. The site is in the heart of the business district at Madison and Desplaines avenue.

Although Aschers own a large circuit in Chicago, this is their first theatre in the suburban district. Charles F. Menzing will be transferred from Aschers' Chateau theatre to manage the new house.

While no announcement has been made regarding the appointment of a musical director, it is known that one of the best on the Ascher roster will fill the position.

Cohn Has Second Issue of "Screen Snapshots" Ready

Jack Cohn, producer of "Screen Snapshots," the single-reel bi-monthly novelty which features famous stars in their "off" moments at sports and favorite hobbies, announces that the second issue is now completed and will be ready for publication soon.

Sixteen stars are featured, including Charles Ray, Annette Kellerman, Hope Hampton, Priscilla Dean, Anita Stewart, Geraldine Farrar, Bert Lytell, Mildred Harris Chaplin, George Beban, Alice Lake, Howard Chandler Christy, Herbert Rawlinson, Catherine Calvert, King Vidor, Bessie Barriscale and Lou Tellegen.

Parker and Sims Write Paramount-British Play

The first picture being produced by Famous Players-Lasky British Producers, Ltd., at the company's new studios at Islington, London, is an adaptation of the Drury Lane drama, "The Great Day," by two distinguished English authors, George R. Sims and Louis N. Parker.

It is said that a strong cast of English players has been assembled to make the production, which centers around a big Sheffield steel works in war time and the endeavors of a foreign spy.

Texas Guinan Goes Home To N. Y. for Vacation

Texas Guinan has, taken a vacation from her strenuous labors at the Hollywood studio of Reelcraft Pictures Corporation, where she has been starring in a series of two-reel Western dramas under the direction of Jay Hunt, and hurried home to New York for a visit.

During her stay in New York, Miss Guinan will appear in person at several theatres where her pictures are shown.
Shallenberger Says Independent Field Is Now In State of Progressiveness
Distributor Declares This Phase of Industry Is Supplying As Good Pictures As the Large Producer Organizations

Progressiveness and stability mark the activities of the exhibitor, the exchange man and the distributor in the independent field of the motion picture industry, according to W. E. Shallenberger, president of Arrow Film Corporation, who was in attendance at the exhibitors' convention in Cleveland last week. The distributor's views on the progressiveness of the independent field follow in tabloid form:

The independent exhibitor, exchange man and distributor now are individuals of prominence.

The independent field never was in a better state of progressiveness and stability.

The outlook for the independent is indeed optimistic.

The worth and drawing power of the independent productions is not to be disputed.

Men in the independent field are among the most capable in the industry.

Mr. Shallenberger said that he had two reasons for attending the Cleveland convention, one being to watch the actual convention proceedings and the others to meet all of the independent exhibitors and exchange men.

Reaping a Harvest

"This convention," he said, "comes at a time when the independent man is reaping the deserved harvest of his straightforward, business-like policies. The independent exhibitor, exchange man and distributor are new individuals of prominence in the picture art. By that I mean they are considered in a more serious manner than ever before.

"While the larger producing-distributing organizations have been progressing and carrying on an internal war, the independent organizations have been coming closer together for the purpose of bettering their conditions. They have cooperated, thrown aside petty jealousies and personal ambitions, and worked to a common end—that end being the supplying and exhibiting of high-class pictures to the public of the world.

Supply Good Pictures

"The worth and drawing power of the independent productions is not to be disputed. I believe the independent market is supplying the theatre patronage good motion picture entertainment—as good as any offered today by anyone. While the several-million-dollar organization endeavors to make a star or sell a picture through its nation-wide advertising campaigns, and neglects the production itself, the independent on the other hand obtains a good story and a cast that can act, and the result is a picture that cannot but be accepted."

With Mr. Shallenberger in Cleveland were P. B. Dana, Arrow's sales manager, and S. Rubenstein of the Arrow staff.

Field Is Stable

In discussing the condition of the independent field, Mr. Shallenberger pointed out in detail the stability of the organization itselfs. "A proof of the stability of the independent field," he said, "is that the independent organizations. They are among the most capable in the entire industry and in many cases, indeed, have been in the forefront of the industry for more years than many of the better known organizations."

"The independent field was never in a better state of progressiveness or stability. At least twenty to thirty buyers visit our office in New York each week, seeking, as it were, the highest class of attractions. They are not seeking ordinary pictures, but pictures that contain clean dramatic action or wholesome humor. The outlook for the independent is indeed optimistic. It is better than that—instead of outlook I will say successful future—that is now a certainty."

Herz Scoops Field and Presents Race Picture

Two Days After Event

Two days after the automobile races at Indianapolis on Decoration Day, Lee Herz, president of Silee Film Exchange, who purchased the Illinois and Wisconsin rights on the picture of the event, had the film installed in the Pastime theatre in Chicago.

Mr. Herz considers this a scoop in motion pictures worthy of consideration. The picture of the race is meeting with favor everywhere.

Ascher Brothers' Merrill theatre in Milwaukee played the production for one week. Excellent results have been obtained in the Illinois and Wisconsin territory, according to Silee's president.

Lifeograph Is Producing Feature for Arrow Film

Arrow Film Corporation announces that it has arranged for the distribution of a feature now being produced by Lifeograph Film Corporation. No details as to the nature of the production are given out, but an Arrow official has authority for the statement that it will constitute a surprise in the independent field. This feature, which will star a well-known actress, will be ready for its first showing about the middle of July.

WITHEY FOR BEST IN PICTURES

Director of "Romance" Says That To Obtain the Best Results the Stars, Directors and Authors Must Be Given Freedom To Use Individual Ideas

THE best and nothing but the best! Especially significant is this motto as it comes from one whose most recent screen work has been endorsed by exhibitors and public alike because of the standard attained and the immediate success of the production.

"I believe," the director of "Romance," the United Artists picture starring Doris Keane, is the source of this suggestion of guiding principle, and in his work he sincerely and successfully will work to the very max of its abstract nature and put it into concrete form.

Seeks Better Pictures

An ideal that stands for the betterment of pictures both from a directoral and a presentation aspect, is his. His interest is centered on this ideal, in which he emphasizes individualism as another factor upon which successful production depends.

"To accomplish the best results," says Mr. Withey, "the director or writer must be given a free hand to carry out his or her individual ideas. That this is the best system is shown by the number of stars, directors and writers who are forming their own companies, and the way in which the exhibitors are using their pictures.

The connections of Mr. Withey with the motion picture industry date back to Selig days. After writing scenarios for this company he joined Famous-Mack Sennett in the same capacity. Later he transferred to Fine Arts-Triangle, and while with this organization he wrote scenarios, played parts and directed.

32 Years of Age

Feeling that the directorial phase offered the greater opportunity, he eventually devoted his entire time to this work. He is now 32 years of age and for the last four or five years he has directed such stars as Talmadge, Mary Elizabeth, Joyce, Mae Marsh, Doris Keane, Billie Burke, Madge Kennedy, Dorothy Gish, Robert Harron, and George Fawcett, the late Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree and many others.

Prior to his screen associations, the director portrayed various roles on the stage, this experience qualifying him for his later achievements.

In an interview with a representative of the Exhibitors Herald, Mr. Withey touched upon many angles of the industry, laying special stress on the practice of assigning the bigger exhibitors of cutting pictures so as to conform to their programs.

Evil in Industry

"In my opinion," he said, "this is one of the worst evils that we have to contend with. A great deal of time and thought is given over to the titling and cutting of films, it is only to have all this wasted in so far as the first showing is concerned because home exhibitors, who may make use of a picture, and the exhibitor, are going to be the best specialist from the technical viewpoint, will cut the production so as to conform to his program.

"In cutting pictures, it appears to me that the thread, dramatic quality and artistic aspect of the production is ruined. In relation to this habit of cutting pictures is censorship. I think that in a majority of cases censorship spoils rather than improves a production."

"In Romance" some censorship boards eliminated parts that were vital to the story, and naturally this elimination destroyed the thread of the story. While there might have been scenes in this production that would offend the over-sensitive, I believe that there absolutely was nothing to offend the practical, common sense person.

Music Is Necessary

Regarding presentation methods, the director said:

"I feel that music is a necessary adjunct to pictures although it is not necessary for all theatres to have elaborate musical arrangements. Such music should be present in the bigger houses. Appropriate music, however, should be selected, instead of any piece that might suit the whims of the exhibitor."

Dwan’s Next Picture To Be Most Dramatic

George Hackathorn Gives An Excellent Portrayal, Says Producer-Director

Allan Dwan is stressing two points in connection with his next and last picture for Mayflower Photoplay Corporation. The first is that the producer is confident that the story is the most dramatic that he has ever produced, and second, that out of the production will spring a producer-actor, George Hackathorn, who plays the part of a hunchback, Atalas.

"Hackathorn will steal this picture," declared Dwan. "His characterization is the finest bit of dramatic work I have seen in a long time."

George Hackathorn, who plays the "heavy," is using no grease paint make-up in the picture. He plays the part of a trampish looking individual who lives a monotonous, nameless life at the hands of Thurman and Miles Welch play the leading roles in the picture, the title of which has not yet been chosen. The picture will be finished within two weeks, and Dwan will then commence his task of cutting, editing and titling, which will take two more weeks. The picture will be published through First National.

Well Known Players Are Supporting Louise Huff In "Dangerous Paradise"

Well known players are in support of Louise Huff in "The Dangerous Paradise," her initial starring vehicle under the Selzick banner.

Included in the cast are Lda Darling, Temple Saxe, Jack Raymond and Harry Bartham.

Work on "The Dangerous Paradise" is said to be well under way, and expectations point to a production that in its entirety will embody the composite artistic endeavors of both the star, Louise Huff, and William P. S. Earle, who is directing the production. The initial Louise Huff picture was written by Edmund Goulding.

Coast Studio for Schwab Rapidly Nearing Completion

The new studio that is being erected for D. N. Schwab Production, Inc., on Santa Monica boulevard, as one of the units of the Hollywood studio, is nearing completion. The stage, which will be a steel and glass structure, will measure 70x120 feet, and will be equipped for both day and night work. A complete modern lighting equipment will be installed, as well as an unique device for interior water scenes.

In back of the stage will be the executive building, which will contain a suite of offices, dressing rooms, shower baths and rest rooms, and a garage for exterior sets, which is being laid off.

Spirit of the "Gump Club" Spreading Rapidly Throughout Many Exchanges

The spirit of the "Gump Club," organized by M. O. Mintz of Celebrated Producers' Film Corporation, is spreading rapidly among the exchanges handling the animal cartoon, the world rights of which are held by Celebrated.

Mr. Mintz says that state right buyers have requested information regarding the means by which they can profit by the club and its activities. To meet this demand, Mintz is acquiring novelties which will attract attention toward the club and also the cartoon.

Distributing Novelties

Balloons, match sales, miniature motion pictures, statuettes and various paper cut-outs are among the various publicity articles which he has collected for distribution. One of the unique cut-outs is of Andy Gump, which opens its mouth, allowing the words, "Oh, Min," to appear when a string is pulled.

The identification card, on which is printed a picture of Andy in a familiar pose and the rules and regulations of the club, was the first novelty distributed by Mintz. Any exchange handling the cartoons may become a local for the club. Upon request from the exchange manager these cards are shipped to him and in turn are distributed to the theatres showing the pictures. Through the playhouses they reach the public and in this manner form an endless chain of publicity.

Press Prints Stories

Three of the Chicago papers gave space to stories of the club. The purpose of the organization, as expressed on the identification card, is to "drive away the blues and be cheerful at all times."

At the headquarters of the "Gump Club" in the offices of Celebrated Producers' Film Corporation, Mr. Mintz is preparing a press sheet for distribution to the Gump exchanges. This sheet will contain a list of the titles of the cartoons, a synopsis of each one, advertising aids and a full sheet of reproductions of the novelties ready for distribution.

Oscar Apfel Is to Make Own Pictures

Distribution Plans Have Not Yet Been Worked Out by Former Director

Oscar Apfel, formerly director with World Film Corporation, is to produce independently under the banner Oscar Apfel Productions, according to an official announcement.

Distribution arrangements have not as yet been made, but the producer-director is considering several propositions placed before him.

Started With Edison

The name of Oscar Apfel as a director has been associated with many motion picture productions commencing with Edison in 1911. This makes him one of the oldest directors in the business today, his first picture being "The Two Southerners," an animated crook story which featured Mabel Truennell and Herbert Pryor.

His Edison association was followed with direction of pictures for Reliance-Majestic and Pathe, then still in its infancy as a producer of feature films. When the Lasky organization was founded, Apfel was called in to assist the organizers in their productions. On the West Coast he superintended the actual filming of "The Squaw Man," the first Lasky production which starred Dustin Farnum and in which the other prominent members of the cast were Richard L'Estrange, Winifred Kingston, Princess Red Wing, Dick Lareno, Billy Elmer and Monroe Salisbury, who made his debut in this production.

Directed Prominent Players

Among others who have since achieved prominence in the films and who also were initiated into stories by Apfel were Edward Abeles in "Brewster's Millions," Tom Ross in "The Only Sons," Max Figman in "The Man on the Box," H. E. L'Estrange in "The Ghost Breaker" and a number of other prominent screen players.

From Lasky, Apfel went to the Fox studios, where he directed William Farnum in a number of features. His latest affiliation with an important producing organization was with World Pictures Corporation, where he directed a great number of photoplays, including the entire Kitty Gordon series.

By Arrow Film Company

Arrow Film Corporation distributed novel exploitation cards to exhibitors in attendance at the Cleveland convention. On a piece of cardboard six by three inches was mounted a pair of dice. Above the "hones" was this wording:

YOU OWN A WOLUME WITH DICE.

Under the dice were these words:

BUT ARROW PRODUCTIONS ARE SURE WINNERS.

On the back side of the cardboard was a list of the Arrow attractions.

"The House of Toys" Press Book Is Ready Many Exploitation Aids Are Submitted for the Exhibitor to Use

Campaign books on American Film Company's six-part all-star production, "The House of Toys," are ready for distribution to the exhibitors. This twenty-four page sheet is bound in a beautiful art cover.

"A Little Frobe Into the Factors Which Part Jack From His Jill," "The Other Woman— Incompatibility—The Money Question—and Some Others" are captions for newspaper stories which give a clue to the subject matter of "The House of Toys," "The Vexing Question of Money" and "A Play for Wives and Sweethearts," "Stenographer vs. Wife," also point to fetching advertising suggestions.

Reproductions of the most attractive posters, which include a 24-sheet, two 3-sheets, 1-sheet and a 6-sheet, besides the 22x28 lobby portrait of Seena Owen in color and a striking scene, all piquing the curiosity and leaving the viewers in a speculatively frame of mind; suggestions for lobby displays, practical tie-up suggestions, snappy queries for signs and slides, and helps for a direct mail campaign, crowd the pages of a very complete press book.

E. & H. Company Gets "Up In Mary's Attic" Rights to "Up in Mary's Attic," the six-part comedy being handled by Fine Arts Pictures, Inc., in six Southern states—North and South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama and Tennessee—have been disposed of to E. & H. Film Company, Atlanta, Ga.
THE "money picture" is an interesting study.
Careful consideration of its many aspects brings to light interesting truths and leads to an important conclusion.
The picture which brings the exhibitor largest returns is, with negligible exceptions, the picture exploded at greatest expense, produced at greatest cost.
Banks prosper because they have funds to operate with.
"It takes money to make money" is an antique but terrible and serviceable adage.
It follows—that producers cannot put too much money into production, that distributors cannot invist too heavily in advertising and advertising accessories, that exhibitors cannot allot too much capital to exploitation and presentation. This, of course, with the understanding that the money spent actually gets results.
Higher admissions? Perhaps, though greater attendance is a possible means of meeting the expense.
The public will respond with sturdy support, in either case.
Therein lies the important conclusion.
"Money pictures" are money pictures simply because the public wants good entertainment and is willing to pay for it. There are more of them on the market today than ever before.
The outlook is bright.
"THE RESTLESS SEX" (Paramount Arctraft) will give entire satisfaction to those inclined toward the Robert W. Chambers style of fiction. It is, in brief, a Chambers novel in film without important loss of effect. Marion Davies appears at her best against the elaborate backgrounds provided, the staging being in keeping with the Chambers atmosphere throughout.
"THE MOLLYCODDLE" (United Artists) is worth anybody's time and money. It is a typical Fairbanks production, a fast-moving narrative with the athletic star at his best. The scenes taken amid the Hopi Indians of Arizona add a touch of picturesqueness that is unique. No expense has been spared in making "The Mollycoddle" and it winds up with one of the most thrilling fights ever staged for the camera.
"A BROADWAY COWBOY" (Pathé) is a light, airy comedy-drama especially suitable to warm weather—when people prefer to laugh. William Desmond appears in the role of a matinee idol, with Betty Francis featuring the supporting cast. It is a Jesse D. Hampton production and carries the attributes that Hampton's name has come to guarantee.
"THE RETURN OF TARZAN" (Goldwyn) won warm praise from the exhibitor audience that wittnessed its screening at the Cleveland convention.
It gives every promise of duplicating the phenomenal box office success of its predecessors, "Tarzan of the Apes" and "The Romance of Tarzan." Gene Pollar, the star in this picturization, gives a sturdy and sat-sifying portrayal of Edgar Rice Burroughs' well known character. Exploitation possibilities are practically unlimited.

"SICK ABED" (Paramount Arctraft) with Wallace Reid, is a riot of fun from beginning to end.
Reid has one of those light comedy roles in which he excel, and if he sticks to stories of this calibre he'll soon have a following equal to that of William S.
Hart, Douglas Fairbanks or Charles Ray. The play was adapted from a successful stage farce and allows Reid full scope for his fun-making powers. His
"Reggie" Jay is a role that will long be remembered.
Bebe Daniels appears to advantage in his support.
"THE BEST OF LUCK" (Metro) is the screen version of a Drury Lane melodrama, marked by the inclusion of many exciting incidents and thrilling stunts to hold the attention of any audience. An all star cast portrays the roles in the picture, which has for its locales both America and Scotland. The latter part of the production is as replete with action as many serials.
"THE MAN WHO LOST HIMSELF" (Select) brings one of America's foremost actors to the screen in a production that will find immediate favor on all sides. William Faversham gives the intelligent and polished portrayal for which he is known. The cast and scenes are very much in keeping with the success of the picture.
"DOUBLE-DYED DECEIVER" (Goldwyn) is an adaptation of an O. Henry story in which Jack Piekford is featured. Although it has many interesting angles, the action is rather slow at times and is lacking somewhat in spontaneous moments. A capa-able cast supports the star in carrying out the pictorial version.
"LOVE'S HARVEST" (Fox) is a comedy-drama of most amusing nature in which Shirley Mason holds the center of attention. This vivacious little actress displays some very clever work throughout the production and if for no other reason her acting should carry the picture through to success. An added feature, and an attraction that will appeal strongly, is the star's dog, Budgie.
"THE DESPERATE HERO" (Select) gives Owen Moore splendid opportunity to display his comedy talents to the fullest extent. He is ably assisted by Gloria Hope, Henry Miller, Jr., Emmett King, Charles Arling and Nell Craig. The story was written by Edgar Franklin and directed by Wesley Ruggles from Zelda Crosby's scenario. Taking it all in all it is one of the funniest and best things Moore has done in some time. The exhibitor looking for a picture that will "send them away with a smile" has in "The Desperate Hero" one of the season's best bets.
"REMODELING HER HUSBAND" (Paramount Arctraft) is Lillian Gish's first attempt at directing and probably because of the fact that she is a novice and furthermore had to direct her own sister, she allowed Dorothy to occupy the centre of the stage most of the time to the exclusion of story, plot and everyone else. It isn't married life, not as lived in this year of 1920, nor as lived in New York or any other big city. It is a Lillian-Dorothy sketch in five reels and will probably please as well as the average five reeler. But don't expect too much from it.
REVIUWS

Douglas Fairbanks in
THE MOLLYCODDLE
Six-part comedy-drama; United Artists.  Directed by Victor Fleming.  Published June.

Fairbanks gives Douglas Fairbanks a good story and he'll do the rest. "The Mollycoddle," which was written by that master hand at fiction, Harold MacGrath, furnishes Mr. Fairbanks with the nucleus for a rip-roaring, fast-moving comedy-drama, and Tom Geraghty, knowing Mr. Fairbanks' possibilities, gave the athletic star every chance to deliver.

At the Randolph theatre, Chicago, where the picture had its central-west premiere, the management guaranteed patrons sixty laughs an hour, or one a minute, in its advertisements, and while this may be stretching it a little bit, we did not notice anyone at the box office trying to collect. It pleased large audiences all week and most of the laughs followed the neatly phrased subtitles.

The picture has its spectacular moments and represents a vast outlay of money. (What Fairbanks' picture does not?) In the present instance a mountain is blown up to furnish a thrill and it is quite as effective as the broad scene in "When the Clouds Roll By." Appearing opposite Fairbanks to excellent advantage is Ruth Renick, a new feminine lead, and he is further supported by Wallace Beery, Betty Bouton, Albert MacQuarrie, Charles Stevens, and George Stewart, a brother of Anita Stewart.

A novelty is introduced in the early part of the picture consisting of an animated drawing of the operations of diamond smugglers in Arizona; how they leave the country, take the diamonds to Amsterdam and finally bring the re-cut stones back to America. The story revolves around the work of these smugglers and their ultimate capture. There is the usual hard chase, and rough and tumble finish to the picture which will delight the youngsters.

SYNOPSIS: Richard Marshall, nicknamed "the mollycoddle" by his friends, is the descendant of hard-hitting, fearless Western stock, but he has been raised since babyhood in London, England, and has acquired English ways. He was born, however, in Arizona, and upon meeting some Americans who are about to go home in a private yacht he joins them. Fearing he is a secret service operative, the owner of the yacht, who is smuggling diamonds into America, withdraws his invitation. Friends however, smuggle him on board, but when he is discovered by the owner of the yacht he is put to work in the boiler room. Off the coast of Texas he swims ashore, is picked up in a fishing net and eventually lands in Arizona, where the party is exploring the diamond mines. Richard discovers a plot to blow up a portion of a mountain and hem the party in the little valley. The scheme nearly succeeds, but young Marshall captures the smuggler in a tall tree, rolls with him down a steep embankment, through a rushing stream, and drags the half-drowned man to shore. And, of course, he wins the Girl, who proves to be a detective in the service of Uncle Sam.

Owen Moore in
THE DESPERATE HERO
Five-part comedy-drama; Select.  Directed by Wesley Ruggles.  Published in June.

OPINION: Owen Moore romps through this five-reel concoction as though he thoroughly enjoyed it, and succeeds in imparting much of his happiness to his spectators. It is a first-class summer attraction, light and airy, or, as the press agent has it, "a merry, mirthful comedy-drama, that mixes love, laughter and limousines into a cocktail of joy."

The role assigned to Moore gives him ample opportunity to display his comedy talents and he makes the most of the assignment. The story was written by Edgar Franklin and tells of a youth whose money is tied up in an oil well; of an insistant tailor with an overdue bill and the young man's attempt to raise the money to meet said bill. There is a pretty love story interwoven with the comedy, and a comic situation which the hero finds himself thrust, and the charming Gloria Hope adds a pleasing touch to the story. Mabel Darrows is the subject of Moore's attentions. Neil Craig, Henry Miller, Jr., Emmett King, Arthur Hoyt, Charles Arling, Virginia Caldwell and Tom Ricketts complete the excellent cast.

SYNOPSIS: Henry Baird is forced to leave town to escape being sued by his tailor. He takes an auto trip into the country and becoming disgusted with the machine raffles it off at a church fair, giving $300 to the orphans and keeping $300 himself. With the three hundred he pays his tailor. Small boys set fire to the auto and it burns before the owner of the lucky ticket gains possession of it. Henry, feeling that he is bound to make good the loss, offers his services for two weeks to the holder of the ticket. Joseph Plant, Henry's arch enemy, buys the ticket and Henry is compelled to act as gardener, housemaid and man-of-all-work around Plant's estate. Henry succeeds in making life quite miserable for Plant, however, by paying especial attention to Mrs. Plant, Baird's former sweetheart, and finally Plant is glad to release him. An unscrupulous rival of Baird's attempts to disrupt his love affair with Mabel Darrows by introducing a hired "vamp," but the latter turns the tables on the cad and Henry is made happy.

William Desmond in
A BROADWAY COWBOY
Five-part comedy-drama; Pathe.  Directed by Jos. J. Franz.  Published July.

OPINION: With William Desmond in the role of a stage cowboy, born in New York, who strays into the wild and woolly land of real cowboys and real bad men, Jesse D. Hampton has built a comedy-drama which is sufficiently light and sufficiently funny to lure coins to the box office, despite the arrival of warm weather. The production would be good entertainment at any time of year, but it is especially suitable for summer, when the average theatergoer wants to laugh rather than cry and does not want to follow the complexities of a heavy story.

Desmond as "Burke Randolph" is a matinee idol, who off-stage is not a bad fellow and can fight on occasion. Betty Francisco as "Betty Jordan" is a western girl who falls in love with the stage cowboy and accompanies him through a series of laughable situations and a few rather tragic ones.

It is typical of Hampton that the photography, settings, and selection of effects should be worthy of complimentary mention and that the supporting cast should be adequate. A bank robbery, a running gun fight or two, and severalastic encounters provide the needed high points.

SYNOPSIS: Betty Jordan, the daughter of a Montana banker, is East to attend finishing school, and falls desper-
There is a noticeable indulgence in long shots which seem to be at present in vogue. The many difficult interiors are well done, while exteriors hold their own very well.

One dashing, exciting scene provides a prolonged thrill when a speeding automobile, driven by one of the heroine's admirers, approaches a railroad crossing. The faster the machine goes, at the request of the reckless driver, the nearer they speed to their doom, since a fast train also approaches the crossing. It hits the tail of the machine, demolishing it entirely, but there is a miraculous saving of the life of the two young occupants.

The lighting and photography deserve more favorable comment than any other point in the production.

SYNOPSIS: Into the life of a widower, with one child, a son, drifts a little girl in need of fatherly care. The rich man adopts her, but at the time makes no provision for her support, in the event of his death. As the years go by the father becomes as fond of the foster daughter as he is of his own son, and the children are not without a brother and the death of their benefactor. When the grown son departs for Europe to study and complete his education, according to his father's will, he realizes that he has a feeling for Stephanie that is not exactly brotherly. During his long stay in Europe he devotes himself to become a nurse, which was the wish of the father, but her natural instinct leads her into the atmosphere of art and the early established a small studio in the Greenwich section of New York. She is greatly admired by a bohemian actor and the desire of her heart to enter the wireless industry very hard to win her response. As the result of an automobile accident near a country hotel, which proves to be a disorderly resort, they are obliged to go through the marriage ceremony, to save the honor of Stephanie.

Learning that his sister has married his rival the brother in Europe returns and they both know that there has been a great mistake made in their separation. They both know that they love their husband, who was the family lawyer, has squandered the fortune of the girl, which results in his suicide. The couple, after their marriage, discovers there is a decisive sacrifice on the part of the boy, in his mode of living and ambitions, to repay the girl her losses.

Charles Murray in
BY GOLLY
Two-part comedy; Paramount. Directed by Charles Murray. Published June 6.

Mack Sennett hits the bull's eye again. His "By Golly" is a riot of fun and a smashing follow-up to "Let 'Er Go." If you booked the latter, you should not pass up "By Golly." The fun starts off with a birthday party at which Mrs. Kelly gives Kelly a watch. The man who makes the presentation speech drops the ticker into a cuspidor. The men folks adjourn to a stag party, at which time the watch is stolen by a crook. The husband writes letters to his wife, when the thief is caught and the timepiece restored. There is an immense pie containing Harriet Hammond and a dozen chorus girls which forms one of the novelties of the stag party, but the funniest situation is where the husband pulls a table from beneath Murray as he is dancing with one of the "blackbirds." The action is fast and the story logical, which cannot be said for many comedies nowadays.

Shirley Mason and her clever dog in a scene from "Love's Harvest" (Fox).

Shirley Mason in LOVE'S HARVEST
Five-part drama; Fox. Directed by Howard M. Mitchell. Published in June.

OPINION: An exceptionally jovial, amiable and active person invariably is considered "the life of the party." And the reasons that prompt such classification may be extended to "Love's Harvest," for winsome and vivacious Shirley Mason undeniably is "the life of the picture."

Pearl Doles Bell's story, with little Shirley Mason in the lead, most assuredly is an antidote for the apathetic and listless attitude toward pictures that develops with the first extremely hot days.

Capitalize the name of the star, and if there is a person leaves the theatre in a dejected mood after viewing her adroit performance, that person certainly will find it difficult to find amusement and satisfaction that will brighten him.

While "Love's Harvest" does not offer the exploitation possibilities that prevailed in the star's initial Fox picture, "Her Elephant Man," yet it is just as diverting in every sense and should not deter exhibitors from screening it.

Jack Pickford in DOUBLE-DYED DEceiver
Five-part drama; Goldwyn.
Directed by Al Green.
Published in June.

OPINION: One of O. Henry's many stories depicting human nature in its truest form has been transferred to the screen as a starring vehicle for Jack Pickford.

It is the story of the Llando Kid, a young Texas bad man who flees to South America following a shooting affray in which he kills a Mexican. An American consul induces him to pose as the lost son of an aristocratic Spanish family, thereby enabling him to rob the family and share with the agent of the United States government.

The scheme works smoothly until the Llando Kid, transformed through the influence of mother love, rebels and refuses to rob his adopted parents.

The story is typical of O. Henry, but at the same time the author's inimitable style of characterization and dialogue is lost. While it is an interesting picture, it lacks the spontaneity that is so apparent in all of O. Henry's stories. There are times through the picture when the action is hardly sufficient to hold the attention.

The endeavors of the players are very commendable, each making an effort to give an intelligent portrayal. Those in the cast are Marie Dunn, James Neill, Edythe Chapman, Sydney Ainsworth and Manuel R. Ojeda.

SYNOPSIS: The Llando Kid flees to Buenas Tierras, South America, after killing a Mexican in Texas. The American consul, seeking to rob an aristocratic Spanish family whose son disappeared years before, schemes to use the Kid as a fence by having him pose as the lost son. The Kid is received royally by the family and for the first time he experiences love. This influence transforms him and he refuses to rob his benefactors. Instead, he falls in love with a relative and remains as the son of the Spanish family.

A Special Cast in THE BEST OF LUCK
Six-part drama; Metro.
Directed by Ray C. Smallwood.
Published in June.

OPINION: The melodramatic intensity that is so apparent in the Drury Lane plays has been used advantageously in giving to the picturization an abundance of action, comprising one daring incident after another. So replete with rapid-fire action is the last two or three parts that the production takes on a serial aspect.

While an incident or so seems somewhat overdrawn, their purpose serves so well in plot development and in giving to the picture its highly dramatic moments that plausibility is only a secondary quality.

The statement that the picture is serial in nature should in no way influence exhibitors against it. For it is very entertaining from the romantic angle as well. The picture is well produced and moves along very logically.

A cast of seasoned players, including Kathryn Adams, Jack Holt, Lillie Leslie and Fred Malatesta, who are featured, aid greatly in producing the desirable results obtained. Other players are Frances Raymond, Emmett King, Robert Dunbar, Effie Conley and Jack Underhill.

There is a great opportunity for exploitation in this picture for the exhibitors showing it. In the first place, it is the title, which contains that element of attraction. Then the production offers material for many stunts.

Sponsor a race between an automobile and a motorcycle, making certain, of course, that the latter wins. If possible have a girl riding the motorcycle. Keep the phrase, "The Best of Luck," to the fore at all times. Try a postcard campaign, making each very personal. Thank your patrons in this manner for their past attendance and wish them "The Best of Luck."

SYNOPSIS: Lord Glenary, of the house of Macleod, is forced to sell the family estate. Leslie Macleod, living in America, purchases the property, unknown to Lord Glenary, so as to keep it in the family. She goes to Scotland, assumes another name, and falls in love with the Lord. Lanza, a titled Spaniard, professes love with the hope of acquiring her fortune. Desperately in need of funds, he schemes to force her to marry him, but the tables are turned on him. While fleeing from her abductor she falls from a motorcycle and he over¬ takes her. Plans showing where the Macleod treasures lie in the ocean are stolen, but in her daring she finds the Lord and by means of an airplane the Spaniard's scheme is defeated.

William Faversham in
THE MAN WHO LOST HIMSELF
Five-part drama; Select.
Directed by George D. Baker.
Published in June.

OPINION: Not always does an established actor of the stage win immediate favor with fans of the silent drama. William Faversham presents a positive case, however, and there seems no doubt now that his screen endeavors will continue to win laurels for him as was his good fortune in the sc-called legitimate. During the years that Faversham has been one of the prominent lights of the theatrical profession, it has been his polished and intelligent treatment of his characters that has made him a favorite. In "The Man Who Lost Himself," this display of histrionic art is fully as convincing as in his stage work.

Possessing as it does a story of unusual merit, the picture is well suited to box office requirements, capitalizing of the star's name alone being sufficient in most communities to attract full houses.

Given an attraction that is worthy from the standpoint of star, story and production, exhibitors have no need to fear the results. Comment from patrons should be highly commendatory, and this alone is a great factor in establishing the standard of any theatre and can be classified near the top in advertising methods.

Of special merit is the cast supporting Mr. Faversham. It includes Mrs. De Wolfe Hopper as his leading lady, Violet Reed, Radcliffe Steele, Claude Payton, Mathilde Brundage, Emily Fitzroy and Downing Clarke.

SYNOPSIS: Victor Jones, an American, finds himself penniless and stranded in London. He meets the Earl of Rochester, the similarity between the two being so noticeable that even friends mistake Jones for the Earl. The Earl is estranged from his wife and family, owes great sums of money, and is considered in a bad light by acquaintances. He has made a sudden move to the Rochester mansion and commits suicide. Until Jones receives a note written in the Earl's handwriting, he does not appreciate his position. Immediately he poses as the Earl, but finally reveals the scheme. He has fallen in love with the wife and they decide to reside in America.

Wallace Reid in SICK ABED

Five-part comedy-drama; Paramount Aircraft. Directed by Sam Wood. Published June 27.

OPINION: Wallace Reid "fans" are going to be highly pleased with Sick Abed. This adapted stage farce makes capital material for the blonde star and it is quite up to the standard set by his last half dozen vehicles. It is even more plausible than "The Dancin' Fool" and he fits the role better.

It is a bed-room farce adapted from Ethel Watts Mumford's play, but contains nothing that even the severest censor can object to, and in subtilizing staging and direction is most complete.

Bebé Daniels, who appeared opposite Reid in "The Dancin' Fool," again has the leading feminine role. She is as fine a Duane as ever furnished one of the best excuses in the world for "Reggie" Jay to stay sick. Winifred Greenwood deserves credit too, for her capial performance as Constance Weems, in love but not loved by "Reggie." Tully Marshall is a detective; John Stepping a real estate agent; C. H. Geldart, Lucien Littlefield, two quack doctors, and George Kuwa, a very human and natural, manly chorus. *Sick Abed" holds a wealth of advertising possibilities, besides its excellent cast. Furniture houses can be called in to help with suggestions. Scene is the lady stage twisted into effective catch-line ads, and the fact that it was a successful stage piece can be overlooked. Go on it this Wallace Reid picture.

SYNOPSIS: At the Forest of Arden Inn are domiciled John Weem, his young wife, Ilene, their son, Donald Jay, and the request of Jay, Weems takes a lady customer out to look at the boy's ranch property. Weems and the woman are held up on the road with a hijacked machine.

Meanwhile, Constance, who believes herself a misunderstood wife, deduces much of her time to writing motion picture scenarios. She meets Jay and insists that he play the part of Orlandos, the Chadwick. As the story has him born starved for the city in his automobile when passing a somewhat notorious roadhouse, he obtains a job and the lady stage is coming therefrom. Jay is shocked, but Weems explains that they had merely entered the place for shelter during the rainstorm. Their disheveled chauffeur and Jay takes them back to the Inn. To even matters with Weems, the chauffeur tells Constance that her husband was in the roadhouse with a strange woman, whereupon she makes up her mind to obtain a divorce.

In talking with Weems, aware that Jay will be called as a witness, the latter having been served with a subpoena, induces Jay to pretend he is ill, and he hires two quack doctors to carry out the scheme. A beautiful nurse is hired and Jay immediately falls in love with her. Constance obtains Jay's temperature chart and obtains an order of court for his examination by a neutral physician. When he learns that his nurse has been hired, Jay jumps out of bed and goes in pursuit of her. He finds her, brings her back. Just before the physician begins his examination of Jay, the nurse has kissed him, and the physician finds that Jay's heart action registers badly. Constance, who realizes that she has lost her Orlando, now makes up her mind to retain her husband, and begs his forgiveness. Dr. Macklyn and the quack doctors leave the place in disgust while the going is good.

Not every exhibitor will be able to duplicate the stunt, but a dozen that should prove well nigh as effective will suggest themselves when the picture is viewed.

As concerns straightforward advertising, the record of the previous Tarzan pictures has not yet reached the excellent point. Exhibitors contributing to the "What the Picture Did For Me" department of this publication, over the period covered, tend to be more enthusiastic than in previous times.

Sufficient time has elapsed for the impression made by them to deepen and become fixed. There is not a doubt that the major announcement will shift the title will fill theaters to capacity. Neither is there a doubt that "The Return of Tarzan" will register so successfully as to satisfy the most exacting.

Dorothy Gish in REMODELING HER HUSBAND

Five-part comedy; Paramount Aircraft. Directed by Lillian Gish. Published June 13.

OPINION: Someone should take Lillian Gish to one side and tell her to stick to acting and let others do the directing of her sister's plays. "Remodeling Her Husband" is Lillian's first offense so the critics will probably treat it charitably for this reason, but whoever it is around the Paramount Pictures plant that passes on its finished product, was certainly asleep the day they slipped this one by. It is a very amiable piece of work.

It is supposed to be comedy and tells of the innocent flirtations of a married man; of a temperamental wife; her final desertion of him and reunion, which brings about a happy ending. Here is Lillian's directorial idea of a domestic comedy. First scene: 7 p.m., couple arguing heatedly, wife walking up and down the room. Second scene: 9 p.m., same as before. Third scene: 11 p.m., ditto. Fourth scene: 4 a.m., still arguing. Fifth scene: 6 a.m., it becomes a business woman and her friend husband thrown out of her office. He threatens to shoot himself. She forces him to go.

Others in the cast besides Dorothy with her funny feet, are James Rennie, as the husband, a new comer; Marie Burke, Downing Clarke and Frank Kingdon.

SYNOPSIS: Janie Wakefield marries Jack Valentine a confirmed flirt. He promises to reform, and all goes well until he encounters a pretty lady with a heavy suitcase. He helps her in and this time she is attracted to him as she rides by on a bus. That affair gets him in wrong, but he manages to escape from his wife. Then a good looking manicure girl comes into his life, and again Jack falls. And once more Janie is on the job at the psychological moment. It is a true home comedy.
Six cameras, six cameramen and six assistants were used on one interior set in the filming of "The Money Changers" at the Jesse D. Hampton studios. The story, which was written by Upton Sinclair is being directed by Hugh Ryan Conway.

CLARISSA ADAMS, the young Canadian girl who has been signed by Jesse D. Hampton to appear in all-star casts, is trying to replace Southern California sports with the games of the north country. She has swapped her skates for a surf-board. Miss Adams is playing the feminine lead in "The Money Changers."

Miss Kay Harrison, the young Canadian writer who is collaborating with Jacques Jaccard in the creation of Royal Northwest Mounted Police stories for the Universal screen, has been made a brevet captain of Constance Post of the famous organization.

Marlon Hamilton has been signed by Jesse D. Hampton to play opposite Blanche Sweet in her forthcoming production, "That Girl Montana." The story will follow "Port O' Caprice" in which the star is now being directed by Paul Seward. Hamilton appeared with Miss Sweet in "The Deadlier Sex."

King Vidor's third independent production is scheduled to start within the week. Filming will be carried on at the recently completed Vidor studio on Santa Monica boulevard. The plant has been constructed as a replica of a Yankee village.

Marshall Neilan and members of the "Dinty" company have returned from San Francisco where they spent four days filming station, street and ferryboat scenes. The refreshing role of the Irish immigrant girl is played by Colleen Moore. Other members of the cast are Wesley Barry, Marjorie Daw and Pat O'Malley.

ORA CASH, recently starred in "Mountain Madness" has been chosen to formally dedicate the new club house of Victory Post No. 54; one of the three Los Angeles posts of the American Legion.

Eddie Kell has been chosen by Hope Loring, the Universal serial chief, to direct Eileen Sedgwick in her new serial "The Diamond Master" by Jacques Futrelle.

Eddie Polo is back from New York and has made arrangements to travel with Ringling Brothers circus when it hits western territory. He is anxious to have Hope Loring detach herself from the executive duties of the serial scenario department and travel with the show to prepare the daily working script.

Phil Rosen, who became a director over night because of his wonderful camera work in "The Miracle Man" has left Universal to join the Metro directorial forces. He will still retain the presidency of the American Society of Cinematographers.

Lynn Reynolds is another clever director who has emigrated from Universal City and is now directing Tom Mix at the Fox studio.

Theodore Wharton, famed for the serials produced at Ithaca, N. Y. has been engaged by Hope Loring to write the scenario for the remaining episodes of "The Moon Riders" the Universal serial starring Art Acord.

Frank Lawrence, editor in chief of Universal productions, is back with his shears at Universal City after a short and well earned vacation. Much of his vacation was spent in his aeroplane. Lawrence claims flying is an ideal panacea for shattered nerves.

Annette Kellerman is planning a trip to the Orient this summer to forget the strenuous six months just passed in making her first modern comedy drama, "What Women Love," which is to be distributed under the Sol Lesser banner.

Work on the second Hope Hampton production has been started under the direction of Maurice Tourneur at Tourneur's studio at Universal. It is titled "The Tiger Lady." The feature will be known as a Maurice Tourneur production starring Hope Hampton, and it will be the first time in years that a Tourneur picture has had a star. A peculiar agreement has been reached whereby the billing and advertising for the production will read, "Maurice Tourneur presents Hope Hampton in "The Tiger Lady," directed by Maurice Tourneur." Both director's and star's names will be in the same sized type.

Bert Lytell, starring in "The Price of Redemption" at Metro, once more appears on the streets in daylight. He has shaved the hobo beard he wore for about three weeks during scenes in the picture. Following the completion of "The Price of Redemption," the star will leave for the east, where he will make four pictures at Metro's new east coast studio.

Norman Kennedy has been selected to play one of the leading roles in "Hearts Are Trumps," the third Metro serial-drama to be filmed by Screen Classics, Inc. This is Mr. Kennedy's initial appearance in pictures.

Garrett Hughes has been engaged by Metro as Viola Dana's leading man for "Head and Shoulders."

Jean Havez has been engaged to write the scripts for Buster Keaton comedies, and has already completed the initial fun-maker.

TWO INTERESTING SCENES FROM "UNCHARTED CHANNELS"

H. B. Warner as Timothy Webb listens attentively to the reading of his father's will. Later he takes a hand in running the works and wins the hand of an heiress (Kathryn Adams) in his latest Jesse D. Hampton-Robertson-Cole production.
Volplaning Around N'Yawk

With J. B.

Peter Grisley Smith, chief of the Marshall Neelan press department, has gone to the coast. Peter expects to be away about two months.

Derkman Somand arrived in New York Saturday from London. Mr. Somand represents the London and Provincial Film Company. He will remain in New York about six weeks.

Edward K. Tanaka of the Shochiku Kinema Corporation, located at Tokyo, Japan, is stopping at the Hotel Astor. Mr. Tanaka is in the country for the purpose of purchasing equipment for a new plant. In Japan, Mr. Tanaka is looked upon as the country's most extensive exhibitor.

Maurie Myers had some very novel "throw aways" at Cleveland and when he returned to New York he had three left. Some of the gang said it tasted like sea water.

Hugh Huntley, who has just finished the juvenile lead in "The Point of View" for Selznick, will devote his few days lay-off to the interior decoration of a new apartment. Mr. Huntley is undecided which of several offers to accept next.

Comes a fish story from the coast that Helen Ferguson, who has just completed "Burning Daylight" for Metro, is vacationing in Catalina Islands where she has gone on a week's fishing trip and where the first catch was a twenty-pound fish, devoid of a title.

Estelle Taylor, who is being featured in "Milady's Dress" a Fox picture, is at present working in a French episode which it is said will be among the most interesting of the entire production.

Members of "The Mad Tassel" Company, the Pathé serial now nearing completion, starring Juanita Hansen, are on the last leg near Huntington, N. Y. Among the celebrities on the lot besides the star are her manager, Don Meaney, Ruth Palmer, and the delightful ingénue Nina Cassavant.

High School Athletes Get Models from Walsh

George Walsh, the athletic Fox star, is a graduate of the High School of Commerce in New York City. The other day George paid a visit to old "Commerce" and did himself proud before the assembled classes. A series of medals designed by him and offered to individuals and teams winning the greatest number of points during the season just closed were hidden away in the bottom of his blackmailing bag which Mr. Walsh carried with him.

A winner of thirteen "C's" during his course at Commerce, George Walsh was then introduced to the assembled classes and after a brief address distributed the medals to the winners. Then the boys all struggled to shake the hand of the Fox star, whose prowess on track and field for their own school—and for Fordham University later—is known to colleagues in New York.

FOX SOLVES HOUSING PROBLEM

"You tell 'em, Shoestring, I'm tongue-tied," chirp the Fox Sunshine girls, all daughters of the old lady who lived in a shoe, probably due to the house shortage. Chester Conklin is just going out to spend his week's salary for a bottle of milk.

"Good-Bye Forever"

The Vitagraph star, in the doorway of her California villa, bidding farewell to the guest who put away her last bottle of wine.

Director Storm Has Left

Charles Ray Organization

Jerome Storm, who has directed Charles Ray in his last fourteen pictures, has resigned after supervising final details of the completion of "Peaceful Valley," the star's first National production. The director has not divulged his future plans, but it is likely that he may produce independently.

"I regret that I feel it necessary to part with Mr. Ray," stated Mr. Storm. "Work with him has been an inspiration. I consider Mr. Ray a genius, and I know that his ability and personality will carry any picture no matter who directs it. Thus for the sake of my own ambition I decided to take the step which I have contemplated for a long time but which I continually postponed because of the fine association with the star."

Doraldina on Coast to Commence Production

Doraldina, the dancer whose engagement as one of its new stars was announced recently by Metro, has arrived on the Pacific Coast, where she will begin work in about a fortnight on her first production under the Metro banner. This vehicle is to be a picturization of Carey Wilson's story, "The Passion Fruit." The locale of the subject is the Hawaiian Islands.

Carlyle Blackwell Signs
Cosmopolitan Contract

Carlyle Blackwell has signed to appear in Cosmopolitan pictures. His first appearance will be with Marion Davies in her latest starring vehicle, "The Restless Sex," from the Robert W. Chambers novel.
First National

A Virtuous Vamp, with Constance Talmadge.—Constance will vamp 99 per cent of any audience with this picture. Certainly pleases.—E. E. Hodgison, Kozy theatre, Kahoka, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Daughter of Two Worlds, with Norma Talmadge.—Patrons pronounced it one of best, though critics were not enthusiastic. Great business despite heat. This is a R. C. town and story was just right for here.—J. Ledden, Victoria theatre, Quebec, Canada.—General patronage.

The River's End, a Marshall Neilan production.—One of the best pictures ever played in our house. You got to give it to the First National for productions. They have the best on market.—Louis J. Frana, Olympic theatre, Calmar, la.

The Idol Dancer, a D. W. Griffith production.—Packed house. Many turned away. Good picture A change from the old beaten rut.—A. R. Powell, Sugg theatre, Chickasha, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

Back to God's Country, with Nell Shipman.—Best picture of this kind ever shown in this berg. House full and 100% satisfaction.—G. F. Rediske, Star theatre, Ryegate, Mont.—Small town patronage.

The Temperamental Wife, A Virtuous Vamp and Two Weeks, with Constance Talmadge.—The very best group of high class comedies ever produced. Drew well and made future business.—Mrs. K. B. Ransley, Park Ridge theatre, Park Ridge, Ill.—Suburban patronage.

A Daughter of Two Worlds, with Norma Talmadge.—A star makes good, and my patrons know it. Lots of favorable comments. It is a very clean, well directed picture.—H. J. Longaker, Howard theatre, Alexandria, Minn.—General patronage.

In Old Kentucky, with Anita Stewart.—Went over big the first night. Everyone enthusiastic. Heavy rain the night killed the receipts. No fault of the picture.—E. E. Hodgison, Kozy theatre, Kahoka, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

In Old Kentucky, with Anita Stewart.—Another one good for repeat in small towns. Don't pass up at least one showing. Good business in a three shift town, repeat business on repeat. Not so much Anita Stewart In Old Kentucky a favorite.—J. P. Woodward, Utah theatre, Payfield, Utah.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Greatest Question, a D. W. Griffith production.—Another Griffith tale of sadness and sorrow. Told as only he can tell it, but Griffith is dead here. Don't want his sorrow.—Charles Taylor, Best theatre, Colorado, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Beauty Market, with Katherine MacDonald.—A fine picture, Jeffup & Nable, Dixie theatre, Clay Center, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

Heart o' the Hills, with Mary Pickford.—Excellent. This picture and The Hoodlum did not draw extra business for us like Daddy Long Legs did.—Bert Griffith, Pastime theatre, Delavan, Wis.—High class patronage.

Burglar by Proxy, with Jack Pickford.—They liked it, but I am a little afraid of Jack as playing the leading role.—Oscar Troyer, Lyric theatre, Rugby, N. Dak.

The Temperamental Wife, with Constance Talmadge.—Dandy picture, and everybody pleased.—Peter Krauth, Denison theatre, Denison, la.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Daughter of Two Worlds, with Norma Talmadge.—Drew fair business considering Norma Talmadge is not a drawing card here. Should go well of Jack as playing the leading role.—Oscar Troyer, Lyric theatre, Rugby, N. Dak.

COLLEEN MOORE
Who appears in support of Wesley Harry in his first Marshall Neilan production to be distributed by First National.

IN SEARCH OF A SINNER, with Constance Talmadge.—The merchants have been putting on bargain days, so we advertised this as our bargain day, advertised the picture strong and reduced price five cents. It took two strong men with clubs to control the crowd. It is an excellent picture and pleased everyone.—H. G. Stettmud, Jr., Odeon theatre, Chandler, Okla.

where this star has large following.—A. H. Anderson, Lyric theatre, Twin Falls, Idaho.—Neighborhood patronage.

Back to God's Country, with Nell Shipman.—A sure good one. Every exhibitor should play it. Our people were well pleased.—Preston Bros., Crescent theatre, Audubon, la.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Beauty Market, with Katherine MacDonald.—Picture good. Well received by small attendance due to storm. Katherine MacDonald favorite in this town.—J. P. Woodward, Utah theatre, Garfield, Utah.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Romance of Tarzan, with Elmo Lincoln.—Good for two days.—J. J. Grimm, Chickens theatre, Wilber, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

Human Desire, with Anita Stewart.—A picture. Dragged some, but got by. No complaints. Don't boost too much. Fair business.—R. R. Hess, Marion theatre, Edna, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Hoodlum, with Mary Pickford.—Liked it better than Daddy Long Legs. Showed it 15c cheaper than Daddy Long Legs and total receipts were about the same.—Mr. Carroll, Royal theatre, Fullerton, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

Back to God's Country, with Nell Shipman.—Excellent. Boost it strong and you wont go wrong. Will please your critical patrons, and children go wild over it.—A. R. Anderson, Orpheum theatre, Twin Falls, Idaho.—Neighborhood patronage.

Back to God's Country, with Nell Shipman.—This is a dandy Advertise big. Rail Places and get up Jessup & Nagle, Dixie theatre, Clay Center, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

In Wrong, with Jack Pickford.—Slow picture. Why will they make dark pictures?—Alvin S. Frank, Jewel theatre, Lafayette, Colo.—Neighborhood patronage.

Heart o' the Hills, with Mary Pickford.—Not as good as other First National pictures. However, it pleased and got the business.—A. R. Powell, Bug theatre, Chickasha, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

Human Desire, with Anita Stewart.—Fair picture to very poor business. Can't account for it. Title apparently not the right type.—G. F. Rediske, Star theatre, Ryegate, Mont.—Small town patronage.

Fox

The Shark, with George Walsh.—One of Walsh's best. Big business.—Pfeiffer Bros., Grand Opera House, Kenton, O.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Manhattan Knight, with George Walsh.—Better than the usual Walsh pictures, but very poor drawing card.—W. H. Creal, Suburban theatre, Omaha, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

Lost Money, with Madaline Traverse.—Very good drama. Pleased my patrons very much.—George H. Richardson, k of P. Hall, Moultonboro, N. H.—Neighborhood patronage.

Her Elephant Man, with Shirley Mason.—This picture drew well and pleased.—Peter Krauth, Denison theatre, Denison, Ia.—Neighborhood patronage.

Broken Commandments, with Gladys Brockwell.—If this is on your program boys, have the printer bill it in small type. It is absolutely poor and will not help your business one iota. Why on earth do they make such pictures?—H. M. Palmer, Liberty theatre, Washington, Ind.

The Web of Chance, with Peggy Hyland.—Very good program. People liked it here.—H. F. Held, Queen theatre, Northville, Mich.

Wings of the Morning, with William Farnum.—A real picture with a real star. Good business.—Harry Hobolt, Maxine theatre, Inlay City, Mich.—Small-town patronage.

Checkers, with a special cast.—Personally I don't think this picture compares with The Whip or Goldwyn's, old Polly of the Circus as a horse racing picture. Poor business.—W. L. Uglow, Crystal theatre, Burlington, Wis.—General patronage.

The Adventurer, with William Farnum.—Poor picture. People don't want costume plays.—T. J. Kempley, Lyric theatre, Crete, Nebr.

Mollei and I, with Shirley Mason.—This is a dandy. Everybody pleased.—Frank Peeb, Tokio theatre, Greenwood, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

Broken Commandments, with Gladys Brockwell.—Good acting and very good photography. Not a picture for small country shows.—George H. Richardson, k of P. Hall, Moultonboro, N. H.—Neighborhood patronage.

Eastward Ho, with William Russell.—Russell is a fine actor and a sure drawing good crowds. My patrons keep asking when I am having Russell again. That is a sure sign they are pleased.—Ethel M. Huber, Opera House, Camp Point, Ill.—Small-town patronage.

Would You Forgive?, with Vivian Rich.—Did not do up to the house.—Peter Krauth, Denison theatre, Denison, Ia.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Deadline, with George Walsh.—The best new vehicle made. Also best story. Pleased 100% of patrons. Would rather have this type than Westerns.—Frank Tokio, Tokio theatre, Greenwood, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

Evangeline, with Miriam Cooper.—The picture is very good, but if you are not in a town that likes classic stuff better leave it alone.—Empire theatre, Verdigris, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

Checkers, with a special cast.—A very good one, and nearly everyone pleased. Played to standing room two hours.—A. L. Hepp, Idylhour theatre, Greeley, Nebr.

Checkers, with a special cast.—This is a good attraction. Next to the biggest receipts we have had. We had no advertising matter, only hand printed cards and dodgers, or we would have broken all records. Had packed house theatre, Byron, I1.—Small-town patronage.

A Tale of Two Cities, with William Farnum.—Good drawing card, but mix on the picture.—J. C. Lamonteri, American theatre, Bresknerridge, Tex.—General patronage.

Never Say Quit, with George Walsh.—A good vehicle for Walsh. Our Saturday night crowds are always great for this picture. We had no advertising matter, only hand printed cards and dodgers, or we would have broken all records. Had packed house theatre, Byron, I1.—Small-town patronage.

The Feud, with Tom Mix.—Different from many Mix pictures. He gets on your nerves a lot, but you can't help it. A good picture most of his stunts. Opinion divided.—A. L. Hepp, I1dyhour theatre, Greeley, Nebr.

Putting One Over, with George Walsh.—A good picture, but was spoiled by reels being cut down about one half.—A. J. Staggall, Opera House, Fayette, 1a.—College town patronage.

Sacred Silence, with William Russell.—This is a fine picture with a good cast. Patrons were pleased and on leaving the theatre stopped to say so. Some said they would go again if it was repeated.—G. H. Armstrong, Y. M. C. A. theatre, Rose Lake, Idaho.—Neighborhood patronage.

Goldwyn

The City of Comrades, with Tom Mix.—This picture is a credit to the star and also the producer. Caused many favorable remarks.—R. L. Trescott, Pictureland theatre, Livonia, N. Y.—Transient patronage.

The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come, with Jack Pickford.—Ran this some time ago to a very small business. Very light business on return. A mighty good production.—Verner Hicks, Family theatre, Marion, Ill.—General patronage.

The Road Called Straight, with Louis Benneson.—This picture is an excellent vehicle for this fair. Fair business.—G. F. Redick, Star theatre, Ryegate, Mont.—Small-town patronage.

Bonds of Love, with Pauline Frederick.—Very good subject. Work of Frankie Lee worthy of special mention in your advertising. But be sure to add a peppy two reeler to this program. It will make a strong combination.—Harry M. Palmer, Liberty theatre, Washington, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Reluctant Hero, with Pauline Frederick.—This is a fairly good picture, but Pauline Frederick is a very poor drawing card in this town.—John Hafner, Princess, Donora, Pa.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Misfit Earl, with Louis Benneson.—This pleased my patrons, as do all the Benneson pictures, because he is clever and cute stunts.—E. E. Hodgson, Kozy theatre, Kahoka, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

Toby's Bow, with Tom Moore.—Clean comedy-drama. Better than some of Goldwyn's specials.—Mart Cole, Liberty theatre, Rosenberg, Tex.—General patronage.

Pinto, with Mabel Normand.—This is a big one. Book and boost it. Can't go wrong.—L. A. Haase, Majestic theatre, Maysville, Ws.—General patronage.

Flame of the Desert, with Geraldine Farrar.—A very elaborate production. Settings wonderful, and star at her very best.—Majestic theatre, Madison Island, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

The World and Its Woman, with Geraldine Farrar.—A good picture, but did not draw well.—Verner Hicks, Family theatre, Marion, Ill.—General patronage.

Pinto, with Mabel Normand.—There was only one Normand picture and that was Mickey. Pinto is the best one this year.—Mart Cole, Liberty theatre, Rosenberg, Tex.—General patronage.

Hallmark

The Pinch Hitter, with Charles Ray.—It's old, but it's good, so what's the dif? Better than some of his new ones.—L. F. Jeenzeki, Eureka theatre, Auburn, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Good Bad Man, with Douglas Fairbanks.—Favorable comments from patrons. An interesting story.—E. E. Bonham, Bonham theatre, Prairie du Sac, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Romance of the Air, with Lient. Bert. Hall.—Local conditions made big business on this feature. The War stuff is passing, consequently this failed to make a hit with my patrons.—J. B. Stine, Gem theatre, Clinton, Ind.

Her Decision, with Gloria Swanson.—Very good picture.—Schonlau & Abraharn, S. & A theatre, Houston, Minn.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Beggar of Cairo, with H. B. Warner.—Surprised us. Is really a big special dealing with a rebellion in India. Rather gruesome, but warm scenes make it attractive.—Fahrey Hicks, Eastern theatre, Curtis, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

Hodkinson

You Never Know Your Luck, with House Peters.—Wish we could get some

SEX, with Louise Glau.—One of the sensations of the season. With two copies of "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" as competition and with two hottest days of the season—"SEX" played to standing room at 50 and 60-cent prices. This feature exceeded all my expectations.—Charles Garfield, Orpheum theatre, Flint, Mich.
more just like it. Great for a program picture.—L. E. Jezenski, Eureka theatre, Auburn, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Lord Loves the Irish, with J. Warren Kerrigan.—Good picture. Pleased patrons. Good business.—A. B. Mendel, Palace theatre, Galveston, Tex.—General patronage.

The Lone Wolf's Daughter, with Louise Glau.—Kept my patrons in two shows before they could get head or tail of the plot.—Jack Cairns, Brooklyn theatre, Detroit, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

Madam Who, with Bessie Barriscale.—We used a new print on this and our audience surely appreciated the subject. Soft pedal the war part of the picture, and once you get them in they will surely enjoy the story. Use Harold McGrath's name in billing.—Harry M. Palmer, Liberty theatre, Washington, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

Live Sparks, with J. Warren Kerrigan.—Fair. Nothing extra.—A. B. Mendel, Strand theatre, Galveston, Tex.—General patronage.

Metro

Burning Daylight, with Mitchell Lewis.—A money-getter, and greatly appreciated by audience.—Rose theatre, Chicago, Ill.—General patronage.

Please Get Married, with Viola Dana.—Some show. Everyone wants to know when I will have another like it. Don't be afraid to book this one.—Sam L. Nissen, Happy Hour theatre, Broadview, Mont.—Small town patronage.

Please Get Married, With Viola Dana.—Producers needn't expect not to have censorship as long as they make pictures like this one. Better pay for it and not use it if you cater to decent folks.—Cowan Oldham, Dixie theatre, McMinnville, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Right of Way, with Bert Lytell.—They didn't like it, I don't think. Don't put it on in the neighborhod.—T. J. S. Grieve and C. J. Floyd, Crystal theatre, Burlington, Wis.—General patronage.

Alias Jimmy Valentine, with Bert Lytell.—Not a money getter, but not a money getter with us. Not enough doing.—T. M. Harvey, Unique theatre, El Paso, Tex.

In For Thirty Days, with May Allison.—This little lady as well as this picture is very wholesome and very entertaining.—I. M. Harvey, Unique theatre, Detroit, Mich.—Super-special patronage.

Our Mrs. McChesney, with Ethel Barrymore.—A good picture that will keep any audience in good humor.—Harold Daspit, Atherton theatre, Keny Forest, la.—Small town patronage.

Shore Acres, with Alice Lake.—Good high class production, but not a big money getter.—T. M. Harvey, Unique theatre, El Paso, Tex.—Small town patronage.

Out of the Fog, with Nazimova.—A very good picture. Much better than some of her newer ones. Acting and settings excellent.—W. H. Creal, Suburban theatre, Omaha, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Very Idea, with Taylor Holmes.—Taylor Holmes and the class of pictures he plays in don't do much here as a rule. However business was fairly good for three days on account of good lobby display.—T. M. Harvey, Unique theatre, El Paso, Tex.

Paramount Artcraft

Everywoman, with a special cast.—Did not take as well as we expected. Some said, "Not a chance to cater old or young." Others said it contained a great lesson.—Fred W. Wells, Star theatre, Milford, Mich.—Small town patronage.

What Every Woman Learns, with Enid Bennett.—Good picture. Good business.—Pfeiffer Bros., Grand Opera House, Kenton, O.—Neighborhood patronage.

Quickands, with Dorothy Dalton.—Fine picture. She will draw well on every picture.—George D. Rogers, Gem theatre, Lyndon, Kan.—Small town patronage.

His Wife's Friend, with Dorothy Dalton.—Did not please. Star does not draw.—A. R. Powell, Sugg theatre, Chickasha, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Copperhead, with Lionel Barrymore.—A very good production. Wonderfully acted.—George W. Sills, Suburban theatre, Omaha, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Miracle Man, with a special cast.—Some did not care for it. Others came three times seeing it. Has great drawing power, but is spoiled by closing title "He was a good thought."—Fred W. Wells, Star theatre, Milford, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Everywoman, with a special cast.—Too much of a class picture. Did not get rental back.—W. H. Mart, Strand theatre, Grinnell, la.—College town patronage.

The Teeth of the Tiger, with a special cast.—Arsene Lupin story is enough to get the business here, and this was a very popular piece. It is a story of those 'once in a blue moon' kind.—R. L. Hensler, Bijou theatre, Carrollton, Ill.

FOR BETTER FOR WORSE, a DeMille production.—Here was a knockout for us. Even our 'pro-jectionist,' as he insists on being called, said that he took a good look at it twice—and that is praise indeed. Many of our patrons said they liked it as well if not better than The Miracle Woman. It is one of those 'once in a blue moon' kind.—R. L. Hensler, Bijou theatre, Carrollton, Ill.

The Law of Men, with Enid Bennett.—Good picture. Fair business.—C. E. Belden, Midway theatre, Mogollon, N. M.—Neighborhood patronage.

Huckleberry Finn, with a special cast.—Very poor picture. Drew a few kids. Lay off of this as a super-special. We certainly have been stung on last two suppers from Paul. H. M. Hart, Strand theatre, Grinnell, la.—College town patronage.

The Miracle Man, with a special cast.—Another two day's good business.—N. H. Dille, Crystal theatre, Galveston, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Copperhead, with Lionel Barrymore.—Picture very good, but a big financial failure for me. It does not show that such big money was spent in its making.—John Hafner, Majestic theatre, Donora, Pa.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Girl Who Stayed at Home, a D. W. Griffith production.—A good picture, but getting old. Too much war. I used an Al St. John two reel comedy, Ship Ahoy. He is some monkey when it comes to getting some place. Good comedy.—A. W. Primley, Primley's theatre, Ladora, la.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Lady in Love, with Ethel Clayton.—Up to average program, but not suitable for majority Poor business.—Rose theatre, Chicago, Ill.—General patronage.

Good Gracious Annabel, with Billie Burke.—Fair picture. Played it with Sennett comedy. Good business.—C. E. Belden, Midway theatre, Mogollon, N. M.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Dub, with Wallace Reid.—Not as good as some of Reid's, but O. K.—C. C. Teas, Crystal theatre, Watertown, Minn.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Lottery Man, with Wallace Reid.—As good a picture as you may want. Good enough for any audience. Business only fair for me as it was very hot and had too much out-of-doors competition.—John Hafner, Majestic theatre, Donora, Pa.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Law of the North, with Charles Ray.—Excellent picture. Good acting. Even though some exhibitors knock this one it should be a safe bet for anyone. We did capacity business.—Peters & Jonson, Liberty theatre, Milligan, Nebr.—Small town patronage.

For Better For Worse, a Cecil B. DeMille production.—Passed 100%. You can't go wrong in this. Boost it and advertise your picture well.—W. H. Mart, Strand theatre, Grinnell, la.—Neighborhood patronage.
The Fine Arts Pictures, Inc., six-part production has a strong comedy vein running through it furnished by the antics of an athletic girls’ chorus.

Pathé

A Woman of Pleasure, with Blanche Sweet.—Comment on it was good. I consider it a good program picture.—Alvin S. Frank jewel theatre, Lafayette, Colo.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Deadlier Sex, with Blanche Sweet.—Title is misleading. It is not a sex picture. It is a story of business intrigue. It is a good picture of its kind. Seven acts.—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield theatre, Chicago, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Little Diplomat, with Marie Osborne.—This little star always is liked. Picture good.—L. A. Haase, Majestic theatre, Mauston, Wis.—Small town patronage.

Rio Grande, with Rosemary Theby.—A very good picture with good scenery, and nicely produced, but a failure at box office. Mexican plays shunned by the people.—Mrs. J. A. Dostal, Ideal theatre, Omaha, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

Gates of Brass, with Frank Keenan.—Fine picture. Played it with Bound and Bagged. Good business.—C. E. Belden, Midway theatre, Mogollon, N. M.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Dust of Desire, with Ruby de Remer.—This is absolutely a good one. Many comments.—L. R. Ledon, Lamar Opera House, Isabel, Kans.

The Sawdust Doll, with Marie Osborne.—Sambo should star in these productions as he is a 100% star. Baby Marie 10%. Take Sambo out and you have no laughs.—L. G. Sewing, Crown theatre, Calumet, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Damsel in Distress, with June Caprice and Creighton Hale.—An excellent picture that will please most everyone. Delightful comedy.—H. G. Stett- mound, Jr., Odeon theatre, Chandler, Okla.—General patronage.

Realart

Jenny Be Good, with Mary Miles Minter.—Minter is getting better with each picture. This was liked very much by everyone. Business good.—John Hafner, Princess theatre, Donora, Pa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Anne of Green Gables, with Mary Miles Minter.—A picture that can be seen a second time and enjoyed. All my patrons apparently delighted with theme and acting.—E. E. Hodgson, Kozey theatre, Kahoka, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

Anne of Green Gables, with Mary Miles Minter.—Sweet little picture and appealed to people who are not regular fans. Minter likely to replace Mary Pickford in this town.—J. Ledden, Victoria theatre, Quebec, P. O. Canada.—General patronage.

The Fear Market, with Alice Brady.—Good picture and pleased.—Peter Krauth, Denison theatre, Denison, la.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Fear Market, with Alice Brady.—Very good picture from beginning to end. Splendid support.—Fred Paulick, Paulick theatre, Muscoda, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Erstwhile Susan, with Constance Binney.—Can’t be beat for a picture of its kind. Constance Binney will be a really star some day.—L. F. Jezenski, Eureka theatre, Auburn, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

Republic

The Heart of Gold, with Louise Huff.—Very good little picture, and gave general satisfaction, and star very good, and attendance good.—Charles H. Quizzetti, Opera House, Gardner, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Social Pirate, with June Elvidge.—Very elaborate settings, and fine photography, but a society picture does not appeal to my patrons.—S. B. Brock, Electric theatre, Hagerman, N. M.—Neighborhood patronage.

Cox Me, with June Elvidge.—Fine picture. This star has not been pulling for us. Fair business. —J. G. Becker, Rex theatre, Des Moines, la.—Neighborhood patronage.

Twelve-Ten, with Marie Doro.—Just a fair picture. Nothing big.—Verner Hicks, Family theatre, Marion, Ill.—General patronage.

Stolen Orders, with a special cast.—Am sorry I ran it.—Harry Hobolth, Maxine theatre, Imlay City, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Twelve-Ten, with Marie Doro.—A very, very poor picture. I can’t remember a picture so stupid. The French and English scenes the best part of it.—Mrs. J. A. Dostal, Ideal theatre, Omaha, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

Home Wanted, with Madge Evans.—A very good child picture. My patrons are always satisfied with a Madge Evans picture.—S. B. Brock, Electric theatre, Hagerman, N. M.—Neighborhood patronage.

Robertson-Cole

The Third Generation, with Betty Blue.—An excellent picture, gave great satisfaction.—H. H. Billings, Pleasant Hour theatre, Pine Island, Minn.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Prodigal Liar, with William Desmond.—Splendid comedy-drama with Western setting. Fair business to pleased patronage.—J. B. Stine, Gem theatre, Clinton, Ind.

The Bottom of the World, with a special cast.—Good pictures, gave them a fair price. Advertise well but do not raise your price. "No raise in price" special.—H. Johnson, Lyric theatre, Toppenish, Wash.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Fugitive from Matrimony, with H. B. Warner.—Very nice clean picture. Pleased most all of audience.—A. R. Powell, Sugg theatre, Chickasha, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Beloved Cheater, with Lew Cody.—We played this as a special at advanced prices and felt cheap about it after this. The picture has beautiful settings and is elaborately staged, but there is nothing to it. It will go as program, but that’s all.—H. P. Thompson, Little theatre, Pineville, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

His Birthright, with Susse Hayakawa.—Average program picture. Played many.—C. D. Oldenburger, McMinville, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Man’s Country, with Alma Rubens.—Ancient history. Do not grasp the idea of shipping it up at this late date.—Jessup & Nagle, Dixie theatre, Clay Center, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.
A Woman's Honor, with H. B. Warner.—Splendid picture. Good business. I hear you can now buy it on loan at M. I. Hoberg, Opera theatre, Minn. — Neighborhood patronage.

The Love Call, with Billie Rhodes.—Very good Western subject well put on. Played to good business, and will please all lovers of Western stuff. — J. B. Stine, Gem theatre, Clinton, Ind.

Select

Experimental Marriage, with Constance Talmadge.—Picture was complimented very highly. Had good crowd. Sent a good effort, and I expect better. — J. H. Mason, Opera House, Camp Point, Ill. — Small town patronage.

She Loves and Lies, with Norma Talmadge.—Good program picture. Liberty theatre, Ft. Scott, Kans. — Neighborhood patronage.

The Broken Melody, with Eugene O'Brien.—A fair program picture. I can't make these pictures go over. — Harry Hoholt, Maxine theatre, Inlay City, Mich. — Small town patronage.

The Spitfire Bride, with Olive Thomas.—A poor picture. Made it not. Much of a story. Lost money on it, but was not too close to Chautauqua. — R. R. Hess, Marion theatre, Edna, Tex. — Neighborhood patronage.

The Isle of Conquest, with Norma Talmadge.—This picture has never appeared in outside of De Luxe Annie. Drew good business and everybody pleased. — A. R. Anderson, Gem theatre, Twin Falls, Id., — Neighborhood patronage.

She Loves and Lies, with Norma Talmadge.—This is the last picture Norma Talmadge made for us this year. It is a good comedy-drama. Conway Tearle as leading man is worth mentioning in your ads. Title will mean money at your box office. We booked it two days. A third repeat. Six acts. — Charles H. Ryan, Garfield theatre, Chicago, Ill. — Neighborhood patronage.

She Loves and Lies, with Norma Talmadge.—A good picture. Not a super picture however. Star very good. — Majestic theatre, Grand Island, Nebr. — Neighborhood patronage.

Piccadilly Jim, with Owen Moore.—My people used to knock Mary Pickford for divorcing Moore, but they don't any more. Freshest excuse for a picture I ever ran. Not worth the film that took to make it. — Cowan Oldham, Dixie theatre, Memphisville, Tenn. — Neighborhood patronage.

United Artists

Pollyanna, with Mary Pickford.—One of the best pictures we have ever shown. Will play a second night as this one did. — H. Johnson, Lyric theatre, Toppenish, Wash. — Neighborhood patronage.

When the Clouds Roll By, with Douglas Fairbanks.—This was another winner for Doug. Heard people talking about it. Bought it and cleaned up. — E. H. Winkler, Palace theatre, St. John, Kans. — Small town patronage.

When the Clouds Roll By, with Douglas Fairbanks.—It's different from the ordinary Fairbanks, and drew well for me. — C. E. Wentzel, Orpheum theatre, Ada, Minn. — Neighborhood patronage.

Down on the Farm, with a special cast.—Don't fail to book this picture. It will make money for you. Very good. — H. F. Heldt, Queen theatre, Nordeim, Tex.

Pollyanna, with Mary Pickford.—Great. Wonderful picture. Big competition on all sides, but this picture won them all. The very best work of this star's and she can be proud of it. Newspaper notoriety failed to shake the faith of the people. They want Mary Pickford and that's all there is to it.— Mrs. J. A. Dostal, Ideal theatre, Omaha, Nebr. — Neighborhood patronage.

Broken Blossoms, a D. W. Griffith production.—The man or woman who says people want plays with a tragic or unhappy ending surely needs a tonic. A most unsatisfactory picture. Did not please 5%.— Harry Hoholt, Maxine theatre, Inlay City, Mich. — Small town patronage.

Pollyanna, with Mary Pickford.—No complaint to make about the picture. "State of Nevada versus Mary Pickford" kept some away. We lost money. — Mrs. K. E. Ransley, Park Ridge theatre, Park Ridge, Ill. — Suburban patronage.

Universal

The Virgin of Stamboul, with Priscilla Dean.—A good picture which did not draw. Probably because of the price. Those who saw it liked it. Played two days. — Verner Hicks, Family theatre, Marion, Ill. — General patronage.

The Virgin of Stamboul, with Priscilla Dean.—The Virgin of Stamboul is the greatest of great features, but is not the kind to take in a small town. — Fred Paulick, Paulick theatre, Muscoda, Wis. — Neighborhood patronage.

A Little Brother of the Rich, with Frank Mayo.—Good picture. Frank Mayo destined to be a popular star. Business off due to hot weather.— W. H. Creal, Suburban theatre, Omaha, Nebr. — Neighborhood patronage.

The Phantom Melody, with Monroe Salisbury.—A few more like this one and Monroe will have to travel with the has-beens. A splendid actor handicapped. Small business, but I got all I could expect with what I had to offer. — J. B. Stine, Gem theatre, Clinton, Ind.

Blind Husband, with Eric Von Stromheim.—Good drawing power. Ran this with Chautauqua season tickets against me. Capacity business. — L. P. Lewis, Lone Star theatre, Jasper, Tex. — Small town patronage.

The Light of Victory, with Monroe Salisbury.—An excellent picture. It failed to draw as it should, but all who saw it were very much pleased. — M. H. Brumm, Princess theatre, North Milwaukee, Wis. — Neighborhood patronage.

The Triflers, with Edith Roberts.—Fair business to good picture. Star not so well known. — Verner Hicks, Family theatre, Marion, Ill. — General patronage.

The Forged Bride, with Mary MacLaren.—Good, very good and pleased all. Good business for the one day with hot weather to fight. — Mrs. J. A. Dostal, Ideal theatre, Omaha, Nebr. — Neighborhood patronage.

Lasca, with Edith Roberts.—Fair picture but slow getting started. All life in last reel. No complaints. — R. R. Hess, Marion theatre, Edna, Tex. — Neighborhood patronage.

Loot, with Ora Carew.—Didn't take very good. — C. C. Teas, Crystal theatre, Watertown, Minn. — Neighborhood patronage.

Vitagraph

The Sporting Duchess, with Alice Joyce.—Played it Victoria Day, May 24, and cleaned up. Good picture with special appeal to English and Canadian people.—L. Leiden, Victoria theatre, Quebec, Canada.—General patronage.

The Vengeance of Durand, with Alice Joyce.—Good picture, but did not draw well here.—Liberty theatre, Ft. Scott, Kans.—Neighborhood patronage.

Beating the Odds, with Harry Morey.—A good strong, pleasing story.—A. R. Anderson, Orpheum theatre, Twin Falls, Idaho.—Neighborhood patronage.

Thin Ice, with Corinne Griffith.—Just an average program picture. Drew a good crowd however.—Bert Norton, Kozy theatre, Eureka, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Climbers, with Corinne Griffith.—Good. All of Corinne Griffith pictures please here.—L. F. Lewis, Lone Star theatre, Jasper, Tex.—Small town patronage.

The Wolf, with Earl Williams.—This is a fine picture. Packed them in on a hot night. Earl Williams will be sure get you the business.—E. A. Bloomquist, Wisner theatre, Eldora, Ia.—Small town patronage.

The Girl at Bay, with Corinne Griffith.—An average mystery picture.—Bert Norton, Kozy theatre, Eureka, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Specials

The Long Arm of Mannister, with Henry B. Waithall.—Story interesting. Plot good. In seven reels. Title is not much as a box office attraction. If you want a good picture well acted, book it. Star is not the drawing card he was about four years ago.—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield theatre, 2441 Madison St., Chicago, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Eyes of Youth, with Clara Kimball Young.—Good picture.—Liberty theatre, Ft. Scott, Kans.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Confession, with Henry B. Waithall.—This picture was a big disappointment. Played on percentage and billed like a circus. Too much religion. Many unfavorable comments. Raised prices and got in bad all around. Lay off this one.—E. A. Bloomquist, Wisner theatre, Eldora, Ia.—Small town patronage.

Eyes of the World, with a special cast.—Picture not as good as the novel. Business fair.—Pfeiffer Bros., Grand Opera House, Kenton, O.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Sport of Kings, with a special cast.—They liked this picture.—Eugene Saunders, Palace theatre, Harvard, Ill.—General patronage.

Eyes of Youth, with Clara Kimball Young.—High class. No good for small towns. Did not draw.—Sam L. Nissen, Happy Hour theatre, Broadview, Mont.—Small town patronage.

Virtuous Men, with E. K. Lincoln.—Good picture, but here's warning to the man that sold me this one. He misrepresented. Claimed it to be a Western, couldn't see no Western in it.—L. F. Jezenki, Eureka theatre, Auburn, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

Custer's Last Fight, with a special cast.—Absolutely the best cooperation I was ever given from any parties playing pictures. A real money getter that gives satisfaction to young and old.—P. G. Mannas, Le Grand theatre, Chicago, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Woman He Chose, with a special cast.—Very good. Exceptionally good business for two days.—Henry E. Newell, Norward theatre, Chicago, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Serials

The Lion Man (Universal), with Jack Perrin.—Good. Holds up good. Capacity on Monday nights. Started this with monkey comedies.—L. F. Lewis, Lone Star theatre, Jasper, Tex.—Small town patronage.

Daredevil Jack (Pathé), with Jack Dempsey.—Started off with a bang, but fell off considerably every week. A very weak serial when it comes to action. Nothing to bring them back in the eighth, ninth and tenth episodes.—W. H. Creal, Suburban theatre, Omaha, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

Smashing Barriers (Vitagraph), with William Duncan.—Just finished last episode. Played to increased business every episode.—N. Foster, Utica, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

THE THIRD EYE (Pathé), with Warner Oland and Eileen Percy.—Talk about thrills! Panoraphy and cast and story and mystery coupled with high grade style. This serial is easily in a class by itself. Big business for opening chapter with hot weather to fight.—Mrs. J. A. Dostal, Ideal theatre, Omaha, Neb.

Bound and Gagged (Pathé), with George B. Seltz.—This is a fine serial. Going stronger each week. George B. Seltz is fine and so is Marguerite Courtout.—C. E. Becker, Midway theatre, Mogollon, N. Mex.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Lion Man (Universal), with Jack Perrin.—Good Western serial. Plot very much like other Universal serials. Good business with Universal Westerns, which are the best on the market.—J. G. Becker, Rex theatre, Des Moines, la.—Neighborhood patronage.

Lightning Brice (Arrow) with a special cast.—Started off well, but fell down badly. Everybody kicking. Too silly even for kids. Poor photography. Stay away from it.—E. N. Collins, Liberty theatre, Electra, Tex.—Small town patronage.

The Adventures of Ruth (Pathé), with Ruth Roland.—This is a good snappy serial. Ruth Roland is some fighter and puts over the thrills. Held up all the way through.—E. A. Bloomquist, Wisner theatre, Eldora, Ia.—Small town patronage.

Heavy of the Pathe serial, “The Third Eye,” in his character make-up.

American Will Publish
Soon “A Live Wire Hick”

“A Live-Wire Hick” adapted from American’s “New York Luck,” one of William Russell’s big successes, will follow “The Week End,” a Cosmo Hamilton popular novel recently screened. Franclle Billingon, who plays opposite William Russell, is the type of heroine for such a quick-action drama as “A Live-Wire Hick.”

The supporting cast includes Harvey Clark, Clarence Burton, Edward Peil, Alfred Ferguson, Frederic Vroom and Carl Stockdale. The story was written by Charles T. and Frank Dazeys, and adapted for the screen by Chester Clapp.

EMERSON HEIDES HEADLINE
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)
NEW YORK, June 15.—John Emerson, scenario writer, electric William Lackaye for presidency of the Actors’ Equity Association. Others elected were Ethel Berrymore, vice president; Grant Stewart, recording secretary, and Richard A. Purdy, treasurer.

Path Has Taken Over World Rights
To Hy Mayer’s “Capitol Travelaugh’s"

World rights to “Capitol Travelaugh’s,” produced by Hy Mayer, the noted cartoonist, have been obtained by Pathe Exchange, Inc.

These creative film will revert to Pathe immediately after their initial showing at the Capitol theatre, New York, which holds the pre-release rights to each series.

Negotiations for the pictures were concluded by Paul Beninc, vice-president and general manager of Pathe and Edward Bowes, representing Morefield Realty Corporation, which owns the Capitol.

To Be in Review

Beginning in August, the “Travelaugh’s” will be incorporated in the Pathe Review. The series is unique in many respects. First, it is a combination of Mr. Mayer’s cartoons, which have gained him fame in England, France, Germany and throughout the continent, and on this side of the Atlantic, and scenes photographed from actual life. It is a little human-interest document, which records life as seen through the happily lighted lenses of humor.

An idea of just what influence “Capitol Travelaugh’s” series presents is furnished by one of the recent issues. This “production” opened with one of Mr. Mayer’s cartoons, showing how a citizen of the Orient would appear garbed in his native costume and in his own land. Then it dissolved into a street scene, photographed in New York, showing this same Oriental in the costume of the Occident.

Is Facile Writer

Mr. Mayer is happily qualified to present pictures of this nature. In addition to his ability to sketch humorously or satirically, Mr. Mayer also writes with a pen that figuratively “laughs with every stroke.” Part of his reputation was gained from the clever captions that accompanied his drawings. Mr. Mayer is well known to motion picture enthusiasts of this country, as well as abroad, for his cartoons were seen in film form for many years before he attempted his “Travelaugh” series. His work as caricaturist for the New York Times brought Mr. Mayer into national repute. He has a grasp upon public feeling that is particularly noteworthy.

In exploiting the “Capitol Travelaugh’s” throughout the world, Pathe has a product that will have a universal appeal, because they are broadly visualized in such a manner as to make them entertaining and instructive to any type of audience.

Intensive Program Is Mapped Out By Neilan
Director-Producer Returns West After Conferences
In New York City

Marshall Neilan, vice-president of Associated Producers, Inc., passed through Chicago, Sunday, June 13, en route from New York to the coast, where he will begin work immediately on a plan of intensive summer production.

Important negotiations were closed by the producer-director during his short stay in New York, where he conferred with executives of First National Exhibitors Circuit relative to production plans for productions to be published by the exhibitors circuit.

The title of his fourth picture, which stars Wesley Barry, is announced by Mr. Neilan as “Dinny,” the original having been written by the producer and Reed Heustis, the newspaper humorist. Supporting the freckle-faced youngster is Colleen Moore.

The third Neilan production for First National has been completed, but is yet untitled. The story itself is said to be of a very unusual nature, the characters being portrayed by Pat O’Malley, Agnes Ayres, Wesley Barry, Jimmy Shea, Charles Mailes, Lydia Yemanis Titus, George Dromgold, Noah Beery, “Bull” Montana and others.

Mr. Neilan announces that work on his fifth production for First National will be commenced as soon as he returns west and that advance preparations for this film are under way.

Jack Pickford To Appear
In Adaption of Aide Play

Jack Pickford’s next vehicle following the completion of “The Man Who Had Everything,” at Goldwyn’s Culver City studios, will be George Ade’s comedy, “Just Out of College.” Goldwyn also announces that Mabel Normand’s next vehicle will be “Head Over Heels,” the successful stage play in which Mitzi HаЈgos was starred. “The Slim Princess” is now ready for publication.

E. Mason Hopper has finished the picturization of Mary Roberts Rinehart’s story, “The Green Sesame,” and is ready to assume work on the Booth Tarkington “Edgar Comedies,” the next one in the series going under the title of “Edgar’s Sunday Courtship.” Director Harry Beaumont is in the midst of “Stop Thief,” in which Tom Moore is being starred, and Reginald Denny, an all-star company, is still at Catalina Island working on an elaborate version of a dramatic story of the sea by Ben Ames Williams.
"Home Again—after the hottest time I've had since January 16th.

"I'm right here to tell you that there were big things done down at that Cleveland place—and the boys kept yelling "O Min" so often that I ran my left leg into a stump keeping up with them.

"But what it takes to make 'em sit up and take notice your old friend Andy's got—ask any of the mob that went down to the convention.

"It was a great little trip—but I'm back again with bells on, ready to greet the crowds of my friends that gather around the theatres where I hang out.

"Look me up."

With most of the boys attending the big Cleveland convention last week, the local affairs of note were given a worthy wallop. * * *

Let it be said to the credit of Charlie Ryan, manager of the pretty Garfield theatre, that he believes in letting his patrons in on everything. He knows with regard to their comfort and the projection of better films for their entertainment. During the week of June 7, this wide Awake manager had printed upon his program a brief resume explaining "Sun-Lit Pictures." Have you noticed the brightness of our pictures and how every detail is shown clearly on our screen. We are always on the lookout for the latest improvements in projection and have just installed the latest improved Martin converters, which is producing the better results of our projection. We know you will enjoy this improved and colorful light. Management.

Att a boy "Chick"—tell it to 'em. * * *

Just got a flash from sunny California heavily accented with essence of the past days in Chicago. This organization to be known as "The Big Chicago Five of 'Frisco," with Del Goodman, Lester Gimmel, "Chip" Florine, and "Squirt" Huey charter members. The mayor, censor board and chief of police have been sworn in as auxiliary members.

S. J. Gregory, of the Illinois theatre, Chicago Heights, while in the city a few days ago, informed the author and Sam and Earl of results and treasurer of the S. J. Gregory Theatrical Company, are preparing to take an extended motor trip Eastward in early July and are anxious to have all their set-ins satisfactorily arranged before hitting the dusty trails.

G. E. Pomeroy, formerly with the local Vitagraph exchange, is now representing the Superior Screen service in the Indiana territory. * * *

A report has just been confirmed that R. T. Smith, assistant manager of the Superior Screen exchange, has purchased a bungalow at 7636 West End avenue for $25,000. Phew! Some pile of iron men we see these days at 25 cents a piece and butter going over the dollar a pound mark, a chap has to lay down some real cash for a place to sleep these days. They hint the adjoining property will soon be taken over by Harry Weiss.

Exhibitor Savage, partner to Martin and Savage, Keokuk, Iowa, informed us that May 15 they took over the Colonial theatre.

Another episode for some serial writer to cash in on. They tell us the Alma theatre has changed hands, but no one knows the new owners. Try Suckin' and Elmata—they are nice quiet youngster and might let you know. * * *

Jody Dorman, of the Colonial theatre, La Salle, Ill., whilst a few hours with the local boys before showing off for the Cleveland convention a week. * * *

Harry Grump, owner of a chain of theatres in Rock Island, Galesburg and Beloit, tells us he has gone into Iowa, taken the Amusé theatre of Muscatine. Keep it up Harry, Upset Sam has forty-eight good states staring you in the eyes.

St. Koloidal Griever, the "Frisco Kid," and his sparring partner Darro, Dave Dubin, have invented a new form of sport. It is a cross between a catch-as-catch-can wrestling and a Texas bull fight. The idea is this: Si and Dave mount upon their trusty flivers, respectively, and each tries to see who can push the other into the nearest sewer. It's a sweet game like drop the handkerchief or "button, button" who's got the contract? * * *

We learn upon very reliable authority that Jawh Mednikow has avoided being pinched for speeding ten days in rapid succession. Case unknown. * * *

We thought when we looked Moe Mintz over this week that he had taken a short excursion off his nut or had gone into second childhood. His desk was littered with dolls, balloons and toys of all sorts and he was muttering to himself, "Shall I or shall I not?" But we discovered that he was only trying to dig up some novelties for premiums to members of his latest creation, "The Gump Club." And that Gump Club is turning into some baby. It's getting bigger every hour. * * *

If you're looking for trouble just step up to the First National exchange. They must have a mess of it on hand, for on every side immensesigns greet you "Trouble is coming—Look out." What's the joke, R. C.?

Osvald is happy! Yep, Max Levy's pet gold fish, who makes his home in the "Hinkey Dink" schooner on the Robertson-Cole manager's desk, is elated over the Supreme Court's decision on national prohibition and visitors who insist on pulling "You tell 'em, Osvald, you've been around the globe," had better look out or he'll spit in their faces, he's so happy that he is not to lose his residence. * * *

Jack Meredith is back on film row with a Hudson coupe. He also has a blackjack concealed about his person, so exhibitors beware. * * *

A new face around the Universal exchange. He answers to the name of E. W. Johnson. Mr. Johnson formerly represented United Picture theatres at Omaha and has always been an Exhibitors Herald booster. * * *

A certain loop exchange, which is noted for its fair treatment of employes and customers, had been steadily drawing salesmen and stenographers from another well known Chicago exchange, much to the discomfort of the latter. Finally the manager of the w. k. exchange called up the loop film emporium and said: "If you fellows want all of my men why don't you make out a blanket requisition and take the whole lot at once. Then my worries will be over." * * *

The proverbial one-arm paper hanger with the hives is about as active as an Egyptian mummy compared to Harry Rice, around the Universal office, these days. Harry has just completed a whirlwind Beauty Contest and is preparing to follow up the winner with a lota publicity. All right, Captain, we're for you.

Rothacker Employees Give Party

Scene at the jollification given by the workers of the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company, Saturday night, June 5. Waterson R. Rothacker can be seen rubbing elbows with employes of his plant near the podium. The place was a-buzz with a jazz band furnished dance music. Bennett's comedy, "Married Life," was screened, and several vaudeville acts were furnished by Erroitte Elgette of the Actor's Equity Association employment bureau. Refreshments were served at booths erected on the studio floor and pictures taken of the dancers.
Hazardous Feats Fall
To Lot of Buck Jones in New Fox Production

Buck Jones, Fox star, is experiencing some daring moments in the filming of his next picture, "Firebrand Trevison," a Charles Alden Seltzer story, according to those who have been with him. The author has led his hero through a series of reckless stunts, astride a horse, and several of these risks almost have resulted seriously for the cow- puncher, Jonas Jones.

Probably the most hazardous of these feats accomplished by the star under the direction of Thomas N. Heffron was when Jones, starting at the top of a hill that sloped at an angle of about 45 degrees, caused his mount to stumble. Horse and rider fell, rolled, struggled to rise and rider and horse against Jonas Jones, getting free of his horse and the pair, loosening earth and stones and raising a huge cloud of dust. They continued thus for more than one hundred yards, finally reaching the foot of the hill bruised, cut and bleeding.

This picture also serves as the farewell appearance of Winifred Westover, the beautiful leading woman, who has just sailed for Stockholm, where she will make a series of star productions for a Swedish organization.

In the cast are Winifred Westover, Martha Mattox, Stanton Heek, Katherine Van Duren, Frank Clark, Joe Ray, Pat Hermann and Fong Hong.

American Now Titling
Hamilton's "Week End"

"The Week-End," a new "Flying A" special by Cosmo Hamilton, is undergoing the tinting, toning and titling processes. The American believes that the matter of titles is the utmost importance, and, as the surplus of titles has been eliminated, those remaining, together with the illustrations, are worked out with the greatest care.

"The Week-End" was produced at the company's Santa Barbara studio under the direction of George L. Cox. Margarita Fisher receives excellent support from Milton Sills and Bertram Grassby. Others in the cast are Mary Lee Wise, Harvey Clark, Mayme Kelso and Beverly Travers.

"Veiled Mystery" with
Antonio Moreno in Lead
Is New Vitagraph Serial

Albert E. Smith, president of Vitagraph, announces the title of the company's newest serial is "The Veiled Mystery," starring Antonio Moreno. Pauline Curley will be seen as his leading woman.

The first episode already has been seen by Vitagraph's executives in the East and pronounced of big calibre. Moreno is given the opportunity to do some real dramatic acting as well as sentimental stunts. Full advantage of Moreno's well-known prowess as an athlete has been taken advantage of, and there are some water scenes and submarine photographs of a highly bizarre type.

The direction has been placed in the hands of Webster Collins. The first episode will be published in September.

All-Indian Cast in New
Arrow Company Picture

Arrow Film Corporation's production, "Before the White Man Came," offers a distinct novelty in photoplays, as every member of the cast is an Indian, not a white man being seen in the picture. The cast includes Indians from the Crow reservation in Montana.

The attraction is to be exploited by Arrow, and, according to the announcement, is ready for distribution. Special attention is called to the fact that theatres booking this production will have an entree into schools, historical and literary societies.

American Now Titling
Hamilton's "Week End"

"The Week-End," a new "Flying A" special by Cosmo Hamilton, is undergoing the tinting, toning and titling processes. The American believes that the matter of titles is the utmost importance, and, as the surplus of titles has been eliminated, those remaining, together with the illustrations, are worked out with the greatest care.

"The Week-End" was produced at the company's Santa Barbara studio under the direction of George L. Cox. Margarita Fisher receives excellent support from Milton Sills and Bertram Grassby. Others in the cast are Mary Lee Wise, Harvey Clark, Mayme Kelso and Beverly Travers.

"Veiled Mystery" with
Antonio Moreno in Lead
Is New Vitagraph Serial

Albert E. Smith, president of Vitagraph, announces the title of the company's newest serial is "The Veiled Mystery," starring Antonio Moreno. Pauline Curley will be seen as his leading woman.

The first episode already has been seen by Vitagraph's executives in the East and pronounced of big calibre. Moreno is given the opportunity to do some real dramatic acting as well as sentimental stunts. Full advantage of Moreno's well-known prowess as an athlete has been taken advantage of, and there are some water scenes and submarine photographs of a highly bizarre type.

The direction has been placed in the hands of Webster Collins. The first episode will be published in September.

All-Indian Cast in New
Arrow Company Picture

Arrow Film Corporation's production, "Before the White Man Came," offers a distinct novelty in photoplays, as every member of the cast is an Indian, not a white man being seen in the picture. The cast includes Indians from the Crow reservation in Montana.

The attraction is to be exploited by Arrow, and, according to the announcement, is ready for distribution. Special attention is called to the fact that theatres booking this production will have an entree into schools, historical and literary societies.

A Hot, Stuffy, Ill-Ventilated Theatre is the Greatest Drawback to Summer Business

During the summer months you may get by with pictures that are only fair, and perhaps music that is just passable, but—with a theatre that is hot and uncomfortable—NEVER. To experiment and test the correctness of this statement during the summer will cost you hundreds, perhaps thousands of dollars, therefore why not start right now to save this money and put in a
